Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures she is taking to implement the proposals made in the Labour Party discussion paper "Policing in Northern Ireland—A Service for All People" (a) to reform the method of appointment of members of the Police Authority and (b) in respect of the role of community police liaison committees. [28959]

Marjorie Mowlam: As my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State informed the House on 15 December 1997, Official Report, columns 100–04, I intend to issue a consultation paper before the start of the Committee Stage of the Police (Northern Ireland) Bill, outlining some options for changes to strengthen the Police Authority, and the Community Police Liaison Committees so developing further the partnership between the police and the community, which is essential to combating crime of all kinds. Copies of that paper, "Your Voice—Your Choice", which is published today, have now been placed in the Library of the House. I have no set views on which, if any, of these options should be implemented, and I am keen to hear views on these important issues. Decisions must await the outcome of the consultation process; and developments in the talks.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Minister without Portfolio

38. Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council what representations she has received on the advantages of extending the length of time available to the Minister without Portfolio to answer oral questions. [26137]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: None since I announced that the time for oral questions to the Minister without Portfolio about the Millennium Experience would be doubled with effect from Monday 16 February.

Sitting Hours

40. Mr. Hanson: To ask the President of the Council what representations she has received on an extension to the number of morning sittings of the House. [26139]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Several people have suggested such a change. The Modernisation Committee is currently considering proposals to extend morning sittings and hopes to report soon.

Members' Smoking Room

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what measures he proposes to eradicate mice from the Members' Smoking Room. [28359]

Mr. Dennis Turner: Pest control is the responsibility of the Director of Works; however, good housekeeping is essential in the prevention of pest infestation. To this effect, the contract cleaning of the Members' Smoking Room is carried out during the night, as soon as possible after close of business.

Although no reports of sightings of mice have recently been made to the management of the Refreshment Department or to the Parliamentary Works Directorate, the Refreshment Department will ensure that the cleaning contractors are aware of the importance of maintaining the correct standard of cleaning, and I have asked the management of the Department to ensure that particular attention is paid to the Members' Smoking Room.

However, in my personal capacity, I am on record as having said that the traditional way of keeping down rodent infestation is best; it may well be that if chemicals prove ineffective, the House may wish to reconsider re-introducing a cat as a more effective deterrent.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee when the Members' Smoking Room was last checked for vermin infestation. [28358]

Mr. Dennis Turner: Bait is set in eight places in the Members' Smoking Room as a precaution against rodent infestation. The bait is checked monthly, the last inspection being 16 January 1998. The last time the pest control contractor found evidence of the presence of mice in the Smoking Room was in August 1997.

I understand that staff of the Refreshment Department have been reminded of the correct procedure of reporting evidence or sightings of vermin.

British Beef Industry

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what steps the Refreshment Department is taking to support the British beef industry. [28709]

Mr. Dennis Turner: I am pleased to advise my hon. Friend that the Refreshment Department will be showing its support for the British beef industry by celebrating "British Beef Week" with a promotion of British beef in its cafeterias and in the Members' Dining Room during the week commencing 16 February 1998. A 'pledge' book will be provided in the Dining Room to enable all hon. Members to indicate their individual support for the industry.

Additional Costs Allowance

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Council how many hon. Members claimed (a) additional costs allowance and (b) London weighting in 1996–97. [27321]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: (a) 611 (b) 119 were paid the London Supplement.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Council what was the cost of administering the additional costs allowance in the last year for which figures are available. [27323]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The cost of this area of work is not separately identified as it forms part of the workload of a section with other responsibilities for payments to Members.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Council how many hon. Members claimed additional costs allowance of more than £500 and less than the maximum in 1996–97. [27322]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: 273.

HEALTH

Dental Services (Lincolnshire)

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of NHS dental services in Lincolnshire. [26541]

Mr. Milburn: There were 135 General Dental Service dentists on Lincolnshire Health Authority's list on 30 September 1997. The health authority can refer patients to a dentist willing to register them for National Health Service treatment.

Haemophiliacs (Contaminated Blood Products)

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to be able to make an announcement with regard to the claim for recompense by haemophiliacs infected with Hepatitis C as a result of treatment with contaminated blood products. [27169]

Ms Jowell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to be able to write to the Haemophilia Society on all the issues they have raised in the course of the next few weeks.

ME Association

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase support from his Department for the ME Association. [27253]

Ms Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for West Dorset (Mr. Letwin) on 2 February 1998, Official Report, column 508.

Equity of Service

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that the measures taken by the Government to extend equity of service provided in areas covered by individual health authorities is not used by individual health authorities as an occasion to level down available services. [27244]

Ms Jowell: We will take action to ensure that the most effective services are available across the country. We will work with the professions to produce national clinical guidelines and service frameworks to improve national consistency. This will be backed up by our commitment to provide real-terms increases in the resources for the National Health Service and ploughing extra resources into patient care.

AIDS Vaccines

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage the international effort to test existing AIDS vaccines. [27246]

Ms Jowell: The United Kingdom is committed to encouraging international collaboration on AIDS vaccine research. The Medical Research Council and the Department are supporting collaborative research on AIDS vaccines. Although candidate vaccines are being tested, this is a complex area of research with no easy solutions; however, the UK research on AIDS vaccines is making a significant contribution to the international effort.

HIV Testing (Pregnant Women)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for routine testing of pregnant women for HIV. [27248]

Ms Jowell: We are committed to reducing the number of children born with HIV infection. Our purpose is to ensure that women are fully informed of the benefits of having an HIV test for themselves and their babies and to encourage the uptake of named voluntary HIV antibody testing on all women attending for antenatal care who may be at increased risk. We recognise, however, that knowing one is infected with HIV raises difficult issues for the individual.

We have produced a leaflet to provide pregnant women with the necessary information to enable them to reach an informed decision about HIV testing. The leaflet will be piloted for acceptability and usefulness in the spring in a number of antenatal clinics.

Free confidential access to HIV testing remains available to anyone who feels they may have been at risk of infection.

Children's Affairs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives he will bring forward on the issue of children's affairs during the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union. [27396]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to do so. The European Community currently has no legal competence to introduce measures to regulate policies affecting the child in the areas covered by my right hon. Friend's responsibilities. Such activities fall exclusively to the member states.

Microbiologists (Visits)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates microbiologists Doctor Nasser el-Hindawi and Doctor Tharner Abdul Rahman were invited to the United Kingdom; to what extent they were party to discussions on (a) anthrax, (b) gas gangrene, (c) botulism toxin, (d) brucellosis and (e) rabbit foot and tetanus; and by whom they were invited. [26398]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 3 February 1998]: Neither Doctor Nasser el-Hindawi nor Doctor Tharner Abdul Rahman were invited to the United Kingdom. They applied to attend an international scientific workshop on anthrax in response to publicity in several scientific publications. The workshop was held in Winchester in April 1989, and was organised by various institutions who have an expertise in the control of infectious diseases, including the Public Health Laboratory Service and the Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research. The purpose of the workshop was to promote international understanding of anthrax as a naturally occurring disease which poses a significant threat to public health in many parts of the world. All presentations at the workshop addressed human health aspects of the disease and none contained classified information.

The workshop contained no presentations or open discussions on gas gangrene, botulism toxin, brucellosis, rabbit foot or tetanus.

AIDS Support Grant

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce AIDS Support Grant allocations to local authorities for the next financial year. [27376]

Ms Jowell: We expect to announce the 1998–99 AIDS Support Grant allocations to local authorities shortly.

NHS Prescriptions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the level of NHS payments to pharmacists for dispensing prescriptions. [27471]

Mr. Milburn: Since October 1997, we have received in the region of 120 letters on this subject from hon. and right hon. Members, and a very much smaller number directly from individual community pharmacists and representative organisations.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the system of NHS payments to pharmacists for dispensing prescriptions; and if he will make a statement. [27472]

Mr. Milburn: We have no plans for such a review at present, but we remain keen to discuss with relevant bodies ways of making the best use of community pharmacists' skills within the National Health Service.

Tobacco and Alcohol

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions are planned in the Health Council during the British Presidency on the effect on the health of the residents of the member states of differentials in excise duty on tobacco and alcohol. [27927]

Ms Jowell: There are no plans to raise this as a formal agenda item at the Health Council on 30 April 1998.

Patient Records

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the requirement on general practitioners to maintain manual notes on patients so as to allow more efficient alternatives. [28115]

Mr. Milburn: The Department has been discussing with the General Medical Services Committee of the British Medical Association a proposed change to the National Health Service (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992 which would have allowed general practitioners (GPs) to maintain patient records on a computer as an alternative to manual records. The profession have requested that further work is done to develop a standardised electronic patient record and to facilitate the transfer of patient records electronically from GP to GP before the requirement to maintain records manually is removed. We will consider changing this requirement once work in these ares is suitably advanced.

Cervical Cancer Screening

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve the quality of cervical cancer screening following the recall by Lincoln County Hospital of women whose smear test results were incorrectly reported. [28034]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 6 February 1998]: The regional quality assurance programme found lower than expected levels of reporting of smear abnormalities at Lincoln and Louth National Health Service Trust. On the basis of this, the trust took swift action in ordering a re-read of a number of smears, and some women have now been recalled. We are pleased that the quality assurance system in place in the Trent region did its job properly in identifying the problem, and that rapid action was taken to put it right.

Wide ranging action to help ensure consistent high quality and dependability in cervical screening across the country was announced last year in the light of a failure of the cervical screening programme at Kent and Canterbury NHS Trust. We announced that there would be a review of the performance of all cervical screening programmes, and that, where necessary, action plans would be drawn up to help ensure national standards are met on 3 November 1997, Official Report, columns 19–28. EL(97)67 was also issued. In addition, we are tightening up accountability for quality assurance. In December, we announced a package of measures to promote consistent high quality in laboratories undertaking cervical screening (EL(97)83 refers). In particular, all laboratories must apply this year for external quality accreditation and there will be targeted refresher training for staff in laboratories which do not meet key quality indicators. The Chief Medical Officer has set up an action team to monitor progress.

Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 614, what are the percentages of (a) females and (b) males who have used an illegal drug by the age of (i) 16 and (ii) 24 years. [28195]

Ms Jowell: The information available centrally is given in the table.

Percentage of males and females who indicated that they had ever taken drugs, 1996, England and Wales

	Age 16 to 19	Age 20 to 24
Males	48	57
Females	42	43
Persons	45	49

Note:
Percentages rounded to the nearest whole figure.
Source:
1996 British Crime Survey

For males and females aged 15 to 16 a schools based survey conducted by McMiller and Plant (British Medical Journal 1996, 313, 394–97) found that 45 per cent. of boys and 40 per cent. of girls aged 15 to 16 in the United Kingdom reported ever using illicit drugs.

NHS Care (Failures)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 3 what contribution the number of patient deaths caused by failures of NHS services will play in his future assessment of the quality of NHS services. [28196]

Mr. Milburn: We are committed to improving the quality of National Health Service care and to minimising avoidable and premature deaths, whatever their causes. We are consulting on a new National Framework for Assessing Performance in the NHS and on an associated set of high-level performance indicators. The proposed high-level indicators include "avoidable deaths" and "in-hospital premature deaths", though neither necessarily relates directly to failures of NHS services.

Neuroleptic Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of trials recently undertaken in the USA into the effects on in-patients of withdrawing neuroleptic drugs. [28134]

Ms Jowell: We are not aware of these recent trials.

Publications

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by title the publications produced by his Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998. [26326]

Ms Jowell: This information is not collected centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sodium

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what meetings his Department has hosted with non-governmental bodies or individuals to discuss the setting of targets for levels of human sodium intake; and if he will make a statement on the results of such meetings and list those who attended; [28535]

(2) if he will publish the scientific advice presented to his Department showing the effect on health outcomes of introducing population consumption targets for sodium consumption. [28534]

Ms Jowell: The evidence on the relationship between sodium consumption and blood pressure was considered by the Government's source of independent expert advice, the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy. It is cited in their report "Nutritional Aspects of Cardiovascular Disease", published in 1994. As part of their consideration, experts were invited to present views and the names of those who gave oral or written evidence are also cited in the report. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

The Faculty of Public Health Medicine, in collaboration with the British Heart Foundation, hosted a seminar at the request of the Department to bring together a wide spread of scientific opinion to consider the advisability of a reduction in sodium consumption for the general population. A report is expected later this year.

Diet

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the amount by which the average per capita consumption of fruit salads and vegetables would have to increase to have a measurable impact on those causes of mortality where poor diet is judged to be a significant contributory factor. [28537]

Ms Jowell: The Government's source of independent expert advice, the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy, recommended in its report "Nutritional Aspects of Cardiovascular Disease" published in 1994 that, on average, individuals should increase their fruit and vegetable consumption by 50 per cent. Copies of the report are available in the Library. It was on this basis that we now recommend that people should try to eat at least five portions of fruit and vegetables a day.

NHS Trusts (Appointments)

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS trusts to which he appointed new chairs in the last round of appointments indicating the names of the new chairs. [28890]

Mr. Milburn: The information will be published in March in the Department's Public Appointments Annual Report.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to reply to the letter from Councillor Brian Yates of Jubilee Terrace, Kingswear, Devon, of 14 December 1997 concerning the nomination and selection of individuals to the boards of NHS trusts. [28351]

Mr. Milburn: We have no record of the letter from Councillor Yates ever having been received.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Drugs

Mr. Clappison: To ask the President of the Council what representations she has received regarding the Government's strategy on the problem of illegal drug use among young people. [26134]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Keith Hellawell—the UK Anti-Drugs Coordinator—is currently co-ordinating an extensive consultation process to inform his drafting of proposals for a new anti-drugs strategy, which he will submit to Ministers shortly. Since the announcement of his appointment last October, Mr. Hellawell and his Deputy, Mike Trace, have received over 2,000 letters from all sectors of society. They are also engaged in a comprehensive series of visits and meetings with professionals, young people and communities across the country.

Privy Council

36. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Council what criteria are used in appointments to the Privy Council. [26133]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Appointment to the Privy Council is an exercise of the prerogative. Appointments are made by Her Majesty The Queen on the advice of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. A range of factors are taken into account. Those appointed mostly comprise Ministers, other Parliamentarians and members of the judiciary.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Correspondence

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how long on average it takes his Department to answer letters from hon. Members; what target date his Department sets; what percentage receive replies within the target date; and what assessment he has made of how long it takes to deliver a letter after it has been typed. [27043]

Dr. David Clark: On average it takes 13 days for my Department to answer letters from hon. Members.

The Cabinet Office (Office of Public Service) sets a target of fifteen working days from receipt to reply to all letters.

From 1 May to 31 December 1997, 90 per cent. of letters from MPs received a full reply within the target date. A further 7 per cent. received interim holding replies within the target date.

Once letters have been signed, they are dispatched without delay for delivery to the Palace of Westminster (or, when requested, the Member's constituency office). It is usual for letters to be delivered to the House within one working day of being signed by the appropriate Minister, and in many cases they will arrive on the same day.

Publications

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list by title the publications produced by his Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998. [26331]

DEFENCE

Strategic Defence Review

14. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications of the Government's defence diplomacy initiative for the Strategic Defence Review. [26108]

Mr. George Robertson: Defence Diplomacy is the use of our Armed Forces to promote conflict and crisis prevention, and more generally support and promote wider British interests. It is a major theme of the Strategic Defence Review and its importance will be clearly reflected in the United Kingdom's defence policy when we publish the conclusions of the Review in a White Paper.

27. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to publish the White Paper on the Strategic Defence Review. [26124]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Walsall, South (Mr. George) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 499–500.

European Defence Industry (Restructuring)

15. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress made towards European defence industry restructuring in response to the peace dividend. [26109]

Mr. Spellar: Since the end of the Cold War, the defence industries of the USA and Western Europe have seen major changes in structure and organisation. These changes have proceeded further and faster in the USA, and a similar process needs to take place urgently within Europe. This was reflected in the 9 December trilateral statement on restructuring which calls on industry to submit clear plans and a detailed timetable for restructuring and integration by 31 March 1998. In preparation for this, discussions are continuing between European companies, and between industry and Government officials.

31. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what responses he has had from industry regarding the joint British, French and German call for restructuring of military aerospace manufacturing capacity; and if he will make a statement. [26128]

Mr. Spellar: The trilateral statement of 9 December 1997 called on companies to present a clear plan and detailed timetable for the restructuring and integration of the European aerospace and related defence industries by 31 March 1998. In preparation for this, discussions are continuing between European companies, and between industry and Government officials.

Merchant Fleet

17. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the latest defence estimates in respect of British merchant shipping for defence purposes. [26111]

Mr. Spellar: Current defence estimates on the availability of British merchant shipping indicate that there are, in general, sufficient militarily useful vessels for perceived defence needs. The position will, of course, be reassessed following the outcome of the Strategic Defence Review.

British Beef

18. Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure domestic sourcing of food for the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [26112]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East (Dr. Kumar) on 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 654.

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of meat purchased by his Department has been produced in the United Kingdom in each of the past five years. [26096]

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries from which the supply of (a) beef and (b) sheepmeat were sourced for each year that the NAAFI held the Ministry of Defence's public-funded messing contract. [28348]

Mr. Spellar: Although unfortunately figures do not exist for previous years, our contractor, Booker Foodservice estimate that some 40% of meat procured over the 12 months ending September 1998 will be from UK sources.

As the House has shown particular interest in our procurement of beef, I should add that in recent weeks we have been working with Booker, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and farmers' representatives on how the position might be improved. Furthermore, I am glad to tell the House that Booker's estimate of 13% for the percentage of beef we buy from UK sources and which I gave to the House recently has now been revised by Booker to around 30%.

NATO Enlargement

19. Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the application of Slovenia to join NATO. [26113]

Mr. George Robertson: NATO has undertaken to review the process of its enlargement in 1999; the considerations set forth in NATO's 1995 Enlargement Study will continue to apply with regard to all aspirants. The UK views Slovenia as a strong candidate for any future enlargement of NATO. The priority for now is to ensure the successful military and political integration of the Czech Republic, Poland and Hungary into NATO.

26. Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress towards NATO enlargement. [26122]

Mr. George Robertson: The protocols for the accession of Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic to NATO were signed in December by NATO Foreign Ministers: all Allies now need to ratify them. NATO is continuing its work with the invited countries to ensure their effective military and political integration into the Alliance. The UK is also providing bilateral defence assistance to facilitate this process.

Defence Diversification

20. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Government expect to publish their Green Paper on defence diversification. [26114]

29. Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish his Green Paper on defence diversification. [26126]

Mr. Spellar: We will publish the Green Paper in March.

Satellite Communications System

21. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will announce his decision between Trimilsatcom and Skynet 5 as a procurement option for the next generation military satellite communications system; and if he will make a statement. [26115]

Mr. Spellar: The planned next generation of UK military communications satellites is known as SKYNET 5. In December 1997, the UK, France and Germany signed a Memorandum of Understanding envisaging a collaborative programme, TRIMILSATCOM, for the procurement of a common solution for all three nations' operational requirements. Proposals from industry for a Project Definition phase have been invited and are due to be submitted shortly. Currently, TRIMILSATCOM is the preferred approach for meeting the UK's SKYNET 5 requirement, although a national programme remains an option. It is expected that a decision on the way ahead will be taken later this year.

Ballistic Missile Defence

22. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his Western European Union counterparts on European ballistic missile defence. [26116]

Mr. George Robertson: I have had no discussions with my Western European Union counterparts on ballistic missile defence.

Armed Forces Pay Review Board

23. Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will publish the recommendations of the Armed Forces Pay Review Board. [26117]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to my hon. Friend the Member for Kirkcaldy (Dr. Moonie) on 29 January 1998, Official Report, columns 307–10.

Bosnia

28. Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the number of troops currently serving as part of Britain's contribution to SFOR in Bosnia. [26125]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 12 January 1998, Official Report, column 10.

Heavy-lift Aircraft

30. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning his plans for heavy-lift aircraft. [26127]

Mr. Spellar: One of the aims of the Strategic Defence Review is to ensure that the Armed Forces are properly equipped to undertake the tasks asked of them. Our air transport requirement is, therefore, being scrutinised closely in the Review.

Courts Martial

32. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the future effectiveness of the court-martial system. [26129]

Mr. George Robertson: We are satisfied that the recent changes to the court-martial system will ensure its continuing effectiveness into the next millennium. However, we know that we cannot afford to be complacent and the system is kept under constant review to ensure its efficiency.

Sexual Assault and Harassment

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) officers and (b) non-commissioned officers have been found guilty in (i) courts of law and (ii) courts martial of sexual assault or sexual harassment in the last three years; and in which of the services they served. [26095]

Mr. George Robertson: Between 1995 and 1997, one naval and one RAF officer, three naval ratings and eight RAF non-commissioned officers were found guilty of sexual offences by the civil court. In the same period, three naval officers, five naval ratings, nineteen Army NCOs and four RAF NCOs were found guilty of such offences by Courts Martial.

Firing Ranges

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the announcement made by the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency on 23 January on the rationalisation of land ranges in the United Kingdom. [26120]

Mr. Spellar: The rationalisation of the land ranges operated by the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency announced on 23 January is the outcome of the second stage of a review to address the problems of overcapacity and underutilisation. Subject to consultation with Trade Unions and MOD customers, the main changes proposed are that Pendine and Shoeburyness ranges would be maintained for access to their unique facilities on a trials campaign only basis, and as much work as possible would be undertaken at Eskmeals.

RNAD Broughton Moor

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends next to visit RNAD Broughton Moor to discuss the future use of the site. [26119]

Mr. Spellar: I visited the site on 13 August 1997 and have no current plans to do so again. However, I would be happy to meet my hon. Friend to discuss the future use of the site.

Christmas Island (Nuclear Testing)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the dossier of information on the health effects of nuclear testing in the 1950s atomic test programme at Christmas Island, a copy of which has been sent to him. [28201]

Mr. Spellar: I assume my hon. Friend is referring to a letter from The People newspaper dated 13 January 1998, addressed to the Secretary of State for Defence, which enclosed copies of their recent articles about nuclear test veterans and letters from a small number of ex-Servicemen who had served on Christmas Island in the 1950s-60s. The letter invited a response on nuclear test veteran issues, with particular reference to work carried out at Dundee University.

My officials responded to the newspaper on 6 February. The reply drew attention to the fact that the studies carried out by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) had proved conclusively that participation in the testing programme had not had a detectable effect on the participants' expectation of life or on their risk of developing cancer or other fatal diseases: and also referred to those matters which were covered in my response to my hon. Friend on 22 January 1998, Official Report, columns 625–26.

Radiation-related Illnesses

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on potential linkage between illness and radiation exposure for workers at (i) Rosyth and (ii) Faslane; what is his policy on levels of compensation for workers who have radiation-related illnesses; and what medical checks he is undertaking in respect of these workers. [26070]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 February 1998]: The risks of disease, including cancer, as a result of exposure to ionising radiation are well documented. Risk estimates for the UK population are published by the National Radiological Protection Board whose evidence is used to formulate national legislation. The exposure of MOD radiation workers at both Rosyth and Faslane has always been monitored and controlled in accordance with this legislation, the purpose of which is to limit the risk to workers to tolerable levels. As required by legislation, my Department's policy is to reduce risks to the lowest reasonably practicable level.

My Department's policy on compensation for radiation workers is to be a member of the nuclear industry's Compensation Scheme for Radiation Linked Diseases. This is a no fault scheme where there is no requirement for claimants to prove negligence on the part of the Department in order to receive compensation. The Scheme was set up and is run jointly by the participating employers and Trade Unions and does not affect the claimant's right to seek legal redress. It provides for the assessment of a case, on an agreed technical basis, in order to determine the probability that a cancer contracted by a radiation worker could have been caused by occupational radiation exposure. The amount of compensation payable in a successful case is determined by negotiation between the solicitors representing the parties, using as a basis the same guidelines as would apply if the case had proceeded to Court. However, the Scheme provides for payments to be made at lower levels of causation probability than would be allowed by the Courts. It does this by making a "full" payment at 50 per cent. causation probability similar to the Courts, and in addition making lesser payments down to a 20 per cent. causation probability. In this way the assessment of a case recognises that even below the balance of probability there is a chance that occupational exposure to ionising radiation played a role in causing the disease.

Within my Department, medical checks are undertaken at the discretion of the Appointed Doctor when considered necessary as part of the annual health review of classified radiation workers.

Precision-guided Weapons

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps he has taken to ensure that United Kingdom precision-guided weapons cannot be blinded by enemy multi-spectral smoke shells; [26776]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which multi-spectral smoke shells will obscure targets from targeting systems of precision-guided munitions. [26774]

Mr. Spellar: Research has been carried out into means of countering the effects of multi-spectral smoke shells on UK precision guided weapons. The effects of multi-spectral smoke shells on targeting systems have also been assessed in field trials using representative target acquisition equipment. The potential effects will be taken into account, where appropriate, in our future requirements for precision munitions. To release further details would harm national security or defence and I am therefore withholding them in accordance with exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Computer Hackers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many attempts by hackers to breach security in his Department's computers were detected in 1996 and 1997; and how many of these were successful. [27871]

Mr. Spellar: A comprehensive security policy on connectivity to public data networks is enforced throughout the MOD. There is no evidence of a successful incursion, from an external source, into any Departmental computer system in the period 1996–1997. There has been one instance known to us of a failed attempt over this period.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what years Army personnel from 43 Command Workshop were ordered to dispose of low grade radioactive waste at Hilsea, Portsmouth; and what plans are available relating to the disposal. [27881]

Mr. Spellar: Army personnel from 43 Command Workshop disposed of low grade radioactive waste at Hilsea lines during 1978. Records dating from 1977 for this work are held in MOD files. The burial of the waste at Hilsea lines was approved by the Radiochemical Inspectorate of the then Department of the Environment. The Inspectorate then granted unrestricted access to the sites. Maps showing the locations at Hilsea lines of the buried waste were passed by the Ministry of Defence to the Property Services Agency of the Department of the Environment in 1985, prior to the sale of the site to Portsmouth City Council in 1986.

Arms Sales

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the value to Britain of arms sales to each of the top 10 recipient countries in each year since 1990. [26842]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Tomahawk Missiles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department made of the (a) United States Navy exercise in January and June 1993 to test the accuracy of Tomahawk missiles and (b) the United States Defense Department publication Gulf War Air Power Survey findings in procuring Tomahawk missiles for Royal Navy submarines. [27505]

Mr. Spellar: The US Department of Defence has assured us that no Tomahawk exercise firings were conducted during either January or June 1993. The US Government reported in both January and June 1993 that Tomahawk attack operations were conducted against targets in Iraq under the auspices of UN Security Council Resolution 688. Information received from the US DoD about those operations was used with much other information in reaching the decision to procure the Tomahawk weapon system for the Royal Navy.

There is no record of the US DoD publication entitled 'Gulf War Air Power Survey' being used in relation to procurement of Tomahawk.

Publications

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by title the publications produced by his Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998. [26330]

Mr. Spellar: The information is not held centrally in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The vast majority of MOD publications, both those published internally and externally, are however processed centrally. In the period specified they dealt with 12,335 Computer controlled publications and 2,713 Manually controlled publications.

MOD Publications are primarily Instructional Manuals/Technical Manuals and general Regulations including Complete Equipment Schedules, Naval Engineering Standards, Illustrated Parts Catalogues and Defence Council Instructions.

The Manually Controlled category includes in excess of 300 Classified Publications.

Conduct (Codes and Standards)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the dates of publication of (a) the two previous and (b) the current paper from the Adjutant General on codes and standards of conduct. [28346]

Mr. Spellar: The Standards and Discipline paper for Army personnel was published by the then Adjutant General in October 1993. There were no previous papers specifically entitled codes and standards of conduct; but 'Man Management', a document which covers similar material, was published in September 1977 and was revised in 1986 and again in 1988.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the current edition of the Adjutant General's paper on codes and standards of conduct. [28347]

Mr. Spellar: Yes. A copy of the Adjutant General's current Discipline and Standards Paper will be placed in the Library shortly.

Military Law Manuals

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when revised editions of the manuals of military law for each of the three services will be available; and if he will place them in the Library. [28342]

Mr. Spellar: The Royal Navy issued a revised edition of the Manual of Naval Law in April 1997. The Army's amendment to the Manual of Military Law is currently being printed and will be distributed shortly. The RAF are undertaking a major revision of the Manual of Air Force Law and Volume I, which contains the bulk of the primary legislation, is due to be published in early 1999. Each will be placed in the Library of the House.

Tank Transporters

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) main battle tank and (b) light tank transporter vehicles are (i) in service and (ii) operationally deployable; and if he will make a statement. [28349]

Mr. Spellar: The Army has 121 main battle tank transporters in service of which 112 are currently in unit hands.

There are 194 vehicles capable of being used to transport light armoured vehicles of which 43 are actually used for this purpose; of all these are unit hands.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many tank transporter vehicle drivers are (a) in service and (b) operationally deployed; and if this is designated protected A Trade employment. [28345]

Mr. Spellar: There are 477 tank transporter drivers in the Army. 39 are currently operationally deployed. This is not a protected trade, and I understand that the A Trade designation is no longer in use.

Departmental Cars

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Ford Mondeo cars his Department has purchased in the current financial year. [28488]

Mr. Spellar: Up to 6 February this financial year, my Department has purchased 134 Ford Mondeo cars.

Sponsored Reserves

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on sponsored reserves in Her Majesty's forces; and if he will make a statement. [28343]

Mr. Spellar: We believe that the Sponsored Reserve concept has much potential, and we have been encouraged by the interest shown by Industry. My Department is taking forward the concept in a number of areas as one of the ways of supporting operationally essential services in partnership with the private sector. As part of the Strategic Defence Review, we are actively progressing the application of the Sponsored Reserve concept in a thorough examination of the costs and operational risk. No decisions have yet been reached.

Armed Forces (Morale)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of morale in the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [26123]

Mr. George Robertson: From my regular visits to Service units and those of my Ministerial colleagues, and discussions within the Ministry of Defence, I assess morale in the Armed Forces at present to be satisfactory. I greatly admire the achievements and sense of purpose of our Servicemen and women. In my experience, they are keen to get on with their jobs, are aware that they are highly valued by the nation and are committed to the operational challenges they face. There are undoubtedly some feelings of uncertainty, and problems in some areas caused, in large part, by longstanding overstretch and undermanning inherited by this administration. One of the main aims of the Strategic Defence Review is to balance our operational commitments and the needs of Service personnel and their families. The openness of the review process will have reassured our forces that it is different from other reviews.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Tenancy Agreements

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the operation of the new farm business tenancy agreements; and if he will make a statement. [26995]

Mr. Morley: An independent policy evaluation of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995, commissioned by this Department and the Welsh Office, was carried out last year by the University of Plymouth, and the report was recently published. A copy was placed in the Library of the House. The results provide data for England and Wales separately and indicate that uptake of farm business tenancies has been encouraging.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he will take to ensure that the Food Standards Agency levy will be structured in such a way as not to penalise disproportionately small food producers and retailers. [27144]

Mr. Rooker: The Government will consult closely with key interested parties, including representatives of small businesses, in drawing up detailed proposals for a mechanism that would allow a greater part of the costs of food safety work to be passed from the taxpayer onto the food industry. In formulating their proposals, the Government will consider carefully the need to take into account the size of the business, among other factors.

BSE

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the Enfer scientific test available in the Irish Republic. [28622]

Mr. Rooker: We understand the test is capable of detecting abnormal PrP in central nervous system tissues of cattle which are already showing clinical signs of BSE. It has not been shown to be capable of identifying infected cattle early in the incubation periods as far as we are aware.

The Department has been in touch with Enfer Scientific since March 1997, but has been unable to obtain detailed information due to intellectual property issues. Tissues from experimentally infected cattle at known stages of incubation has been offered to Enfer to validate the test by the Department, but the offer has not yet been taken up.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her policy in respect of the timescale and opportunity for future reassessment of the benefit payments for those claimants who have had their benefit reduced or set aside as a result of the Benefit Integrity Project. [27908]

Ms Harman: The Benefit Integrity Project helps ensure the correctness of awards of Disability Living Allowance (DLA). Up-to-date information is being gathered from beneficiaries about their care and mobility needs, so that we can check that they are receiving the correct amount of DLA.

It is important that decisions about benefit entitlement are made fairly and are seen to be fair. I am taking action to improve the quality of decisions made by the Project which involve a reduction or removal of benefit. In future, no decision resulting in reduction or removal of entitlement to DLA will be made solely on the evidence provided by the claimant—there will always be additional evidence to support the decision.

We have been liaising closely with organisations of and for disabled people from the early stages of the Project. This new initiative underlines our determination to act properly to get the benefit right and to listen and act upon any concerns. We will continue to involve these groups in the evaluation of the Project as it develops.

This Project is operating under the normal assessment and adjudication rules that are applied to all DLA cases. Anyone dissatisfied with a decision made in their case may ask for a review of that decision, on any grounds, within three months of the decision having been made. If they remain unhappy following review, they have the opportunity to appeal to an independent tribunal within three months of the review decision being made. Of course, a claimant may ask for a review of their entitlement at any time if they believe that there has been a change in their circumstances that may affect their entitlement to DLA.

Publications

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list, by title, the publications produced by her Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998. [26337]

Mr. Field: A list of publications, by title, produced by this Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998 has been placed in the Library.

Respiratory Diseases

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applicants for an award in respect of chronic bronchitis and emphysema have failed the FEV1 test since April 1997; and how many have been rejected since April 1997 because they did not meet the service qualification, broken down by coalfield area. [28265]

Mr. Denham: Figures are not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of applicants for chronic bronchitis and emphysema awards (a) between September 1993 and April 1997 and (b) since April 1997; and what was the number of awards made in each of those periods. [28266]

Mr. Denham: The total number of claims for Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit in respect of chronic bronchitis and emphysema for the period 13 September 1993 to 31 March 1997 was 50,195 and in the same period 5,428 awards were made. Since 1 April 1997, a further 22,984 claims have been received and 6,752 awards made.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the percentage and number of pensioners who have an annual income of £2,000 or less in addition to state benefits including the state pension. [28625]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

If pensioner units received a weekly income of £38.50 for 52 weeks of the year then their annual income would be £2,002.

CABINET OFFICE

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister without Portfolio in what capacity he attended the British-Spanish Tertulias in Cambridge in November; what public expenditure was incurred by his participation; and if he will make a statement. [27892]

Mr. Mandelson: I attended the British-Spanish Tertulias following official advice from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The cost to public funds of my visit was approximately £21.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Minister without Portfolio (1) how many meetings he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer since 2 May 1997; [28025]

(2) how many press briefings he has attended since 2 May 1997; [28015]

(3) how many meetings he has had with the Secretary of State for Health since 2 May 1997; [28014]

(4) how many meetings he has had with the Prime Minister since 2 May 1997; [28026]

Mr. Mandelson: I attend meetings with the Prime Minister and other Ministerial colleagues on a regular basis in the course of my duties. I have attended very few press briefings.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Achievement Targets

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons he uses data based on eligibility for, or uptake of, free school meals in setting achievement targets for primary and secondary schools. [26802]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 4 February 1998]: The Government view is that poverty is no excuse for failure. It is for individual schools, in discussion with their LEAs, to set appropriately challenging achievement targets, which reflect national targets such as those for literacy and numeracy. All schools, regardless of the socio-economic characteristics of their pupils, are capable of improvement.

Local Authority Budgets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the (a) overall education budget, (b) general schools budget and (c) aggregated schools budget for each local education authority in 1997–98. [27541]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The following table sets out, for each local education authority in England, its education budget, General Schools Budget (excluding capital) and Aggregated Schools Budget for the year 1997–98. Capital and related expenditure has been excluded from GSB figures to ensure consistency with the education budget figures, which represent revenue expenditure only.

These do not include expenditure on Grant Maintained Schools budgets which is recouped from LEAs.

Publications

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by title the publications produced by his Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998. [26328]

Dr. Howells: A list by title of the publications produced by the Department of Education and Employment between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998 has been placed in the Library.

Student Loans

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Education (Student Loans) Act 1998 will come into force; when he expects to make regulations; and if he will make a statement. [28960]

Dr. Howells: Sections 1, 4, 5, 6(1) and 7 came into force on Royal Assent on 27 January 1998. Sections 2, 3, and 6(2) and the Schedule to the Act will come into force on 1 March 1998. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and Employment and for Scotland laid the Education (Student Loans) Regulations 1998 before the House of Friday 6 February.

The Regulations protect borrowers and debt purchasers by fixing the key terms of all loans taken out under the Education (Student Loans) Act 1990 both before and after 1 March 1998. The Regulations also provide for new repayment terms for disabled borrowers. These terms were formerly exercised at the discretion of the loans administrator.

Employment Figures (Young People)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what procedures he proposes to establish to monitor the number of persons under the age of 25 years leaving benefit and entering work; and when those procedures will be in place. [26148]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Oliver Letwin, dated 9 February 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question relating to procedures to be established to monitor the number of persons under the age of 25 leaving benefit and entering work and when these procedures will be in place. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Employment Service Chief Executive.

It may be helpful to explain that data on the reason why a claim to Jobseeker's Allowance comes to an end will continue to be collected by the Office for National Statistics. This is gathered on their statistical systems from information on the Jobseeker's Allowance Payments System and records a code categorising the reason. This process captures the number of people leaving benefit and entering work. It is possible for this information to be analysed by age and duration of claim.

The Office for National Statistics will be publishing a summary table at a national level in "Labour Market Trends" in February 1998. Further information will also be available through the National Online Manpower Information System. This information can be obtained on request from the Office for National Statistics.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobmatch Scheme

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of (a) the costs and (b) the numbers who would gain if the jobmatch scheme was extended to people over 50 years who have been unemployed for six months. [26162]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Jim Fitzpatrick, dated 9 February 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the costs and numbers involved in widening the eligible age group for Jobmatch to those aged 50 years and over, and who have been unemployed for six months. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Employment Service Chief Executive.

Jobmatch currently targets jobseekers between the ages of 18–24 years who are unemployed for 2 years or more. Using figures from the current operational year (for the 7 months up to the end of October) and assuming similar levels of interest for those aged over 50 years and unemployed for six months, it is estimated that in the same 7 month period 3,300 clients from this latter group might have received benefit from jobmatch, at a cost of some £4.3 million.

I hope this is helpful.

Disabled People (Rehabilitation)

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many disabled people have started a rehabilitation programme in the last 12 months; and what is his estimate of the average cost per place on an employment rehabilitation programme. [26163]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Jim Fitzpatrick, dated 9 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question relating to the number of disabled people who started a rehabilitation programme in the last 12 months, and his estimate of the average cost per place on an employment rehabilitation programme. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Employment Service Chief Executive.

In the 12 months to December 1997, 14,262 people with disabilities started employment rehabilitation programmes. In the same period, £9,526,000 was spent on the programme.

Unfortunately, the Employment Service do not hold information on the average cost per rehabilitation place as this is not a particularly meaningful measure in the context of this programme. This is because employment rehabilitation programmes are individually tailored to the needs of each person. The programme can therefore last a few days or a few weeks, and can be on a part time or full time basis. Whilst the majority of employment rehabilitation programmes are within daily travelling distance, there may also be instances where a period of more costly residential rehabilitation may be necessary.

I hope this is helpful.

Unemployment

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the United Kingdom Government will publish their proposals on tackling unemployment to be submitted to the EU meeting to discuss member states' plans. [28620]

Mr. Andrew Smith: All member states have agreed to present Employment Action Plans by 15 April so that an initial assessment can take place at the Cardiff European Council. These plans will set out each member state's proposals for implementing the Employment Guidelines agreed at the Luxembourg Jobs Summit attended by the Prime Minister last November. We intend to produce and publish the UK Employment Action Plan well in advance of the deadline.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

European Labour Markets

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which regulations and directives being negotiated in the Council of Ministers during the British presidency will (a) impose and (b) remove restrictions or controls on European labour markets. [28621]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The Government intend that all relevant dossiers being negotiated in the Social Affairs and Education Councils of Ministers during the UK Presidency should reinforce progress towards its objectives of employability, flexible and adaptable labour markets, fair minimum standards and job generation.

In the field of health and safety, proposals for a Chemical Agents Directive, a Carcinogens Worker Protection Directive, a Scaffolding Directive and proposals to amend the Asbestos Worker Protection Directive either are or will be subject to proper assessment to ensure that they are well targeted or scientifically justified. While they are not considered to have a major impact upon current practice in the UK, they should have the effect of raising standards elsewhere and in particular help to reduce the toll of 6,000 fatal accidents and thousands of cases of fatal disease each year in the EU.

The directive on part-time work, which is likely to be extended to the UK during our Presidency, will require employers to treat part-time workers no less favourably than equivalent full-time workers. By promoting part-time work and raising its status, the directive should increase flexibility in European labour markets. The Government are also consulting publicly about whether to seek amendments to the Acquired Rights Directive to make it more flexible, e.g. by allowing derogations agreed by the social partners in certain circumstances.

The proposal for a Supplementary Pensions Directive, the co-ordination of social security regulations for migrant workers who are EU citizens and the proposal to extend those regulations to all insured persons would neither impose nor remove restrictions on the labour market but may allow more labour market mobility within the EU, which is a positive step forward.

The Burden of Proof Directive would make very little difference to the way in which sex discrimination cases are in practice decided in the UK, or to the outcome of industrial tribunal cases. The European Company Statute would provide an alternative form of incorporation for companies but since it will be voluntary, it will not affect restrictions or controls on European labour markets.

Finally, the Government aim to secure a common position on the Commission's proposal for a third Directive on mutual recognition of professional qualifications, which will simplify procedures for seeking work in other member states. This proposal will further ease barriers to employment.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the nature of the service to callers using the Action 2000 telephone hotline to obtain advice on millennium compliance of computer systems. [27876]

Mrs. Roche: The "Millennium Bug" campaign telephone hotline is run for Action 2000 by ICL Sorbus. The service is currently equipped to despatch Information Packs and direct callers to centres of expertise where they can obtain help and support. Plans are underway to increase the breadth of information available and provide on-line advice and guidance specific to a caller's needs.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to ensure that public sector computer systems involved in the introduction of European Monetary Union are millennium compliant. [25376]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 4 February 1998]: The Government attach major importance to tackling this problem effectively. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has set up a Ministerial Group on the millennium date change (MISC 4) to drive action across the public and private sectors to ensure that the national infrastructure is not damaged by the failure of electronic systems related to the year 2000 date change.

This objective applies to all public sector computer systems, including those which may be affected by Economic and Monetary Union.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has during the British presidency of the EU to propose the suspension or postponement until after 2001 of EU directives which would impede progress on the implementation of the action necessary to ensure the millennium compliancy of computer systems. [27879]

Mrs. Roche: I have no such plans at present, but propose to undertake a study which would enable the Government to assess the extent to which work on the millennium bug and other major tasks will absorb the skilled people available.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what controls her Department has on the use of the Action 2000 millennium computer compliance logo; and if she will make a statement. [27874]

Mrs. Roche: This scheme is the responsibility of Action 2000.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if her Department's initiatives to encourage awareness and action to ensure the millennium compliancy of computer systems take account of 2000 being a leap year; and if she will make a statement. [27880]

Mrs. Roche: Yes, for example, the leap year issue is picked up in the advice and good practice material disseminated by Action 2000. This directs people looking for more detailed information on this topic to specify advice from the Computing Services and Software Association, the British Standards Institute, the British Computer Society and the National Computing Centre.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures have been introduced to indicate the millennium compliance of computer products for sale; and if they are subject to independent certification. [27877]

Mrs. Roche: Action 2000 is devising a scheme based on a Millennium Safe logo. I understand that no decision has been taken on whether it would involve independent certification.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many times the Ministerial Committee on the year 2000 computer problem has met. [25373]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 4 February 1998]: In accordance with long standing practice, information about proceedings of the Cabinet and Cabinet Committee is not made public.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps will be taken to prevent the Millennium Safe logo being used by businesses which are not millennium compliant. [27817]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 5 February 1998]: This is a matter for Action 2000.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what checks will be made on businesses before Millennium Safe logos are issued to them for use on their products. [27819]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 5 February 1998]: This is an issue which I understand to be under consideration by Action 2000.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what organisation is issuing the Millennium Safe logo; and how many have so far been issued. [27818]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The logo scheme is the responsibility of Action 2000. I understand that the precise operation of the scheme has not yet been finalised.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade upon what basis the Millennium Safe logo will be issued to businesses. [27816]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 5 February 1998]: This is a matter for Action 2000. I understand that it is discussing the operation of the scheme with the Consumers Association.

Commercial Tenants (Protection)

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures are in place to prevent excessive charges by landlords to commercial tenants for electricity and gas supplies; what plans she has for additional protection of commercial tenants; and if she will make a statement. [27469]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: In the case of gas, the Director General of Gas Supply has a duty to set maximum resale prices. The Current direction requires the gas to be re-sold at no more than cost in all cases.

The Director General of Electricity Supply has a power to set a maximum resale price for electricity. He has, so far, only seen a necessity to do so in respect of domestic tenants.

Trademarks

Mr. Willis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to introduce legislation requiring the National Registry of Internet Domain Names to investigate each attempted registration for possible use by dealers to obstruct the company whose trademark the registered Domain Name is related to. [27710]

Mrs. Roche: There are no plans to introduce legislation requiring the National Registry of Internet Domain Names (Nominet) to investigate registrations in this way. Existing trademark law applies equally to domain names as to any other use of names, as illustrated by the recent "One in a million" judgment. Competition in the registration of domain names in the UK top-level domain is fully open, and Nominet has a dispute resolution procedure in place to deal with any conflicts over domain names. Nominet is also about to enter into collaborative agreements with conventional trademark watching services, so that they will be able to add domain names to the portfolios they oversee.

Export Licences

Mr. Faber: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 10 December 1997, Official Report, column 596, what percentage of applications for export licences were processed by the Export Control Organisation according to their stated aims in the four week periods beginning (a) 15 November 1997 and (b) 13 December 1997. [26977]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 2 February 1998]: Further to my answer of 10 December 1997, the figures to the nearest percentage point for the two periods are as follows:

4 week periods beginning	15 November 1997	13 December 1997
Applications circulated to other Government departments according to their policy requirements and completed in 20 working days	44	41
Applications not circulated to other Government departments and completed in 10 working days	73	73

Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total volume of reprocessed spent nuclear fuel exported for each year since 1990 broken down to show (a) high level, (b) intermediate level and (c) low level waste indicating countries of destination. [26980]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 2 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer on 5 February 1998, Official Report, column 787. British Nuclear Fuels plc have, since 1990, imported 1,700 tonnes of spent nuclear fuel of reprocessing. The fuel is stored in ponds at the Sellafield site on receipt. The majority of the fuel imported since 1990 will be reprocessed during the coming years. Reprocessing involves using a number of chemical processes to separate the reusable uranium (96%) and plutonium (1%) from the 3% waste products contained in spent fuel. Reprocessing separates out the constituent parts of spent fuel, and material for export is not regarded as reprocessed spent nuclear fuel.

The UKAE have, since 1990, imported almost 4 tonnes of spent nuclear fuel for reprocessing. The nuclear material which will be separated as a result of reprocessing of this fuel (namely uranium and plutonium) may be returned to the country of origin. The total amount of nuclear material exported since 1990 is 1 tonne and countries of destination include Germany, Netherlands and France.

Since 1976, all new contracts for reprocessing of overseas spent fuel have contained option for the return of wastes. The Government intend that such options should be exercised and that such wastes should be returned to the countries of origin.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what attempts are made by Her Majesty's Government to assess the adequacy of disposal facilities and plans for radioactive waste management in countries using United Kingdom reprocessing facilities in advance of approving applications for the import of spent nuclear fuel for reprocessing under contracts which include a return-to-sender commitment covering radioactive waste arising from reprocessing. [27989]

Mr. Battle: It has been the practice of successive Governments to obtain, before a contract for the reprocessing of foreign spent nuclear fuel is signed, assurances from the relevant government that it will take no legislative or regulatory steps to prevent the return of arising wastes under the contract. The adequacy of the facilities for managing those wastes is a matter for their owners and the regulatory authorities of the country concerned in accordance with the relevant legislation of that country.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the forecast demand for the mixed plutonium and uranium oxide fuel from the MOX plant at Sellafield; and which countries (a) have signed contracts and (b) expressed interest in contracting for the purchase of fuel. [28272]

Mr. Battle: Details of particular contracts for MOX fuel fabrication are a commercial matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc (BNFL) and their customers. However, BNFL have already supplied some of their European reprocessing customers with MOX fuel from the existing demonstration plant at Sellafield. As regards the expected demand for MOX fuel from the new plant, I refer the hon. Member to the report, produced by PA Consulting for the Environment Agency, entitled "Assessment of BNFL's Economic Case for the Sellafield Mox Plant: Public Domain Version" which is currently the subject of a public consultation being undertaken by the Agency. A copy of the report is in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the financial consequences of recovering plutonium from spent nuclear reactor fuel. [28278]

Mr. Battle: The financial case for recovering plutonium from spent nuclear reactor fuel is for the owners of the spent fuel to assess, taking into account the need to satisfy the requirements laid down by the United Kingdom's regulatory authorities.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii)1997–98 to date. [27777]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The estimated cost of theft and internal fraud to my department and its agencies in 1995–96 was £26,000 and £20,000 respectively and in 1996–97 was £1,000 and £260,000. Without incurring disproportionate cost, the data for 1997–98 will not be available until May 1998. Since 1 April 1996, we no longer hold the relevant data in respect of non-departmental public bodies.

The Department takes fraud very seriously. We take immediate and vigorous action if fraud is detected which also helps to deter other frauds.

We have in place procedures laid down by Treasury and regularly reviewed by Internal Audit and the National Audit Office that are designed to prevent fraud in the first place.

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her estimate of the expenditure of her Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if she will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26596]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Excluding its agencies, the Department's expenditure on newspapers and mass circulation journals for the years requested was as follows:

1997–98: £161,902 to date

1997–98: £194,283 estimate of full year

This includes expenditure on national daily and Sunday newspapers, regional newspapers, and mass circulation magazines and journals. A full list of titles cannot be supplied except at disproportionate cost. The titles taken change to meet the changing requirements of the Department. Changes in procurement procedures mean these figures are not directly comparable with those last provided to the hon. Member in January 1996.

Electricity Companies

Barbara Follett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what statutory provision covers changes to a public electricity supplier's licence in the event of a takeover bid for a regional electricity company. [28160]

Mr. Battle: Modifications to public electricity supply licences are subject to sections 11 to 15 of the Electricity Act 1989.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of bad debts ECGD is assuming on its Asian risks; and what was the corresponding figure in May 1997. [27860]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Records readily available indicate that the level of ECGD's outstanding Claims Balances on Asian markets fell from £70.2m at 31 March 1997 to £36.1m at 5 February 1998. Equivalent figures of the position at 30 May 1997 are not available.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of total Asian ECGD risk is sovereign risk. [27857]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: 84% of ECGD's exposure on Asian markets is classified as sovereign and other public buyer risk.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the average premium rate for Indonesian ECGD cover (a) before and (b) after the December 1997 risk assessment. [27856]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The premium rate for a typical medium-term loan guaranteed by ECGD was £3.40% prior to the December 1997 review and £3.76 afterwards. As no business has been signed since the last review it is not possible to compare average rates.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of ECGD's Asian risk is Sovereign risk; and what proportion private sector. [28586]

Mrs. Beckett: 84 per cent. of ECGD's exposure on Asian markets is classified as sovereign or other public sector risk, and the remaining 16 per cent. as private sector risk.

Dounreay

Mr. Savidge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will assess the desirability of suspending particular categories of operations at Dounreay. [27999]

Mr. Battle: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 2 February 1998, Official Report, column 484.

Mr. Savidge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which nuclear waste storage facilities at Dounreay have been assessed to be unsafe; what is the estimated cost of clearing these up; which of these are still having waste added to them; and if she will estimate the effect of this on those costs. [27998]

Mr. Battle: All nuclear waste storage facilities at Dounreay are subject to strict independent regulation to ensure they do not pose an unacceptable risk to public health. No nuclear waste storage facilities at Dounreay have been assessed by the regulators as unsafe. Subject to continuing to meet the requirements laid down by the regulators, the operation of storage facilities at Dounreay is a matter for the UKAEA. All storage facilities on the Dounreay site, including the Wet Silo, will be emptied in due course as part of the programme of ultimate waste disposal and site remediation. As it is Government policy to ensure good value for money between a range of companies, the cost estimates for individual facilities are commercially confidential.

Sellafield

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if it is her Department's normal practice to write off the capital cost of construction of a plant when considering its future viability; and what assessment she has made of the adoption of this practice by PA Consulting in its report on the MOX plant at Sellafield. [28279]

Mr. Battle: Responsibility for determining policy of the accounting treatment of fixed assets rests with the Board of British Nuclear Fuels plc (BNFL). The report by PA Consulting to which the hon. Member refers was commissioned by the Environment Agency as part of its consideration of the business case for the Sellafield MOX plant following BNFL's application to operate the plant. It is for the Agency to decide whether to accept the advice in the PA report.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will call in the plan to operate a MOX plant at Sellafield. [28275]

Mr. Battle: My right hon Friend has no powers to call in the application by BNFL for the commissioning and operation of the Mixed Oxide Fuel Plant at its Sellafield site. The Environment Agency is currently conducting a further public consultation on this application. It is for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to decide whether to call it in for his decision.

GDP (Cornwall)

Ms Atherton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the gross domestic product of Cornwall for each year since 1968. [28177]

Mrs. Roche: GDP figures for counties are available only for selected years and from 1977 onwards. The available figures for Cornwall are as follows:

GDP at factor cost: current prices

£ million

Year	GDP
1979	926
1981	1,207
1984	1,547
1987	2,105
1989	2,689
1991	2,886
1993	3,212
1995	3,625

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from her Department since 1 May 1997; and if she will make a statement. [27778]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Details are not held centrally. The data of the year ending 31 March 1998 will be compiled from returns from each of my Department's Units and Agencies which will be used to complete the Annual Report to Treasury in May. It is the responsibility of each Head of a Management Unit or Agency to ensure that systems are in place to minimise the risk from theft and to ensure that appropriate action is taken should a theft occur.

Photocopier Industry

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 611, what factors led the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs to describe the BEUA as advisers to the right hon. Member for Wokingham. [28125]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 6 February 1998]: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to EDM 437 tabled in November last year.

I note that there is no evidence of the right hon. Gentleman disputing the terms of the EDM which stated he relied on this organisation for his briefings.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment the Government have made of the impact of a minimum wage of £4 an hour on employment in the context of its evidence to the Low Pay Commission. [28128]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 6 February 1998]: We have asked the Independent Low Pay Commission to take into account all economic circumstances, including the likely effect on the level of employment, when formulating its recommendations to Government.

Second-hand Gas Appliances

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make it her policy to introduce tighter restrictions on the sale of second-hand gas appliances. [28569]

Mr. Battle: My Department is presently carrying out a detailed analysis following a formal consultation exercise on proposed safety Regulations for second-hand gas appliances. Decision on future policy will be made when the analysis is complete.

In the meantime, the safety of second-hand gas appliances is currently regulated by a combination of Regulations covering specific products, the Gas Cooking Appliances (Safety) Regulations 1989 and the Heating Appliances (Fireguarding)(Safety) Regulations 1991. For other types of gas appliances the General Product Safety Regulations 1994 apply. Taken together, this legislation generally provides that suppliers of second-hand gas appliances must ensure that only safe appliances can be marketed.

Fair Competition

Dr. Cable: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines are issued to (a) the Meteorological Office, (b) Companies House and (c) the Ordnance Survey to ensure that they engage in only fair competition with private information providers who are also their customers. [26707]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Meteorological Office is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Defence. The Ordnance Survey is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Companies House is statutorily obliged to make information on companies, submitted to it under the provisions of the Companies Act, available to all who seek it. It does so through the offer of a range of products and services which are available to all, but which include some of particular benefit to private information providers and some equally appropriate to the needs of individual searchers.

Companies House is guided by its Framework Document, by the annual business plan that is submitted to and approved by Ministers, and by a range of other specific or generic guidelines issued to it as an Executive Agency.

British Inventors

Dr. Cable: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals the Government have for supporting and promoting British inventors. [26708]

Mr. Battle: My Department has awarded the Institute of Patentees and Inventors (IPI) a grant of £30,000 for the period 1996/97–1998/99 to help them to maintain and improve the services which they provide. The Government have also introduced legislation to establish the National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts (NESTA). Funded by an endowment of £200 million from the National Lottery, NESTA will help talented individuals in the fields of science, technology and the arts to achieve their full potential and help to turn inventions or ideas into products or services. The Department's expenditure programmes which support innovation in business are being reviewed as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost of media presentations and press conferences which he has given, other than those held at his Department. [25162]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 23 January 1998]: The cost of media presentations and press conferences which I and my Ministers have given outside my Department have normally been no more than the cost of a backdrop at most a few hundred pounds. The only occasions where the costs have been greater were the launch of the Business Link Enterprise Zone in November (£18k), and the regional events marking our EU Presidency in December (£6k).

Agenda 2000

Miss McIntosh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action the Government will take to ensure those sectors of the British economy previously benefiting from European Structural Funding will continue to benefit under the new Agenda 2000 proposals, with particular reference to KONVER. [25765]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 27 January 1998]: The Government welcome the European Commission's continuing support under the proposed new Objective 2 for regions undergoing restructuring. We would like to see a fair balance, ideally determined at the national or regional level, of the available resources between deprived industrial, urban and rural areas. The communication "Agenda 2000", published on 16 July 1997, outlined in general terms the Commission's approach to these regions. However, the details will not be clear until the Commission publishes detailed proposals for Structural Fund reform in March or April. In the negotiations that follow, we will be asking the Commission how the new Objective 2 will be sufficiently flexible in its approach to areas heavily dependent on a single sector, such as defence. The Government are currently undertaking regional consultations with interested parties to hear their views on the implications in the UK of Structural Fund reform.

Counterfeit Goods

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the extent of the trade in counterfeit goods in the north west; and if she will make a statement. [23997]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has not made an assessment of the extent of the trade in counterfeit goods in the north west, but shares my hon. Friend's concern regarding the trade in counterfeit goods.

Trading Standards Officers and the Police are responsible for the enforcement of measures against the counterfeit trade. However, my Department is in regular contact with groups representing the interests of trade mark and copyright owners to ensure that the legal framework is supportive of their efforts.

Some information on the extent of counterfeit trade is available from the annual returns provided by Trading Standards departments.

From the 133 reports received for 1996–97	Successful prosecutions
	Total	North West
Trade Mark Acts 1994	217	41
Copyright, Patents and Designs Acts	91	17

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the extent of the counterfeit trade in automotive and aerospace spare parts. [23999]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has not made an assessment of the extent of the trade in counterfeit goods specifically in the North West, but shares my hon. Friend's concern regarding the trade in counterfeit goods.

Trading Standards Officers and the Police are responsible for the enforcement of measure against counterfeit trade contained in the Trade Marks Act 1994 and the Copyright, Patents and Designs Act 1988. Information from the annual returns provided by trading standards departments for 1996–97 show that there were 217 successful prosecutions under the Trade Marks Act and 91 successful prosecutions under the Copyright, Patents and Designs Acts.

No cases were reported involving automotive or aerospace parts and the Anti-Counterfeiting Group were not able to supply data on this either.

Coal Industry

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what meetings the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry has held with (a) mining managements and (b) mining unions since 1 November. [24403]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 20 January 1998]: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Science, Energy and Industry has held several meetings with representatives from Mining Unions and Management since 1 November and will continue to do so.

Special Advisers

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the annual cost of the support staff, accommodation, personnel salaries and other overheads of her Department's special advisers. [25816]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 27 January 1998]: I refer the right hon. Member to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan), 27 October 1997, Official Report, column 685, and to the hon. Member for Surrey Heath (Mr. Hawkins), Official Report, 12 December 1997, Official Report, column 721, in relation to the salaries of my Special Advisers, and to the answer provided by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. and learned Member for Harborough (Mr. Garnier) on 30 June 1997, in relation to the cost of support staff.

These are the only cost requested that are readily separable from other Department costs.

Design Protection Directive

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's policy on a repairs clause for the Parts Design Protection Directive. [26378]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 30 January 1998]: Last summer, when the Council adopted its Common Position on the proposed Directive on the legal protection of designs, following unanimous political agreement on this proposal at the Internal Market Council in March 1997, the United Kingdom made a formal statement regretting that the Council had been unable to agree harmonised provisions relating to the repair of complex products, such as motor vehicles and motorcycles. The proposed Directive is now to be the subject of conciliation which is likely to start during the current United Kingdom's Presidency.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to seek to amend the Parts Design Protection Directive to allow competition in the supply of motorcycle parts. [26379]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 30 January 1998]: The Council's Common Position on the proposed Directive on the legal protection of designs as agreed last year already includes a provision allowing Member States to provide for competition in the supply of motorcycle parts. The Common Position gives Member States the option of maintaining in force or introducing any provision to allow anyone to copy the design of a part of, for example, a motorcycle, when that design is dependent on the appearance of the motorcycle and the copy part is used to restore the motorcycle's original appearance. This proposed Directive is to be the subject of conciliation which is likely to start during the United Kingdom's current Presidency.

Competition Bill

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the role of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe in relation to (a) oil industry and (b) brewing industry issues in the Competition Bill [Lords]. [26390]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 30 January 1998]: The Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney), the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs and I have policy responsibility for the Competition Bill. The Minister for Trade and Competition in Europe is the Minister responsible for the passage of the Bill through the House of Lords. The Bill applies to the economy at large, including the sectors referred to in the question.

Military Equipment Export Licences

Sir George Young: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of progress towards meeting her targets for issuing export licences for military equipment. [26118]

Mrs. Beckett: Licences to export strategic goods are issued by the President of the Board of Trade and the Export Control Organisation of the Department of Trade and Industry is the Licensing authority. Relevant individual licence applications are circulated by the DTI to other government departments with an interest, as determined by them in line with their policy responsibilities. These include the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development.

In his announcement of 28 July 1997, Official Report, cols 26-29 of new criteria of the assessment of export licence applications my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made clear that the criteria would not be applied mechanistically and that individual applications would be considered case by case. In the months following the announcement, this led to an increase in the time taken to assess some applications. The Government appreciate the inconvenience and uncertainty that results from any delay in the processing of individual applications and my department together with the other departments involved, is continuing to work to reduce processing timescales generally.

Electricity Companies (Takeover Bids)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what methods she will use to examine bids for the Energy Group by (a) Nomura International and (b) Texas Utilities; if she will refer the bids to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if she will make a statement. [28336]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Nomura International and Texas Utilities have separately announced publicly that each is in talks with The Energy Group which may lead to a bid for the Energy Group. Should either company make a bid, it will be necessary to establish which competition authorities have jurisdiction. If and to the extent that any bid falls to be considered under the Fair Trading Act 1973, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade will decide, in the light of the advice of the Director General of Fair Trading and the views of the Director General of Electricity Supply, whether or not to refer the bid to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) for investigation. She has said that her general policy continues to be to refer mergers primarily on competition grounds, but that where, as part of a wider public interest scrutiny, important regulatory issues are raised, she may decide that a reference is warranted. Each case is considered on its merits.

Publications

Mr. Gale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list, by title, the publications produced by her Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998. [26334]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: A list of those publications that have been notified to my Department's Publications Unit and published by my Department during this period has been placed in the Library of the House.

Industrial Tribunal Hearings

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many industrial (employment) tribunal hearings were held in each of the last three years; in what categories; and what proportion of complaints were (a) upheld and (b) rejected. [27980]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The information requested is available in published form for all years before 1996–97 in "Labour Market Trends", copies of which are available in the Library. Figures for 1993–94 and 1994–95 are given in the July 1996 issue; figures for 1995–96 in the April 1997 issue. Figures for industrial tribunal outcomes for 1996–97 will be available in the spring.

Insolvency Practitioners

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if there will be a consultation process in respect of investigations into remuneration of insolvency practitioners. [27294]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

Although policy on insolvency is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, I have been asked to reply to this question because my Department is responsible for providing the secretariat for a working party, chaired by Mr. Justice Ferris, which is considering the way in which the remuneration of office holders, including insolvency practitioners, should be determined.

The working party, which itself comprises members from a range of interests, has no plans to undertake a formal consultation exercise on this issue.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the progress of Mr. Justice Ferris's working party on remuneration of insolvency practitioners. [27293]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

Although policy on insolvency is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, I have been asked to reply to this question because my Department is responsible for providing the secretariat for Mr. Justice Ferris's working party. The working party has met on three occasions and a further meeting is scheduled for 16 February, to consider the way in which the remuneration of office holders, including insolvency practitioners, should be determined. It intends to report to the Vice-Chancellor no later than the autumn of 1998.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what studies (a) the Government and (b) the National Millennium Experience Company have undertaken on the impact of the Millennium Dome exhibition on other visitor attractions, with particular reference to those that do not benefit from central Government grants; and if he will make them available to those attractions. [27289]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 6 February 1998]: In response to a recommendation by the Culture, Media and Sport Select Committee, the Government have commissioned a study from the English Tourist Board, who in consultation with colleagues in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, will look at the impact of the Millennium Dome on other UK visitor attractions. The study will cover a full range of attractions, not just those that receive funding from the public purse. When the study has been completed its findings will be made public.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what steps he will take to ensure that the culture of Welsh people is represented within the Millennium Dome. [27143]

Mr. Mandelson: The content of the Millennium Experience at Greenwich will appeal to, and be relevant to, people of all ages and interests wherever they may live in the United Kingdom. It will engage, inspire and educate all who visit.

In addition, there will be a national programme associated with the Experience. This will have the same overarching theme of "Time to Make a Difference", and will encourage participation of individuals in all areas of the United Kingdom. The New Millennium Experience Company is setting up teams in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the nine regions of England. Once these teams are in place, I shall ensure all hon. Members have the relevant details.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will give a breakdown by budget head of the sums allocated to the Millennium Dome projects by (a) personnel costs excluding consultants, (b) building costs, (c) external infrastructure costs, (d) consultants' costs, (e) design costs, (f) publicity costs and (g) other costs. [28133]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is currently finalising its Corporate Plan, which will contain budgets for the component parts of the Millennium Experience project covering the years 1997/98 (actual) and 1998/99 to 2000/01 (forecast). The aim is to publish the Plan at the end of this financial year following its approval by NMEC's Board and by the Millennium Commission. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House immediately on publication.

National Heritage Memorial Fund

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many projects allocated funds by the National Heritage Memorial Fund have not claimed their full grants; what is the total sum involved; and what percentage this represents of the money allocated. [28512]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The National Heritage Memorial Fund encompasses two separate funds: the Heritage Lottery Fund, which distributes the heritage tranche of the proceeds from the National Lottery, and the Heritage Memorial Fund, which serves as a fund of last resort for the support of heritage projects throughout the United Kingdom. The number of completed projects which have been awarded grants by the Heritage Lottery Fund, but where the full value of the grant has not been claimed, is 93. The total value of grants awarded was £46.7 million. The total amount unclaimed was £1.3 million, or 2.7 per cent. of the total.

The Heritage Memorial Fund does not keep information on unclaimed grants in a readily accessible format.

Heritage Projects

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the total sum allocated for heritage projects since the inception of the National Lottery; and how many projects have been assisted. [28511]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The Government expect each of the good causes to receive £1.8 billion over the period of the current licence. The Heritage Lottery Fund, which distributes the heritage tranche of the Lottery proceeds, has so far made grants to a value of £892.6 million for 1,558 projects. Several of the other distributing bodies have also made grants to heritage projects but do not keep separate records.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28380]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My Department has not acquired or specified any mahogany in 1996 or 1997.

Royal Opera House

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to make public the results of Sir Richard Eyre's review of the Royal Opera House. [28868]

Mr. Chris Smith: Sir Richard Eyre is due to report to me by 1 May 1998. I will make public the results of his review once I receive it.

Appointments

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps his Department is taking to implement the recommendations of the Nolan Committee on appointments; and what impact these measures have had on the time taken for appointments to be made. [28851]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department has acted on the guidance issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments, whose appointment was recommended by the Nolan Committee on Standards in Public Life.

We have established an appointments unit charged with overseeing the implementation of the Commissioner's recommendations. The unit also maintains a register of people who have expressed an interest in public appointment, acts as the secretariat for the advisory panels which provide independent scrutiny of shortlisted candidates, and co-ordinates advertising and executive search to fill posts where necessary, in accordance with the Commissioner's principle of proportionality.

These measures have inevitably lengthened the appointments process.

Museum Admissions Policy

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the date of publication for the Government's review of admissions policy to museums. [28189]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 6 February 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made an interim announcement about the review of access to museums and galleries on 8 December 1997, Official Report, columns 652–53. As noted at that time, further consideration is being given to this issue in the context of the Government's Comprehensive Spending review, which will be completed in the summer. A further announcement will be made then.

Lyric Theatre

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the membership of the working group Sir Richard Eyre has appointed to support him in his review of the future of lyric theatre in London. [29039]

Mr. Chris Smith: Sir Richard has appointed the following members of his working group:

David Brierley CBE
Hilary Carty
Mark Elder CBE
Matthew Evans
Gavin Henderson
Melanie Leech
Deborah MacMillan
Kathryn McDowell
Colin Nears CBE
John Newbigin
Trevor Phillips
Michael Ratcliffe
Graham Vick

The following representatives of the Royal Opera House and English National Opera are also participating in the review:

Royal Opera House:

Michael Berkeley

Mary Allen

English National Opera:

Bob Boas

Paul Daniel

Sir Richard and his working group are consulting individually practitioners of both art forms and a wide range of experts in the fields.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Cannabis

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of those under the age of 21 years in the Metropolitan Police area whose first offence is connected to cannabis were (a) charged, (b) cautioned, (c) convicted and (d) imprisoned in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [28725]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not available since data are not routinely collected on whether a particular offence is the first or a subsequent one committed by an individual.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 18 December on behalf of Mr. Turner. [28733]

Mr. Straw: I regret that there is no record of the letter dated 18 December from the right hon. Member being received in the Home Office. A letter dated 14 December from Mr. Turner was received in the Home Office on 18 December. He will receive a reply very soon. I will ensure that a copy of that reply is sent to the right hon. Member.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Minister intends to answer the letters from the hon. Member for Truro and St. Austell on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Capell, 8 Wedgewood Road, St. Austell, dated 27 November and 22 December. [27953]

Mr. Michael: The reply was incorporated in my composite letter of 30 January to each hon. Member about the present position on the firearms compensation scheme. I regret that the volume of correspondence received about the progress of individual claims had prevented an earlier reply from being sent.

Official Cars

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many official cars are available for use by Ministers in his Department; and how many new cars have been acquired for the use of Ministers in his Department since 1 May. [25150]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 23 January 1998]: Eight cars are available for use by Home Office Ministers, the same number as were available before 1 May 1997. Two new cars have been paid for by the Department since 1 May 1997, one ordered prior to that date and one since.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times his wife has accompanied him on overseas visits; and what was the cost of her travel and other expenses. [25148]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 23 January 1998]: None.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many receptions have been held (a) in his Department and (b) at his official residence since he took office; how many people have attended; and what was the total cost of these events. [25186]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 23 January 1998]: Since 1 May 1997, I have hosted four receptions attended by approximately 300 people at a cost of £3,700. I do not have an official residence. Three of the receptions were held at the Home Office. The fourth, a reception for the recipients of police gallantry awards, was held at the House of Commons and accounted for 150 of the guests and for £1,870 of the costs.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his plans for the extension of Section 11 funding for schools with ethnic minorities; and if he will make a statement. [27706]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer to the reply which my right hon. Friend gave my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall) on 16 December 1997, Official Report, columns 86–87.

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26678]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The information requested is as follows:

1997–98 (to 31 December 1997): £112,000

1997–98 (estimated full-year expenditure): £135,000

These figures relate to expenditure on newspaper and magazines purchase on subscription by the Home Office's information and library services (from 1 July 1997, by Home Office Communication Directorate's Resource Management Group), and include expenditure for the Prison Service and the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. These figures also include expenditure for the Forensic Science Service. No central record is held of materials purchased from Directorates' budgets, or for non-departmental public bodies (other than the Forensic Science Service) for which my Department is responsible.

My Department purchases or obtains free of charge a wide range of newspapers and periodical publications. A list of the titles taken by the central Home Office, including the Prison Service and Immigration and Nationality Directorate, together with a list of titles taken by the Forensic Science Service, has been placed in the Library.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost of (a) Ministerial cars and drivers and (b) the Department's bill for taxis in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year. [27786]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The estimates available to me for the costs, borne by the Home Office, of Ministers' cars are as follows:

Year	£000
1995–96	296,752
1996–97	323,900
1997–98 estimate	503,963

Some years, the figures will of course include the cost of the periodic replacement of cars as well as their maintenance and other running costs. This is the case in 1997–98: costs for two new cars have been incurred in 1997–98, one ordered before 1 May 1997 and one since. The information available to me about the Department's use of taxis is incomplete and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Stolen Property

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will review the powers of the courts to retrieve stolen property where it has inadvertently been returned to the offender and not to the owners; [27996]

(2) how many incidents there have been in the past year where the police have returned stolen property to the offender and not to the owner of the property; and what action has been taken to ensure that such incidents do not occur in the future. [27995]

Mr. Michael: The Police (Property) Act 1897 provides that any person claiming ownership of property seized and retained by the police may make an application to a magistrates' court for ownership to be determined and for delivery of that property to the person appearing to the court to be the owner. The Act maintains the right of any person to seek an order for recovery of property within six months after the date of the legal proceedings but any such right will cease at the expiry of that period of time. It is also open to the police to make application under the Act to determine ownership.

Property seized and retained by the police and subsequently used as evidence in connection with a person's conviction is not returned to the offender but is disposed of in accordance with the Act. Property retained by the police and unclaimed after a period of 12 months, or, in the case of forfeited property, six months, may be sold at auction and the proceeds of sale placed in the Police Property Act Fund. Moneys from the Fund are, among other things, donated to local good causes and victim support groups.

I am satisfied that these arrangements are fair and that they generally work well. Information is not held centrally on the number of occasions the police have mistakenly returned property to the wrong person and the relevant time for correcting the mistake has passed. Where this happens, the police would be expected to pay compensation to the rightful owners.

CS Gas Canisters

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what medical advice he has received in relation to the use of gas canisters by the police since their introduction; [28161]

(2) what assessments of injuries sustained by members of the public he has evaluated since the introduction of CS gas canisters; [28163]

(3) what plans he has to review the use of CS gas canisters by the police; [28164]

(4) what medical advice his Department obtained prior to introducing the use of CS canisters by the police. [28162]

Mr. Michael: All available scientific and medical data were evaluated by experts from the Home Office Police Scientific Development Branch, the Department of Health and the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment before operational trials of CS spray were undertaken between 1 March and 31 August 1996. It was found during the trials that the risk of injury from the use of CS spray was much lower than that from police batons. Of the 99 injuries believed to have been caused by CS, six resulted in subjects being taken to hospital, although none was detained there more than briefly. There has been no subsequent centrally co-ordinated assessment of injuries sustained as a result of exposure to CS spray.

My right hon. Friend studied all of the pathologists' reports and other medical and toxicological evidence submitted to the inquest which was held last year into the death of Mr. Ibrahima Sey. In the light of reading that material, my right hon. Friend confirmed his full support for the operational use of CS spray by the police. The use of CS spray and other equipment is kept under review by the Self Defence and Restraint Committee of the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that asylum seekers should have a right to legal representation at appeal hearings. [28185]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Asylum appellants already have the right, under section 23(3) of the Immigration Act 1971 and Rule 26 of the Asylum Appeals (Procedure) Rules 1996, to be legally represented at appeal hearings.

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial provision he is making to ensure that asylum appellants may receive legal representation for their appeals. [28186]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In the current year, a total of £6,737 million has been made available to the Refugee Legal Centre (RLC) and the Immigration Advisory Service (IAS) under section 23 of the Immigration Act 1971, as follows:

	£ million
	RLC	IAS
Core Funding	3.082	2.592
Spend to Save	0.563	0.500

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect on asylum appellants of his withdrawal of special funding from (a) the Immigration Advisory Service and (b) the Refugee Legal Centre. [28187]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to a question from the hon Member for Sheffield, Hallam (Mr. Allan) on 9 February 1998, Official Report, columns 24–25.

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have successfully appealed against the refusal of asylum since 1992. [28184]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: During the period 1 January 1994 to 31 December 1997, a total of 44,360 appeals against the refusal of asylum were determined by Adjudicators of the Immigration Appellate Authority. Of these, a total of 2,030 were allowed. I regret that equivalent information for years prior to 1994 is not available.

Handguns (Compensation)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the anticipated average period from receipt of claims for payment of compensation for handguns surrendered (i) under section (a), (ii) under section (b), (iii) under section (c) and (d) for .22 handguns. [28280]

Mr. Michael: The present average processing time for claims under Options A and B of the compensation scheme for large calibre handguns and for applications under the voluntary ex gratia payment scheme for small calibre pistols is around 22 weeks from the date of receipt in the Firearm Compensation Section. Regular processing of claims and applications under Option C of the schemes has begun, starting with those received at the beginning of July.

EU Immigration and Nationality Department

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people on average were employed in the EC group of the Immigration and Nationality Department between 1 February 1996 and 31 January 1997; and how many are currently employed in the group. [28292]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 1 February 1996, 20 members of staff were employed in the European Community Group of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. On 31 January 1997, the number was 20 and on 31 January 1998, 26. These figures are on a head count basis and do not take account of part-time working or job sharing.

Turkish Workers

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken in the UK to give legal effect to the right of Turkish workers as regards residence and employment in accordance with Article 6 (3) of the Association Council Decision 1/80 adopted under the Turkey/EC Association Agreement 1963 and its Protocol. [28291]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Effect is given to Article 6 through instructions to caseworkers which ensure that Turkish nationals who are able to benefit from rights under the Agreement are granted leave to remain in the United Kingdom where appropriate.

Residence Documents

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for residence documents or endorsements by third country national spouses of Community nationals exercising Treaty rights have been refused on the basis that the Secretary of State considered the marriage to be one of convenience since 1 February 1997. [28293]

Ms Quin: This information is not available. Statistics for the refusal of a residence document do not distinguish between reasons for refusal.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the length in time of residence documents or endorsements given to third country national spouses of EC nationals exercising Treaty rights who have been granted ILR. [28305]

Ms Quin: Where a European Economic Area (EEA) national has been granted indefinite leave to remain, the third country national spouse may apply either for leave to remain under the Immigration Rules on the basis of marriage to a person present and settled in the United Kingdom or for a residence document in accordance with European Community law. In the former case the applicant, if successful, would be granted 12 months' leave to remain in the first instance: in the latter case, the third country national spouse may apply for a residence document which, if issued, would have the same validity as any extant residence permit issued to the EEA spouse. If the EEA spouse no longer holds a valid residence permit, one would be issued with five years' validity as the basis for the issue of a residence document of the same validity to the third country national.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate how many EC nationals have exercised Treaty rights of residence in the UK since 1 February 1997. [28307]

Ms Quin: European Economic Area nationals who enter the United Kingdom in order to exercise a Treaty right are not required to apply for a residence permit. It is therefore not possible to provide an estimate.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for residence permits for EC nationals exercising Treaty rights have been issued for a period of less than five years in the last five years. [28295]

Ms Quin: Under European Community law, a residence permit is normally issued with a validity of five years. In the case of students and members of their family, however, a residence permit is issued with a validity of 12 months or, where the course of study is for a longer period, for the duration of the course. Information is not held as to how many residence permits with a validity of less than five years have been issued.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the average time for consideration of applications for (a) residence documents for EU nationals and (b) residence documents or evidence of residence made by third country national family members of EC nationals exercising Treaty rights in the United Kingdom since 1 February 1997. [28299]

Ms Quin: The timeliness of completion of residence permits and residence document applications is expressed as a proportion of cases completed within one, two and six months. From 1 February 1997 to 31 January 1998, the averages were as follows:

	Per cent.
Residence permits
within 1 month	26
within 2 months	48
within 6 months	73
Residence documents
within 1 month	16
within 2 months	33
within 6 months	53

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for residence documents by (a) EC nationals and (b) third country national family members of EC nationals exercising Treaty rights have been (i) made and (ii) granted since 1 February 1997. [28304]

Ms Quin:

	Made	Granted
Residence permit applications	2,848	1,819
Residence document applications	1,850	2,664

Note:
In the case of a residence document application an accompanying residence permit application is required, except in certain specific circumstances involving British or Irish nationals. Such residence permit applications are not separately recorded. The data for residence permit applications relate to those cases where an European Economic Area national applies for a residence permit without any application for a residence document being made by a third country national.

EU Nationals

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters have been sent to European Community nationals in the United Kingdom advising them that they are no longer considered to be exercising Treaty rights and should therefore leave the United Kingdom since 1 February 1997. [28298]

Ms Quin: None.

Coroners

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 15 January 1998, Official Report, column 280, how many full-time coroners are women. [28899]

Mr. George Howarth: There is one full-time coroner who is female—the coroner for Inner London South.

Visa Appeals

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to restore the right of appeal to those who are refused visas when applying to visit close relatives. [26456]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We are committed to providing a streamlined right of appeal for visitors denied a visa and we are examining the options for achieving this.

European Court of Human Rights Rulings

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has (a) taken and (b) intends to take to comply with the decisions of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of (i) McCann and others v. UK and (ii) Murray v. UK. [27410]

Mr. Fatchett: I have been asked to reply.

We paid the applicants' costs in the case of McCann, as required by the judgment of the Court. No further measures needed to be taken by the Government as a result of the judgment. The Committee of Ministers' Deputies adopted a resolution on 20 March 1996 stating that the United Kingdom had complied with the terms of the judgment. In the case of John Murray, we have paid the costs and expenses of the applicant as required by the judgment of the Court. Further measures in response to the breach found by the Court are under consideration.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Benevolent Fund

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the (a) assets and (b) annual income of the Duchy of Lancaster's Benevolent Fund; and which (i) individuals and (ii) organisations have received money from the fund since 1992. [27630]

Dr. David Clark: I am not a trustee of the Duchy Benevolent Fund. As it is a registered charity, details of the charity's income and donations are submitted to the Charity Commissioners each year and I have asked the Secretary of the Fund to send my hon. Friend the details he requires.

Property (Public Access)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the property owned by the Duchy of Lancaster which is (a) open to and (b) not open to the public. [27631]

Dr. David Clark: The Duchy owns Tutbury Castle and Halton Castle which are open to the public. The Duchy owns other historical monuments which are in the Guardianship of, or are leased to, local authorities or to English Heritage. These are also open to the public.

The majority of the property owned by the Duchy comprises tenanted farms, woodland, private houses, and commercial properties such as shops and offices. Much of the farmland and woodland is accessible to the public by rights of way or by voluntary access arrangements: the property is not "open to the public" in the literal sense of the term.

Intestacy

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes there have been since 1992 in respect of the treatment of the estates of people who die intestate in the Duchy of Lancaster. [27629]

Dr. David Clark: There has been no change since 1992 in the treatment of the estates of people who die intestate in the County Palatine of Lancaster.

Environment Information

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the principal points of difference between the rights of access to information provided for at present under (a) the non-statutory Code of Practice on Open Government and (b) the statutory right of access to information on environmental matters contained in the Environment Information Regulations 1992. [28924]

Dr. David Clark: The principal differences between the access provisions under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information and under the Environmental Information Regulations 1992 (which give effect to EC Directive 90/313) are as follows:

(a) the Code of Practice is non-statutory; the Regulations have the force of law;

(b) appeals against non-disclosure under the Code of Practice are referable to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration; the appeals mechanism for the Regulations would be by judicial review;

(c) the formal coverage of the Code of Practice is determined by the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration; the coverage of the Regulations is determined by the definition of "relevant person" in Regulation 2(3);

(d) the Code of Practice applies to all information held by the bodies concerned; the Regulations apply only to information which relates to the environment, as defined in Regulation 2(2);

(e) there are some minor differences in the wording of the exemptions from disclosure, although in practice the exemptions cover similar areas;

(f) the exemptions in the Code of Practice are discretionary i.e. they allow certain information to be withheld from disclosure; the Regulations contain provision for certain mandatory exemptions i.e. they require that certain information must be withheld from disclosure.

The Government are considering how best to incorporate the requirements of the Environmental Information Directive 90/313 into the wider Freedom of Information policy proposed in the White Paper "Your Right to Know". Our aim will be to simplify and streamline the present arrangements for both applicants and holders of environmental information.

Civil Service (Sickness)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the overall level of sickness absence in the Civil Service. [29153]

Dr. David Clark: The average number of working days sickness absence per staff-year in 1996 was 10.2.

I have placed in the Libraries of the House copies of the report prepared for my Department by OHSA Limited on Sickness Absence in the Civil Service during 1996, which contains a comprehensive analysis of the figures about the Civil Service.

My Department regularly encourages Departments and agencies to review their approaches to sickness absence management.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those individuals or organisations who requested that their submission to the consultation document "Your Right to Know", should not be published; and if he will indicate the reasons given by the submitting parties for the withholding from publication. [28170]

Dr. David Clark: By Friday 6 February I had received 107 submissions from individuals and organisations in response to the White Paper Your Right to Know. Only two correspondents so far have requested that their submission be treated in confidence. In accordance with their wish for confidentiality, I do not intend to publish any details about these submissions.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will ensure that departmental submissions to the White Paper "Your Right to Know", will be published on the appropriate website on receipt. [28171]

Dr. David Clark: The White Paper Your Right to Know contains the Government's collectively agreed proposals for a Freedom of Information Act and is the result of detailed discussion within Government. The current period of consultation on the White Paper is therefore designed to enable the public, not Government Departments, to submit their views on the Government's proposals. Except in those cases—so far only two out of 107—where confidentiality is requested, these submissions will be published on the "Informing Government" website (http://foi.democracy.org.uk).

NORTHERN IRELAND

Unemployment

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she will publish the results of the Government's review of long-term unemployment in Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [28624]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 10 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about the current consultation process on long-term unemployment in Northern Ireland.

Work on the review of long-term unemployment was temporarily overtaken during the Autumn by the overriding priority of the New Deal. We have been examining how existing programmes for the long term unemployed could be best aligned with the New Deal while taking account of the outcome of last year's consultation exercise. I expect an announcement will be made shortly on the future shape of existing programmes and services.

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is her policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28061]

Mr. Worthington: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not sought to establish a policy for responding to letters received in the languages specified in the question because Northern Ireland Departments and Agencies have not indicated a need for such guidance.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what plans are being made for disabled access to the Millennium Dome. [28141]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Erith and Thamesmead (Mr. Austin) on 29 October 1997, Official Report, column 822. Since then, the Advisory Group has met four times; most recently on 29 January 1998.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if the entry price for the Millennium Dome will exceed £10. [28923]

Mr. Mandelson: There will be a full range of entrance ticket prices covering adults, senior citizens, children, students, families and group rates. The detailed definitions and prices will be determined and announced in due course.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Car Driving Test Failures

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the percentage failure rate in 1997 for car driving tests; and of the total failed, what percentage were attributed in whole or part to (a) speeding and (b) driving too slowly. [27475]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 21 January 1998, Official Report, column 549. Statistics for overall pass/fail rates for the remainder of 1997 will not be available until March.

An analysis of faults committed on a sample of 420,000 tests conducted between 1 June 1997 and 31 January 1998 shows that inappropriate use of speed was wholly or partly the reason for a candidate being failed 0.5 per cent. of tests. The computerised fault analysis system does not record whether a candidate was assessed as driving too quickly or too slowly.

Copthall Stadium

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce his decision on whether to call in the proposed Copthall Stadium development, Mill Hill. [27828]

Mr. Caborn: Very shortly.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that local authorities prepare contingency plans for the provision of services to vulnerable groups in the event of the failure of computer systems to be millennium compliant; and if he will make a statement. [28237]

Angela Eagle: Each local authority is responsible for ensuring its own millennium compliance. Authorities have access to high quality advice on this issue through the Local Government Management Board, the professional body of local government IT officers (SOCTIM) and other professional bodies. During the course of their last annual audit programmes authorities' external auditors were advised by the Audit Commission to evaluate the plans authorities had in place to identify the extent of the year 2000 problem and for any necessary remedial action.

Biodiversity

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what steps the Government have taken to meet their obligations under the Action Plan for 1996 to 2000 for the Pan-European Biological and Landscape Diversity Strategy; what further action will be taken in the period to 2000; and if the Government will make an annual report on progress to the House; [27976]

(2) to what extent the Government have participated in international monitoring of the implementation of the Pan-European Biological and Landscape Diversity Strategy. [27977]

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what action the Government have taken to meet their obligations under the Action Plan for 1996–2000 for the Pan-European Biological and Landscape Diversity Strategy; [28316]

(2) in what manner and with what frequency he will report to Parliament on the actions taken to meet the Government's obligations under the Pan-European Biological and Landscape Diversity Strategy; [28317]

(3) if he will make a statement on participation in the international institutional arrangements for the implementation of the Pan-European Biological and Landscape Diversity Strategy. [28318]

Angela Eagle: The Pan-European Biological and Landscape Diversity Strategy is non-binding and does not lay down specific obligations. The Government are nevertheless strongly supportive of the Strategy process. In November we hosted the 'Planning for Biodiversity' Workshop for Central and Eastern European countries, providing a forum for the exchange of knowledge, experience and expertise in the development and implementation of national biodiversity strategies and action plans, and for discussion on other primary elements of the Strategy.

The Government have participated in international monitoring of the Pan-European Strategy through its membership of the Executive Bureau set up to guide and review the implementation of the Strategy process. The Government are also a member of the Council for the Strategy which is responsible for devising a policy to direct, guide, support and co-ordinate its implementation and further development.

The Government will continue to participate fully in the further development and implementation of the Strategy, and will play a leading role in the 'Environment for Europe' Ministerial Conference at Aarhus in June, which will review progress and take decisions about the way forward for the Strategy process to 2000. The Government will inform the House of the outcome.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps the Government have taken in furtherance of (i) the Convention on Biological Diversity, (ii) the Bern Convention on the Conservation of European Wildlife and Natural Habitats, (iii) the Bonn Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals, (iv) the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands of International Importance and (v) the EU Habitats Directive. [27975]

Angela Eagle: The steps taken by the Government in relation to the Conventions and Directive mentioned are set out in the United Kingdom's First National Report to the Convention on Biological Diversity dated 31 December 1997, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to implement the decision taken by the International Maritime Organisation in December 1997 to make mandatory the INF code for the safe carriage of irradiated nuclear fuel, plutonium and high-level radioactive waste in flasks on board ships; and if he will make a statement on the implications for the safety arrangements for such nuclear shipments of implementation of the INF code. [27987]

Ms Glenda Jackson: While the International Maritime Organisation (IMO) has decided to make the INF Code mandatory, the work to give effect to this decision has yet to be completed. The Government support the IMO's decision and are participating actively in the work to implement it.

In the meantime, compliance with the INF Code remains voluntary. However, UK registered ships engaged in the carriage of relevant cargoes have documents of compliance issued by my Department's Marine Safety Agency. All foreign ships carrying INF Code materials to or from the UK have had similar documents issued by the appropriate maritime administration.

Making the code mandatory will ensure that all ships engaged in the trade meet the high safety standards currently met by UK ships and will enhance our enforcement powers.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what quantities of radioactive waste have been returned to Spain since 1980 as a result of the processing of uranium-contaminated filter papers for the Spanish National Uranium Company; what forms of transport have been used for these shipments; how many such shipments have taken place; and what indication he has received as to plans by BNFL to increase the imports of such uranium residues. [27990]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The commercial and operational arrangements between BNFL and its customers are a matter for the companies involved, subject to meeting the relevant regulatory requirements. However, I understand from BNFL that they do provide a service to a number of customers for the recovery of uranium residues from various materials. I am satisfied that the transport of these materials and the return of any wastes are carried out in accordance with the appropriate regulations.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith), of 4 November 1997, Official Report, column 147, concerning the International Atomic Energy Agency annual general conference, what indication he has received as to when the report on the transport of radioactive materials will be available from the International Atomic Energy Agency. [28227]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As called for in IAEA General Conference resolution GC(41)/RES/12, the IAEA report on legally binding and non-binding instruments and regulations concerning the safe transport of radioactive material is expected to be available for the 8–12 June 1998 meeting of the Board of Governors. The usual practice is for Board documents to be circulated to Member States of the Agency approximately one month in advance of the meeting.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Government has to construct a long-term underground storage facility for radioactive waste. [28277]

Angela Eagle: The Government have been considering radioactive waste management in the light of the former Secretary of State's decision to dismiss Nirex's appeal against the refusal of planning permission for a rock characterisation facility at Longlands Farm, near Sellafield. The House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology has now started an inquiry into nuclear waste management. The Government will want to see the Select Committee's report, which is expected in the summer, and to undertake widespread consultation, before coming to a firm view about the construction of a long term underground storage facility for radioactive waste.

Housing (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the number of empty housing units in the district of Easington in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997 (i) in total and (ii) by sector. [28243]

Mr. Raynsford: The numbers of vacant local authority and housing associations dwellings in Easington 1 April are set out below alongside the local authority's estimates of private and other public sector vacant dwellings.

Local authority[1]	433	495	579
Housing association[2]	74	36	49
Other public sector[1]	126	3	0
Private sector[1]	1,089	1,095	1,096
Total	1,722	1,629	1,724

Telecommunications Licences

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of licences granted to code system operators under the Telecommunications Act 1984. [27942]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department is aware that code system operators licensed under the Telecommunications Act 1984 are required to develop a telecommunications network under the terms of their licence. The potential impact on the environment of the different forms of development involved is a key factor in forming Government policy on telecommunications planning. This is set out in my Department's Planning Policy Guidance note 8, supplemented by Appendix E to Circular 9/95 and by the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Regions, Regeneration and Planning on 4 November 1997 Official Report, columns 152–53. The general policy is to facilitate the growth of such systems while protecting the environment. It is important that operators and local planning authorities work together to ensure that network rollout is not carried out at disproportionate environmental cost.

Sheffield Supertram

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will instigate a review of the financial history of the Sheffield supertram project. [28235]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Financial approval for Sheffield Supertram was given in December 1990. Government grant under Section 56 of the Transport Act 1968 was provided, together with borrowing approval for other approved costs. The scheme was built on time and to budget.

The High Court ruling on 19 January 1998 made it clear that the Government were not committed to funding outstanding Supertram debt. It will be for the South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Authority, who co-ordinate public transport in their area, to decide whether a financial review should be undertaken.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the advantages of creating a joint environmental bilateral inspectorate with the Irish Republic to monitor the activities at radioactive discharges from Sellafield. [28172]

Angela Eagle: While the regulation of discharges from UK nuclear installations must remain a matter for the UK competent authorities, a UK-Irish Contact Group meets biannually to provide a forum for officials from both countries to discuss matters relating to radioactivity. This includes the exchange of monitoring data on levels of radioactivity in the Irish Sea.

In addition, Article 37 of the Euratom Treaty requires the European Commission to determine whether the implementation of any plan for the disposal of radioactive waste is liable to result in the radioactive contamination of the water, soil or airspace of another Member state.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for (a) 1970, (b) 1980, (c) 1990 and (d) 1997 the volume of (1) highly active, (2) intermediate level and (3) low level radioactive waste stored at Sellafield. [28276]

Angela Eagle: Apart from 1980, we do not have estimates of the volumes of wastes stored at Sellafield for the years requested. Data for the years 1974, 1980, 1984, 1989 and 1994 are given in cubic metres in the table.

High-level waste	550	900	1,100	1,317	[6]1,476
Intermediate-level waste	12,000	23,320	27,514	30,543	[7]39,997

Rural Poverty

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to make the Index of Local Conditions more sensitive to rural poverty. [28373]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department is currently consulting with a wide range of external organisations, including local authorities, on proposals put forward by Professor Brian Robson of the University of Manchester to update the Index of Local Conditions to a 1996 base and to incorporate methodological improvements. Professor Robson's recommendations include a number of changes to the Index which will make it more sensitive to the identification of deprivation in rural areas and which have been proposed by groups and individuals concerned with rural regeneration. These proposed changes include removing indicators on car ownership and children in flats, adding a new indicator on the receipt of housing benefit and council tax benefit and changing the way that the overall index value is calculated so that high levels of deprivation on certain indicators are not cancelled out by low levels on other indicators. It is hoped to publish the new Index of Local Deprivation in the Spring.

Housing (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in the last three years from (a) public bodies, (b) voluntary organisations, (c) the private sector and (d) local associations in the Portsmouth City Council area about housing needs in that area. [27550]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 6 February 1998]: The Secretary of State receives a number of representations from groups and information is not held centrally in the format requested about housing needs.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the number of properties that are under-occupied in Portsmouth; and if he will make a statement. [27898]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 6 February 1998]: Neither the Secretary of State nor the Local Authority has made any robust assessment of the number of properties that are under-occupied in Portsmouth.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in the last three years from (a) public bodies, (b) voluntary organisations, (c) the private sector and (d) local associations in the Southampton City Council area about housing needs in that area. [27559]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The Secretary of State receives a number of representations from groups and information is not held centrally in the format requested about housing needs.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many units of social housing have been built in the Southampton City Council area in each of the last five years. [27556]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The table shows figures of housebuilding completions (i.e. new build only) as reported to the Department by Southampton City Council and the National House Building Council.

Southampton City Council: social housing new build: completions

Numbers of dwellings

	Registered Social Landlords: Housing Associations	Local authority

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the number of properties that are under-occupied in Southampton City; and if he will make a statement. [27900]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Neither the Secretary of State nor the Local Authority have made any robust assessment of the number of properties that are under-occupied in Southampton City.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many units of social housing have been built in the East Hampshire District Council area in each of the last five years. [27562]

Mr. Raynsford: The table shows figures of housebuilding completions (i.e. new build only) as reported to the Department by East Hampshire District Council and the National House Building Council:

East Hampshire District Council: social housing new build: completions

Number of dwellings

1993	16	28

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in the last three years from (a) public bodies, (b) voluntary organisations, (c) the private sector and (d) local associations in the East Hampshire District Council area about housing needs in that area. [27563]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State receives a number of representations from groups and information is not held centrally in the format requested about housing needs.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many properties formerly owned by Government Departments have been made available to (a) the council and (b) housing associations in the East Hampshire District Council area. [27564]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people are on the housing waiting list of East Hampshire District Council; and what were the equivalent figures at the same time in each of the last five years. [27566]

Mr. Raynsford: The table shows figures of housebuilding completions (i.e. new build only) as reported to the Department by Southampton City Council and the National House Building Council:

Southampton City Council: Social housing new build: Completions

Numbers of dwellings

	Registered Social Landlords: Housing associations	Local authority

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is the total number of registered homeless people in the East Hampshire District Council area; [27567]

(2) how many people have been accepted on to the homeless register of East Hampshire District Council in each of the last five years. [27568]

Mr. Raynsford: The table provides the available data on the numbers of households accepted as homeless and in priority need under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 and 1996 Housing Acts in East Hampshire for the calendar years 1992 to 1996 and the first nine months of 1997.

	Homelessness acceptances
1993	75
1994	71
1995	164
1996	113

[1] data for the first 3 quarters only.

Under Part VI of the Housing Act 1996 authorities must establish and maintain a housing register for the purpose of allocating their housing accommodation but there is no statutory obligation for local housing authorities to hold a register of homeless applicants. Accommodation secured as a discharge of a homelessness duty need not be a tenancy allocated under Part VI of the 1996 Act.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the number of properties that are under-occupied in East Hampshire District; and if he will make a statement. [27914]

Mr. Raynsford: Neither the Secretary of State nor the Local Authority have made any robust assessment of the number of properties that are under-occupied in East Hampshire District.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people are on the housing transfer list of the East Hampshire District Council, and what were the equivalent figures at the same time in each of the last five years. [27915]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people have been accepted on to the homeless register of (a) New Forest District, (b) Eastleigh Borough, (c) Havant Borough and (d) Test Valley Borough councils in each of the last five years. [28148]

Mr. Raynsford: The table provides the available data on the numbers of households accepted as homeless and in priority need under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 and 1996 Housing Acts for the calendar years 1992 to 1996 and the first 9 months of 1997.

1996	304	142	318	180

[1] data for the first three quarters only.

Under Part VI of the Housing Act 1996 authorities must establish and maintain a housing register for the purpose of allocating their housing accommodation but there is no statutory obligation for local housing authorities to hold a register of homeless applicants. Accommodation secured as a discharge of a homelessness duty need not be a tenancy allocated under Part VI of the 1996 Act.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many properties formerly owned by Government departments have been made available to (a) the council and (b) housing associations in the Hart District Council area. [28360]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally.

Trains (Power Failures)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many incidents there were in 1997 of power failure aboard trains (a) nationally and (b) in the Connex South Central region. [28607]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is an operational matter for train operating companies. We do not collect the information centrally. Connex South Central have given my officials to understand that the Company reported 64 instances of total power loss on its trains in 1997. We understand further that there were 355 instances where one or another on-train system was affected by some form of power loss, but this did not in all cases cause delays.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many incidents of electricity failures there were on Railtrack-owned track in 1997. [28606]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not available in the form requested. Operational matters such as this are a matter for Railtrack, which has published information relating to the causes of train delays. From that I understand that, for the 24 weeks commencing 30 March 1997, out of a total of 301,974 delays to trains exceeding three minutes, 951 were attributed to causes connected with power supply maintenance and renewal for which Railtrack is responsible.

Public Opinion Research

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the companies which bid for each public opinion research contract awarded since 1 May 1997; and what was the value and duration of each contract. [28876]

Angela Eagle: Details of the companies which bid for public opinion research contracts and the duration of these contracts are not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, details of all market research commissioned by the Department since 1 May 1997 and the value of such contracts are lodged in the House of Commons Library in response to a question from the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) answered on 5 February 1998, Official Report, column 728.

Public Investment

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the levels of public investment in the constituencies of (a) Birmingham, Ladywood, (b) Liverpool, Riverside and (c) Tottenham for the last three years for which figures are available, excluding social security payments. [27967]

Mr. Raynsford: Information on public expenditure is not held at constituency level.

Keighley Driving Test Centre

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the long-term future of the Keighley Driving Test Centre. [28043]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The Keighley Driving Test Centre will close at the end of February while detailed inspections and essential repairs are carried out on the building. A search for alternative premises in the town is underway. In the meantime, driver testing operations will be transferred to Skipton; however, the intention is to retain a driver testing service in Keighley in the long term.

Correspondence

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Minister of the Environment plans to answer the letter of Mr. Keith Duell dated 5 December 1997 regarding Verely Lake. [28862]

Angela Eagle: The Government Office for the South East replied to Mr. Duell's letter on 30 January 1998.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28050]

Angela Eagle: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has a translation service for incoming correspondence of all languages into English, and replies can be made in the language of the original letter.

Greater London Assembly

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will publish (a) details of money paid by his Department to the yes campaign for a London mayor, (b) details of meetings between yes campaign officials and ministers, including names and dates and (c) details of contracts which his Department has with (i) individuals who hold positions on the yes campaign and (ii) companies which employ individuals who hold positions on the yes campaign. [28833]

Mr. Raynsford: On parts (a) and (b) of the question, I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Member for Lichfield (Mr. Fabricant) on Friday 6 February 1998, Official Report, columns 835–36.

On part (c) of the question, although I am aware of the existence of putative "Yes" and "No" campaigns, my Department does not have access to comprehensive details of those companies or individuals which may or may not be associated with, employed by or hold positions in those campaigns.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place the first version of the report on the electoral system for the Greater London Assembly commissioned from Professor Patrick Dunleavy in the Library. [28687]

Mr. Raynsford: Copies of the report we received from Professor Patrick Dunleavy and Dr. Helen Margetts—"Electing the London Mayor and the London Assembly"—were placed in the Library on Tuesday 3 February as I said in the House on 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 624. In line with usual practice, we do not propose to make available incomplete and uncorrected earlier drafts of the report.

Transport Expenditure

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the expenditure by the Exchequer through central Government agencies in the current financial year, expressed in terms of money per estimated passenger mile, on (a) motorways, (b) railways and (c) ferries. [28046]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information is not available in the format requested. The table shows the resources which the Department is providing towards motorways and trunk roads, railways and ferries in the current financial year, and the estimated volume of traffic on those modes:

Mode	Description of Expenditure	1997–98 (estimated outturn) £m[1]	Estimated passenger miles
Motorways and Trunk Road	Highways Agency Programme Expenditure	1,473	120bn in 1996[2]
National Railways	Office of Passenger Rail Franchising support to train operating companies	1,434	20bn in 1996–97
	DETR Grants to English Passenger Transport Executives	250
	Support to local authority heavy rail schemes[3]	10
London Underground	Grant to London Underground	543	4bn in 1996–97
Urban Light Rail	Support for urban light rail schemes	128	282m in 1996–97
Ferries	Woolwich Ferry	5	680,000 in 1997–98

Other than the Woolwich Ferry service, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions does not financially support the cost of operating ferry services. In 1996 an estimated 342 million passenger miles were undertaken on all domestic ferry routes (including inter island and river crossings and the Woolwich Ferry).

[1] Rounded to the nearest £1 million.

[2] This figure has been estimated for 1996 using figures from Table 1.1 and 4.9 in Transport Statistics Great Britain (1997 Edition)—the implied occupancy rate (passenger miles divided by vehicle miles) has been applied to mileage on motorways and trunk roads for buses and coaches, cars and vans, and motorcycles.

[3] Figures do not include support towards local authority heavy rail projects from the Single Regeneration Budget, Capital Challenge and TPP "Package" strategies, figures for which are not held centrally.

[4] Government pays grant to London Transport, who are responsible for allocating resources as between London Underground and other businesses.

Mines and Minerals (North Yorkshire)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will issue new planning guidelines to take account of the recent court decision involving North Yorkshire County Council on the subject of mines and minerals; and if he will make a statement. [28675]

Mr. Raynsford: I assume that the hon. Gentleman is referring to the "Wensley Quarries case"—ex parte Brown. I will decide whether any action is needed, and if so, what form it should take, when I have been able to consider the full judgment in this case.

Railway Safety

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that automatic train protection is introduced as soon as possible on high speed lines. [28830]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am advised by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) that Automatic Train Protection (ATP) schemes are installed on the Chiltern and Great Western Lines and on the Heathrow Express. Versions of ATP will be fitted to the West Coast Main Line and the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. Railtrack is considering alternative train protection measures for other lines and HSE is monitoring progress with Railtrack's strategy for the provision of these measures.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many and which councils have (a) written off and (b) not written off arrears of community charge in each of the last three years; and if he will assess what factors have led them to do so. [28200]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department does not collect information about the amounts of community charges written off by local authorities, and I have no plans to carry out an assessment of the factors which would led them to do so. Local authorities should only write-off debts where they are uneconomic to pursue.

The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy Statistical Information Service publish figures each year for the amounts of community charges written off by those authorities which respond to their survey. Copies of the publications for the last three years are available in the Library.

Vessels (Health and Safety)

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps were taken by his Department to ensure that the penalties imposed by the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997 (SI 1997/2962) are consistent with those imposed by the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and regulations under it. [28686]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Marine Safety Agency, Mr. R. Bradley, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. David Tredinnick, dated 10 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your question about consistency between the penalties imposed by the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997 and those imposed by the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974.

The Regulations were copied to other interested departments during their preparation, and the differential was pointed out at that stage. However, our priority was to ensure compatibility of the penalties imposed with those to which employers are subject under other merchant shipping legislation.

Housing Fitness Standard

Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress his Department is making in reviewing the housing fitness standard. [28988]

Ms Armstrong: My Department has today issued a consultation paper on the housing fitness standard to seek the views of the local government associations and other relevant bodies on a range of proposals and options for change. The proposals have been drawn up taking into account responses received to an earlier initiating discussion paper; the results of research undertaken by Warwick University and the Building Research Establishment; and discussions with practitioner bodies and housing professionals.

It should be the aim of any housing fitness standard to provide a means for identifying, and thereby enabling action to be targeted on, those sections of the housing stock where the health and safety risks are the greatest. The main proposal, outlined in more detail in the consultation paper, is for a fitness rating approach to be developed and tested as a successor to the current standard. This would given an overall rating to a property based on an assessment of a range of housing characteristics, rather than the current pass/fail on one or more requirements. A fitness rating approach would surpass the existing standard by encompassing all the important health and safety risks in the home but also by distinguishing the varying severity of those risks. As a result it would have the potential for providing a more effective mechanism for the evaluation of the housing stock, both nationally and locally, and for the targeting of resources as well as for determining where intervention and public resources are needed most.

I have arranged for copies of the consultation paper and the research to be placed in the Library of each House.

Emergency Towing Vessels

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his intentions are for the future provision of emergency towing vessels around the United Kingdom; and when he will publish the trials report and the cost benefit analysis report on emergency towing vessels. [29037]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government will continue to station, for winter periods only, three Emergency Towing Vessels around the UK. Emergency Towing Vessels are stationed in the Dover Strait, the Minches and the South Western Approaches. My officials are arranging new contracts to cover the next few winters. These contracts will commence in October 1998.

The report of the three year trial (1994 to 1997) and the report of the cost benefit analysis on Emergency Towing Vessels are both released today. Copies have been placed in the Libraries.

Driving Licences (Diabetes)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) of 1 December 1977, Official Report, column 48, on driving licences for insulin dependent diabetics, if he will establish a compensation scheme for those insulin dependent diabetics who were previously employed as drivers of vehicles in Category C1. [26191]

Ms Glenda Jackson [pursuant to her reply, 6 February 1998, c. 833–34]: The Government sympathise with any insulin-treated diabetics who lose their jobs as drivers following the expiry of their entitlement to drive category C1 vehicles. The change in legislation has been made in the interests of road safety, and it is not normal to provide compensation for those who may be affected by such changes.

TREASURY

Dorneywood

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions Dorneywood has been used by Ministers since 1 May; if he will list in each case (a) the Ministers present, (b) the dates in question and (c) the purpose of the visit; and if he will make a statement. [25769]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 27 January 1998]: Neither I nor any Treasury Ministers have used Dorneywood since 1 May. It has been used by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on several occasions.

Income Tax

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the cost benefits of introducing a 10 pence tax rate (a) assuming revenue neutrality in means tested benefits and (b) assuming adjustments in means-tested benefits to pass the full benefit to claimants in bands of income of £500, assuming that the 10 pence rate (i) is in addition to the existing 20 pence tax rate and that the starting rate of tax is the same and (ii) substitutes for the existing 20 pence tax rate and (iii) is additional for the first £1,000 and then substitutes for the 20 pence tax rate; and if he will estimate the distribution of revenue forgone in each decile of income tax payers ranked by income. [26939]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that such an analysis could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost to the Treasury last year of maintenance allowance in relation to income tax. [27492]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of tax relief in respect of maintenance payments in 1996–97 is estimated at £80 million.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all (a) buildings, (b) works of art, (c) land and (d) other property in (i) the Brighton Pavilion constituency and (ii) East and West Sussex which are subject to public access or examination by the public as a condition of exemption from inheritance tax; what steps have been taken to inform the public about access to these; and what is the value of conditional exemption from inheritance tax for each year between 1979–80 and 1996–97 relating to (a) to (d) in (i) and (ii). [23938]

Dawn Primarolo: The statutory rules on taxpayer confidentiality prevent me from listing the specific details requested about conditionally exempt assets.

Owners of conditionally exempt assets are primarily responsible for publicising the arrangements for public access to such assets according to the terms of the relevant undertakings. In general, steps required to publicise access may include, for example, advertising in an appropriate national publication, in the local tourist office or town hall, or in the case of scenic land in England, displaying a map board at all points of entry on to the land showing the agreed public access.

For conditionally exempt works of art and other objects to which public access is by appointment only the Inland Revenue's Register provides relevant details. The computerised Register is available on the Internet at www.cto.eds.co.uk. Copies of the Register may be purchased from the Inland Revenue, and are also available for consultation at the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, the National Library of Scotland, Edinburgh, the National Museum of Wales, Cardiff, and the Ulster Museum, Belfast.

The Inland Revenue have published a leaflet about the Register, "Our heritage—your right to see tax exempt works of art", IR 156, and a related poster. The leaflet is available from Tax Inquiry Centres.

I regret that information about the value of conditional exemption for each year between 1979–80 and 1996–97 is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish by county the names of landowners who receive conditional exemption from inheritance tax because they allow public access. [24575]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer to the reply I gave my hon. Friend on 6 June 1997, Official Report, column 278.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of landowners who restrict public access to their land despite receiving conditional exemption from inheritance tax. [24577]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue is not aware of any landowners of conditionally exempt land who restrict public access to the land contrary to the terms of their undertakings. If my hon. Friend has any information on this issue, the Inland Revenue would be pleased to receive the details.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the names of individuals and the location of the land and buildings which are conditionally exempt from inheritance tax by reason of public access will be included in the scope of the proposed Freedom of Information legislation. [24667]

Dawn Primarolo: As explained in the White Paper "Your Right to Know", the proposed Freedom of Information Act will contain provision for access to official information generally. It will not list particular types of information. The information that my hon. Friend mentions will be within the scope of the Act. Its disclosure would depend, as for all information, (a) on decisions on the continuation of any relevant statutory prohibitions to disclosure and (b) on the substantial harm and public interest tests integral to the Act's access provisions.

Tax Relief (Pension Contributions)

Mr. Martin Bell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the reduction in Government spending which would have occurred in 1997–98 if tax relief on pension contributions had been restricted to the basic rate of taxation. [25754]

Dawn Primarolo: Information for 1998–99 was given in my reply to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 148.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms he has put in place to ensure the Government's objective of promoting sustainable development is reflected in the outcome of the comprehensive spending reviews for his Department. [25898]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The Treasury's aim is to raise the rate of sustainable growth, and achieve rising prosperity, through creating economic and employment opportunities for all. Sustainable development is an important factor in framing the Government's economic priorities. The comprehensive spending review of the Treasury will report on how the Department's organisation and resources are to be devoted to the achievement of this aim and its other objectives.

Ministers (Company Directorships)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Ministers in his Department have held company directorships since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [26722]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 3 February 1998]: The Ministerial Code says that "Ministers must resign any directorships they hold when they take up office".

All Treasury Ministers have complied with the Ministerial Code.

Tax Changes

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) short run and (b) long run price elasticity of demand is assumed by the Treasury in its analysis of the impact of tax changes in respect of (i) cigarettes, (ii) beer, (iii) wine, (iv) spirits, (v) petrol, (vi) domestic gas, (vii) domestic electricity and (viii) domestic energy as a whole. [27476]

Dawn Primarolo: The costings for tax changes for the current year and the following two years are published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report. In preparing these costings, Customs and Excise use the following elasticities: cigarettes -0.201, beer -0.963, wine -1.048, spirits -1.070 and petrol -0.272. Domestic gas, domestic electricity and domestic energy as a whole are grouped under domestic fuel and power. All use an elasticity of -0.187.

Foreign Income Dividends

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on the income of charities of the increase in the number of foreign income dividends since July 1997. [27721]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: This information is not available.

Advance Corporation Tax

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the likely change in the capital structure of companies following the reform of advance corporation tax. [27723]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the response I gave the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Gibb) on 20 January 1998, Official Report, column 476.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the effect on companies with seasonal profits of a move to quarterly payments of corporation tax. [27722]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: We have received representations on this issue as part of the consultation on quarterly instalment payments of corporation tax. We shall carefully consider those and other representations that have been made, and my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer will announce the outcome in his Budget.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of jobs lost in (a) travel agency sector and (b) retail sector since the introduction of higher rate insurance premium tax; and if he will make a statement. [22623]

Dawn Primarolo: The effect of the introduction of the higher rate of insurance premium tax on all sectors is being monitored.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total revenue raised for each year since its introduction of (a) insurance premium tax and (b) higher rate insurance premium tax. [22619]

Dawn Primarolo: Receipts of insurance premium tax since its introduction on 1 October 1994 are as follows:

Year	£ million total	of which at higher rate
1994–95	117	n/a
1995–96	635	n/a
1996–97	671	n/a
1997–98 (to November)	745	65

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has for the proportion of higher rate insurance premium tax revenue raised from travel insurance. [22621]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to estimate accurately the actual yield of Insurance Premium Tax from the separate sectors.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the monitoring by Customs and Excise of the introduction of the higher rate of insurance premium tax relating to the travel industry to reach its conclusions; if he will publish those conclusions; and if he will make a statement. [27346]

Dawn Primarolo: I have not set an end date for the monitoring, and I would expect Customs and Excise to continue to keep the higher rate of insurance premium tax under review. The findings of Customs will not be published since they contain commercially sensitive material.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make its his policy to charge a flat rate of IPT on all insurance on motor vehicles, travel and electrical retail goods; and if he will make a statement. [28137]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 February 1998]: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget Statement.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rate of IPT applies to guarantees for (a) motor vehicles and (b) electrical retail products provided by the sellers of the product; and if he will make a statement. [28136]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 February 1998]: IPT applies only to contracts of insurance. Guarantees do not constitute such contracts and are therefore outside the scope of the tax.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings he has held with representatives of (a) the travel sector, (b) the electrical retail and rental sectors and (c) the motor vehicle sector to discuss the impact of higher rate IPT on their businesses; if he will meet representatives of these industries prior to the Budget to discuss higher rate IPT; and if he will make a statement. [28138]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 February 1998]: I have met with representatives of the travel industry to discuss their concerns regarding higher rate IPT. I have no plans currently to meet further with industry representatives but I have asked officials in Customs and Excise to monitor the effect of higher rate IPT which has involved them in maintaining contact with trade bodies.

Excise Duty

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current estimate of excise duty forgone by the successful smuggling or bootlegging of (a) alcohol and (b) tobacco and its products in each year since 1991. [27932]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise estimates of the revenue lost to the Exchequer through cross-Channel smuggling of alcohol and tobacco products in 1996 and 1997 are set out in the table:

£ million

Product type	Excise duty	VAT	1996 Total	Excise duty	VAT	1997 Total
Alcoholic drinks	135	60	195	135	65	195
Tobacco products	510	130	640	550	135	690
Total	645	190	835	685	200	885

Figures have been independently rounded to £5 million. Components may not therefore sum to the totals shown.

Figures for estimated revenue losses use Customs assumption that 70–80 per cent. of smuggled alcoholic drinks substitute for similar products in the UK. Effectively 100 per cent. of smuggled tobacco is assumed to substitute for UK purchases.

The above estimates exclude any amounts for revenue lost on alcoholic drinks and tobacco products involved in commercial fraud, smuggling in freight consignments or by air passengers. There are no official estimates for the extent of these activities. Similarly, there were no official estimates for the extent of smuggling prior to 1996.

Governor of the Bank of England

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will announce a new contract for the Governor of the Bank of England. [28241]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Economic Secretary on 22 January to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce), Official Report, column 642.

Bonus Payments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the present arrangements for the taxation of bonus payments made to United Kingdom nationals by international banks operating in London but headquartered overseas in the light of recent cases. [28230]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The policy for the taxation of employees is kept under constant review. There are no plans to carry out a specific review into the taxation of bonus payments.

Low Pay

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the Canadian scheme for special tax credits for low-income working families; and if he will make a statement. [27688]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 5 February 1998]: As the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his Pre-Budget Statement, the Government are considering the introduction of a "Working Families Tax Credit" to help make work pay for families on low incomes. And systems used in other countries, including Canada, have been looked at as part of that process.

Mr. Gavyn Davies

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what role Mr. Gavyn Davies of Goldman Sachs has in the formulation of the Government's economic policy; and if he will make a statement; [27694]

(2) what meetings he has had with Mr. Gavyn Davies of Goldman Sachs in the last three months; what meetings are scheduled over the next three months; and if he will make a statement; [27692]

(3) what meetings with Mr. Gavyn Davies of Goldman Sachs have taken place over the last three months at which one or more of his special advisers were present; and if he will make a statement. [27693]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answers 5 February 1998]: During the course of my duties I meet a wide range of economists and business people, including Mr. Gavyn Davies.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, following the setting of a minimum wage, the public sector will buy goods and services from overseas companies paying their employees less than the United Kingdom minimum wage. [28127]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 6 February 1998]: The Government's policy on public procurement is to obtain value for money for the taxpayer. The public sector will buy the goods and services which provide the optimum combination of whole-life cost and quality.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28051]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Department does not have a written policy for responding to letters received in languages other than English and Welsh, other than that every effort should be made to respond to them. In cases where letters are written in Welsh, the practice of the Lord Chancellor's Department is to respond in Welsh to the same standards as if the reply was in English.

EU Conventions

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to the answer of 17 November 1997, Official Report, column 57, on the European draft convention concerning harmonisation of court documents and procedures, what changes of Rules of Court will be required; with whom discussions took place in March and April 1997; what parliamentary procedure will govern the ratification of revised Rules of Court; and what discussions he (a) has held and (b) proposes to hold on their implementation; and with which bodies. [28948]

Mr. Hoon: A Consultation Paper was issued in March 1997 to 50 individuals and organisations, representing a wide range of interests. Further consultation will take place before implementation with a similarly wide range of bodies. Until our plans for implementation have been finalised it is not known what changes to rules of Court might be required. Under section 3 of the Civil Procedure Act 1997, any changes would be made by Statutory Instrument, subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Exports

10. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the Government's ethical foreign policy on British exports since 1 May 1997. [26440]

Mr. Robin Cook: Since this Government took office, we have stepped up Foreign Office support for British exports and I have lobbied on behalf of British Companies from Central Europe to South-East Asia. We have responded to the report of the Export Forum, introduced a new scheme of short-term secondment of business executives to our embassies, and invited Chief Executives of 30 major companies to undertake promotional events for British business while abroad. We see no conflict between our drive to expand British exports and trade, and commitment to preventing British arms from being used to repress human rights and democracy.

27. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the ways in which his Department assists the sales of British-manufactured goods abroad. [26458]

Mr. Fatchett: We assist the sale of British-manufactured goods abroad through the work of our 217 commercial posts in 140 markets. They provide information on overseas markets and help British companies to find local business contacts. They help promote products and services, and assist British companies who wish to participate in trade fairs and missions. Posts also give political and economic briefings.

International Criminal Court

20. Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of excluding crimes involving the use of (a) nuclear weapons and (b) land mines from the remit of the proposed international criminal court. [26450]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The UK supports proposals for the Court to be able to try war crimes which are recognised under customary international law. The use as such of nuclear weapons or land mines does not come into this category. But nuclear weapons and land mines, like any other weapon, might be used in a way that would contravene international law. Under the proposals we support, this could well lead to the user being prosecuted at the International Criminal Court.

Israel

21. Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's relations with Israel. [26451]

Mr. Fatchett: We enjoy friendly relations with Israel.

34. Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's relations with Israel. [26464]

Mr. Fatchett: Britain enjoys friendly relations with Israel.

Algeria

22. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the European Union's role in Algeria during the course of the United Kingdom presidency. [26452]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. Thomas).

26. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit Algeria before 30 June. [26457]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no current plans to visit Algeria.

BBC World Service

23. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans next to meet representatives of the BBC World Service to discuss (a) future funding and (b) future language transmission policy. [26453]

Mr. Fatchett: Officials regularly meet with World Service to discuss such matters. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State and I have had several discussions recently with the Managing Director. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary hopes to do so in the near future.

Iraq

24. Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on developments in Iraq. [26454]

Mr. Fatchett: We and our Security Council partners are actively pursuing a diplomatic solution to the crisis. But we cannot rule out a resort to force if our diplomatic efforts fail to shift Saddam's intransigent stance.

Saddam Hussein has a horrifying arsenal of Weapons of Mass Destruction and we know from past experience that he is prepared to use them. It is vital for regional and international peace and security that UNSCOM be allowed full and unrestricted access to all suspected WMD sites and that his WMD capability is destroyed. A paper detailing UNSCOM's achievements and the need for its continuing unrestricted operation has been placed in the Library of the House and sent to all Members.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date his Department's officials were first informed of the use of chemical weapons at Halabja in Iraq. [26399]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 3 February 1998]: According to Foreign Office files, the FCO first became aware of the use of chemical weapons at Halabja on 19 March 1988.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports Her Majesty's Government have received of the terms of negotiations between Russian Foreign Minister Primakov and the Iraqi regime in the last six months; what reference was made to the prospect of the ending of sanctions in return for compliance with UN resolutions with particular reference to access for weapons inspectors; what agreement was reached; what consideration Her Majesty's Government gave to this; and if he will make a statement. [28588]

Mr. Fatchett: We welcome the initiatives of Russian envoys and others in trying to find a diplomatic solution to the crisis with Iraq.

The Iraqi regime has offered a one-off inspection of Presidential sites to be conducted by UNSCOM and representatives of the P5. This offer falls short of the Security Council's demand for full and unrestricted access to UNSCOM for all sites that it wishes to inspect. It is not for Iraq to set conditions for its co-operation with UNSCOM.

All Council members agree that the process of ending sanctions cannot begin until Iraq complies with relevant Security Council resolutions.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 2 February 1998, Official Report, column 719–20, what progress has been made in tabling the draft Security Council resolution; and what is the current text of the resolution. [28884]

Mr. Fatchett: We continue to take the lead in discussions with Security Council partners. Our aim remains to send a tough and united message to Saddam Hussein. It would not be right to make public the precise text before we have discussed it with Council partners.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will establish an independent inquiry into the activities of (a) British banks and (b) subsidiaries of foreign banks based in Britain in the funding of the sale of British manufactured military or military capable technology to Iraq since 1980. [28168]

Mr. Fatchett: No. But we would be interested to see any information that my hon. Friend feels should be brought to our attention.

China

28. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with China. [26459]

Mr. Fatchett: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said when he visited China in January, there is new life in Britain's relations with China. We have made a fresh start down a broad road. We need a healthy relationship which allows us to address together the full range of issues, including difficult areas such as human rights.

Camilla Carr and Jon Jones

29. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has obtained about the whereabouts of Camilla Carr and Jon Jones; and if he will make a statement. [26460]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We do not know where or in what conditions Camilla Carr and Jon James are held. With the Centre for Peacemaking and Community Development, we are doing all we can to bring about their safe release. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has raised the case several times—most recently with President Yeltsin on 9 January. The President promised that Russia would do all it could to help. My right hon. Friends the Foreign Secretary and the Home Secretary have also contacted their Russian counterparts. The British Ambassador in Moscow is in frequent contact with the Russian and Chechen authorities to emphasise the high priority we attach to resolving this distressing [illegible] swiftly and peacefully. A British police team visited Moscow and Nazran in December for discussions with the Russian and Chechen security authorities.

United States of America

30. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with the United States. [26461]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The United Kingdom's relations with the United States are excellent.

Middle East

31. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's assessment of likely progress in the middle east peace process. [26462]

33. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's assessment of likely progress in the middle east peace process. [26463]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friends to the oral answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall).

35. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the middle east peace process. [26465]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister met President Arafat on 26 January. He reaffirmed the EU/UK view that the parties must respect their commitments under existing agreements, particularly with regard to Israeli redeployments from the West Bank. I visited Israel and the Occupied Territories on 14–16 January. In Israel I met Netanyahu, Mordechai (Defence Minister), Bentsur (MFA PUS-equivalent), and senior Labour politicians. On the Palestinian side, I met Arafat, Sha'ath (Minister of Planning and International Cooperation) and Faisal Husseini.

Arms Trade

32. Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms for consultation between EU member states on granting and denying export licences are proposed in the United Kingdom's text on an EU code of conduct on arms sales. [26512]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Under our draft text, any state denying an export licence according to the Code of Conduct would circulate details of the denial to other Member States. Partners would then be required to consult the denying state before deciding whether to issue a licence for essentially the same goods to the same destination.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to introduce a central database of accredited arms dealers from whom the Government purchase equipment. [27884]

Mr. Spellar: I have been asked to reply.

The MOD has no current plans to introduce a central database of defence suppliers.

EU Delegations

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each mission sent by the European Union to (a) India, (b) Nepal, (c) Sri Lanka, (d) Pakistan, (e) Afghanistan, (f) Bangladesh and (g) other South Asian countries (i) who was on the delegation, (ii) who led the delegation and (iii) what were the activities of the delegation. [27948]

Mr. Fatchett: There have been no special EU Ministerial missions in the past twelve months.

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 30 January 1998, Official Report, column 439, which member states United Kingdom officials approached on the issue of Schengen opt-in procedures; and what exchange of documents took place. [28513]

Mr. Doug Henderson: It would not be appropriate for Ministers to report the details of all diplomatic contacts between officials of the UK and other Governments.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 30 January 1998, Official Report, column 439, for what reasons Coreper discussed the opt-in procedure to Schengen on each occasion; at whose instigation; and on what dates. [28515]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Coreper discussed this matter on 2, 10, 17 and 25 July as part of its work, under the chairmanship of the Luxembourg Presidency, to finalise the text of the draft Treaty of Amsterdam.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his meeting at Denver with the Dutch Foreign Minister concerning the opt-in procedures for Schengen countries. [28571]

Mr. Doug Henderson: It would not be appropriate for me to comment in detail on the content of every meeting which my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary or I have with another Foreign Minister.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 30 January 1998, Official Report, column 439, for what reasons he consulted the Irish Foreign Minister on the issue of the Schengen opt-in procedure; if any joint approach was agreed; if there was agreement on the version of events; and if he will make a statement. [28514]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I consulted with the Irish Foreign Minister on the Schengen opt-in procedure as a matter of mutual interest. It would not be appropriate to publish details of our discussions.

Ms Gaynor Regan

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs from what budget the cost of the flight which Mrs. Regan took from Heathrow to Edinburgh on 9 October was originally met. [28331]

Mr. Robin Cook: The ticket for the flight was purchased privately by myself and at no stage was payment made from this Department's budget.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 19 January 1998, Official Report, column 439, to the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Mr. Loughton), concerning overseas visits by Ms Gaynor Regan, if the permission from the Prime Minister was given in writing in each case. [28395]

Mr. Robin Cook: The only occasion when I was accompanied on a visit overseas at public expense by my spouse or partner was when Mrs. Margaret Cook went with me to Hong Kong from 27 June to 1 July. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's permission was given in writing on 25 June. Ms Regan has never accompanied me on an overseas trip at public expense.

European Union

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to provide information to those under 18 years old on the European Union and its institutions. [28375]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This Department worked with the DfEE on an information and curriculum pack which has been sent to all schools, giving a basic introduction to the EU and its institutions and explaining our plans for the UK Presidency. This department is also running a Presidency website, which schools and others can access for further information.

European Economic Area (Permits)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the average processing time of applications by non-EEA national family members applying for EEA permits since 1 February 1997. [28300]

Mr. Fatchett: Statistics recording average processing times for EEA family permit applications are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many EEA family permits have been granted to non-EEA family nationals since 1 February 1997. [28290]

Mr. Fatchett: Between 1 February and 31 December 1997, 9,019 applications for EEA family permits were issued at entry clearance Posts overseas.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many non-EEA family member nationals have applied for EEA family permits since 1 February 1997; and how many were refused. [28297]

Mr. Fatchett: Between 1 February and 31 December 1997, 9,127 applications for EEA family permits have been received and 105 applications were refused at entry clearance Posts overseas.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28378]

Mr. Fatchett: No Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired or (b) specified by this Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997.

Execution (Texas)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received over the decision of the US state of Texas to execute Karla Tucker. [28572]

Mr. Fatchett: This Department received three telephone calls from members of the public on 4 February protesting about the decision of the US State of Texas to execute Karla Tucker. One of these callers also wrote to his MP, who has written to my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State about the case.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between Britain and Sri Lanka. [28592]

Mr. Fatchett: The UK has had a long and close relationship with Sri Lanka. We look forward to maintaining and expanding our links on every level.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British policy towards the civil conflict in Sri Lanka. [28574]

Mr. Fatchett: We believe a lasting solution to this tragic conflict can only be achieved through a political settlement. We have said publicly that we stand ready to help in the resolution of the conflict if both sides ask us to play a role.

Chagos Archipelago

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the numbers of native Chagossians at present in exile due to the existence on the Chagos Archipelago of a USA military base. [28829]

Mr. Fatchett: According to our records approximately 1,200 'Ilois' left the British Indian Ocean Territory for Mauritius, and a 'handful' for the Seychelles, between 1965 and 1973. We do not know how many are still alive.

Brazilian Rainforest

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to discuss the activities of Malaysian logging companies in the Brazilian rainforest areas with the Malaysian Government. [27094]

Clare Short: I have been asked to reply.

I have taken no such steps. However, as members of the International Tropical Timber Organisation (ITTO), both Malaysia and Brazil are committed to the Year 2000 Objective, which states that all tropical timber entering international trade shall, by the year 2000, come from sustainably managed sources. Both countries have also subscribed to ITTO's recently revised Action Plan, which, among other things, calls for member countries to estimate the extent of undocumented trade and prepare national codes of conduct for all types of forestry operations.

SCOTLAND

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the amount of money saved to date by (a) each of the current unitary and island local authorities in Scotland and (b) the former regional, district and island councils in Scotland as a result of compulsory competitive tendering. [23828]

Mr. Macdonald: This information has not been collected centrally for Scotland.

Non-career Civil Servants

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many non-career civil servants have been appointed to his Department since 1 May 1997. [25842]

Mr. Dewar: The number of casual, fixed-term appointees and Special Advisers appointed to my Department and its Agencies since 1 May 1997 is 870.

Benefit (False Declarations)

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons were prosecuted for making a false declaration in respect of benefit in (a) 1986 and (b) 1996. [25643]

Mr. McLeish: The available information is set out in the table. Prior to 1989, information held centrally does not separately identify the relevant statutory offences and information for 1996 is not yet available. In addition to prosecutions for the statutory offences listed in the table, some prosecutions under the common law offence of fraud involved an offence of making a false declaration in respect of benefit.

Persons proceeded against by main offence, Scotland, 1989 and 1995

Main Offence	Date of sentence/ acquittal
	1989	1995
Social Security Act 1975, Section 146	78	1
Supplementary Benefits Act 1976, Section 21	240	0
Social Security Act 1986, Section 55	604	26
Social Security Administration Act 1992, Section 112	—	1,328

Domestic Violence

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the research report commissioned by his Department on service provision for women experiencing violence will be published. [26418]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 30 January 1998]: We hope to publish the report in early March.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the gross cost of setting up mechanisms for the means testing of citizens of other EU member states to assess their eligibility to pay tuition fees. [27715]

Mr. Wilson: In Scotland it is not proposed to set up a separate mechanism for the means testing of EU students' eligibility to pay tuition fees. It will be carried out alongside the means testing of tuition fee support for Scottish domiciled students. The additional costs cannot be separately identified, but are minimal.

Export Market Development

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what powers, and under which statutory provisions, the Scottish Office has which enable it or its agencies to help firms located in Scotland to develop export markets overseas. [27641]

Mr. Wilson: My Department, through Scottish Trade International, a joint organisation between The Scottish Office and Scottish Enterprise, assists the delivery to Scottish-based companies of support from the Government's Overseas Trade Service, funded by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. In addition, Scottish-companies benefit from export advice and assistance from Scottish Enterprise on the basis of section 1(a) of the Enterprise and New Towns (Scotland) Act 1990 and from export advice now funded by my own Department under the Industrial Development Act 1982.

Local Authority Boundary Review

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to proceed with the boundary review for Scottish local authority elections; and if he will make a statement. [28124]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 6 February 1998]: The Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland (LGBC) are currently reviewing local authority electoral boundaries, as required by legislation. So far, the LGBC have sent the Secretary of State reports for Angus and East Lothian and we are expecting them to send in reports for all other authorities within the next few months. We will consider all these reports and decide whether to implement them as they stand or with modifications.

Transport Expenditure

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the expenditure by the Exchequer is in the current financial year, expressed in terms of money per estimated passenger mile, on (a) motorways, (b) railways and (c) ferries. [28045]

Mr. McLeish: It is not possible to provide the information precisely in the form as requested. The table shows:

expenditure by The Scottish Office en motorways and an estimate of expenditure per passenger mile in the current year based on vehicle miles travelled and estimated vehicle occupancy figures.

the Franchise payment to ScotRail (who operate 96 per cent. of all passenger rail services in Scotland including the Anglo-Scottish Sleeper) and an estimate of expenditure per passenger mile for ScotRail services; expenditure by The Scottish Office on ferry services provided by Caledonian MacBrayne Co (Clyde and Hebrides) and P&O Scottish Ferries Ltd (Northern Isles), and estimated cost per passenger mile information. The subsidy provided by The Scottish Office supports, as well as passengers, the carriage of accompanied cars and, in the case of Caledonian Macbrayne, commercial vehicles, buses coaches, livestock and freight also. In producing this estimate, Revenue Deficit Grant, capital grants for vessels, piers and harbours grants, and National Loan Fund repayments have all been taken into account.

Mode	1997–98 (estimated outturn £m)	Estimated cost per passenger mile 1997–98 (£)
Motorways	37.114	0.012
Railway	280.0	0.11
Ferries	32.218	0.45

The information on railways concerns only ScotRail. The same information for cross border services operated by Great North Eastern Railway and Virgin Rail cannot be apportioned separately for Scotland.

Similarly, information on ferries is confined to those directly funded by central government. Some local ferry services are also supported by certain local authorities in Scotland.

Public Investment

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the levels of public investment in the constituencies of Glasgow (a) Maryhill, (b) Shettleston and (c) Springburn for the last three years for which figures are available, excluding social security payments. [27968]

Mr. Dewar: Information on public expenditure is not held at constituency level.

HEALTH

Health Authorities Programme

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to the NHS of purchasing and maintaining the new Health Authorities Programme and the number of eligible schemes that have yet to have access to the new Health Authorities Programme; and what plans he has to improve the access and efficiency of the new Health Authorities Programme. [27027]

Mr. Milburn: The New Health Authorities Programme was created to re-align health authorities' primary care systems, and the data held within them, with their new boundaries created in April 1996. The resultant changes will be implemented between July 1998 and July 1999.

The total cost of this work programme is £3.85 million, spread across 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99. The outcome is a set of one-off changes to meet the requirements of primary legislation, but the software developed will enable any further health authority boundary changes to be implemented more quickly and at less cost.

Information Management

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to the NHS of the measures to improve information management in the NHS announced in the White Paper, the New NHS; when he expects these measures to be fully operational; and if he will estimate how much of the NHS will be covered by these new measures. [27024]

Mr. Milburn: The overall cost of the wide range of measures mentioned in the White Paper will depend on the outcome of our Information Management and Technology strategy for the National Health Service. This will provide the necessary planning framework.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the review on the role of the Information Management Group will report; if he will list the members of the review committee and publish its remit; and if he will make a statement on information management in the NHS. [27022]

Mr. Milburn: The review of the Information Management and Technology (IM&T) strategy for the National Health Service is being carried out by Mr. Frank Burns who has been seconded to the NHS Executive for 12 months from his substantive appointment as Chief Executive of the Wirral Hospital NHS Trust.

Mr. Burns started his review in June 1997 under the auspices of the NHS Executive Board and its IM&T Policy Sub-Committee. His review is based on extensive and direct personal consultation with all the major NHS and public 'stakeholders'.

We expect to receive his report within the next 2 months.

Administrative Register

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to the NHS of purchasing and maintaining the Administrative Register and the number of eligible schemes that have yet to have access to the Administrative Register; and what plans he has to improve the access to and efficiency of the NHS Clearing Service. [27025]

Mr. Milburn: National Health Service Administrative Register functions will be offered to NHS organisations through the NHS Strategic Tracing Service. The purpose of the tracing service is to enable any NHS organisation, within agreed access and security protocols, to determine a patient's NHS number and other related administrative data.

The tracing service is currently the subject of a public and private partnership procurement, with the expectation that a contract will be awarded early in the next financial year. It is not possible to publish the costs of using the tracing service, and its integral administrative register functions, until the procurement process is complete. The tracing service will bring to fruition the successful pilot operation of the NHS administrative register throughout the NHS in Wales.

The Department is working closely with NHS trusts to ensure that they all submit complete, timely and accurate data to the NHS Clearing Service, and that full use is made of electronic transfer of data via the NHS-wide network, NHSnet.

Exeter System

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to the NHS of purchasing and maintaining the Exeter system and the number of eligible schemes that have yet to have access to the system; and if he will give details of future plans he has to improve access to and the efficiency of the system. [27026]

Mr. Milburn: The Exeter System is supported by the Family Health Systems (FHS) organisation, which is part of the National Health Service Executive. The cost of maintaining and supporting the system for all health authorities in England and Wales was £5.8 million for 1997–98. Development costs vary annually according to business requirements stemming from legislative and policy changes.

We will be considering the longer term future of the Exeter System in the context of the changes set out in "The New NHS, Modern and Dependable" White Paper.

Dental Services

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much additional Government money is available to Shropshire Health Authority for establishing extra NHS dentists. [27154]

Mr. Milburn: We have made £9 million available to health authorities in England for Investing in Dentistry schemes in 1997–98 and a further £10 million for 1998–99. This is not apportioned to health authorities, but will be spent according to need as proposals are received and considered. Shropshire Health Authority has submitted eight Investing in Dentistry proposals, of which one has so far been approved at a cost of £45,000.

Meningitis

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of meningitis have been reported in the Northumberland Health Authority area since 1991. [28208]

Mr. Milburn: The cases of meningitis reported in the Northumberland Health Authority area since 1991 are as follows:

	All Meningitis
1992	25
1993	8
1994	8
1995	19

Ambulance Service (Northumberland)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed by the Northumberland Ambulance Service in each year since 1991. [28210]

Mr. Milburn:

National Health Service Hospital and Community Health Services: all staff directly employed by Northumbria Ambulance Service as at 30 September for each year

	Whole-time equivalent
1991	680
1992	700
1993	680
1994	730
1995	750
1996	730

Registered Mental Health Nurses

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many registered mental nurses were employed by Northumberland Health Authority in each year since 1994; and what was the percentage change in each year. [28211]

Mr. Milburn: It is not possible separately to identify registered mental health nurses from other qualified nurses working in the mental health area of work in the Department of Health's annual non-medical workforce census. The figures for all qualified nurses working in the mental health area of work are in the table.

National Health Service Hospital and Community Health Services qualified nurses working in the mental health area of work employed by Northumberland Health Authority as at 30 September 1996.

Beta Interferon

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the district health authorities which provide to NHS trusts earmarked funding for the prescription of the drug Beta Interferon; and if he will make a statement; [28021]

(2) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effectiveness of Beta Interferon in the treatment of patients with multiple sclerosis; and if he will increase the resources available to district health authorities to fund the provision of Beta Interferon to patients with multiple sclerosis; [28020]

(3) how many patients with multiple sclerosis in each district health authority he estimates might benefit from the provision of Beta Interferon. [28019]

Mr. Milburn: Details of all the health authorities which have earmarked funding for National Health Service trusts for the treatment of multiple sclerosis patients with Beta Interferon are not available. Health authorities determine their own priorities with regard to funding particular treatments, including whether to ring-fence resources for prescribing particular treatments. The Department does not usually allocate funding to health authorities for specific drug treatments, but allocates funding according to a formula calculated to meet expected patient need in each health authority.

As part of the Department's health technology assessment programme, an evaluation and pharmaco-economic analysis project is being undertaken on Beta Interferon. It is not possible to estimate at this stage how many patients might benefit from treatment with the drug.

NHS Anniversary

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the charge upon public funds that will be made to mark the 50th year of the National Health Service. [28608]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Falkirk, West (Mr. Canavan) on 19 December 1997, Official Report, columns 389–90.

Public Health

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral answer of 5 February 1998, Official Report, columns 1229–30, if he will list, for each of the target headings listed in the Green Paper, "Our Healthier Nation", the target reduction in mortality, expressed as a percentage, contained within the Green Paper and the corresponding target or targets, where sub-headings are applicable, for those headings within the White Paper, "The Health of the Nation". [28852]

Ms Jowell: Although there are similarities between the priority areas covered in "Our Healthier Nation" and the old key areas in "The Health of the Nation", the targets differ because they cover different time periods, different combinations of diseases, different age groups (for cancers) and, in the case of accidents, a morbidity measure rather than one for mortality. "Our Healthier Nation" focuses on health outcome measures, while "The Health of the Nation" targets contained a mixture of outcomes and determinants.

Circulatory diseases

Our Healthier Nation target proposed:

To reduce the death rate from heart disease and stroke and related diseases (i.e all circulatory diseases combined) among people aged under 65 by at least one third (33 per cent.) by the year 2010 from a baseline at 1996.

Related Health of the Nation targets:

To reduce the death rate from coronary heart disease among people aged under 65 by at least 40 per cent. by the year 2000 from a baseline at 1990.

To reduce the death rate from stroke among people aged under 65 by at least 40 per cent. by the year 2000 from a baseline at 1990.

Cancers

Our Healthier Nation target proposed:

To reduce the death rate from all cancers combined among people aged under 65 by at least one fifth (20 per cent.) by the year 2010 from a baseline at 1996.

Related Health of the Nation targets:

To reduce the death rate from breast cancer in the population invited for screening (measured using females aged 50–69) by at least 25 per cent. by the year 2000 from a baseline at 1990.

To reduce the death rate from lung cancer by at least 30 per cent. in men aged under 75 by 2010 from a baseline at 1990.

To reduce the death rate from lung cancer by at least 15 per cent. in women aged under 75 by 2010 from a baseline at 1990.

Suicide and undetermined injury

Our Healthier Nation target proposed:

To reduce the rate of suicide and undetermined injury deaths for all ages by at least one sixth (17 per cent.) by the year 2010 from a baseline at 1996.

Related Health of the Nation target:

To reduce the rate of suicide and undetermined injury deaths for all ages by at least 15 per cent. by the year 2000 from a baseline at 1990.

Accidents

Our Healthier Nation target proposed:

To reduce the rate of occurrence of "major" accidents (defined as those accidents requiring medical attention at a hospital or by a family doctor) for all people aged 2 and above by at least one fifth (20 per cent.) by the year 2010 from a baseline at 1996.

The Health of the Nation targets on accidents were in terms of mortality, not morbidity, and so no direct comparisons are possible.

In each case, the baseline "at 1996" means the three year average mortality rate (adjusted to account for differences in the age structure of the population) for the years 1995/96/97, and the Health of the Nation baselines "at 1990" were the three year average mortality rates for the years 1989/90/91.

Turnberg Report

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Turnberg Report, which he published on Tuesday 3 February, was exactly the same as the text of the report originally submitted to him in November by Professor Turnberg. [28674]

Mr. Milburn: Yes. The Turnberg Report was submitted to Ministers on 18 November 1997. It was published in its original form, subject to minor typographical amendments.

WALES

Nurses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many qualified nurses are employed in (a) trusts and (b) private health establishments. [27271]

Mr. Win Griffiths: At 30 June 1997, there were approximately 16,900 whole-time equivalent qualified nurses, midwives and health visitors directly employed by NHS Trusts in Wales. The latest detailed information provided by private health establishments indicated that there were about 2,700 whole-time equivalent qualified nurses at 31 March 1995, although it is believed that this may be an under-estimate.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he has taken to improve the morale of nurses. [27270]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I hope that nurses will have been heartened by the steps the Government have taken to cut back on unnecessary bureaucracy, by the ending of divisive local pay for staff on national contracts, by our search for a better, more robust approach to NHS pay in the longer term, and by the publication of our White Paper "Putting Patients First". This sets out plans for replacing the wasteful internal market, and includes commitments to involve community nurses more in organising health services for their patients and to develop a Strategic Framework for Nursing and a new Human Resources Strategy.

I am glad that we have been able to accept the recommendations of the independent Nurses' Pay Review Body for a rise of 3.8 per cent., the highest for six years. Nurses stand to receive 2 per cent. from 1 April, rising to 3.8 per cent. from 1 December.

By staging the increase, we can meet pay costs within the resources available to the NHS without prejudicing the planned level of service delivery.

NHS Internal Market

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money he estimates will be saved in Wales by the abolition of the internal market in the NHS; and how much of this sum will be spent on building community hospitals in Wales. [27147]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Together with the proposed reconfiguration of NHS trusts in Wales, the abolition of the NHS internal market will create estimated savings of up to £50 million over the lifetime of the current Parliament. These savings will be reinvested in frontline patient care, including services in community hospitals where appropriate. Individual capital projects are judged on their own merits and against the framework of commissioning authorities; strategic plans. Generally, capital schemes will be developed through the Private Finance Initiative.

New Deal (Older Unemployed People)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what skills training older unemployed people entering the New Deal will receive; and if he will make statement. [27647]

Mr. Hain: From June, people aged 25 and over who have been unemployed for two years or more will be able to train towards an approved, employment-related qualification for up to a year while remaining on Jobseeker's Allowance.

In addition, an employer subsidy of £75 a week for up to six months will be made available to people from this group. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor recently announced his intention to pilot measures by which employers facing skills shortages will be able to receive up to 75 per cent. of this subsidy as an up-front payment towards training costs.

Both of these measures are designed to work in tandem with existing ES and TEC provision.

We announced on 5 January our intention to invest more money from the windfall levy to enable us to develop Gateway opportunities for the older unemployed who have been out of work for a year or 18 months. Variants of the New Deal approach will be introduced through pilots, trying proposals out in selected areas.

Diabetes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of people currently suffering from diabetes; and if he will make a statement. [27650]

Mr. Win Griffiths: A health survey of adults was carried out in Wales during 1995 and one of the questions asked was 'Are you being treated for diabetes?'. The results showed that diabetes was reported by 3.2 per cent. of the adult population. Respondents were also asked if any children, under the age of 18 years, in their household were being treated for diabetes and the responses suggested that this was the case for approximately 0.3 per cent. of children.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many apprenticeships he estimates the New Deal will provide in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [27646]

Mr. Hain: It is not possible to give an accurate estimate of the number of apprenticeships that will be made available under the New Deal over the period of its implementation. Some young people will access to apprenticeship-type training as part of the New Deal employment option and others will progress onto apprenticeships when completing their period on the New Deal. All young people will have access to quality training to improve their skills and employment prospects.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what powers the Welsh Development Agency has to assist companies in Wales to develop export markets; and if he will make a statement. [27478]

Mr. Hain: Section 1 of the Welsh Development Agency Act 1975 provides the necessary statutory powers for the activities of the Agency. The Agency has a number of initiatives and schemes which assist companies in Wales to develop overseas business opportunities. I will arrange for the Chief Executive of the Agency to write to the right hon. Member with details of these initiatives and schemes. A copy of his letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

North-South Road Links

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to upgrade north-south road communications within Wales; what plans are being developed to accelerate such a programme following the establishment of the national assembly; and if plans to upgrade north-south road communications will be material to his decision on the location of the national assembly's permanent home. [27642]

Mr. Hain: The extent to which improvements are needed to the road network between north and south Wales was one of the main issues raised for consideration in the recent consultation exercise on the review of the Welsh trunk road programme. The review process is still at an early stage and it is not possible to say when we will be able to give any indications as to the size, composition and overall strategy of the future trunk road programme. Given this, it would not be appropriate to draw any connection between an, as yet, undetermined strategy for the trunk road network in Wales and the current debate on the location of the National Assembly.

Crickhowell House

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much rent his Department currently receives from Crickhowell House in Cardiff; and if he will make a statement. [27481]

Mr. Ron Davies: My department receives no rent from Crickhowell House. The Welsh Office is the leaseholder of the property which is occupied by the Welsh Health Common Services Authority who are responsible for the payment of rent to the landlord, Grosvenor Waterside Ltd.

Teachers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many teachers in each local education authority in Wales have had their employment terminated during the past year. [28011]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Casualty Units

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to reduce the waiting times in casualty units in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [27970]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Latest available information to the end of September 1997 shows that 94 per cent. of patients at Accident & Emergency departments were assessed within 10 minutes of arrival; 95 per cent. of patients were admitted into the main hospital within 2 hours of the decision to admit; and 95 per cent. of patients received treatment within 4 hours.

Further improvements to this performance will be considered during the development of a new NHS Charter for Wales which is currently the subject of consultation in the NHS in Wales.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the impact of the changes in the distribution formula for the Welsh Office's funding of local government in Wales from the poorest unitary authorities, with particular reference to social deprivation and council tax income; and what further consideration he is giving to this matter. [27997]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My hon. Friend has received 27 representations. He and the Welsh Local Government Association (WLGA) accepted the recommendations of the joint review group instigated at the request of the WLGA, following an eighteen month examination of the issues that drive the need for local authority expenditure on services. Acceptance was conditional upon the commissioning of a joint independent review of the concept of local authority spending need in readiness for the National Assembly for Wales. The review will be commissioned shortly.

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people with learning difficulties will have places in the New Deal; and if he will make a statement. [27645]

Mr. Hain: It is not possible to give an accurate estimate of the number of people with learning difficulties who will benefit from the New Deal over the period of its implementation. All young people who are eligible, or who become so, will be offered opportunities to participate in a job, training or useful work experience.

Young people who have special needs, including those with reading, writing and numeracy problems, will be able to join the New Deal early (ie they will not have to be unemployed for 6 months). They will have access to the help they need to improve their skills and employment prospects.

Teacher Training Students

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students are currently in teacher training; and how many of them are men. [27644]

Mr. Hain: The latest available figures for the number of students on courses of Initial Teacher Training at higher education institutions in Wales relate to the academic year 1996/97. There were 6,022 students on courses of initial teacher training as at 1 December 1996, of whom 1,581 were male.

National Assembly for Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what evidence he has assessed on the campaigning activities of senior civil servants for the location of the National Assembly. [28312]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have not asked Welsh Office officials to campaign for any particular location for the National Assembly for Wales, and I have no evidence of them doing so.

Household Population Growth

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the predicted total growth in the all-Wales private household population over the period 1998 to 2016 (a) as a percentage and (b) as a numerical value. [28143]

Mr. Win Griffiths: It is estimated from the 1994 based household projection that the total private household population in Wales will rise from 2,889,000 in 1998 to 2,913,000 in 2016. This represents a growth of (a) 0.8 per cent. (b) 24,000 compared with 1998. Details of the method used in the projection and notes on the reliability of the estimates can be found in 1994 Based Household Projections for Wales, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the projected annual private household numbers for the county of Monmouthshire each year from 1994 to 2019–20. [28147]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Household estimates from the 1994 based household projection for the county of Monmouthshire for each year from 1994 to 2016, the last year of projection, are shown in the following table. Details of the method used in the projection and notes on the reliability of the estimates can be found in 1994 Based Household Projections for Wales, a copy of which is in the Library.

Projected households for county of Monmouthshire

Year [1]	Number
1994	33,400
1995	34,000

2015	44,000
2016	44,400

[1] At 30 June each year.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the predicted total growth in the private household population in Monmouthshire over the period 1998 to 2016 (a) as a percentage and (b) as a numerical value. [28146]

Mr. Win Griffiths: It is estimated from the 1994 based household projection that the total private household population in Monmouthshire will rise from 85,800 in 1998 to 97,700 in 2016. This represents a growth of (a) 13.8 per cent., (b) 11,900 compared with 1998. Details of the method used in the projection and notes on the reliability of the estimates can be found in 1994 Based Household Projections for Wales, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the projected annual net migration rates into Wales for the private household population for each of the years 1990–91 to 2019–20. [28144]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The available estimates from the Office for National Statistics' mid-year estimates and the Government Actuary's Department's 1996-based population projections relate to all civilian migration, not just private households. The figures are shown in the following table:

Estimated net civilian migration into Wales[1]

Year	Net inward migrants
1991	9,000
1992	1,800
1993	2,200

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in what circumstances a unitary authority would be permitted to provide for substantially less new housing than is predicted in the Welsh Office household apportionment. [28145]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Welsh Office's 1994 Based Household Projections for Wales are essentially trend based and do not make allowances for the effects of local or central government policies. They should be used as a base for policy projections.

Where a local planning authority's policy based provisions differ from these projections the differences should be fully justified in the development plan. The Secretary of State will consider intervening where the justification for the development plan figures is either unsound or unacceptable.

Public Opinion Research

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many contracts for public opinion research his Department has awarded since 1 May; if he will indicate the (a) purpose, (b) cost, (c) value and (d) duration of each contract; and which companies (i) bid for and (ii) were awarded each contract. [28880]

Mr. Ron Davies: The following contracts for public opinion research have been awarded by my Department since 1 May 1998:

Business and Environment Campaign—Phase 2: Telemarketing Exercise

Purpose: Telemarketing research exercise to around 3,000 decision makers within Welsh SMEs to gauge their awareness of the Department's Business and Environment Campaign.

Cost: £18,071 plus VAT

Value: £18,071 plus VAT

Duration: 5 February to 20 March 1998

Two companies submitted formal bids for the contract—Golley Slater Telephone Marketing Ltd. and Pell and Bales Ltd. The contract was awarded to Golley Slater Telephone Marketing Ltd.

Contracts Awarded by Central Office of Information on Behalf of the Welsh Office

Understanding Devolution

Purpose: To inform development of the "Voice for Wales" white paper

Cost: £12,986 including VAT

Value: £12,986 including VAT

Duration: July 1997

The project was not competitively tendered as the timetable did not allow it. The project was awarded directly to Andrew Irving Associates because of their established record of researching in Wales and evidence of adequate recruitment resources.

Devolution Campaign Evaluation

Purpose: To evaluate the effectiveness of the Welsh Office's campaign to promote the referendum

Cost: £23,148 including VAT

Duration: August 1997

The project was not competitively tendered because there was insufficient time. The contract was awarded to Beaufort Research, the only contractor offering an omnibus service within Wales.

Both these contracts were one off projects, completed within 4–6 weeks of commissioning. The costs shown include management time.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28941]

Mr. Ron Davies: I undertook the following engagements, outside the Office, during January:

2 Business Dinners in Cardiff.

1 Business Lunch in Cardiff.

Meeting with European Commissioners at Lancaster House, London.

Presentation at Hydro Aluminium Alupres at Bedwas, Caerphilly.

Economic Social Committee Dinner at Cardiff Castle.

Dinner with Transport and General Workers Union (Wales) at House of Commons.

1 Business Lunch in London.

Official opening of Hydro Power at Elan Valley, Powys.

Visit to Red Kite Centre and Farmtrail at Gigrim Farm, Powys.

Opening of Golwg Magazine Offices, Lampeter.

On each occasion I travelled by official car.

I frequently use the train to travel between Gwydyr House in London and the Welsh Office in Cardiff.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Public Opinion Research

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many contracts for public opinion research her Department has awarded since 1 May; if she will indicate the (a) purpose, (b) cost, (c) value and (d) duration of each contract; and which companies (i) bid for and (ii) were awarded each contract. [28873]

Clare Short: The Department engaged Opinion Leader Research Ltd. to carry out public opinion research in the autumn. The purpose was to test public attitudes towards and awareness of what the Department is doing and what we are trying to achieve. It repeated a similar exercise undertaken under the previous Administration. There was no Ministerial involvement in the design or awarding of the contract.

No other bids for this work were invited. The work was carried out over a period of a few weeks at a cost of around £43,000.

A summary document of the research has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Papua New Guinea

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department has provided to Papua New Guinea to relieve the effects of the drought and prevent starvation; and if she will make a statement. [28610]

Clare Short: We have contributed over £400,000 to assist those affected by the drought. These funds have been channelled through Non-Government Organisations such as World Vision UK, Christian Aid, UK Foundation for the South Pacific and the Salvation Army and have concentrated mainly on the provision of food and water. We will continue to monitor the situation closely through our High Commission in Port Moresby and the Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs in Geneva.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers' meetings Ministers have attended since 1 May. [22646]

Dr. John Cunningham: I and my Ministerial team have attended a total of 76 farmers' meetings since 1 May.

Beef Imports

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what quantity of beef imports into the United Kingdom was physically examined for compliance with the SRM ban and the OTMS requirements in the period 1 to 16 January; what were the countries of origin of the inspected meat; which organisations undertook each of these checks; and if he will publish the results of these examinations; [25460]

(2) how many individual shipments of beef to the United Kingdom there were in the period 1 to 16 January; how many such shipments received only a documentary examination; what the countries of origin of these shipments were; and if he will publish the results of these examinations; [25461]

(3) what quantities of beef were imported into the United Kingdom in the period 1 to 16 January; from which country they came; and what were the quantities in the same period in 1997; [25459]

(4) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 20 January 1998, Official Report, column 495, how he is notified about checks made on beef imports into the United Kingdom; [25500]

(5) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 20 January 1998, Official Report, column 495, what information he collates to ascertain that checks are being made to ensure that beef coming into the United Kingdom complies with the (a) SRM and (b) OTMS requirements and is microbiologically safe; and for what reason his Department keeps no central records of the number and results of checks made on beef imports into the United Kingdom; [25498]

(6) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 20 January 1998, Official Report, column 495, where the records of its checks made on beef imports into the United Kingdom are held; [25499]

(7) if he will list the points of entry to the United Kingdom where checks have been carried out since 1 January to ensure that beef coming into the United Kingdom complies with the (a) SRM ban and (b) OTMS requirements; [25501]

(8) what physical checks are made on beef coming into the United Kingdom to establish that it is not over 30 months old and meets the SRM requirements; [25504]

(9) how many consignments of beef have been rejected on the grounds that they did not comply with the (a) OTMS Scheme and (b) SRM ban since 1 January; [25502]

(10) for what reasons the proposal to lift the beef ban in Northern Ireland has been based upon beef off the bone. [28533]

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the inspection of imported beef. [26688]

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mrs. Ballard) of 26 January 1998, Official Report, column 98, how many random checks were carried out on consignments of beef imported to the United Kingdom from EU and non-EU countries on each day since 1 January 1998 at ports in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland; and how many consignments failed to meet the Government's unilateral controls in relation to specified risk material. [26862]

Mr. Walter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many consignments of beef imported from other European Union member states were inspected between 1 and 22 January to ensure that they did not contain specified risk materials and that their import certification was accurate, and in accordance with the Specified Risk Material Order 1997. [27003]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answers 26 and 27 January 1998]: Official Overseas Trade Statistics on the quantities and country of origin of beef imported into the United Kingdom are available only for complete calendar months. Statistics for January 1998 are not yet available. Official Overseas Trade Statistics for January 1997 are set out in the table.

All consignments of animal products imported directly into the United Kingdom from outside the European Union (EU) are subject to documentary checks at designated Border Inspection Posts (BIPs), including checks on the certification relating to specified risk materials. Some consignments are also subject to physical checks, the levels of which are laid down in Community law. Most Border Inspection Posts are operated by local authorities. At those which are not, checks are carried out by the State Veterinary Service.

Single Market rules permit only random spot-checks at destination on animal products traded within the Community. Consistent with those rules, a daily sample of randomly selected consignments from EU member states are subject to documentary checks by Ministry officials for conformity with the new unilateral controls relating to specified risk material.

Data on the number, type and results of veterinary checks on beef consignments at Border Inspection Posts, and on the number and outcome of the random documentary spot-checks on beef consignments arriving from or via other EU Member States, are being collated on a monthly basis from 1 January 1998, the date when the Specified Risk Materials Order came into force. No data are available yet. They will be published in the Department's BSE Enforcement Bulletin which is place in the Library of the House.

There are no restrictions on the import of beef from animals over 30 months of age. The Fresh Meat (Beef Controls) (No.2) Regulations 1996 prohibit the sale for human consumption of all meat derived from bovine animals which at the time of slaughter were more than 30 months old. This measure applies to all bovines slaughtered on or after 29 March 1996, whether in the UK or overseas, other than those born, reared and slaughtered in those third countries specifically excluded by the Regulations and UK animals from the Beef Assurance Scheme.

Business and Trade Statistics Limited

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list his official engagements during the period of the United Kingdom presidency of the European Council of Ministers. [26935]

Dr. John Cunningham: My diary for the duration of the Presidency is, of necessity, incomplete and provisional. It would serve no purpose to provide details of meetings which might or might not take place.

Small Holdings

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to give direct financial aid to farmers of small holdings; and if he will make a statement. [26994]

Mr. Morley: None. It is not our policy to discriminate between farms on the basis of size of holding.

Civil Servants

Mr. Forth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many civil servants in his Department at grade 3 or above have (a) resigned, (b) retired before pensionable age and (c) moved to different responsibilities within the Department since 1 May 1997; if he will indicate the Ministers to whom each was responsible; and if he will make a statement. [26922]

Mr. Morley: Since 1 May 1997 there have been no resignations. One member of the Senior Civil Service in the Department retired before pensionable age; he had responsibilities to my noble Friend the Minister responsible for Farming and the Food Industry, Lord Donoughue, and myself. No senior staff have changed responsibility.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when before Easter farmers will receive their HLCA and enhanced suckler cow payments. [25675]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 28 January 1998]: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for High Peak (Mr. Levitt) on 3 February 1998, Official Report, columns 591–92.

Ritual Slaughter

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many animals were killed for ritual slaughter in the United Kingdom during 1997. [26052]

Mr. Morley: Information is not held separately on the numbers of animals killed without prior stunning by the Jewish or Muslim methods.

Farming Co-operatives

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the impact of the provisions of the Competition Bill [Lords] on farming co-operatives. [26000]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 28 January 1998]: An amendment has been tabled by my noble Friend, Lord Simon of Highbury, for discussion at Lords Report Stage on 9 February which would provide an exclusion from the Chapter I prohibition under the Bill for this type of co-operative along the lines of EC Regulation 26/62.

Calshot Oyster Fisheries

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department received the second application from Calshot Oyster Fishermen Ltd for extension of the Calshot Oyster Fishery Order submitted on 7 September 1996; and when his Department authorised newspaper advertising of it. [27377]

Mr. Morley: The application was received by the Department on 11 September 1996. Following preparation of the draft Order and map and consultation with interested parties, including other public bodies, my officials wrote to Calshot Oyster Fishermen Ltd. on 6 June 1997 requesting that it should be advertised.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what factors underlay his Department's decision to remove a discretionary area from the Variation Order for the Calshot Oyster Fisheries notified to Calshot Oyster Fisherman Ltd on 16 December 1994; and what representations he received in support of the removal. [27361]

Mr. Morley: The Department of Transport and the Deputy Harbour Master, Associated British Ports in Southampton, advised that the Calshot Oyster Fishery should not be extended into the Thorn Channel, a narrow navigation channel for large vessels entering the port of Southampton, because of the risk of small fishing boats interfering with safe navigation.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what correspondence his Department has had with objectors to the extension of the Calshot Oyster Fisheries since 1 June; what was the nature of the correspondence; what are the bases for the objections; and if he will make the correspondence available to the Calshot Oyster Fishermen Ltd. [27388]

Mr. Morley: The objections to the proposed Calshot Oyster Fishery (Variation) Order are primarily concerned with the potential loss of earnings, although there were also objections on the grounds that it would make enforcement more difficult and also to the principle of such fishery Orders.

My officials wrote to the 7 objectors requesting further information. Three replies were received, one of which was considered irrelevant. The two other letters contained a more exact figure of the potential loss of earnings as a result of the extension of the fishery. The author of one of these letters expressed the wish for it to be kept confidential whilst the other letter will be made available to Calshot Oyster Fishermen Ltd.

Food Safety

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under what statutory authority any food found in a food retailer's premises is deemed intended for human consumption. [27335]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Section 3 (3) of the Food Safety Act 1990.

Pear Producers (CCC)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons the chemical CCC cannot be used by United Kingdom pear producers; and what investigations he is conducting in this matter. [27343]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The use of CCC (or chlormequat) on pears is not approved in the United Kingdom. An application for approval of this use was made on behalf of UK growers, but this was rejected in October 1995 because sufficient safety data was not provided.

Retail samples of pears were collected in 1997 as part of the annual surveillance programme for pesticide residues. These samples are being analysed for CCC and other pesticide residues and the results will be published later this year.

Beef on the Bone

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will publish the advice given to him by local environmental health officers about their assessment of the enforceability of the ban on beef on the bone; [27339]

(2) how many representations he has received from local environmental health officers concerning the enforceability of the ban on beef on the bone. [27338]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Since the Regulations came into effect, I have received one letter from a local authority environmental health department about their assessment of the enforceability of the ban on beef on the bone. This was a notification that the authority's Environment Sub-Committee felt the Regulations would prove difficult to enforce effectively, and a request for guidance on enforcement. In addition, officials of my Department have responded freely to telephone requests for advice received from individual environmental health officers. They have also discussed the Regulations and their enforcement with representatives of local authority organisations, including the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to publish his advice on the interpretation and operation of his Beef on the Bone Order. [27333]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Initial guidance on the interpretation and operation of the proposed ban on bone-in beef was published on the Department's Internet site on 3 December 1997, and subsequently updated a number of times during that month. A further update is now being prepared. Advice has also been given to individual telephone callers on the proposed ban and subsequently on the Beef Bones Regulations 1997 following their coming into effect on 16 December 1997. Draft guidance to local authorities on the interpretation and operation of the Regulations was circulated to local authority representative bodies, including the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health, on 12 January 1998 and discussed at a meeting between their representatives and my officials on 16 January. A revised version was circulated on 28 January for final comment and was issued to all local authorities today. I have arranged for a copy to be sent to the right hon. Member. A copy has also been placed in the Library of the House and on the Department's Internet site.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice or information he has received from Mr. Simon Williams about his assessment of the enforceability of the ban on beef on the bone. [27337]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 5 February 1998]: None.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement listing the ways in which, as a result of the beef deboning process, dorsal root ganglia could enter the food chain. [27342]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Dorsal root ganglia lie close to the bones of the vertebral column, which is required to be removed under the Beef Bones Regulations 1997 and disposed of in accordance with the Animal By Products Order 1992. The Regulations require that deboning of bone-in beef at food premises is carried out in a hygienic manner, in particular so as to avoid the risk of contamination of any food or ingredient.

Certified Herd Scheme

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons the proposal for an export certified herd scheme in Northern Ireland did not include a measure to allow beef on the bone to be exported from herds with no record of BSE. [27341]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The decision to propose the deboning of all beef exports under the Export Certified Herds Scheme follows a recommendation from the European Commission's Scientific Veterinary Committee.

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27773]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The items valued at £25 or more that have been reported stolen or lost from the Department since 1 May 1997 are as detailed:

Number	Description	Amount (£)
1	Theft of mobile phone and one tone pad	350.00
2	Loss of pocket memo and four calculators	122.31
3	80 cage traps stolen or damaged beyond repair	2,800.00
4	Theft of video camcorder and polaroid camera	1,300.00
5	Theft of Siemens Nixdorf Laptop PC	2,893.40
Total		7,465.71

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department,

(b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date. [27772]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The hon. Member will wish to know that the cost of theft and fraud to the Department and its Agencies was as follows:

Financial year	Number of cases	Value £	Amount recovered £
1995–96	28	115,891.00	26,025.00
1996–97	17	29,735.00	2,500.00

Analysis of 1995–96 shows that 22 cases relate to theft or attempted theft of Departmental assets by persons unknown. 6 cases relate to false claims or thefts by the Department's staff. The value of these cases was approximately £12,800 of which £2,000 has been recovered. For 1996–97, only 2 cases involved the Department's staff; the total loss was £585, of which £560 was recovered.

Figures have not yet been collated for 1997–98. The Department's non-departmental public bodies have a duty to report any cases of fraud to the Department, but none have been reported.

Fisheries Council

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 22 December 1997, Official Report, column 493, in what areas he judged it necessary to invoke the Hague Preference on stocks at the last Fisheries Council; in which areas it could have been invoked and was not held to be necessary; and if he will press for an extension of the Hague Preference to other areas of the United Kingdom. [27532]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 February 1998]: At the December 1997 Fisheries Council, the UK invoked Hague Preference in respect of stocks of West of Scotland saithe and whiting, North Sea whiting and Irish Sea cod and whiting. This was the first occasion that Hague Preference had been invoked for North Sea whiting.

In view of the Council's decision to maintain national quotas for West of Scotland herring at levels agreed in previous years, the UK did not invoke Hague Preference for this stock and, in line with longstanding practice, the UK did not invoke it for North Sea mackerel; nor did we invoke Hague Preference in respect of North Sea sprat or Norway pout for which the Council allocated the full total allowable catches to Member States for the first time.

Hague Preference may be invoked only for certain stocks of importance to fisheries dependent communities in Ireland and the northern parts of the UK. Its use is opposed by some other Member States and I do not see any prospect of Member States with fisheries dependent areas which do not benefit from Hague Preference agreeing to its being made available for other stocks and other areas of the United Kingdom.

Fisheries

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the anticipated additional tonnage of (a) cod, (b) plaice, (c) saithe and (d) whiting that will be discarded from British-registered fishing vessels as a result of (i) recent changes in enforcement measures and (ii) the proposed restrictions on the landing of black fish. [28123]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 6 February 1998]: From 1 January this year it has been a requirement of UK fishing vessel licences such that any fish subject to quota which are retained on board should not subsequently be discarded. This, and other enforcement measures, which are currently being considered and about which the fishing industry will be consulted, should not result in additional fish being discarded at sea.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the effort limitation controls applied to pelagic fisheries in EU member states. [28047]

Mr. Morley: Council Decision 97/413/EC which set objective and detailed rules for the fourth series of fisheries Multi-Annual Guidance Programmes (MAGP IV) required Member States to submit fishing effort limitation programmes to the European Commission by 30 June 1997 as a basis for the formal adoption of individual national programmes by 30 November 1997. The European Commission announced on 17 December 1997 that it had duly adopted these programmes, but the resulting Decisions have still to be published in the Official Journal. Details of the expected United Kingdom Decision were given in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Enfield, North (Ms Ryan) on 22 December 1997, Official Report, column 494.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the resources dedicated by each EU member state to enforce the effort limitation controls for pelagic fisheries. [28048]

Mr. Morley: A summary of the resources dedicated by each Member State to the monitoring, surveillance and control of fishing activities is contained in a European Commission report to the Fisheries Council under Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2847/93. The latest such report (Com(97)226 final) covers 1995 and a copy is in the Library of the House. A report on 1996 is expected shortly. It is the responsibility of the individual Member States concerned to determine how their resources should be deployed to ensure compliance with EU controls, including new effort limits for pelagic fisheries under MAGP IV.

Relative Stability Principle

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the operation of his Department's policy regarding the application of relative stability (a) up to the end of and (b) beyond 2002. [28119]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 6 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for East Yorkshire (Mr. Townend) on 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 301.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the principle of relative stability. [28122]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 6 February 1998]: The Government support the principle of relative stability under the Common Fisheries Policy.

Horticulture

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the (a) strengths and (b) weaknesses of the United Kingdom horticulture industry; and if he will make a statement. [28540]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: British growers have well developed production and marketing skills, and a system of traceability and product assurance, which makes them second to none in the European market place. There are still too many production units in relation to the number of customers for horticultural produce. A stronger role for producer organisations is part of the solution.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what projects to benefit United Kingdom horticulture are currently being funded by his Ministry as part of the Technology Foresight Programme. [28548]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: A technology foresight exercise is currently underway covering the hardy nursery stock sector. Reports have already been produced on apples, strawberries and mushrooms.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by product type details of the balance of payments deficit for United Kingdom horticulture, excluding those products which cannot normally be grown in the United Kingdom because of climatic factors. [28539]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The balance of payments for the main groups of horticultural products in 1996 are as follows:

	Fresh fruit (apples, cherries, pears, plums and strawberries)	Fresh field and protected vegetables	Potatoes	Ornamentals	Hops
Exports and re-exports	20.3	33.3	105.8	36.4	5.0
Imports	423	806.1	316.3	468.3	7.2
Balance of payments	-402.7	-772.8	-210.5	-431.9	-2.2

Fuller details can be found in the Basic Horticultural Statistics for the United Kingdom (1986–1996), published by the Department's Statistics Division.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what help his Ministry is providing to the horticulture industry to (a) increase consumption of any of its outputs, (b) improve the industry's marketing and (c) develop new forms of technology beneficial to the industry; what expenditure is available for such programmes for (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000; and what were the expenditure levels on the equivalent assistance in (1) 1994–95, (2) 1995–96 and (3) 1996–97. [28543]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: My noble Friend Lord Donoughue recently attended the launch of the Fresh Produce Consortium's Campaign "Give me Five" and strongly endorsed their message that people should eat more fruit and vegetables each day. The Department also encourages and co-ordinates applications for EU funding under Apple Promotion and Flower promotion scheme.

The Department has worked closely with fruit and vegetables producer organisations to ensure that they take full advantage of EU funding for operational programmes. The objectives of the programmes include planning and adjusting production to meet demand, particularly in terms of quality and quantity.

The Department has a horticulture research programme that is directed primarily towards strategic underpinning work to improve the competitiveness and market responsiveness of the sector and the industry's interaction with the environment. Priority areas are those showing most potential for growth and added value, especially where there is a clear trade gap opportunity. Work covered by the Department's Research and Development programme includes breeding for improved quality; pest and disease resistance; crop production, including improving crop uniformity and scheduling; crop protection, with work covering the epidemiology of pests and diseases as well as biological and integrated pest management; the improvement of storage and shelf life. The Department's funded work provides a strong underpinning base from which the levy-funded bodies, such as the Apple and Pear Research Council and the Horticultural Development Council, pick up and the results and develop them through to industry application.

The Department's expenditure available for horticulture research is:

(i) 1997–98 = £11,255k

(ii) 1998–99 = £11,294k (provisional), and

(iii) 1999–2000 = £11,294k (provisional)

The Department's expenditure on horticulture research is:

(1) 1994–95 = £11,760k

(2) 1995–96 = £11,761k

(3) 1996–97 = £11,833k

In addition to these figures, there are a number of cross-sector projects which will have a bearing on horticulture R&D.

The Department is also lead sponsor of the Horticulture LINK programme. The aim of the programme is to encourage collaborative funding of research by industry and government to enable and accelerate the exploitation of new products, processes and systems in all areas of the horticulture industry. (MAFF HortLINK spend: 1997–98 = £500k, 1998–99 = £870k, 1999–2000 = £950k).

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what policies his Ministry is pursuing to help increase exports of United Kingdom horticultural production. [28547]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: I want to see a strong British horticultural sector, taking up the growth in consumption here and producing for the single market rather than exporting occasional surpluses. The strengthening of producer organisations will help to achieve this objective.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish for each of the last five years for which information is available (a) consumption per head in terms of value and weight of fruit, salad and vegetables, and (b) purchases per head of flowers, ornamentals and plants, in (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) the Netherlands, (iii) France, (iv) Germany, (v) Italy, (vi) Sweden and (vii) Belgium. [28545]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Details of consumption of fruit and vegetables per head in terms of weight are as follows. Data on the value of consumption per head are not readily available.

Average annual consumption (kg/head)

There is no information available on purchases per head of flowers, ornamentals and plants. A separate figure for salads is not readily available.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the areas of horticultural production in which the United Kingdom has a natural advantage compared to the rest of Europe. [28538]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: British growers have a temperate climate, production skills, a strong research base and a supportive Government.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reforms to the European Union horticulture regime have been introduced since 1 January 1995; and if he will make a statement on his assessment of the impact that these changes have had on the United Kingdom horticulture industry. [28542]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The reform of the EU Regimes for Fresh and Processed Fruit and Vegetables came into effect on 1 January 1997. The objective of reform is to bring about far greater market orientation among EU growers while reducing reliance on intervention. Money saved on intervention is being made available to Producer Organisations (POs) for approved multi-year operational programmes. A total of 65 programmes have been approved in the UK in 1997, with a potential for grant of £10.3 million in 1998.

In addition, the EU Hop Regime was amended in July 1997 and the EU Flower and Plant Promotion Fund was introduced in 1996. Under the hop reform, producers will receive their income aid payments more quickly. The promotional fund is intended to increase the purchase of flowers and plants, and I want British growers to supply up the extra production needed.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are his Ministry's main priorities for the horticulture industry; and if he will make a statement. [28546]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The Government wish to see a successful, competitive horticulture industry, together with an increase in the production and consumption of fruit and vegetables, increased production and use of ornamental plants and flowers and an ever stronger relationship between producers, retailers and consumers.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which representative bodies from each part of the horticultural trade he and his Ministers have met with since 2 May 1997. [28541]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: I had the opportunity to meet a number of representatives of the industry when I attended the Royal Agricultural Show last July. My noble Friend Lord Donoughue has met the NFU Horticultural Executive, NFU Horticulture advisers, representatives of the Fresh Produce Consortium, the Horticultural Export Bureau, the Horticultural Trades Association, the Royal Horticultural Society and East Malling Trust for Horticultural Research. My hon. Friend the Minister of State met representatives of the National Association of British Market Authorities and the Birmingham Wholesale Fresh Produce Association when he visited Birmingham Wholesale Markets. And my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary has met Bedfordshire Growers and will shortly visit a pot plant nursery in South Lincolnshire. My noble Friend Lord Carter met industry organisations when he attended Marden Fruit Show last October. Further visits are planned.

Beef

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when in December his Ministry received a request for more information from the Commission on the workings of the data based beef scheme; when he undertook to reply; and when he did reply. [28532]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: I received the European Commission Scientific Steering Committee's Opinion on the Date Based Export Scheme proposal from Commissioner Bonino on 11 December 1997 with an invitation to comment.

Extensive discussions with the Commission quickly followed, and my officials formally responded to the Opinion on 29 January.

Wholesale Markets

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Ministers' current policy on the findings of the Strathclyde Report on Wholesale Markets; and what current help his Ministry is giving to assist with the implementation of its principal findings. [28544]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The Government accept the recommendations in the Strathclyde Report. However it is for those directly involved to make their decisions in the light of the Strathclyde Report and their own commercial assessment. My Department is ready to consider ways in which we can assist the process.

Agrimonetary Compensation

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for the last three years for each member state of the European Union the amount in ecu they have been entitled to claim in monetary compensation for exchange rate changes; how much they have claimed; and how much is outstanding. [28354]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 9 February 1998]: As at July 1997, aid notified to the Commission for the nine other EU Member States entitled to pay agrimonetary compensation between 1995–97 was as follows:

[3] 50 per cent. of actual expenditure in 1995 and 1996 was nationally funded.
[4] Approximately 20 per cent. of actual expenditure in 1995 was nationally funded.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Employer Agreement)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if a participant in the employment option of New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds will have a good cause for leaving if the employer fails to comply with the employer agreement. [25563]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 26 January 1998]: We have put into place procedures to ensure that employers do comply with the terms of the agreement. They will be monitored, and, where the terms and conditions of the Employer Agreement are not being met, the New Deal caseworker will intervene and attempt to resolve the situation.

If a person leaves a New Deal option, the Adjudication Officer will take all circumstances into account in deciding whether the person had good cause. In doing this, they can call upon evidence from the caseworker. Guidance to Adjudication Officers, prepared by the independent Central Adjudication Services, specifically cites the standard of provision as a possible relevant circumstance.

Disabled Staff

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on encouraging employers to employ disabled staff. [27255]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Disability Discrimination Act makes it unlawful for employers with 20 or more employees to discriminate against disabled employees and job applicants. It ensures that, if a disabled person has a particular disadvantage in doing a job, the employer may have to help to overcome it. We are consulting on the small firms threshold to see whether it should be reduced. We are also looking at how to secure comprehensive and enforceable civil rights for disabled people through the establishment of a Disability Task Force which will look at, among other issues, the setting up of a Disability Rights Commission.

There is a wide range of help available from the Employment Service to employers to help them employ and retain disabled people.

Employers who make positive efforts to recruit disabled people are able to demonstrate their commitment to good practice through the use of the disability symbol in their recruitment advertisements and other literature.

Disability Benefits Claimants

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for re-training for work claimants of disability benefits who lose their entitlement. [27256]

Mr. Alan Howarth: There is a range of help available to unemployed disabled people through programmes delivered by the Employment Service (ES) and through training programmes delivered through the Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs). Both the employment and the training measures pay specific regard to the needs of disabled people.

Specialist advice is available form Disability Employment Advisers in local ES offices.

School Exclusion

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will issue guidance to schools on the use of permanent exclusion in cases where students are due to take GCSE examinations. [27357]

Ms Estelle Morris: We will shortly be consulting on new guidance to schools and LEAs on the use of exclusion. This will emphasise that permanent exclusion should be avoided wherever possible, and draw attention to the particular problems exclusion causes for pupils studying for public examinations.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many nursery vouchers were taken up in schools which took part in the scheme. [27940]

Ms Estelle Morris: The nursery education voucher scheme operated in England for the summer term of 1997 only. During that period, some 450,000 vouchers were redeemed in maintained schools and 24,000 in independent schools.

Ofsted Inspections

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if it is part of the official remit of OFSTED to ascertain from inspection whether schools are satisfying the statutory requirements of the National Curriculum. [28521]

Mr. Byers: Inspectors evaluate and report on the extent of schools' compliance with statutory requirements, as required by the Framework for the Inspection of Schools. The Framework is determined by HM Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Lifelong Learning

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish a White Paper on lifelong learning; and if he will make a statement. [28722]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment plans to publish a consultation paper on lifelong learning on 25 February, together with our responses to the reports from the Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education and the Further Education Funding Council's Widening Participation Committee.

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28056]

Dr. Howells: The policy is to reply in the language of the original letter whenever possible.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28933]

Dr. Howells: Details of the engagements undertaken by the Secretary of State in the United Kingdom during January 1998, and the mode of transport used, are set out in the following table.

Education SSA (North Yorkshire)

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the education SSA for North Yorkshire for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [28198]

Mr. Byers: The education SSA for North Yorkshire in 1998–99 is some £206.7 million. This represents an increase of some £13.6 million or 7 per cent. over the comparable figure for 1997–98.

Standards and Effectiveness Unit

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many posts have been created within the Standards and Effectiveness Unit in his Department; and what is his estimate of the cost of this unit in 1998–99. [28197]

Mr. Byers: The Standards and Effectiveness Unit was set up in May 1997 to be the focus for the Department's work on raising standards in schools. It covers a wide range of functions including literacy and numeracy, performance measurement and target-setting, inspection of schools and LEAs, Education Action Zones, Education Development Plans, the Standards Task Force and the National Year of Reading. Its current complement of 95 staff are drawn very largely from existing staff together with some ten experienced practitioners with recent experience as headteachers, inspectors, researchers and advisers. The costs of the Unit for 1998–99 have yet to be finalised but will be met within the running costs of the Department's Schools Directorate.

Schools Budget

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each local education authority in England, the total aggregated schools budget for the financial year 1997–98. [28270]

Mr. Byers: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Foster) on 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 82.

Job Clubs

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are presently attending job clubs in Kingston-upon-Hull; how many jobs have been secured by people using job clubs (a) in total, (b) by gender and (c) by each year since the job clubs were established; and if he will list the estimated consequent fall in the number of clients. [27966]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 10 February 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question relating to how many people are currently attending Jobclubs in Kingston-upon-Hull; how many jobs have been secured by people using Jobclubs (a) in total, (b) by gender and (c) by each year since Jobclubs were established; and if the estimated consequent fall in the number of clients can be estimated. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Employment Service Chief Executive.

In January of this year 449 people were attending Jobclubs in Kingston-upon-Hull.

Information on the numbers of people securing jobs through Jobclubs is, unfortunately, only available for 1996 and 1997 and is not available by gender as gender based information is not collected. The available information is as follows:

Year	Number of people finding work through Jobclubs in Kingston-Upon-Hull
1997	1,323

It is not possible to estimate the consequent fall in the number of unemployed people since the total figure will be affected by many other factors influencing the inflows to, and outflows from, unemployment.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and which job clubs in Kingston-upon-Hull are (a) to be closed and (b) to have their staff or hours reduced as a result of the transferring of funds to the Welfare to Work scheme. [27965]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 10 February 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question relating to how many and which Jobclubs in Kingston-upon-Hull are to be closed and have their staff or hours reduced as a result of the transferring of funds to Welfare to Work. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Employment Service Chief Executive.

The Employment Service District Manager in Kingston-upon-Hull is currently consulting local partners on the future provision of Employment Service programmes including Jobclubs in the Hull Employment Service District. The partners include a wide variety of local organisations such as Local Authorities, Training and Enterprise Councils, and voluntary groups. This consultation exercise is due to end on 11 February after which decisions on future provision will be taken as soon as possible. Separately, one existing Jobclub provider has given notice that they wish to terminate their contract from 31 March.

ADAPT Training Programme

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many bids were made in 1997 in the United Kingdom under the ADAPT training programme to run from 1997 to 1999; how many bids were successful; and what proportion of the United Kingdom allocated budget has been committed to United Kingdom projects. [14264]

Mr. Andrew Smith [pursuant to his reply, 12 November 1997, c. 556]: Unfortunately the correct reply was not sent: the answer should have read:

In the United Kingdom, 344 bids were assessed in 1997 under the ADAPT Programme. Of these 185 were successful. The UK Programme budget for ADAPT for the period 1995 to 1999 is 316,812,000 ECU of which 192,174,790 ECU (60.7 per cent.) has been committed to projects. 12,695,706 ECU has been allocated to Technical Assistance.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Maternity Pay

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 15 January 1998, Official Report, column 314, what proportion of recipients of statutory maternity pay fall within the weekly earnings bands (a) under £100, (b) £100 to £199, (c) £200 to £299, (d) £300 to £399, (e) £400 to £499, (f) £500 to £599 and (g) £600 or more. [24741]

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) of 15 January 1998, Official Report, column 314, on statutory maternity pay, if she will list the numbers of claimants in each of the bands of income specified. [25011]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 January 1998]: The information requested is set out in the table.

Number of recipients of Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP), proportion of recipients with SMP, total amounts of SMP and average amounts of SMP by amount of weekly earnings for GB, 1995–96 [1]

Weekly earnings	Number in receipt of SMP (000's) [2]	Proportion of SMP recipients per cent.	Total amount of SMP £ million [3]	Average amount of SMP [4] £

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she expects the appeal of Mrs. G. J. Archer of 7 Queens Road, Brixham, Devon TQ5 8BG, against the withdrawal of her disability living allowance to be resolved. [27822]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. This is why we have continued with the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP).

The administration of the Benefit Integrity Project is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 9 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when she expects the appeal of Mrs. G J Archer, of Brixham, Devon, against the withdrawal of the Disability Living Allowance (DLA), to be resolved.

Mrs. Archer's DLA was withdrawn following a postal enquiry by the Benefit Integrity Project. Following the application made by Mrs. Archer to review her entitlement to benefit, a different Adjudication Officer reviewed the decision to withdraw DLA. The revised decision was despatched to Mrs. Archer by first class post on 4 February.

I apologise for any inconvenience this may have caused.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answers to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) of 30 January 1998, Official Report, columns 421–22, on disability living allowance by disability and region, if she will provide the same information for Scotland; if she will list the number of claimants in each category (i) for the United Kingdom and (ii) for Scotland who have had their disability living allowance benefit payments (a) set aside, (b) reduced and (c) increased; and if she will make a statement. [27906]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Swinney, dated 9 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking pursuant to her Answer to the honourable Member for Newcastle upon Tyne Central of 30 January on Disability Living Allowance by disability and region. You asked if she would provide the same information for Scotland; if she will list the number of claimants in each category (i) for the United Kingdom and (ii) for Scotland who have had their Disability Living Allowance benefit payments (a) set aside, (b) reduced and (c) increased; and if she will make a statement.

The information is not available in the format requested as figures for benefit payments of DLA which have been set aside are not held.

The information which is available is shown in the attached tables.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefits Integrity Project

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what requirements are placed on assessment officers involved in the Benefits Integrity Project in respect of informing claimants of the possibility of (a) benefit loss and (b) appeal against that loss arising out of interviews as part of the project; what steps have been taken to ensure that assessment officers engaged in the Benefits Integrity Project make clear their involvement in this project when making home visits; and if she will make a statement; [27861]

(2) what is the number of assessment officers involved in the Benefits Integrity Project by (a) region and (b) parliamentary constituency in Scotland; [27862]

(3) if she will place in the Library a copy of the guidelines issued to assessment officers involved in the Benefits Integrity Project; [27863]

(4) what are her criteria for assessing suitability or availability for work under the Benefits Integrity Project; [27864]

(5) how many terminally ill recipients of disability living allowance have had their benefit (a) set aside, (b) reduced and (c) increased as a result of the Benefits Integrity Project; and if she will make a statement; [27865]

(6) pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Preston (Audrey Wise) of 30 January 1998, Official Report, columns 420–21, how many people with multiple sclerosis have had their benefits reviewed under the Benefits Integrity Project; how many of these had payments (a) set aside, (b) reduced and (c) increased; and if she will make a statement; [27907]

(7) in how many cases reductions in benefit as a result of the Benefits Integrity Project have been advised against in writing to (i) the assessment officer and (ii) the appeals officer by a qualified medical practitioner; in how many of these cases the reduction was confirmed; and if she will make a statement. [27909]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Benefits should go to those who are properly entitled to benefit. This is why we have continued with the Benefits Integrity Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Swinney, dated 9 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to respond to recent Parliamentary Questions regarding the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP).

As announced by the Secretary of State today, it is important that decisions about benefit entitlement are made fairly and are seen to be fair. In future, no decision made by the project resulting in reduction or removal of entitlement to Disability Living Allowance (DLA) will be made solely on the evidence provided by the claimant—there will always be additional evidence to support the decision.

We have been liaising closely with organisations of and for disabled people from the early stages of the Project. This new initiative underlines our determination to act properly to get the benefit right and to listen and act upon any concerns. We will continue to involve these groups in the evaluation of the Project as it develops.

This project continues to operate under the normal assessment and adjudication rules that are applied to all DLA cases. Adjudication Officers (AOs) who are responsible for assessing cases referred to them under the BIP follow exactly the same guidelines as those applying to all other DLA cases. No special guidance has been issued to AOs involved in the BIP. A copy of the AOs Guide, which provides general information about legislation affecting DLA, is held in the Library.

To minimise unnecessary distress to individuals receiving DLA and to avoid nugatory enquiries people with certain conditions will not be contacted directly by the BIP. This includes recipients of DLA who are terminally ill, defined in DLA legislation as having a life expectancy of less than six months.

The BIP visiting officers are required to explain to customers, at the time of the visit, that the purpose of gathering the information contained in the questionnaire, is to ensure that the correct amount of benefit is in payment. They also explain the length of time it is likely to take for a decision to be made on their case. When the decision is notified, the customer is given information about how to request a review or appeal against the decision should they wish to do so. The customer should request a review within three months of the decision.

All cases are sent to Blackpool for adjudication where the cases are dealt with on an alphabetical basis in chronological order, by approximately 80 AOs. The information is not available broken down into regions or parliamentary constituencies. At present, there are 139 visiting officers employed nationally on the BIP of which 14 are based in Scotland.

The criteria used to determine entitlement to DLA relate to the mobility and care needs arising from a person's disability; their ability to, or suitability for work is not relevant. People in receipt of DLA can work without it having an effect on their entitlement.

A special exercise was conducted to identify customers suffering from multiple sclerosis whose awards were looked at under the BIP. Of the 1,706 cases examined, 22 awards have been set aside, 114 reduced, 59 increased and 1,511 remain unchanged.

The information is not available for the number of medical practitioners who have written to assessment and appeals officers. It may help if I explain. AOs decide on entitlement to benefit taking into account the information before them. They can request information from any source if they think it necessary to enable them to make the correct decision. The AOs may ask for information from qualified medical practitioners which they will take into account when making their decision but the medical practitioners do not give advice about whether or not benefit should be awarded.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people assessed to date will receive (a) increased, (b) unchanged and (c) lower levels of benefit as a result of the Benefits Integrity Project; and if she will make a statement; [27535]

(2) if she will provide a breakdown by benefit category of the change in the number of people in receipt of each benefit as a result of the Benefits Integrity Project; and if she will make a statement; [27536]

(3) how many appeals are in progress following benefit re-assessments under the Benefits Integrity Project; and if she will make a statement; [27537]

(4) if she will estimate the savings achieved (a) in total and (b) by benefit category, as a result of the Benefits Integrity Project; and if she will make a statement. [27538]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Benefits should go to those who are properly entitled to benefit. This is why we have continued with Benefits Integrity Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mrs. Margaret Ewing, dated 9 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP).

The figures provided represent the position as at 31 December 1997.

A total of 40,615 cases, have been examined as part of the BIP. Of the total cases dealt with 978 have had their benefit increased, 31,920 have been unchanged and 7,717 have had their benefit reduced/or stopped. These include 7,462 renewal cases of which 242 have had their benefit increased, 3,868 remain unchanged and 3,352 have had their benefit reduced or stopped.

The project is looking again at DLA awards. The two categories are those awards of the higher rate for the mobility component combined with either the highest or middle rate of the care component. 10,960 claims, with the higher rate mobility component combined with the highest rate of care component, have been examined of which 8,676 were unchanged and 2,284 were reduced. There is no scope for increase in these awards. 29,655 claims, with the higher rate of the mobility component combined with the middle rate of the care component, cases, have been examined of which 978 were increased, 23,244 were unchanged, and 5,433 were reduced.

311 appeals have been received following re-assessment under the BIP.

Using the Benefits Agency's standard method of calculating savings, the amount of savings attributable to the BIP, after taking into account increases in benefit, in this financial year is £15,798,836.60. The amount attributable to awards of the higher rate of mobility combined with the highest rate of care is £5,025,665.60 and to awards of the higher rate of mobility linked to the middle rate of care is £10,773,171.00.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the engagements she undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of her duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28943]

Ms Harman: My engagements in January were all within London and I travelled to them by car.

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28063]

Mr. Denham: The Department and its Agencies will, whenever possible, respond to letters in the language in which they are written.

The Department publishes leaflets in up to 16 different languages including Welsh, Urdu, Hindi and Chinese.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will estimate how many companies would have to pay more in employer National Insurance contributions if the Government were to increase the rate of employer NICs on incomes above (a) £465, (b) £500, (c) £600, (d) £700, (e) £750, (f) £800, (g) £900 and (h) £1,000 a week; and in respect of how many employees they would have to pay more; [28688]

(2) if she will estimate the revenue which would be raised by increasing the rate of employer National Insurance contributions on incomes above (a) £1,000, (b) £900, (c) £800, (d) £750, (e) £700, (f) £600, (g) £500 and (h) £465 a week from 10 per cent. to (i) 12 per cent., (ii) 15 per cent., (iii) 20 per cent., (iv) 25 per cent. and (v) 30 per cent. Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the cost of abolishing the 3 per cent. band of employer National Insurance contributions. [28691]

Mr. Denham: Employers currently pay secondary Class 1 National Insurance contributions at the rate of 3 per cent. in respect of employees who have gross earnings between £62 and £109.99 a week. If this band were abolished, so that no employers' contributions were paid on earnings of less than £110 a week, the estimated loss of contribution revenue would be around £260 million in a full year.

DEFENCE

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what modifications will be required to the dimensions of the Joint Strike Fighter to permit it to be operated from Invincible class aircraft carriers. [26775]

Mr. Spellar: The operational requirements document for the Joint Strike Fighter incorporates Royal Navy requirements, which are very similar to those of the US Marines. Royal Navy requirements include the ability for the Short-Take Off, Vertical Landing variant to operate from the invincible class aircraft carriers without modification to the aircraft.

US-UK Mutual Defence Agreement

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 January 1998, Official Report, column 719, what factors underlay his decision to designate exports of nuclear materials to the United States after 1979 as a matter covered by Category 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [27249]

Mr. Spellar: To disclose details of individual transfers of special nuclear materials between the United States and the United Kingdom, other than aggregated information of transfers during the period covered by the Barter arrangements, could reveal information which both the UK and US regard as classified because, if revealed, it could be of benefit to a potential enemy.

Large Calibre Guns

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many individual test firings of large calibre guns for the purposes of proof and evaluation took place on United Kingdom ranges operated by the Defence Evaluation Research Agency and its predecessor in each of the last five years; and what is the projected number in the current year and in each of the next five years; [27263]

(2) what was the annual income for the proof and evaluation of large calibre gun firings to the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and its predecessor in each of the last five years; and what is the projected income for the current year and each of the next five years. [27261]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 10 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about the number of, and derived income from, test firings of large calibre guns at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's ranges over the last five years, for the current year and for the next five years. I am answering both questions in this letter.

Data on the firing is collected as the number of firing days rather than actual rounds fired. While this information could be compiled from range and trials records it is not readily available. Numbers of rounds actually fired on a day vary greatly from one or two if the work is of an experimental nature, involving complex instrumentation, to over 100 for proofing type activities. Data on firing days for the past five years by range is:

Year	Eskmeals	Shoeburyness
1993	241	243
1994	206	245
1995	215	246
1996	228	225
1997	299	246

Both ranges have more than one firing site that could be in use on the same day.

The future number of firing days depends on the long term requirements of the Ministry of Defence and other customers. While it is expected that work will reduce in this area over the next few years, large calibre gun firing will remain the dominant activity on the ranges.

The income from large calibre gun firings since 1995 is given below. Information on a comparable basis prior to the inclusion of the ranges in the Trading Agency is not available.

1996–97: £3,367k

The projected income for the current year, 1997–98, is £6,376k. Future income will depend on the requirements of the Ministry of Defence and other customers for the facilities but an income of £4,970k is expected for 1998–99.

I hope this information is helpful.

DERA Test Ranges

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the dimensions of the Sea Danger Area around the Eskmeals DERA test range; [27266]

(2) what are the dimensions of the Sea Danger Area around (a) Pendine and (b) Aberporth; [27260]

(3) what are the dimensions and total acreage of the Eskmeals range operated by the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. [27264]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 10 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about the dimensions of the sea danger areas around the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's ranges at Eskmeals, Pendine and Aberporth, and the dimensions and total acreage of the Eskmeals range. I am answering all three questions in this letter.

The current sea danger area at Eskmeals extends to a maximum of approximately 49 kilometres with an area of 1038 square kilometres. It is intended to extend this danger area in the near future. The danger area has a height of 50,000 feet.

Pendine has a sea danger area that extends to a maximum of approximately 18 kilometres with a total area of 230 square kilometres. The danger area has a height of 27,000 feet.

Aberporth has a sea danger area that extends to a maximum of approximately 105 kilometres by 88 kilometres with a total area of 8074 square kilometres. The range has unlimited height.

The Eskmeals range has a maximum length of approximately 3.5 kilometres and a maximum width of approximately 1.5 kilometres. The total land area, excluding foreshore, is 1604 acres. The range has firing rights over land for rear safety of an additional 500 metres in width.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many complaints about noise pollution from the Eskmeals test range have been received in each of the last five years and this year to date; [27267]

(2) how many complaints about noise pollution have been received concerning (a) Pendine and (b) Aberporth ranges in each of the last five years. [27259]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 10 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about the number of complaints about noise pollution received at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's ranges at Eskmeals, Aberporth and Pendine. I am replying to both questions in this letter.

The number of complaints about noise pollution received in each of the last five years are as follows

Eskmeals	0	1	3	0	2
Pendine	9	23	20	25	20
Aberporth	2	0	1	0	0

There have been no complaints about noise pollution at the Eskmeals ranges during the current year to date.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what test, evaluation and research work is currently carried out at the Eskmeals DERA test range; [27265]

(2) what was the annual income for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and its predecessor from the depleted uranium facility at Eskmeals in each of the last five years; and what is the projected income for the current year and each of the next five years. [27262]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 10 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about the work carried out at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's (DERA) range at Eskmeals; and the annual income from the depleted uranium facility at Eskmeals over the last five years and projected income for the current year and the next five years.

The range at Eskmeals carries out test and evaluation work in support of MOD projects and commercial programmes for a wide range of systems, including:

Proof of Ordnance

Ammunition

Explosives

Gun components

Fuses

Armour and armour systems

Trials of Long range ballistics

Gun components

Ammunition

Attack of armour systems

Demolition and disposal

Clearance trials for aircraft

Ordnance

Complete gun systems

Free flight rockets

Armour research and development

Ship sea trials.

The income for the DU firing facility at Eskmeals since 1995 is given below:

Year	£000
1995–96	700
1997–98	623

Information on a comparable basis prior to the inclusion of Eskmeals in the Trading Agency in 1995 is not available. Future income will depend on the requirements of the Ministry of Defence for the facility but an income of approximately £600k is expected for 1998–99.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total (a) income and (b) costs for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency ranges at (i) Pendine, (ii) Eskmeals and (iii) Shoeburyness in each of the last five years. [27366]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 4 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 10 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the income and costs of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's ranges at Pendine, Eskmeals and Shoeburyness in each of the last five years.

The income and costs of the three ranges since 1995–96 is given below. Information on a comparable basis prior to the inclusion of the ranges in the Trading Agency is not available.

	1995–96 £k	1996–97 £k	1997–98 £k (forecast)
Pendine
Income	4,092	8,075	5,360
Costs	6,274	7,050	6,741
Eskmeals
Income	5,365	5,180	8,101
Costs	8,450	8,537	8,210
Shoeburyness
Income	25,603	17,886	22,247
Costs	26,108	21,105	20,012

The Ministry of Defence has provided £8.7 million in strategic pricing to land ranges at Shoeburyness for 1997/98.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the merger of the management and administration of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency land, sea and air ranges will take place. [27695]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 10 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the merger of the management and administration of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's (DERA) land, sea and air ranges.

The management and administration of DERA's land, sea and air ranges were merged into a single sector within the Agency on 1 April 1997. There will be a further realignment of senior management responsibilities within the ranges on 1 April 1998.

I hope this information is helpful.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what complements of crew Type 23 frigates (a) carried when first commissioned and (b) carry currently. [27508]

Dr. Reid: When first commissioned the complement of crew carried by Type 23 frigates was 173. The current complement is 171.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans exist to reduce the complement of Type 23 frigates by refitting with less manpower-intensive equipment; and if he will make a statement. [27887]

Dr. Reid: There are no plans to reduce the complement of Type 23 frigates by refitting with less manpower-intensive equipment. Manning implications are taken into consideration when the Operational Requirement for future ships is considered; however, the size of the complement is affected by other considerations such as the manpower needed for damage control and fire-fighting.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the average availability of Type 23 frigates for operational service in each of the last five years. [27504]

Dr. Reid: Type 23 frigates achieved approximately 85–89 per cent. average availability for operational service in each of the last five years with the exception of 1996 when the figure dropped to just over 80 per cent. due to a number of ships experiencing a particular defect. This discounts time spent in planned maintenance.

Type 42 Destroyers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to reduce the complement of Type 42 destroyers by refitting with less manpower-intensive equipment; and if he will make a statement. [27883]

Dr. Reid: There are no plans to reduce the complement of Type 42 destroyers by refitting with less manpower-intensive equipment. Manning implications are taken into consideration when the Operational Requirement for future ships is considered; however, the size of the complement is affected by other factors such as the manpower needed for damage control and fire-fighting.

Military Assistance Overseas

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers of 8 July 1997, Official Report, column 422, and 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 244, on military assistance provided to other countries, who is conducting the review; when the review started; and when he expects it to be completed. [27979]

Dr. Reid: The review of our practice on the release of information on military assistance provided to foreign countries has been carried out jointly by my Department and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, in consultation with other affected Government Departments. The review was announced in a written answer on 28 January 1997, Official Report, column 141, by the then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. I hope to announce its outcome soon.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual forgone efficiency saving resulting from the delay to new construction at Ministry of Defence (P E) Abbey Wood caused by the Strategic Defence Review. [28323]

Mr. George Robertson: Decisions on the new construction planned at Abbey Wood have been delayed to keep options open while we re-examine the prospects for greater efficiencies overall in the Strategic Defence Review. Since final decisions on the Review have yet to be taken, I cannot give details of future efficiency savings or the impact of the Review on previously planned savings. I am, however, confident that the outcome of the Review will result in improved efficiency throughout my Department.

Export Contracts

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of new export contracts secured by the British defence industry between 1 May and 31 December 1997. [28311]

Mr. Spellar: Information on defence related exports, which include support and infrastructure as significant elements as well as defence equipment, is recorded by the Defence Export Services Organisation. It includes information on contracts signed in each year, supplied by British industry on a voluntary basis. Every effort has been made to make the following information accurate, but the reports on which figures are based may not be complete.

The information is recorded on a quarterly basis. For the last three quarters of 1997 (ie 1 April–31 December 1997), the total value of new contracts recorded as signed was £4.73 billion.

Tank Transporters

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the consortia bidding for the supply of tank transporters; and if he will make a statement on the progress of this project. [28338]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 9 February 1998]: As announced in the MOD Contracts Bulletin Volume 12, No 8 of 10 December 1997, an invitation to submit outline proposals to meet this Department's requirement for heavy equipment transportation has been issued to:

Econofreight Heavy Transport

Consortium headed by:

Mercedes-Benz (UK) Ltd

Consortium comprising:

Serco Ltd and MAN Truck & Bus (UK) Limited

Consortium comprising:

Alvis Unipower plc, Ryder plc, PHH Vehicle Management Service plc

Multidrive Ltd.

Consortium headed by:

Lex Service plc

A joint venture comprising:

Brown & Root Ltd./Oshkosh Truck Corporation

Econofreight Heavy Transport and Multidrive Ltd. have subsequently withdrawn from the competition.

The remaining consortia are due to submit their outline proposals later this month.

Fox Hunting

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the number of army personnel, both staff and civilian, involved in the hunting of foxes with hounds on the defence estate. [28912]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many hounds are maintained at (a) the Salisbury Plain training area and (b) the Otterburn training area for the purpose of hunting foxes. [28913]

Mr. Spellar: The Royal Artillery Hunt keeps a pack of some 80 hounds on Salisbury Plain Training Area. The Hunt is, however, a private organisation and kennels in which the hounds are kept were built by and belong to the Hunt and not the Ministry of Defence.

No hounds are kept at Otterburn Training Area.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to public funds of the use of army vehicles and equipment in connection with the hunting of foxes with hounds on the defence estate. [28918]

Mr. Spellar: As with Army horses, Army vehicles and equipment may be used in connection with fox hunting, when they are not required for Army duties. However, individuals using Army vehicles and equipment for this purpose pay to do so, so that no cost is incurred by the public purse.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the number of reported injuries to (a) army personnel and (b) horses involved in the hunting of foxes with hounds on the defence estate in each of the last five years. [28915]

Mr. Spellar: My Department does not hold records of the number of injuries sustained by Army personnel when hunting foxes with hounds on the Defence estate. No central records are held of injuries sustained by Army horses involved in fox hunting on the Defence estate, and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. My Department holds no records of injuries sustained by privately owned horses involved in hunting on the defence estate.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by rank the number of army and civilian personnel who are involved (a) full-time and (b) part-time in maintaining stables of horses and kennels of hounds for the purpose of hunting foxes on the defence estate. [28916]

Mr. Spellar: No Army or MOD civilian personnel are employed to maintain stables of horses or kennels of hounds for the purpose of hunting foxes on the defence estate.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to public funds of the maintenance of (a) stables of horses and (b) kennels of hounds for the purpose of hunting foxes on the defence estate. [28919]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence does not maintain stables of horses and kennels of hounds for the purpose of hunting on the defence estate.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by name those army units which maintain horses and hounds for the purpose of fox hunting on the army estate. [28917]

Mr. Spellar: No Army units maintain horses and hounds for the purpose of fox hunting. Members of the Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment and the King's Troop Royal Horse Artillery participate in various hunts throughout the country, and may use their Army horses to do so. However, as with other non-military equestrian activities, Army horses may be used for hunting only if it does not impede military or ceremonial duties, and any additional costs incurred are borne privately by the rider.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many army personnel have (a) been hospitalised for more than 24 hours and (b) taken sick leave of more than three days following injuries sustained while involved in hunting with hounds on the defence estate in each of the last five years. [28914]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

RAF Chivenor

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military units are currently based at RAF Chivenor; and what plans there are to transfer other military units to the base. [28676]

Mr. Spellar: Chivenor became an establishment of the Royal Marines Command within the organisation of Commander-in-Chief Fleet in Autumn 1995. The units based at RM Barracks Chivenor are: The Commando Logistic Regiment Royal Marines; 59 Independent Commando Squadron Royal Engineers; the Squadron Headquarters and "A" Flight of 22 (Search and Rescue) Squadron RAF; and 642 Volunteer Glider School RAF. There are no current plans to transfer other military units to the base.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Radio Communications Agency

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date the Radio Communications Agency was last subject to an audit by the National Audit Office. [24687]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 26 January 1998]: The National Audit office undertook an audit at the Radio Communications Agency during 1997. The assignment, which involved auditing the Agency's annual accounts for 1996–97, was completed prior to the issue of the Certificate and Report of the Comptroller and Auditor General to the House of Commons on 7 November 1997 (prepared in accordance with the Agency's Accounts Direction of 21 July 1993). The Agency Annual Report and Accounts for 1996–97 containing these audited accounts is available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what (a) rental, (b) leased and (c) freehold property assets are held by the Radio Communications Agency. [24689]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 26 January 1998]: The following figures are the latest available for a full financial year. This information covers only properties for which the Agency was then required to disclose asset details in its audited balance sheet. At that time, the Agency did not include in its balance sheet capital values for freehold, long leasehold or rented properties or related land which it occupied, except where it had incurred capital costs itself in acquiring or improving those properties. At 31 March 1997, the carrying value of such costs was £2,420,000, relating almost exclusively to fitting out its leased temporary headquarters at London Blackfriars.

The position will change with effect from 31 March 1998 when PRS rents are abolished. Property values will subsequently be included in the balance sheet where the Agency is the sole or major occupier. The fixed asset carrying values of such properties that would have applied at 31 March 1997, if PRS rents had already been abolished, was £819,000.

The details have been taken from the Agency's Annual Report and Accounts 1996–97 which is available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of the budget of the Radio Communications Agency is spent on overseas visits. [24688]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 26 January 1998]: The following figures are the latest available for a full financial year.

Overseas travel spend	715
Total Agency spend	40,587
Overseas travel spend (%)	1.76%

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total annual revenue raised by the Radio Communications Agency; and from what sources. [24691]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 26 January 1998]: The following are the latest available figures for a full financial year:

Sources	Income £000
Licensing:
Statutory (see breakdown below)	36,127
Interdepartmental	3,838
Other:
Examination work	383
Typing testing and certification work	477
Miscellaneous income[1]	1,783
Total Income	42,608
Licensing: Statutory breakdown
Aeronautical	937
Amateur and Citizen's Band	1,579
Broadcast	4,179
Fixed Services	5,886
Maritime	1,987
Private Business Radio	10,922
Programme making and special events	1,070
Public mobile communications	7,248
Space services	2,224
Technology Development	98
Total	36,127

[1] Miscellaneous income consists principally of income from investigation of domestic interference complaints.

These figures are taken from the Agency's Annual Accounts and Reports for 1996–97, a copy of which is available in the House's library.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Dawson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment her Department has made of the impact of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment on the Government's efforts to assist poor countries; and if she will make a statement. [26716]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 30 January 1998]: The Department for International Development is commissioning a study on any implications the MAI may have for developing countries. We support continued consultation with developing countries on this matter.

Empty Properties

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her estimate of the (a) annual cost and (b) total value of the empty properties owned by (i) her Department, (ii) agencies and (iii) other public bodies for which she has responsibility, in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year. [26595]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Government property is held in the name of the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions. However, for those properties for which my Department is administratively responsible, my best estimates are as follows:

Year	Department	Agencies	Other
1995–96
Cost	172,824	—	2,458,000
Value	—	—	32,202,000
1996–97
Cost	325,743	55,000	2,756,000
Value	75,000	100,000	34,102,000
1997–98 (to date)
Cost	604,236	45,833	2,341,000
Value	3,450,000	100,000	28,570,000
1997–98 (full year)
Cost	786,518	55,000	3,166,000
Value	3,450,000	205,000	26,070,000

Notes:

1. Building earmarked for demolition have not been valued.
2. Developed land with no buildings on it has been excluded from the figures.

Conferences

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the conferences held by her Department since 1 May 1997, giving in each case the (a) purpose and (b) estimated cost. [27779]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Information in the form requested is not held centrally within the Department, which has held many conferences since 1 May 1997. It could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her current estimate of the expenditure of her Department, its agencies and non departmental public bodies on hospitality since 1 May 1997. [27780]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Disaggregated information in the form requested in respect of non-departmental public bodies and the Government Offices could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The other information is as follows:

Central Department	508,403
Companies House	19,000
National Weights and Measures Laboratory	3,875
Patent Office	14,199
Radiocommunications Agency	62,853
Total	608,330

Blind Trust

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the compatibility of paragraph 114 of the Ministerial Code with the membership of her blind trust for research expenses. [28126]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 6 February 1998]: I am satisfied that I have complied with paragraph 114 of the Code.

Engineers

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she had during her recent visit to Land Rover regarding the recruitment of skilled engineers; and if she will make a statement. [28530]

Mr. Battle: Land Rover did not raise this matter during my right hon. Friend's recent visit.

The Government attach a high priority to raising skill levels in the workforce. DTI is closely involved, along with the local partners and vehicle manufacturers, in several initiatives to increase the supply of skilled engineers in the automotive sector.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Drew: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will assess the advantages of increasing the level of the fossil fuel levy with a view to encouraging renewable energy services. [28320]

Mr. Battle: The rate of the fossil fuel levy is set in response to expected demand on levy funds. My Department is currently reviewing what would be necessary and practical to achieve 10% of the UK's electricity needs from renewable sources by the year 2010. I will publish the outcome of that review later this year.

Independent Retailing

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will commission an Office for National Statistics research paper on all aspects of independent retailing in the United Kingdom. [28478]

Mr. Battle: The Department of Trade and Industry has no plans to commission a research paper from the Office for National Statistics on independent retailing.

Respiratory Diseases (Coalminers)

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated total legal bill for the Government for the recent coalminers' respiratory diseases action. [28267]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The Government took over this liability from British Coal on 1 January 1998. Total costs of defending the litigation are approximately £10 million to date, with the vast majority of costs having been met by British Coal. In addition, the Government will meet the plaintiffs' costs, as instructed by the High Court on 6 February, as and when they are presented and finalised.

Energy Industries (Employment)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the number of persons employed in the United Kingdom in the energy industries by sector in each of the last three years. [28344]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Figures separately identifying components of the energy industries such as electricity and gas are not readily available; however, estimated figures for these sectors for 1980, 1990 and provisional figures for 1996 were published in Volume 1 of the 1997 Energy Report "Shaping Change". These estimates are based on detailed Annual Employment Survey data which have been revised since publication of the Energy Report. For this reason, the ONS figures, which are more up to date than those in the Energy Report, are given.

The latest available comparable figures for employment in the energy industries in Great Britain are as follows:

Employees in employment in the energy industries

Thousands

	[1]1995	[1]1996	[2]1997
Mining of coal, lignite, peat extraction	10.9	10.5	9.6
Extraction of crude petroleum and natural gas[4]	25.3	30.8	33.7
Electricity, gas steam and hot water supply[5]	117.8	99.8	98.7
Manufacture of coke, refined petroleum products and nuclear fuel[6]	30.0	33.6	33.2
Total	184.0	174.8	175.2

Fuels (Consumption)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the proportionate share of British fuel consumption represented by the major fuels in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997; and what estimate she has made of these relative shares for 1998. [27981]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Estimates for 1998 are not available. Updated energy projections are currently being prepared by the DTI and will be published later in the year. The available figures for the share of primary energy consumption due to each of the main fuels in the UK are as follows:

UK inland consumption of primary fuels and equivalents for energy use, percentage share of total primary energy consumption

	1995	1996	1997 (provisional)	[5]2000
Coal[1]	22.7	20.2	18.8	12.9
Petroleum[2]	34.7	33.9	34.0	36.4
Natural gas[3]	31.9	35.6	36.3	39.7
Primary electricity[4]	10.5	10.3	10.9	11.0
Total (per cent.)	100	100	100	100
Total (million tonnes of oil equivalent)	219.5	231.6	222.4	234.2

[1] Includes other solid fuels and solid renewables (wood, waste etc.).

[2] Excludes petroleum for non-energy use and international marine bunkers.

[3] Includes colliery methane, gaseous renewables (landfill gas, sewage gas).

[4] Mainly nuclear electricity, but includes hydro and net imports of electricity.

[5] DTI forecast as published in EP65 "Energy Projections for the UK" in March 1995 but modified to reflect the current methodology for calculating nuclear fuel inputs. Forecast based on central GDP growth and low fuel prices. For the year 2000 renewable sources are included under primary electricity, they are projected to account for 0.6 per cent. of primary energy consumption in 2000.

Companies House

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 666, if she will indicate the cost of the (a) refunds, (b) free screens and (c) free searches given to subscribers to the new on-line Companies House information system; and if the cost has been refunded to Companies House by ORT. [28920]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Refunds and free searches on Companies House on-line information system are as follows:

The indicative costs:

(a) Refunds on subscriptions: £9,300

(b) Free screens: £3,800

(c) Free searches: £32,400

Discussions are continuing between Companies House and ORT and their network provider over refunds to Companies House.

Defence Export Licences

Mr. David Davis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on delays in the application process for export licences for defence equipment made by British companies. [26431]

Mr. Brady: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on delays in the application process for export licences for defence equipment made by British companies. [26439]

Mrs. Beckett: Licences to export strategic goods are issued by the President of the Board of Trade and the Export Control Organisation of the Department of Trade and Industry is the licensing authority. Relevant individual licence applications are circulated by the DTI to other Government Departments with an interest, as determined by them in line with their policy responsibilities. These include the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development.

In his announcement last year of new criteria of the assessment of export licence applications on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made clear that the criteria would not be applied mechanistically and that individual applications would be considered case by case. In the months following the announcement, this led to an increase in the time taken to assess some applications. The Government appreciate the inconvenience and uncertainty that results from any delay in the processing of individual applications and my department, together with the other departments involved, is continuing to work to reduce processing timescales generally.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment is made of the likely incidence of sham recovery, as defined by the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee, in its October 1997 report on the import and export of radioactive waste, when considering application from nuclear reprocessors to import spent nuclear fuel. [28468]

Mr. Battle: The UK has no facilities for the direct disposal of spent nuclear fuel and therefore "sham recovery", as defined by the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee, is not a practical option.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those visits made within the United Kingdom since 1 May on which (a) he and (b) other Ministers within his Department have been accompanied under Rule 83 of the Ministerial Code indicating (i) those persons accompanying and (ii) the cost to public funds. [23758]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 19 January 1998]: Since 1 May 1997, neither my Ministers nor I have been accompanied, within the United Kingdom, under the terms of Rule 83 of the Ministerial Code.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in each of the last 12 months how many Czech and Slovak asylum seekers arrived at Dover; and how many applied for asylum (a) in their own right and (b) as dependants; [27382]

(2) in each of the last 12 months how many of the Czech and Slovak asylum seekers who applied at Dover subsequently withdrew their applications; [27383]

(3) in each of the last 12 months how many of the Czech and Slovak asylum seekers who applied at Dover were (a) granted refugee status, (b) granted exceptional leave to remain and (c) refused; [27384]

(4) how many Czech and Slovak asylum seekers who, having applied at Dover and were refused asylum, have (a) appealed against the decision and (b) had their appeal determined; and what has been the outcome of the appeals which have been determined. [27385]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is given in the table.

Of the 400 Czech and Slovak nationals who applied for asylum at the Port of Dover in the period 1 February 1997 to 31 January 1998, 190 have appealed to Immigration Adjudicators. Of these, 75 appeals have been dismissed or withdrawn and one has been allowed. These figures exclude dependants.

It is estimated that, during the period 1 February 1997 to 31 January 1998, a total of 580 dependants arrived with Czech and Slovak asylum applicants at the Port of Dover. I regret that it is not possible to provide an accurate breakdown of this figure by date of application.

In the case of the one appeal which was allowed, the Adjudicator recommended that the case should be reviewed within six months.

Correspondence

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that he and his Ministers personally read the letters sent to them by hon. Members on constituency matters. [27673]

Mr. Straw: It has been my policy and that of my junior Ministers to read letters from hon. Members on constituency matters and that will remain the case.

Overseas Travel

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost of Ministerial overseas travel in his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98 to date. [26680]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Rotherham, (Mr. MacShane) on 9 February 1998, Official Report, columns 16–17.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii)1997–98 to date. [27787]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The estimated cost of losses to the Home Office, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) from reported fraud and theft is summarised in the table:

	1995–96	1996–97	[1]1997–98
Core department	148.8	56.4	19.9
Agencies	56.5	129.6	40.0
NDPBs	116.0	—	49.0

[1] Figures for 1997–98 relate to April-September 1997, the latest available.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current estimate of the expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on hospitality since 1 May 1997. [27790]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The current estimate of the expenditure by my Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of hospitality since 1 May 1997 is as follows:

Department	18,460
Agencies	31,896
Non-departmental public bodies	7,729
Total	58,085

Buildings Refurbishment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will make a statement. [26679]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The recorded expenditure on buildings refurbishment by the Home Office, including the Prison Service, is as follows:

£ million

Year
1995–96	34.2
1996–97[1]	31.1
1997–98 to date	23.5
1997–98 full year (estimated)	36.3

[1] From 1996 the figures include the common user estate properties inherited from Property Holdings on 1 April 1996.

Note:

The figures include value added tax, but exclude professional fees.

Conferences

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the conferences held by his Department since 1 May 1997, giving in each case the (a) purpose and (b) estimated cost. [27789]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The conferences held by my Department since 1 May 1997, with purpose and estimated costs, are as follows:

Ferrers Trophy Award (28 May 1997)

Drugs and Criminal Justice (28–30 January 1998)

Cost: £15,500.00.

Secure Units

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the current weekly cost of keeping a youngster in a secure unit; [27937]

(2) what was the age of the youngest (a) male and (b) female being kept in a secure unit for young offenders in England and Wales, on 10 February; [27939]

(3) how many (a) males and (b) females were held in secure units for young offenders in England and Wales, as of 1 February. [27938]

Ms Quin: Local authority secure units accommodate a number of categories of young people. Those for whom my right hon. Friend is responsible are convicted under section 53 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933. On 30 January 1998, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 182 of these: 170 male and 12 female. The youngest male detainee on that date was aged 11 years and 8 months; the youngest female, 13 years and 9 months. Costs vary from unit to unit, but the average weekly placement rate at 1997–98 prices was £2,628.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have resulted from the installation of speed cameras in the Dyfed Powys Police area; and what estimate he has made of their effect on the number of accidents on the roads concerned. [27974]

Mr. Michael: Information available centrally shows that ten prosecutions resulted from the use of automatic speed cameras in the Dyfed Powys Police area in 1995 and 38 in 1996. Information is not available centrally to show how many prosecutions may have occurred from the use of other speed enforcement devices of a portable nature.

I understand from the Chief Constable of Dyfed Powys that the Force targeted roads on which excessive speeds were known to occur rather than accident black spots. There is therefore no information available on the impact of the use of these cameras on local accident statistics in Dyfed Powys. However, I can refer the hon. Member to the evaluation of the effectiveness of automatic speed and traffic light cameras in reducing traffic casualties which we published in 1996. ("Cost benefit analysis of traffic light and speed cameras"). A copy is in the Library.

Prisons (Costs)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current cost per week of keeping an inmate in a (a) high security prison, (b) a normal security prison, (c) an open prison and (d) a young offenders' institution. [28239]

Ms Quin: For the period April 1997 to December 1997, the average cost per week for keeping a prisoner in a dispersal prison was £677; a category B, category C and local prison was £337; an open prison was £291; and a young offender institution was £346.

These figures are net current expenditure and exclude headquarters costs. These will be brought together at the end of the financial year. Headquarters costs will be assimilated at the end of the financial year.

Prison Population

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what projections he has made of the prison population in each year to 2005. [28013]

Ms Quin: The figures requested are given in the table. The projection on which the table is based is the central or regression projection which assumes that trends in sentencing which have been observed over the last 20 or so years continue. Alternative scenarios are available which give a prison population by 2005 of 92,600 (custody rates increase at about the rate observed between 1992 and 1996, or of 64,400 (custody rates and sentence lengths remain at 1997 levels). The latest long term projections of the prison population in England and Wales were published in a Home Office Statistical Bulletin issue 2/98) on 29 January 1998. The bulletin describes the methodology of the projections in more detail.

Projected prison population 1998–2005
Total prison population in England and Wales by year—central projection

Year	Number
1998	65,000
1999	69,600
2000	72,200
2001	73,700
2002	75,800
2003	78,000
2004	80,400
2005	82,800

Handguns (Compensation)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department intends to accept MPC valuations for handguns compensation. [28281]

Mr. Michael: Valuations by Managers and Processors of Claims are certainly among the sources used by the Firearms Compensation Section when assessing claims from individual shooters under Option C of the Compensation or Ex Gratia Schemes, but they do not provide conclusive evidence of value. Claims under Option C from firearms dealers must be supported by documentary evidence, in the form of invoices or equivalent documentation, of the cost to the dealer of the goods surrendered. Valuations in themselves cannot replace this evidence needed for these types of claim.

Prison Officers (Maternity Leave)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what special arrangements are available to help women's prisons which do not share a site with a men's prison to accommodate their requirements for maternity leave among prison officers. [28007]

Ms Quin: No special arrangements exist. However, the normal arrangement to meet critical shortfalls of staff availability is to supply detached duty staff from other establishments. Exceptionally, where a critical shortfall can be forecast (for instance in the case of cumulative staff absences on maternity leave) and this exceeds the nominal allowance for leave and sick absence, governors are advised to make bids for extra funding to cover this contingency.

Alcohol (Petrol Stations)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria govern the issue of licences to sell alcohol to garages and petrol stations. [28310]

Mr. George Howarth: Garages, defined as premises which are primarily used to sell petrol or to sell or maintain motor vehicles, are disqualified from holding a liquor licence. For any other premises, applications must be made in the usual way to licensing justices. They must be satisfied that the applicant is a fit and proper person, and they are not restricted in what they may take into account when deciding an application.

Offences Against the Person

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reform the law on non-fatal offences against the person. [29353]

Mr. Straw: Last July I announced the Government's decision to accept the principle of the Law Commission's proposals for reform of those offences mainly contained in the Offences Against the Person Act 1861.

I have today issued a consultation document containing the Government's proposals on how the law might be reformed, together with a draft Bill. Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Library. This is an important document demonstrating the Government's commitment to modernising and improving the law, and to genuine consultation on specific, considered proposals.

Our proposals are largely based on those contained in the Law Commission's Report No. 218 "Offences Against the Person and General Principles", but they are not identical to those of the Law Commission. The law has developed since the Law Commission first published their report and on some issues we have taken the opportunity to review the law further, while on others we have taken a somewhat different view from that of the Law Commission.

There are important and difficult issues set out in the consultation document. We are not seeking to introduce new offences but to clarify and rationalise the existing law. I urge all those concerned about this issue to read this paper and respond to it.

Firearms Consultative Committee

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the current status is of the Firearms Consultative Committee; how many times it has met during the last two years; and what plans he has regarding future meetings of the committee. [28983]

Mr. Michael: The Firearms Consultative Committee (FCC) is a statutory body which was set up for an initial period of five years under section 22 of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988. Its existence was last extended to the Firearms Consultative Committee Order 1996 made under that Act. It is due to expire on 1 February 2000 unless a further order is made. Its composition and purpose remains as set out in section 22 of the 1988 Act.

The Firearms Consultative Committee held nine meetings in 1996 and four meetings in 1997. It has met once to date in 1998.

The Government have made it clear that they intend to look again at firearms controls once all handguns have been banned to see whether other measures are needed to safeguard the public. As part of this process we shall consider any views from the FCC and will also look carefully at the role and composition of the FCC itself.

EEA Nationals

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for (a) EEA family permits and (b) residence permits or leave to remain as the spouse of an EEA national exercising Treaty rights have been refused since 1 February 1997 on the grounds that the entry clearance officer took the view that the marriage was one of convenience. [28294]

Mr. Fatchett: I have been asked to reply.

Figures on refusals of EEA family permits and residence permits or leave to remain as the spouse of an EEA national on the grounds of marriage of convenience are not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Television Licence Fee

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to extend the concessionary television licence fee scheme to cover all households where all the occupants are of pensionable age. [28946]

Mr. Fisher: The Government have no plans to do so. To provide £5 concessionary licences for all pensioner households would cost approximately £437 million annually in lost television licence fee revenue.

Correspondence

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the (a) target and (b) average length of time for his Department to answer letters from the public; and what proportion of letters are answered within the target period. [28922]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has a target of 18 working days to answer letters from members of the public. The average length of time the Department takes to answer this type of correspondence is 16.65 days. The proportion of letters which are answered within the target period is 70.1 per cent.

Winnie the Pooh Toys

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received urging the return to the UK of the original stuffed toys of the Winnie the Pooh stories. [27921]

Mr. Fisher: I have received no such representations, apart from that of my hon. Friend. Contrary to recent reports in the press, Winnie, Tigger, Kanga, Eeyore and Piglet are quite happy in New York. They are well looked after and are seen there by many people.

Tourism

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the impact of the recent financial crisis in Far Eastern markets on tourism into the United Kingdom. [27495]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I believe it is too early to say whether events in Asia will have long term effects on tourism into the UK. The British Tourist Authority's revised targets for 1998 predict that visitors from Asia will decline by up to 3 per cent. and expenditure by up to 5 per cent. in 1998. Past experience suggests there may be only a short term impact on tourism flows. The British Tourist Authority will continue to monitor the situation.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the impact on trends in the numbers of visitors to Britain from (a) South Korea, (b) Japan, (c) Indonesia, (d) Hong Kong, (e) Taiwan, (f) the rest of China, (g) Malaysia, (h) Thailand and (i) the Philippines as a result of the recent economic problems in Asia. [27511]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The British Tourist Authority revised forecasts for 1998, based on the economic situation in Asia in November/December, are:

South Korea: −5 per cent.

Japan: 0 per cent.

Indonesia: n/a[1]

Hong Kong: −3 per cent.

Taiwan: 0%

Rest of China: +10 per cent.

Malaysia: +1 per cent.

Thailand: −3 per cent.

Philippines: n/a[1].

[1] BTA does not produce individual forecasts for Indonesia and the Philippines.

BTA will be reviewing these forecasts in April.

Sports Council

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to ensure that the UK Sports Council is equipped to perform the role envisaged in the document, Creating Excellence in British Sport. [27677]

Mr. Tom Clarke: On 16 December 1997 Sheffield was chosen as the preferred bidder to run the Headquarters site of the United Kingdom Sports Institute. The Sheffield Consortium are currently in discussion with the United Kingdom Sports Council regarding the management structure of the Institute in which the Council will have a significant role.

Minimum Wage

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on the impact on tourism of a minimum wage. [27685]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I have received representations on this subject from a number of companies and associations in the tourism, hospitality and leisure industry. The independent Low Pay Commission has received written and oral evidence from a range of individuals and organisations, including many of the industry's representative bodies.

National Lottery

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many grants made from National Lottery funds have been of amounts up to £25,000. [27398]

Mr. Tom Clarke: To date 15,304 awards have been made for grants under £25,000. In addition, the Millennium Commission has made grants to around 16,000 people under the Millennium Awards scheme.

Information on Lottery awards is now available on the Department's website www.lottery.gov.uk.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Medicine Prices

Mr. Casale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies her Department has carried out of the comparative price of over-the-counter medicines in the United Kingdom and the rest of the EU; and if she will publish those studies. [28861]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: None.

Ms Drown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate her Department has made of the total cost to public funds of the legal proceedings in the Restrictive Practices Court to be brought by the Office of Fair Trading in its attempt to end resale price maintenance on over-the-counter medicines. [28698]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Referrals to the Restrictive Practices Court are a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading. I am asking him to write to my hon. Friend.

Mergers and Acquisitions

Ms Drown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate she has made of the proportion of foreign investment in Britain represented by mergers and acquisitions. [28699]

Mr. Ian McCartney: According to the results of the latest Overseas Direct Investment inquiries, conducted by the Office for National Statistics, net acquisition of UK companies' share and loan capital accounted for 48 per cent. of foreign direct investment into the UK during 1996.

Net acquisition of share and loan capital covers acquisitions and mergers (net of disposals) over 10 per cent. and also includes cash injections by the overseas parent company into existing UK subsidiaries. "Green field" sites are not included in acquisitions or mergers.

Arms Export Licences

Mr. Rowe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans her Department has to ensure the transparency and accountability of decisions on export licences for arms; and what steps she will be taking in the future to ensure this. [28715]

Mrs. Roche: On 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced the criteria to be used in considering individual applications for licences to export goods entered in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order, or dual-use goods where there are grounds for believing that the end-user will be the armed forces or the internal security forces of the recipient country.

The Foreign Secretary also stated that the Government would report annually on the state of strategic export controls and their application. An announcement will be made in due course.

Petrol Sales

Mr. Kidney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what conclusions she has drawn from the Office of Fair Trading investigation into restrictive retail trade practices relating to petrol sales. [28680]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I understand that the Director General of Fair Trading expects to complete his review of the wholesale and retail petrol market in the United Kingdom and publish the findings in March.

Liquidation and Bankruptcy Procedures

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to improve current liquidation and bankruptcy procedures. [28704]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: When Parliamentary time allows, I intend to introduce legislation to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the procedure for disqualifying unfit company directors. This will make it possible for a person who under the present law is or could be subject to an application for a disqualification order instead to give an undertaking to the Secretary of State which would have the same legal effects as a disqualification order made by a court. I also wish to make it easier for firms in financial difficulty to make voluntary arrangements with their creditors by introducing into the existing statutory framework the option of a moratorium to give the company's management a breathing space within which to put a rescue plan to creditors.

A working party is reviewing the current state of regulation in the insolvency profession and recently issued a consultation paper "Insolvency Practitioner Regulation—Ten Years On". Responses to that will inform their final report to the Secretary of State and the insolvency recognised professional bodies. Another working party, chaired by Mr. Justice Ferris, is considering remuneration of office holders and is expected to report in the spring. These findings and conclusions of both groups will be given very careful consideration when received.

Capital Goods and Project Exports

Mr. Rooney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps are being taken to consult exporters about ECGD's arrangements for providing support for capital goods and project exports. [29230]

Mrs. Beckett: The Minister for Trade is writing today to leading members of the exporting and financial community for their views on the current arrangements and on options for change in the future. Copies of the consultation paper are being placed in the Library of the House and are publicly available from ECGD on request. The document will also be available on the ECGD internet site.

The consultation paper reviews market development over the past 5 years and, without seeking to prejudge the outcome, asks whether changes to the UK system might now serve the interests of the exporter and the taxpayer more effectively.

We are asking for responses by 10 April so that the Government can decide on what should succeed ECGD's current Fixed Rate Export Finance (FREF) scheme, which is scheduled to expire at the end of June, and enter into the necessary negotiations.

I hope the consultation document will stimulate serious debate about the best approach for delivering this Government's objective of ensuring UK capital goods and project exporters have access to competitive finance at acceptable public expenditure cost.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the engagements she undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of her duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28942]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 10 February 1998]: I undertook a number of engagements in the UK during January which were accessed by car and train.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total installed capacity of combined heat and power schemes in Britain (a) in 1970, (b) in 1980, (c) in 1990 and (d) at the latest available date; and what are the Government's targets for (i) 2000 and (ii) 2010. [28972]

Mr. Battle: Historic data on the installed electrical capacity of combined heat and power schemes in the United Kingdom are available only for the year in which surveys of CHP schemes were carried out. These are as follows:

1977: 2,800 MWe
1983: 2,250 MWe
1988: 1,800 MWe
1996: 3,600 MWe.

It is estimated that in 1997 installed capacity grew to about 3,750 MWe with a further 250 MWe under construction.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was, for each member country of the European Community, (a) the installed capacity of combined heat and power, (b) total electricity generation capacity and (c) CHP as a percentage of total electricity generation capacity, at the latest available date. [28973]

Mr. Battle: The latest available information on combined heat and power in the European Community relates to 1994 and is shown in the table.

While the UK has a comparatively low percentage of electricity produced by CHP, the installed capacity of CHP schemes is the third largest in the Community. Countries with high proportions of electricity generated by CHP plants (Netherlands, Denmark, Finland and Austria) have publicly owned local district heating networks which can distribute the heat produced by CHP. District heating schemes of this type have not been economically attractive in the UK because of the generally shorter heating season and highly developed gas and electricity transmission networks.

It should be noted that the definition of CHP can vary between countries. For some countries, the whole of the generating capacity of an installation is counted as CHP, even if only a small part of the heat produced is used. For the UK, for schemes that are CHP in part only, the corresponding portion of generating capacity is included rather than the entire capacity.

Departmental Overtime

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the average number of hours of overtime worked each week by the private office staff of the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs. [25827]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 28 January 1998]: It is an accepted feature of work in the Private Office that staff will be required to work additional hours. This continues to be the position.

Research Masters

Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made by the pilot scheme for research masters; and if she will make a statement. [29392]

Mr. Battle: Four of the Research Councils have been supporting over two hundred students each year on research Masters or "MRes" courses on a pilot basis. This is the third year of the pilot, and there are currently some 235 students on over 30 courses.

Continued monitoring by the Research Councils indicates that many courses are proving very successful. Some others—for a variety of reasons—have not fared so well. Overall, the MRes continues to make good progress, with courses providing high-quality research training and the students positive about their experience. The development of the MRes is further proof of the ability of UK higher education institutions to provide innovative, high-quality education. I am placing a copy of the latest report from the Research Councils, together with a related press statement, in the Library.

Given the experience with the pilot and the need to subject all expenditure to periodic review, I have decided that the individual Research Councils should now be free to develop the MRes by reviewing and redefining their support. Reflecting the success to date, I would expect the level of the Councils' support for MRes studentships to continue at least to match the 1997 intake. The MRes must remain a self-standing degree, and its design, including a significant research component, should also be unchanged.

I believe that these guidelines will provide the necessary framework for the Councils and institutions to develop the MRes for the future. The Councils will continue to monitor the MRes to determine, over time, its role in preparing students for employment and for a PhD.

Trade Fairs

Ms Hewitt: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will announce support for any more trade fairs abroad in the year ending 31 March 1999. [29391]

Mrs. Beckett: I announced in September the first parts of our programmes for supporting trade fairs, seminars and missions abroad. I am pleased to announce support in principle for another 146 trade fairs and 151 outward missions in the period up to 31 March 1999.

I will place lists of the additional events in the Library of the House and inform organisations that bid for support, Business Links and recipients of my Department's Overseas Trade Magazine.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list those visits made within the United Kingdom since 1 May on which (a) she and (b) other Ministers within her Department have been accompanied under Rule 83 of the Ministerial Code indicating (i) those persons accompanying and (ii) the cost to public funds. [23753]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 19 January 1998]: Between 1 May 1997 and end January 1998, Mr. Beckett accompanied me on 17 visits, of which 6 involved a cost to public funds. The total cost was £238. In addition, the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney) has been accompanied by Mrs. McCartney on 2 visits, neither involving cost to public funds.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28060]

Clare Short: We respond to all letters received no matter in what language. We normally reply in English.

Phare and Tacis

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement about the future of the Phare and Tacis democracy programmes. [28853]

Clare Short: An independent evaluation of the Democracy Programme was conducted late last year, confirming the value of the programme. A new draft Regulation—the legal basis for the Programme—has been tabled before the European Council, extending the programme to the former Yugoslavia. The Funds—15 mecu per annum in 1998—are to be disbursed in two ways. Firstly, small-scale NGO projects, i.e. projects initiated by beneficiaries, will be selected by the network of EU Delegations. Secondly, a limited number of larger-scale projects will be developed, including a continuation of the joint programme with the Council of Europe and joint programmes with other international organisations. The Commission is to tender the contract for the administration of the programme, currently being run by the European Human Rights Foundation. The Commission does not intend for there to be a call for proposals in 1998.

The Democracy Programme is complemented by the LIEN and Phare Partnership programmes, enhancing the capacity of non-governmental organisations and civil society development.

East Timor

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to respond to the appeal by José Ramos-Horta for emergency food relief for the Indonesian territory of East Timor. [28636]

Clare Short: We have not provided relief but we have been monitoring the situation closely. We believe the situation is now under control. We are maintaining regular contact with our Embassy in Jakarta and the Office for Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs in Geneva to keep the situation under review.

Honduras

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the current British aid projects in Honduras. [28639]

Clare Short: Current British aid projects in Honduras are as follows:

(i) Technical Cooperation programme

Project	DFID contribution
Conservation and Silviculture of Dry Zone Forest Species Project (CONSEFORH)	881,000
Wood Use Centre Project	1,090,000

(ii) Joint Funding Scheme project (50:50 funded by HMG and NGO)

Based (UK)	Tutorial Learning system (SAT) in the Honduran Mosquita	45,456

The tables do not include Joint Funding Scheme projects being supported through the block grants provided to certain agencies, as information on these will not be available until mid 1998.

Nicaragua

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what are the aims of the Nicaragua Land Resources Monitoring Project. [28645]

Clare Short: The aim of the Land Resources Monitoring Project is to establish a sustainable remote sensing capability in the national environment protection agency, Ministerio Nicaraguanse de Recursos y del Ambiente (MARENA), which will provide information on forest fire risk, fire events and forest condition.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list DFID's contribution to technical co-operation projects and to joint funding scheme projects in Nicaragua by individual project. [28644]

Clare Short: The information is in the table.

(i) Technical cooperation programme projects

Land Resources Monitoring Project	513,000

(ii) Joint Funding Scheme projects (funding shared 50:50 between HMG/NGO)

Y Care International	Integrated Rural Community Development Programme	122,883

The table does not include Joint Funding Scheme projects being supported through the block grants provided to certain agencies, as information on these will not be available until mid 1998.

Mexico

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the current British aid projects in Mexico. [28641]

Clare Short: Current British aid projects in Mexico are as follows:

(i) Technical Cooperation Programme Projects

Project	DFID contribution
Livestock Production and Management of Rural Resources Project: Phase III	1,449,021
Chiapas Cloud Forest Conservation and Rural Development Project	1,453,889
Quintana Roo Forest Management Project	1,336,500
Manantlan Biosphere Reserve Management Project	1,014,000
Chimalapas Campesino Ecological Reserve Project	2,204,215
Focus on Results (Government Efficiency) Project	310,000
Strategic Assistance to the Programme of Modernisation of Public Administration 1995/2000	157,292
Impact of Wastewater Irrigation on Groundwater in Mezquital Valley	317,010
South East English Language Teaching Project	94,000
Western English Language Teaching Project	108,475
South Central English Language Teaching Project	141,400
Health Economics/Financing Project	273,000
Health Know How Programme	500,000

(ii) Joint Funding Scheme Projects (funding shared 50:50 between HMG/NGS).

Current Joint Funding Scheme projects in Mexico are being supported through the block grants provided to certain agencies. Detailed information on these will not be available until mid-1998.

Sudan

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the aid given to the Sudan Government in each of the last three years, indicating the form in which that aid was given. [28664]

Clare Short: The bilateral aid programme to Sudan was suspended in 1991. Since then, UK aid has been given through United Nations and international non-government agencies to the poorest and most vulnerable groups in Sudan suffering the effects of famine and the continuing civil war. Details over the last three years are as follows:

Bilateral emergency aid to Sudan 1994–95 to 1996–97

Year	Food aid[1]	Disaster relief[2]	Refugee relief	Disaster preparedness	Total
1994–95	5,314	5,634	995	7	11,950

[1] DFID uses the World Food Programme as a means of delivering emergency food aid. These amounts are recorded as bilateral food aid as DFID has control over the decision to provide such food aid to a particular destination. Regular non-emergency provisions of food aid are not included in this table.

[2] DFID uses certain UN Agencies as a means of delivering emergency assistance to individual countries. These amounts are recorded as bilateral disaster relief as DFID has influence over the use and destination of funds.

Inter-governmental Documents

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff she employs in the translation of inter-governmental documents; and what the forecast cost is for 1997–98. [28557]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development does not employ any staff for this purpose.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

M6-M65 Link

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the cost per mile of constructing the M6-M65 link. [26407]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Work on the M6-M65 link was carried out under a traditional form of civil engineering contract, produced by the Institution of Civil Engineers, under which payment is based on the actual, rather than estimated, work undertaken. It is unlikely that the contractors will submit their final accounts for the scheme until next year. Those accounts will then be examined and settled appropriately. It would be premature at this stage to forecast what the final cost is likely to be.

M11 Link Road

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what compensation has been paid in respect of the M11 Link Road construction, to (a) household and (b) commercial properties broken down by local authority area; and if he will make a statement on forecast future expenditure on compensation. [27356]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is not available in the form requested. The total compensation so far paid by the Highways Agency or its predecessors is £25.65 million principally for the purchase price of land and properties acquired under blight provisions and by discretionary and compulsory purchase. These acquisitions have been in the areas of the present London Boroughs of Redbridge, Waltham Forest, Hackney and Newham. A further £16 million has been allowed for the settlement of claims under the statutory compensation code which are currently under negotiation or which may be made in future. These figures do not include third party claims made against contractors, which they or their insurers settle direct with the claimant.

Environmental Protection Act

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which sections of the Environment Act 1995 have not come into force; and when he expects to bring them into force. [27448]

Angela Eagle: The sections of the Environment Act 1995 which are not fully in force and which are the responsibility of my Department are: parts of sections 57, 58 and 60 (contaminated land and abandoned mines); and parts of the schedules attached to sections 116 (application of certain other enactments to the Crown) and 120 (minor and consequential amendments, transitional and transitory provisions, savings and repeals). We expect to commence the remainder of sections 58 and 60 shortly. We will reach a view on when to commence the remainder of section 57 after the Comprehensive Spending Review, as announced in my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment's answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mrs. Ellmon) on 22 December 1997, Official Report, column 439. We expect to commence paragraph 1 of schedule 21 in April. Decisions on the timing of other outstanding provisions in the schedules have not yet been taken.

Road Accidents (Goss Moor)

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many road traffic accidents have occurred at Goss Moor on the A30 during the last 10 years. [28179]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is available only for personal road injury accidents. This is shown in the following table.

Number of accidents on the A30 in the Goss Moor area: GB 1987–96

Accidents

Year	Fatal	Serious	Slight	All

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the rates of absenteeism in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date; and if he will make a statement. [26655]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on Tuesday 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 116.

Radioactive Material

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he or his Department has made of the effectiveness of Statutory Instrument 3031 (1993) in respect of the Trans-frontier Shipment of Radioactive Waste Regulations; [28228]

(2) what meetings ministers or officials of his Department have had since October 1997 to discuss the implications for the import and export of nuclear materials to and from the United Kingdom of the definition of radioactive waste adopted by the Government from EC Directive 92/3 (Euratom). [27991]

Angela Eagle: Each proposal for the import to or export from the UK of radioactive waste is considered on its merits by the relevant competent authority and no assessment of the overall effectiveness of SI 3031 has been carried out.

The import and export of radioactive waste, including the scope, definitions and requirements of current EU and domestic legislation, are currently being considered in the context of the implementation into UK law of the revised EU Basic Safety Standards Directive (96/29 Euratom). The matters to which my hon. Friend refers will be included in a public consultation document covering some aspects of the implementation of the new Directive, which will be issued later this year.

Road Accidents (Alcohol)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many alcohol-related accidents occurred in Wales in 1997; what percentage of total road accidents they represent; and if he will make a statement. [27972]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In 1995, the most recent year for which estimates of drink drive accidents are available for Wales, there were an estimated 540 personal injury, alcohol-related road accidents. They represent 5% of all personal injury road accidents in Wales in that year.

The estimate of alcohol-related accidents includes those accidents in which one or more of the drivers or riders of motor vehicles involved refused to give a breath test specimen or failed either:

(i) a breath test by registering over 35 microgrammes of alcohol per 100 millilitres of breath, or

(ii) for fatalities, a blood test by registering more than 80 milligrammes of alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood.

For some accidents neither of the above test results are available even though a driver or rider involved was over the legal limit. The Department's estimates are, therefore, adjusted to allow for this.

Speed Limits

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to give local authorities a general power to introduce speed limits of less than 30 mph in residential areas and erect signs to indicate this zone; and if he will make a statement. [27943]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport has confirmed that we intend to remove the need for local highway authorities to obtain central government consent to make 20 mph speed limits and to sign them appropriately. My officials are currently working on the necessary secondary legislation.

Biological Diversity

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the Government's fulfilment of their obligations under the Convention on Biological Diversity; and if he will make a statement. [28315]

Angela Eagle: The Government's actions under the Convention on Biological Diversity are set out in the United Kingdom's First National Report to the Convention on Biological Diversity dated 31 December 1997, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. We also look forward to continuing the further implementation of the Convention at the next Conference of the Parties which is to be held from 4 to 15 May 1998 in Bratislava.

Thorne and Hatfield Moors

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultations he has held with the Countryside Commission over the future of Thorne and Hatfield Moors; what advice the Commission gave; and if he will make a statement. [28458]

Mr. Meacher: The Secretary of State has not been involved in any consultations with the Countryside Commission regarding the future of Thorne and Hatfield Moors.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28388]

Angela Eagle: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, including its Agencies, has no record of any Brazilian Mahogany being acquired or specified for procurement during 1996 and 1997.

Eurostar

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about the delay in introducing the Eurostar through service from Manchester to the Channel Tunnel; and if he will make a statement. [28330]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My department has received a number of representations about regional Eurostar services in recent months. These services are the responsibility of London and Continental Railways Ltd. through their subsidiary Eurostar (UK) Ltd. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made a statement on the Channel Tunnel Rail Link on 28 January 1998, Official Report, columns 661–74, in which he stressed the importance of protecting the excellent Eurostar service.

Gas Installers

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what representations he has received concerning training and assessment for gas installation industry employees; and if he will make a statement; [28461]

(2) what plans he has to review the appropriateness of current training and assessment courses for CORGI registration by gas installers; [28463]

(3) if he will make it his policy to review the current methods of certification and public identification of degree of competence of gas installation workers; [28464]

(4) what representations he has received concerning a review of the gas installation industry; [28566]

(5) what plans he has to initiate a review of the gas installation industry; [28567]

(6) what plans he has to meet industry representatives, gas suppliers and other Government departments to discuss the adequacy of current legislation and HSE criteria in controlling the non-registered and DIY gas installers; [28568]

(7) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the relationship between gas-related health and safety incidents, and the professional qualifications of the installation operatives. [28570]

Angela Eagle: The Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994 (as amended) place a requirement on anyone carrying out gas work to be competent to do so. This requirement applies equally to gas fitters registered with the Council for Registered Gas Installers (CORGI) or people carrying out so-called 'DIY' work. The standards against which competence is assessed are set out in the Health and Safety Commission's (HSC) 1988 Approved Code of Practice (ACoP), 'Standards of Training in Safe Gas Installation'. This ACoP has a special legal status.

If an individual is prosecuted for a breach of the 1994 Regulations, and it is proved that the relevant provisions of the ACoP were not followed, a Court may find that individual at fault, unless they can demonstrate that the law was complied with in some other way. At the beginning of this year a new nationally accredited certification scheme for individual gas fitting operatives came on stream. It will run in parallel with the ACoP scheme until the latter is phased out on 31 July 1998.

The 1994 Regulations, which are enforced by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), also place a statutory duty on any employer with employees carrying out gas work, or self-employed person performing such work, to be a "member of a class of persons approved for the time being by the HSE".

Currently, CORGI is the only body to seek and obtain approved status.

Following a review of CORGI in 1995, the HSE published new criteria for approved bodies which charged them with introducing a new nationally accredited certification scheme for gas operatives by January 1998. This scheme sets out the national standards against which individual gas fitting operatives are assessed for competence.

On 13 January 1998, the Health and Safety Commission agreed that there should be two reviews of the statutory registration scheme, together with a comprehensive look at the underpinning legislation, ie the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994 (as amended). The first review, which will start shortly, will look at the extent to which, and how well, CORGI has met the criteria issued in 1995. It will also draw up the criteria against which registered bodies will need to operate for the period 1 January 1999 to 31 December 2001. It is expected that the outcome of this review will be known in the Summer.

The second review, which will start later this year, will be a comprehensive evaluation of the statutory registration scheme taking particular account of the impact of the new nationally accredited certification scheme. Running in parallel with this will be an examination of the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994 (as amended). The outcomes from these overlapping reviews should be known by December 2000. All interested parties will be invited to contribute to these latter reviews.

In relation to the causes of gas incidents and the competency of gas fitting operatives, the HSE has established an industry working group to consider this. The group, comprising industry representatives, trade unions and consumer groups, is looking at the causes of gas-related carbon monoxide incidents with a view to taking preventive measures where appropriate. BG

Technology has also initiated an industry-wide research project to look at a range of gas safety issues. This initiative is being supported by a number of government departments as well as by the British gas industry. The initiative includes a specific project on incident data analysis.

I recently met representatives from the Carbon Monoxide and Gas Safety Society (CO Gas), CORGI, and Carbon Monoxide Support (CO Support). These meetings have included a range of issues relating to gas safety matters, including the competence of gas fitting operatives.

I also replied on behalf of the Government in the adjournment debate on 21 January 1998, Official Report, columns 973–77 dealing with carbon monoxide poisoning, initiated by my hon. Friend the Member for Houghton and Washington, East (Mr. Kemp).

In conclusion, although there are plans to review the statutory registration scheme for gas installation businesses and the related legislation, there are no plans to initiate a review of the gas installation industry.

Conservation

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government will give English Nature powers to require landowners to manage sites so as to maintain their conservation value. [28900]

Angela Eagle: The Government are currently considering how best to improve the protection and management of Sites of Special Scientific Interest. This will involve examining the powers available to English Nature. Officials are preparing a consultation paper seeking views.

Diabetic Drivers

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Fermanagh and South Tyrone (Mr. Maginnis), of 15 January 1998, Official Report, column 259, what studies his Department has evaluated into the proportion of collapses at the wheel caused by hypoglaecemia. [27561]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 9 February 1998]: A 1983 review of police reported accidents by the then Senior Medical Adviser at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency found that insulin-treated diabetes was responsible for 17 per cent. of 1,600 reported accidents involving collapse at the wheel in which the driver survived. A review of 100 of those accident cases revealed that 35 per cent. of the drivers had suffered from altered consciousness and 62 per cent. from complete loss of consciousness. More generally, the Secretary of State's Honorary Advisory Panel on Diabetes and Driving constantly reviews research findings on the road safety aspects of driving by diabetics treated by insulin as part of their role in advising the Department.

Departmental Computers

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the cost of the current computer system installed in (a) the Department of the Environment and (b) the Department of Transport; to what extent the two systems were compatible; and what is the cost of enabling the two systems to work together. [28889]

Angela Eagle: The cost to install the existing office automation (OA) systems in the Department of the Environment was £7.55m, and in the Department of Transport was £6.29m. The new office automation system is effectively a merger of the two existing systems using the best aspects of each and the estimated cost is £3.6m. Incompatibilities existed between the two systems at technical, user, document interchange and the cultural level. Although both systems used similar technology there were a number of differences in the detail of their technical architectures.

Departmental Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the oral answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 834, what plans he has to set departmental targets for (a) Ministers and (b) civil servants to reduce car mileage; and if he will make a statement. [28921]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 10 February 1998]: As part of the Government's commitment to reduce over-dependency on the car a "Guide to Green Transport Plans" was issued to all Departments in September 1997 which set out practical and comprehensive advice on how to set up plans to minimise the effect of staff travel on the environment. We have not set departmental targets for Ministers or for civil servants to reduce car mileage. My Department is discussing with other Government Departments what targets would be appropriate for the setting of Green Transport Plans for all main Government buildings.

Road Safety

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what studies his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) evaluated regarding the incidence of road accidents among young drivers in the first year after passing the test; and what comparisons it has made with the statistics for Northern Ireland following the introduction of probationer status there. [28883]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 10 February 1998]: A study was undertaken for the Department by the Transport Research Laboratory into about 29,000 drivers (of all ages) who took their driving test on certain days in 1988–89 including the subsequent accident history of those who passed the test. The Queen's University, Belfast, undertook a study of "restricted" drivers in Northern Ireland (those in their first year after passing the driving test) for the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland in 1992–93. The latter study included a comparison with the findings of the Great Britain study and found no evidence that the number of accidents in the first year in Northern Ireland was reduced by the existence of the "restricted driver" regulations.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will announce the latest available figures from the survey his Department is presently conducting into the incidence of drugs in fatal road accident victims; and if will make a statement. [29038]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The survey, over a three year period, started in October 1996. A copy of the Department's report on the interim results, to 7 January 1998 has today been placed in the Library.

It is too early to draw firm conclusions from the findings, although general trends so far remain very consistent. Fuller results will be needed before the Government can consider and propose any measures that may appear to be necessary. Further findings will be published when we can reach a firm view.

Screening devices which may be suitable for detecting the presence of drugs in motorists are to be trialled by four police forces for a short period from mid-March. The trials are intended to establish whether the screening devices are sufficiently robust and practical for the conditions likely to be encountered at the roadside—not to test for the presence of drugs.

Traffic police from the Cleveland, Lancashire, Strathclyde and Sussex forces will ask motorists to volunteer to be tested—the police have no power to require anyone to undertake such a screening test. Volunteers names or their car registrations will not be recorded. Police will not test those who are obviously impaired through alcohol or drugs—they will be dealt with using existing powers.

Water Levels

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the specialist hydrography departments which were consulted by the National Rivers Authority in formulating the recommendations on areas of high natural dispersion in 1994. [28490]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The National Rivers Authority (now subsumed into the Environment Agency), made recommendations on areas of high natural dispersion (HNDAs) according to criteria agreed by Government and the water industry regulators.

The Environment Agency, as the primary regulatory body, itself has considerable expertise in the field of hydrography. In formulating recommendations on HNDAs, it drew on information (including hydrodynamic modelling data for a significant proportion of the UK's coastline) available from internationally accredited research organisations such as Delft Hydraulics, MAFF/CEFAS, Water Research Centre, Hydraulics Research Wallingford and relevant university departments.

Green Belt

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the Prime Minister's oral statement of 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 1046, regarding the increase in the area of green belt land since 1 May 1997, if he will list (a) the location and size of the increase, (b) the area of green belt land on which planning permission and inspectors' approval has been given since 1 May 1997, (c) the percentage of total green belt land these figures represent and (d) the equivalent figures for the year prior to 1 May 1997. [28489]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 10 February 1998]: There has been a net increase of nearly 4,000 hectares of Green Belt in adopted development plans since 1 May 1997. The Hertfordshire Structure Plan, adopted in January, provides for an addition of 5,400 hectares to the Green Belt, as well as the deletion of 800 hectares from the Green Belt to the west of Stevenage. The exact boundaries of these changes have not yet been established at local plan level. Other Green Belt deletions have been adopted in the Bradford local plan (ca. 90 hectares) and in the Newcastle Unitary Development Plan (543 hectares).

We do not have comprehensive information available on decisions taken by local planning authorities affecting the Green Belt, and it would be disproportionately costly to collect it. However, the figures for individual planning cases which the Secretary of State has called in and for which permission has been granted since 1 May 1997 amount to less than 100 hectares. For cases where permission has been granted by planning inspectors following appeal, the figure is about 320 hectares. In most or all of these cases the physical development itself is likely to have covered only a small proportion of that area. In addition, on 28 July 1997 the Secretary of State issued his decision granting permission for the Birmingham Northern Relief Road (BNRR), the route of which passes through Green Belt in the West Midlands conurbation. The total land taken for the BNRR (including temporary acquisition for the purpose of construction) is 623 hectares, of which 600 hectares are in the Green Belt. One hundred and seventeen hectares of the total land taken for the road are to be used for landscaping to mitigate its environmental impact; and land temporarily acquired will be returned to the landowner following completion of construction works.

The total Green Belt in England was estimated as 1,555,700 hectares in September 1993. More recent figures are not yet available. Against that total, the net increase represented by development plan changes referred to above is equivalent to about 0.25 per cent.; and the total area of Green Belt affected by the planning permissions referred to in the previous paragraph represent around 0.06 per cent.

Equivalent information for the year prior to 1 May 1997 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Montserratian Evacuees

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the advantages of continuing the payments of special grants to local housing authorities for accommodation provided to people who have been evacuated from the island of Montserrat. [28987]

Ms Armstrong: The special grant scheme for the provision of accommodation for Montserratian evacuees that we introduced last October closed at the end of January and a report has been laid before the House today. We have concluded that grants should continue to be made available to authorities in England for accommodation provided until 31 March 1998. We will make a further special grant report to the House in due course.

Housing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many units of social housing have been built in the Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council area in each of the last five years. [27570]

Mr. Raynsford: The table shows figures of housebuilding completions (i.e. new build only) as reported to the Department by Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council and the National House Building Council:

Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council: social housing new build: completions
Number of dwellings

Year	Registered social landlords: housing associations	Local authority

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is the total number of registered homeless people in the Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council area; [27571]

(2) how many people have been accepted onto the homeless register of Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council in each of the last five years. [27574]

Mr. Raynsford: The table provides the available data on the numbers of households accepted as homeless and in priority need under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 and 1996 Housing Acts in Basingstoke and Deane for the calendar years 1992 to 1996 and the first 9 months of 1997.

Year	Homelessness acceptances
1992	159
1993	206
1994	185
1995	175
1996	175

Under Part VI of the Housing Act 1996 authorities must establish and maintain a housing register for the purpose of allocating their housing accommodation but there is no statutory obligation for local housing authorities to hold a register of homeless applicants. Accommodation secured as a discharge of a homelessness duty need not be a tenancy allocated under Part VI of the 1996 Act.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many properties formerly owned by Government departments have been made available to (a) the council and (b) housing associations in the Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council area in the last three years; [27572]

(2) how many properties formerly owned by government departments have been made available to (a) the council and (b) housing associations in the Fareham Borough Council area. [28368]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in the last three years from (a) public bodies, (b) voluntary organisations, (c) the private sector and (d) local associations in the Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council area about housing needs for that area. [27576]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State receives a number of representations from groups and information is not held centrally in the format requested about housing needs.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the number of properties that are underoccupied in Basingstoke and Deane Borough; and if he will make a statement. [27916]

Mr. Raynsford: Neither the Secretary of State nor the Local Authority have made any robust assessment of the number of properties that are under-occupied in Basingstoke and Deane Borough.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people are on the housing transfer list of the Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council; and what were the equivalent figures at the same time in each of the last five years. [27917]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the number of properties that are underoccupied in (a) Eastleigh Borough, (b) New Forest District, (c) Havant Borough and (d) Test Valley Borough; and if he will make a statement. [28149]

Mr. Raynsford: Neither the Secretary of State nor the Local Authority have made any robust assessment of the number of properties that are under-occupied in (a) Eastleigh Borough, (b) New Forest District, (c) Havant Borough, (d) Test Valley Borough.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the total numbers of registered homeless people in the (a) Eastleigh Borough (b) New Forest District, (c) Havant Borough and (d) Test Valley Borough council areas. [28150]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 126.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many units of social housing have been built in the (a) Test Valley Borough (b) Eastleigh Borough, (c) Havant Borough and (d) New Forest District Council areas, in each of the last five years. [28135]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The table shows figures of housebuilding completions (i.e. new build only) as reported to the Department by these local authorities and the National House Building Council.

Green Ministers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which Government Departments were not represented at Ministerial level at the last meeting of the Green Ministers. [25939]

Mr. Meacher [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1998, c. 324]: At the last meeting of Green Ministers on 18 December all Government Departments were represented except for the Scottish Office and the Law Officers' Departments. Most were represented at Ministerial level, but because of unavoidable other commitments the Lord Chancellor's Department, Home Office, Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Social Security, and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food were represented by officials.

PRIME MINISTER

North Shropshire

17. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Prime Minister when he next plans to pay an official visit to North Shropshire. [26909]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to do so.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Publications

Mr. Gale: To ask the President of the Council if she will list, by title, the publications produced under the authority of the Privy Council Office between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998. [26319]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: My department's only publication in the period in question was "Tackling Drugs Locally", a report by the Social Policy Research Centre of Middlesex University commissioned by the Central Drugs Co-ordination Unit.

TREASURY

Corporation Tax

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the corporation tax yield in the last financial year for which data is available, from companies in the ranges of profitability (a) under £300,000, (b) £300,000 to £600,000, (c) £600,000 to £1.5 billion and (d) above £1.5 billion. [26710]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table gives latest figures of companies' corporation tax liability after allowing for tax suffered abroad and before any deduction for income tax suffered at source, analysed by size of taxable profit.

Taxable profit[1]	Corporation tax liability (£ billion)
Under £300,000	3
£300,001 to £600,000	1
£600,001 and above	23½

Tobacco Duties

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much extra revenue would be raised between 6 April and 1 December 1998, over and above current plans, if tobacco duties were increased by 5 per cent. in real terms from the start of the 1998–99 financial year; and if he will give the same figures on the basis of the higher rates commencing in (a) May, (b) June, (c) July, (d) August, (e) September, (f) October and (g) November 1998. [26351]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Developing Country Debt

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to use the forthcoming G8 summit in Birmingham to highlight the problems of developing country debt. [27171]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The G8 Summit in Birmingham will discuss a range of key global economic issues, including the problems facing poorer developing countries. For many of these countries, a key difficulty is unsustainable debt. I will also be discussing this with my Finance Minister colleagues in preparing for the Summit discussion between Heads of State and Government.

Unemployment

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if participants in each of the four New Deal options will be counted as unemployed for the purposes of the claimant count; and if they will fall within the Labour Force Survey measure of unemployment. [28491]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dennis Roberts to Mr. David Willetts, dated 11 February 1998:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked the Director of the Office for National Statistics to reply to your recent question on participants in each of the four New Deal options being counted as unemployed for the purposes of the claimant count; and whether they will fall within the Labour Force Survey measure of unemployment. The Director has asked me to reply in his absence.

All New Deal participants will remain in the claimant count whilst they are on the Gateway programme. Once a claimant leaves JSA to take-up one of the four New Deal options they will cease to be included in the claimant count.

Of the four New Deal options, only those taking up the full-time education or training option may be classified as ILO unemployed in the Labour Force Survey, though this will be dependent on their job search activities satisfying the definition of ILO unemployment. This counts as unemployed people who are: a) without a paid job; b) available to start work within the next two weeks and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained. Generally though, those on the full-time education or training option will be counted as economically inactive in the Labour Force Survey, rather than ILO unemployed or in employment.

Those taking up the New Deal employment option will be recorded in the employment statistics as employees (or self-employed) and those on the Environmental Task Force and voluntary sector options as on Government-supported programmes.

ONS is committed to presenting and explaining the effects of New Deal as the policy is implemented.

Abortions

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many legal abortions were performed in 1996 (a) with anti progesterone and (b) without overnight stay on women resident in each (i) health region and (ii) district health authority; and how many in each case involved (1) NHS hospitals, (2) NHS agency arrangements and (3) other purchasers. [28002]

Mr. Darling: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given. The tables referred to in the letter have been made available in the Library.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Jenny Tonge, dated February 1998:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent question on legal abortions in 1996.

The information requested is shown in the attached tables.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the weekly numbers of conceptions that end in termination. [28858]

Mr. Darling: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 11 February 1998:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to answer your question on the number of weekly conceptions that end in termination.

In England and Wales during 1995, the latest year for which figures are available, there were an average of 2,988 conceptions per week which resulted in an abortion performed under the 1967 Abortion Act. This figure is estimated from abortion notifications using the stated gestation period and date of abortion to calculate the date of conception. It takes no account of spontaneous or illegal abortions for which no information is available.

Single Currency

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of countries which will meet the Maastricht requirements to enter a single currency in the first wave. [28583]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The decision on which Member States satisfy the Maastricht requirements for participation in Stage Three of EMU will be taken by Heads of State or Government in May.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the United Kingdom has to spend a period of time in the ERM before qualifying for possible entry into the single currency. [28581]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The interpretation of the criteria set out in Article 109j of the Maastricht Treaty is a matter for collective discussion between EU Heads of State and Government when they meet in May to decide which Member States meet the conditions for Stage Three of EMU.

DEFENCE

Trident and Eurofighter

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the percentage of the defence budget to be spent on (a) Trident and (b) Eurofighter in each of the next 12 years. [26478]

Mr. George Robertson: The latest estimate of total Trident procurement costs is some £12.6 billion (1996–97 prices) and the total estimated Eurofighter procurement costs are £15.9 billion (1997–98 prices). Less than 10 per cent. of the Trident costs and around 80 per cent. of the Eurofighter costs will be spent after the end of this financial year. For Trident operating costs and Eurofighter support costs I refer my hon. Friend to the answers I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 1 December 1997, Official Report, columns 21–22, and the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 12 January 1998, Official Report, column 129.

Departmental budgets beyond 1998–99 are being examined in the Comprehensive Spending Review and, for my Department, the Strategic Defence Review. In any event year-on-year spending forecasts for particular projects constitute projections and assumptions which inform advice to Ministers on the affordability of the defence programme. The percentage of the defence budget involved would therefore be withheld under exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Tomahawk Missiles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what percentage the cost of Tomahawk missiles being purchased for installation in Royal Navy submarines differs from the latest batch of Tomahawk missiles being purchased by the United States Government. [27506]

Mr. Spellar: We do not know what price the United States Government are paying for their Tomahawk missiles.

Armed Forces (Pay)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the lowest hourly rate of pay received by a member of the British armed forces, calculated on the basis of annual pay divided by the average annual hours worked. [28619]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The Armed Forces are paid according to daily rates of pay, for 365 days a year, whether they are working or not, in recognition of their unlimited liability for duty. We do not record the hours worked by individuals each day.

Agricultural Holdings

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will identify where in the National Asset Register his Department's agricultural holdings are listed. [28737]

Mr. Spellar: Agricultural holdings are not separately listed in the MOD element of the National Asset Register; rather, they are included within the Land and Buildings entries for various Top Level Budgets. This reflects the fact that their main use from a Defence perspective is as training areas. A detailed listing of each individual asset would not have been practical for the purpose of the National Asset Register. For clarity, therefore, the assets have been aggregated to make the information manageable.

Savings

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest percentage estimates based on funds held in all forms of financial and saving institutions of those households with (a) no savings and (b) savings (i) up to £2,000, (ii) between £2,000 to £5,000, (iii) £5,000 to £7,000, (iv) £7,500 to £10,000, (v) £10,000 to £20,000, (vi) £20,000 to £40,000, (vii) £40,000 to £60,000, (viii) £60,000 to £100,000 and (ix) over £100,000. [28975]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

The Family Resources Survey (FRS), a survey of private households in Great Britain, collects data on the amount of money respondents have in different funds, but only for those respondents who are willing to provide an estimate of the value of their total savings and report a value between £1,500 and £20,000. Around 35 per cent. of all households surveyed fall into this category. A detailed breakdown of savings is therefore available only for this group.

Percentage of households with savings between £1,500 and £20,000 in 1995–96 family resources survey

	Percentage of households
No savings	32
Less than £2,000	22
£2,000 but less than £5,000	13
£5,000 but less than £7,500	6
£7,500 but less than £10,000	4
£10,000 but less than £20,000	9
£20,000 or more	14
Total households (base = 26,435)	100

Notes:

1. Types of account included are all bank, building society and Post Office accounts, Tax Exempt Special Savings Accounts (TESSAs), Unit Trusts, PEPs, stocks and shares and National Savings products.
2. The 1995–96 FRS is the latest for which data are available. The figures are based on sample counts and are subject to sampling error and to variability in non response.
3. Figures should be treated with caution. Questions on assets are a particularly sensitive part of the FRS questionnaire and have a relatively low level of response, and hence higher levels of imputation, compared to other parts of the survey. Responses are imputed in around one in ten cases. Evidence also suggests some under reporting of capital by respondents.

Housing Benefits

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what has been the total bill for housing benefit payments in each of the last five years in the Southampton City Council area; [27553]

(2) what has been the bill for housing benefits payments in each of the last five years in the Winchester City Council area. [28334]

Mr. Field [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The information requested is set out in the table.

(2) what has been the bill for housing benefit payments in each of the last five years in the Fareham Borough Council area. [28369]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information requested is set out in the table:

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iraq

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date the existence of a biological warfare programme organised at Salman Park in Iraq was first drawn to the attention of his Department's officials. [26400]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 3 February 1998]: Officials have conducted an extensive search of Foreign office archives. They have been unable to find an answer to my hon. Friend's question. Without information on the background to the question, I do not believe it would be proper to conduct further searches. The cost would be disproportionately high.

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27839]

Mr. Fatchett: Most of my Department's new computer systems are delivered in stages in the UK and at offices overseas. With one recent exception, there is therefore no single commissioning date. The table shows major new systems whose delivery began after 1 April 1993. Other expenditure on communications equipment and information technology is excluded.

Major new FCO computer systems purchased since 1 April 1993

Description	Capital cost: Initial [1] (£ million)	Capital cost: Final [2] (£ million)	Commissioning date: Planned	Commissioning date: Actual
Financial and management accounting system (UK only)	7.15	7.60	April 1996	April 1996

Major new FCO computer systems for purchase in financial year 1998–99

Description	Estimated capital cost (£ million)
Continuing replacement office automation system for FCO and Posts overseas	23.0

Notes:
[1] Estimated at time of project initiation.
[2] Actual on completion of project.
[3] Estimated: project not due for completion until December 1998.

Ministerial Transport

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the cost of (a) Ministerial cars and drivers and (b) the Department's bill for taxis in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year. [27796]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 5 February 1998]:

Year	Ministerial cars and drivers	Taxis
1995–96	362,637	154,871
1996–97	388,757	136,826
1997–98 YTD	[1]254,609	[2]149,819
1997–98 Projected	380,000	179,720

[1] End December 1997.
[2] End January 1998.

Overseas Travel

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list which Ministers in his Department have made overseas visits and to which countries since 1 May. [27820]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 11 November 1997, Official Report, column 502. Visits by Ministers in this Department since then are listed in the following table:

Date	Country	Purpose
Mr. T. Lloyd MP
12–14 November 1997	Sweden	Conference on European arms export controls
17 November 1997	Germany	WEU
23 November 1997 to 2 December 1997	USA, Mexico	Bilateral, United Nations business
17–19 December 1997	Denmark	OSCE Summit
5–11 January 1998	South Africa, Zimbabwe	Bilateral
2–5 February 1998	Macedonia, Albania	Bilateral

Date	Country	Purpose
Mr. D. Henderson MP
9–10 November 1997	Belgium	General Affairs Council
24 November 1997	Belgium	General Affairs Council
7–8 December 1997	Belgium	General Affairs Council
12–13 December 1997	Luxembourg	European Council
15–16 December 1997	Austria, Slovakia	Bilateral
14 January 1998	France	EP Plenary
16 January 1998	Netherlands	Clingendael Conference
Mr. D. Fatchett MP
11–13 November 1997	Azerbaijan	Bilateral
15–21 November 1997	Japan, Korea	Bilateral
26–27 November 1997	USA	To discuss Middle East issues

19–20 January 1998	Algeria	EU Troika Mission
Baroness Symons
6–9 January 1998	Pakistan	Bilateral

Civil Servants

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by grade the number of officials in his Department at grade 3 or above who have (a) taken early retirement, (b) taken official leave, (c) been dismissed, (d) changed jobs within the Department, (e) moved to another Department and (f) been offered and rejected an alternative position (i) within the Department and (ii) in another Department since 1 May. [27460]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: (a) Four FCO officials at grade 3 equivalent and above have retired or have taken early retirement since 1 May as part of an ongoing programme of senior management structure retirements on structural grounds. Their grades were: a DS1, a DS2 and two DS3s. (b) Officers at this level will have taken periods of normal annual leave, but these records are not held centrally. (c) None was dismissed. (d) & (f) About a quarter of the officers at grade 3 and above have changed jobs since 1 May either as part of the normal rotation of ambassadors and other senior staff, interchange with other Government Departments or on promotion. Such moves are planned up to a year in advance especially to/from foreign postings or where training is required. A high level of mobility is a feature of FCO work and roughly a third of all UK based FCO staff change jobs in any given year. Statistics on the precise number of moves and reasons for them could be provided only at disproportionate cost. (e) A DS2 and a DS3 have gone on loan to other Government Departments since 1 May.

Execution (Texas)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he made representations to the United States in respect of the execution of Karla Tucker; and if he will make a statement. [28573]

Mr. Fatchett: Ministers in this Department made no representations to the United States in respect of the execution of Karla Tucker. The UK calls on all countries to abolish the death penalty.

Sudan

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has held with which organisations with regard to prisoners of war in the Yei district of southern Sudan; and if he will make a statement. [28662]

Mr. Fatchett: Our Embassy in Khartoum are in touch with other donors and international agencies about the welfare of these prisoners. We shall continue to support efforts to facilitate access to these people and to persuade their captors, the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA), to move them away from the vicinity of military targets.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government policy towards the Khartoum Peace Agreement. [28663]

Mr. Fatchett: The Agreement contains positive elements, notably the commitments to self-determination and to respect for human rights. But the main group fighting the Government of Sudan, the Sudan People's Liberation Army, is not a party. They prefer to pursue the regional peace initiative of the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development which has the support of the British and other western governments. We have urged the Government of Sudan to demonstrate its commitment to peace by implementation of the Khartoum Agreement's clauses on human rights and by improving its treatment of Southerners. We have yet to see significant progress on this.

Honduras

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's relationship with Honduras. [28640]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We have good relations with Honduras, but look forward to developing them further with the new government of President Carlos Flores. A bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement came into force in 1995. Bilateral trade grew in both directions in 1997, particularly from Honduras to the UK. The UK has a small bilateral aid programme focused on the forestry sector and contributes approximately 15 per cent. of the European Union programme which, at US $100 million a year, is the largest to Honduras.

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library an index to the Amsterdam Treaty on European Union and the revised treaties, including the protocols, authorised by Article 12 of that Treaty, setting down all topics and subjects contained in those treaties as published in the preliminary documentation, and for each entry the current place and the proposed place in the Consolidated Union Treaty by article, paragraph and sub-paragraph reference. [28866]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Command Paper 3780 provides an index to the Amsterdam Treaty (pages 3–6). It also sets out the tables of equivalences relating to the renumbering of the Treaties provided for in Article 12 of the Amsterdam Treaty (pages 67–75). In addition, the Command Paper lists the contents of the consolidated version of the Treaty on European Union as amended by the Treaty of Amsterdam (pages 110–111); and lists the contents of the consolidated version of the Treaty establishing the European Community as amended by the Treaty of Amsterdam (pages 130–133).

Treaties

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what circumstances persons who are not members of Her Majesty's Privy Council are authorised to sign treaties on her behalf. [28947]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Most treaties are signed with Governmental Full Powers either by Ministers or Ambassadors. Membership of the Privy Council is not a factor in the issuing of Full Powers.

The Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties provides that Heads of State, Heads of Government and Ministers for Foreign Affairs are eligible to sign treaties by virtue of their office. Anyone else signing a treaty in articled form requires a formal document known as a Full Power.

In the United Kingdom, the Treaty-making power is vested in the Crown as part of the Royal perogative. The exercise of that power is the concern of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

The United Kingdom has three types of Full Power: (i) Queen's General Full Powers, which are signed by Her Majesty The Queen and empower the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, FCO Ministers of State, FCO Under-Secretaries of State to sign any treaty; and the UK Permanent Representatives to the UN and the EC to sign treaties in their respective fields. (ii) Queen's Special Full Powers, which are issued for the signing of a specific treaty drawn up between Heads of State. (iii) Governmental Full Powers, which are signed by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and are issued for the signing of specific inter-governmental and inter-state treaties.

Immigration

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the percentage refusal rate by entry clearance officers for the last period for which records have been kept for (a) visitors, (b) spouses/fiance(e)s, (c) dependent relatives and (d) businessmen applying to enter the United Kingdom for the posts of (i) Dhaka, (ii) Islamabad, (iii) Lagos, (iv) Sydney and (v) Toronto. [28654]

Mr. Fatchett: Sydney and Toronto do not provide an entry clearance service and figures are therefore shown for Canberra and Ottawa. In 1997, the percentage refusal rate for (a) visitors, (b) spouses/fiance(e)s and (c) dependant relatives applying for entry clearance to the UK for the Posts listed was:

Percentage

Post	(a) Visitors	(b) Spouses/fiance(e)s	(c) dependent relatives
Dhaka	26.8	23.7	14
Islamabad	20.3	n/a	n/a
Lagos	20.8	16.4	16.4
Canberra	0.1	0.01	0
Ottawa	0.61	0.02	0.006

Records differentiating between "visitors" and "business visitors" are not maintained. Lagos do not record refusals of (b) and (c) separately.

Inter-governmental Documents

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff he employs for the translation of inter-governmental documents; and what the forecast cost is for 1997–98. [28556]

Mr. Fatchett: This Department employs 13 translation staff. The unit forecast cost for 1997–98 is £357,140.29 which includes salary and related costs plus overheads.

Russia (Religious Freedom)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, at the forthcoming EU-Russia Summit, he will raise the issue of the religious freedom legislation in Russia. [28977]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We have been assured by the Russian authorities that implementation of the law on freedom of conscience and religious association will not contravene Russia's international human rights obligations. Flexible application will be the key. We understand that formal regulations designed to assist provincial officials to implement the complex law are currently under discussion in Moscow. In the meantime, the Russian Ministry of Justice has issued informal guidelines which seem to be less restrictive.

Neither final dates nor a final agenda have been agreed for the EU/Russia Summit. But if by then we have evidence that the law is restricting religious freedom, then I will consider raising the matter under the broad umbrella of human rights issues.

Overseas Visits (Political Advisers)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 30 January 1998, Official Report, column 438, if he will list those occasions where his political advisers undertook overseas visits at public expense; and what was the cost of and reason for each visit. [28516]

Mr. Robin Cook: It is established practice, as with the previous Administration, for Special Advisers to accompany me, and, on occasion, other FCO Ministers, on certain overseas trips in order to advise on policy matters. Since 1 May, a Special Adviser has accompanied me or another FCO Minister on 17 occasions for this purpose. The majority of these were on RAF flights, the real marginal additional expense of their travel could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mexico

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's relations with Mexico. [28642]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Relations with Mexico have strengthened since President Zedillo came to office in December 1994 and a bilateral Joint Action Plan was signed in January 1996.

As a member of NAFTA, the OECD and APEC, Mexico is an important partner for the UK on a range of international issues. Our dialogue includes thorough exchanges on human rights.

The UK is the second largest foreign investor in Mexico; major investors in 1997 include BAT ($1.1 bn) and BOC (Gases), leading a consortium which will build a $1 bn nitrogen plant. Mexico is our third largest export market in Latin America. Exports grew by 35% in 1997, but we have less than 1% of the market.

We have consistently supported the development of closer EU/Mexico relations. Following the signature of the EU/Mexico Agreement last December, we are using our EU Presidency to lay the groundwork for negotiations on trade liberalisation.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how many times he has visited the Millennium Dome Project site in Greenwich since 2 May 1997. [28024]

Mr. Mandelson: I visited the site of the Millennium Experience on 19 June and 23 September 1997.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will estimate the reduction in the cost of the Millennium Dome if it had been built on a green field site. [26724]

Mr. Mandelson: The site for the Millennium Experience was chosen after an open competition conducted by the Millennium Commission. None of the four sites shortlisted by the Commission was in a green field location. One of the main reasons that the Commission selected the Greenwich peninsula above the other shortlisted sites was the greater lasting legacy provided by the enormous regenerative benefits that the project would bring to one of the poorest areas of London and a site that had lain derelict and polluted for over 20 years.

The costs of bringing the Millennium Experience site up to an acceptable condition for redevelopment are being borne by English Partnerships, the Government's regeneration agency. This forms part of their overall regeneration plan for 300 acres of the Greenwich peninsula. The infrastructure costs specifically associated with the Millennium Experience site, including services, landscaping, a new pier and other works fall to the New Millennium Experience Company. These are in the region of £30 million.

It would however be misleading to seek to compare these costs directly with the costs associated with developing a green field site. All sites have individual characteristics that affect planning requirements, their amenity value and the costs of development.

CABINET OFFICE

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28932]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 10 February 1998]: I travelled by train to undertake engagements in Yorkshire and Merseyside.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27838]

Mr. Hoon: The major computer systems that have been purchased or developed by the Department, its agencies and non departmental public bodies in the last five financial years and projected purchases for 1998–99 are shown in the following tables.

For both the Lord Chancellor's Department Headquarters and the Court Service future IT services will be provided under existing or planned Private Finance Initiative Agreements and charged on a usage basis.

Court Dress

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the reasons (a) which require solicitor QCs to wear wigs in court and (b) prohibit solicitor advocates from doing so. [27829]

Mr. Hoon: Queen's Counsel, barristers and solicitors all continue to wear their traditional court dress. The fact that solicitors may now exercise rights of audience in the higher courts is not a reason to extend the wearing of wigs in court. Queen's Counsel, whether barristers or solicitors, have their own distinctive ceremonial and court dress, which differs from that of the outer Bar. There is no reason why solicitor QCs should be expected to dress differently from other QCs.

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many solicitor QCs have been appointed in each year since 1995; and what criteria are used to select them. [27835]

Mr. Hoon: In 1995 solicitors became eligible to apply for appointment as Queen's Counsel. In 1996 no solicitors were appointed. In 1997 two solicitors were appointed Queen's Counsel. The criteria used to select all applicants for appointment as Queen's Counsel are:

(a) sound intellectual ability and a thorough, comprehensive and up-to-date knowledge of law and procedures in the fields in which they practice;

(b) outstanding ability as an advocate, to a standard to be expected of Queen's Counsel in the applicant's field of practice;

(c) total professional integrity;

(d) the highest professional standing, having gained the respect of the Bench and the profession in observing the advocate's duty to the Court and to the administration of justice, while presenting their client's case and being formidable, fair and honourable as an opponent;

(e) maturity of judgment and balance;

(f) a high quality practice based on demanding cases which will allow the full measure of these qualities to be demonstrated;

(g) the ability to maintain appropriate professional relationships with lay and professional clients.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many honorary appointments as QCs have been made in each year since 1992; and what criteria are used to select them. [27836]

Mr. Hoon: Honorary silk is awarded on the personal recommendation of the Lord Chancellor after consultation within the judicial, professional and academic community. The criterion employed is exceptional distinction in the law outside the field of advocacy.

In the years 1992–1997, there were six, seven, four, three, six and eight appointments respectively. The names of those awarded honorary silk this year will be announced on Thursday 9 April.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many solicitors applied for silk in each year since 1995; and what percentage were successful. [27834]

Mr. Hoon: Five solicitors applied for silk in 1995 and none were appointed in 1996 (zero per cent.). In 1996 six solicitors applied and two of them were appointed in 1997 (thirty three and a third per cent.). Seven solicitors applied in 1997 and the names of successful applicants will be announced on Thursday 9 April.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to interview candidates for silk. [27830]

Mr. Hoon: My noble and learned Friend has no plans to interview applicants for Queen's Counsel. Silk is primarily an award for forensic advocacy, and an interview would not be an appropriate test of this.

Unified Legal Profession

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of a unified legal profession. [27831]

Mr. Hoon: The Government's assessment is that the balance of advantage at present lies in allowing a continuation of the separate legal professions.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will estimate the rates of absenteeism in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date; and if he will make a statement. [26669]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Rates of sick absence in the Civil Service during the 1995 calendar year were contained in a report by OHSA Limited which the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster placed in the House Library on 24 June 1997, Official Report, column 419. For information in respect of the 1996 calendar year, I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster gave on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 116.

Similar information is not available for the 1997 calendar year but approximate figures of the percentage of working days lost through sick absence in the 1996–97 and 1997–98 financial years are given in the table. The information given for the Lord Chancellor's Department Headquarters (a) includes figures for those non-departmental bodies which are staffed entirely by departmental employees, and Associated Offices.

[2] To December 1997.

Notes:
1. Figures are presented as percentages.
2. Figures are based on average numbers of staff in post in the organisation for the period.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of the cost of (a) Ministerial cars and drivers and (b) the Department's bill for taxis in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year. [27791]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Ministerial cars and drivers cost the Department £97,056 in 1995–96, £132,086 in 1996–97, £113,494 in 1997–98 to date with an estimate of £151,325 for 1997–98 full year. The Department does not separately record expenditure on taxi fares and figures could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Translation Facilities

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what plans there are for the provision of simultaneous translation equipment in the House of Commons; what estimates he has made of the set-up costs; and if he will make a statement. [28559]

Sir Sydney Chapman: The House of Commons Chamber is already equipped with simultaneous translation facilities. Simultaneous translation equipment will be provided in the multi-purpose conference room in Portcullis House. An estimate of the set-up costs has not yet been made.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what translation (i) facilities are available and (ii) staff are employed in the House of Commons on (a) a permanent basis and (b) an ad hoc basis; and what the forecast running costs are for 1997–98. [28558]

Mr. Kirkwood: There is no simultaneous translation service provided by the House and therefore no translation staff are employed by the House of Commons Commission. Arrangements for simultaneous translation facilities and interpreters in the gallery, to be hired on repayment, can be made on request to the Serjeant at Arms Office. The forecast running cost for 1997–98 is approximately £230.

WALES

Literacy Targets

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what extra support he has given to local educational authorities in Wales to meet literacy targets. [27643]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 675.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to improve (a) public awareness of and (b) treatment of prostate cancer. [27494]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Advice on the early signs of prostate cancer is provided in a leaflet available from the Health Promotion Wales and the NHS.

The introduction of prostate cancer screening has been considered by the Government's National Screening Committee. They concluded that current evidence does not support a national screening programme for prostate cancer in the United Kingdom. Current screening technologies (including the PSA Test) have a limited accuracy that could lead to a positive result for those without disease. Follow-up procedures could thus cause unnecessary harm to healthy individuals.

There is at yet no national consensus of medical opinion about the correct management of early localised prostatic cancers. In Wales, specialists in prostate cancer are working together to develop standards and guidelines as part of the work of our Cancer Services Co-ordinating Group (CSCG). This work, which will draw on the studies world-wide, will ensure that we have a high quality consistent service for men across Wales based on the best clinical evidence. During the course of 1998 CSCG plan to issue in Wales standards for urological cancers which will include prostate cancer. The development of guidelines will ensure that all patients should have access to appropriate diagnostic and treatment facilities. When these guidelines are published steps will be taken to ensure dissemination to the NHS in Wales.

Housing

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homes were deemed unfit for human habitation in Wales last year. [27493]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The most recent Welsh House Condition Survey was conducted in 1993. From this, it was estimated that 151,200 occupied first homes, 13.4 per cent. of the total, in Wales were unfit. A further Welsh House Condition Survey is in progress. Information from this survey is expected to be available later this year.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new homes are planned in each of the unitary authorities in 1998. [28242]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Information on the number of new homes planned for 1998 in each unitary authority is not available. However, Tai Cymru will start 2,300 social housing units in Wales in 1998–99. I will write to the hon. Member with the number of planned starts by registered social landlords in each unitary authority as soon as the information is available, and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Workers Educational Association

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from the Workers Educational Association in North Wales concerning the financial difficulties facing the WEA; what response he has made to them; if he will provide assistance to them; and if he will make a statement. [27477]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received two letters from the Workers' Educational Association in North Wales concerning the financial difficulties facing the WEA; the first, from the Director, has been sent a reply; the second from the Chairman is still being considered and I will reply in the near future.

I am considering what more can be done to support the Workers' Educational Association in North Wales.

Structural Fund Reform

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the impact on Wales of reform of European Union structural funds. [28167]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend has received representations, from The Welsh European Partnership (an umbrella organisation representing local partners), Confederation of British Industry, National Trust and others.

Welsh Office officials are currently undertaking a consultation exercise to seek the views of the partnership. This will contribute to the UK negotiating position on the Structural Fund Regulations, due to be published in draft in March.

Meningitis

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of meningitis have been reported in Wales during the past three years; what proportion of these cases were students; and if he will make a statement. [27971]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The number of notifications of meningitis, by age, is given in the following table. Occupation is not routinely collected.

Statutory notifications of meningitis from Wales (all causes) by age group

Farmer Suicides

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to reduce the suicide rate of farmers in rural Wales; and if he will make a statement. [28008]

Mr. Win Griffiths: This is an area of great concern for us and we are taking a number of measures to address it.

The Mental Illness Strategy provides a framework for a comprehensive range of services to be developed across Wales, to provide care and support locally. We have set as a health target the reduction in the number of suicides across Wales. More specifically, we have funded the Institute of Rural Health in Gregynog to undertake a study of suicide in Powys, in order to examine specific Welsh factors leading to such tragedies. We have been involved also in a conference to identify the causes of rural stress and to create a strategy to tackle the issues. The Rural Stress Information Network was launched on 4 December 1996 and provides a vital link between Government, farming industry and the voluntary sector on all matters concerning rural stress.

Education Spending

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the change in the level of education expenditure by each local education authority in the last year against the previous year. [28012]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is given in the following table.

Local Authority Expenditure on Education[1]

Information Technology

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to expand provision for information technology in Welsh schools. [28174]

Mr. Hain: The Grants for Education Support and Training programme includes provision of up to £3.35 million for LEAs in Wales in 1998–99 to support a comprehensive package of training in the use of information and communications technologies in school, and the purchase of computer equipment. Individual Authorities were informed of their allocations on 30 January.

In addition, we are making available a further £3 million to allow LEAs to implement the National Grid for Learning in Wales. Authorities are currently drawing up their plans for submission to the Department. I expect to announce details of allocations as early as possible in the new financial year.

Teachers in Wales will also benefit fully from the Lottery-funded ICT training which will be available from 1999, subject to the passage of the National Lottery Bill currently before Parliament.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the average net annual income from 1989–90 to 1996–97 of (a) dairy farmers, (b) beef farmers, (c) sheep farmers and (d) farmers in less favoured areas in Wales. [28273]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Net Farm Incomes are calculated for specific farm types from the Farm Business Survey. The figures for the types closest to those requested are set out in the following table.

Levels of net farm income in Wales

Income (£000/farm)

Farm Type[1]	1989–90	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
All Dairy	21.7	19.0	20.2	28.4	28.4	21.9	35.3
SDA Sheep	9.3	10.8	16.5	15.1	17.7	8.6	18.2
LFA Cattle and Sheep	8.8	7.6	12.3	13.1	16.0	7.0	18.4

[1] Figures for SDA Beef cannot be published due to the small size of the sample.
Figures for 1996–97 are currently being collated, and the indices will be published in a Statistical Release on Thursday 12 February 1998. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House. Cash figures will be available in Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom 1996–97 which will be published by MAFF in March.

Commercial Airfields

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the commercial airfields in Wales in order of activity; and if he will make a statement. [28612]

Mr. Hain: The following aerodromes in Wales have been licensed by the Civil Aviation Authority for the purposes of instruction in flying and for the public transport of passengers: Cardiff; Welshpool; Swansea; Hawarden; Caernarfon; and Haverfordwest.

I understand that the Civil Aviation Authority does not require or maintain comprehensive records of airport activity in discharging its aerodrome licensing function. The above list represents in descending order the information available to the CAA on the level of activity at each aerodrome.

I am currently engaged in a series of meetings with airport and airline owners and operators to investigate the scope for developing scheduled air services in Wales.

Planning

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning (a) house building on brownfield sites and (b) out-of-town shopping centres. [28613]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy (PG(W):PP), May 1996, includes guidance on the use of brownfield sites to reduce pressure for development on greenfield sites. It stresses the need for local planning authorities to make full and effective use of land within existing urban areas and to take account of the scope and potential for rehabilitation, conversion, clearance and redevelopment.

PG(W):PP also provides advice on retailing, setting out a commitment to sustain and enhance town centres. It introduces the sequential test which favours locating new shopping in town centres, then on edge of town centre sites and, only where those options are not available, on out of centre sites with good access to public transport.

Green Barriers and Green Belt

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning (a) green barriers and (b) green belts. [28616]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy, May 1996, encourages local planning authorities to consider designating Green Belts in the more heavily populated parts of Wales, and I have written to each authority asking them to give the matter serious consideration. Local planning authorities may include appropriate policies and proposals for green barriers in their development plans.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28384]

Mr. Win Griffiths: None and none.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the home energy efficiency scheme. [28614]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

This scheme operates throughout Great Britain and is the responsibility of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. It pays grants for improving the energy efficiency standards of the homes of vulnerable householders. I am reviewing the scheme at present, to find out if it is helping the right people in the most effective way. I will consider carefully any options for developing the scheme which flow from the review.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Drugs

6. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to her oral answer of 14 January 1998, Official Report, column 337, what action she has taken to investigate alleged links between (a) drug traffickers, (b) the IRA and (c) Sinn Fein and Direct Action Against Drugs. [26870]

Mr. Ingram: The investigation of any criminal activity is a matter for the RUC who rigorously investigate all drug trafficking and other illegal activity regardless of what individuals or organisations may be involved.

Downe Hospital

7. Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made towards the provision of funding for the third stage of the Downe Hospital. [26871]

Mr. Worthington: The Down Lisburn Trust has asked to proceed to a Full Business Case and public funding for a new Downe Hospital. I need to decide what public investment will best serve the local population well into the next century. My officials have been examining the proposal and I will be considering this analysis in the next few days. When I have made my decision I will discuss the way ahead with the Trust and the hon. Gentleman.

Police (Complaints)

8. Mr. Lock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to improve procedures in relation to complaints against the police; and if she will make a statement. [26872]

Mr. Ingram: The Police (Northern Ireland) Bill, which is currently before this House, contains new provisions on police complaints. These will give effect to a new, radical system in Northern Ireland under which an independent Police Ombudsman will have complete control of the process.

Tourism

9. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tourists and others visited Northern Ireland in the last period for which figures are available. [26873]

Mr. Ingram: During 1996, following the cease-fire breakdown, 1.44 million visitors came to Northern Ireland, including 298,000 pure holiday visitors. Current estimates for 1997 suggest a decline on 1996, with total visits falling to around 1.4 million, and pure holiday visitors to 248,000.

School Funding

11. Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the implementation of the Coopers and Lybrand report on school funding. [26875]

Mr. Worthington: Following consultation with schools, significant first steps towards achieving commonality in Local Management of Schools funding formulae, which is the main thrust of the Coopers and Lybrand Report, have now been set in place for 1998–99. All formulae will, in practice, operate on the same basis in relation to small schools and premises costs. Some progress has also been made in moving towards common age weighted pupil units, and further consultations and discussion with education interests on this and on the targeting Social Need element of the formula will take place in the coming year.

Peace Process

12. Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made in the all-party talks. [26876]

14. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on current progress in the peace talks. [26878]

22. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the current peace talks. [26887]

25. Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress in the peace process. [26890]

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer my hon. Friends to the oral answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn).

13. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the outcome of the Northern Ireland peace talks in London. [26877]

Marjorie Mowlam: The talks at Lancaster House focused on relations between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland and the totality of relationships between the two Irelands. The process benefited from the change of location which helped to increase the pace of negotiation as we approach the May deadline.

17. Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions she has had with the Irish Government concerning the Northern Ireland peace process. [26881]

Marjorie Mowlam: I have regular discussions with the Irish government on the peace process, both within the talks process and on other occasions, in pursuit of our shared goal of achieving a widely acceptable political accommodation and a lasting peace.

18. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are her objectives for the outcome of the peace process in Northern Ireland. [26882]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Talks have the purpose of achieving a new beginning for relationships within Northern Ireland, within the island of Ireland and between the peoples of these islands, and to agree new institutions and structures to take account of the totality of relationships.

A political settlement which addressed these relationships to the satisfaction of the talks participants and won widespread support throughout the community in Northern Ireland could bring about political stability and greater democratic accountability, and underpin lasting peace.

19. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on policy with regard to paramilitary organisations' participation in the peace talks. [26883]

Marjorie Mowlam: A number of parties which participate in the political talks have links with paramilitary organisations. No party is entitled to participate if it is in breach of the Mitchell Principles of democracy and non-violence. In assessing that, we shall take account of the activities of organisations with which the party concerned has a clear link, as we did in considering the position of the Ulster Democratic Party.

21. Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the role of the Framework Document in achieving consensus between Unionists and Nationalists in the talks process. [26885]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Government put forward the Framework documents in 1995 as a package that in their view had the potential for securing consensus, but they made clear that they would accept a range of other outcomes broadly acceptable to other participants in talks. We naturally remain committed to the principles reflected in the Framework documents, but the final outcome depends on where participants themselves can find consensus.

Economic Strategy

15. Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what initiatives she has undertaken in the course of her review of the economic strategy for Northern Ireland. [26879]

Mr. Ingram: We are working hard to improve the competitiveness of the Northern Ireland economy and tackle its underlying problems, particularly long-term unemployment. The New Deal, to which we are committing £140 million in Northern Ireland over the life of this Parliament, will greatly increase the opportunities for the long-term unemployed.

I have set in train two important reviews. The first is looking at the Department of Economic Development's structures for delivering industrial support services and will be completed next month. The second is a fundamental re-examination, in partnership with the private sector, of the economic development strategy needed to take Northern Ireland into the new millennium. It will be completed by the autumn of next year.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

16. Mr. Martin Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will assess the advantages of the early release of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright. [26880]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State considered all aspects of these cases in October 1997 at the five year point in their sentences. She decided that they had not yet served a period that reflected the gravity of the crime they committed and asked that the cases be considered again in October 1998.

27. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the impact of recent court decisions on the release date of Guardsman Wright. [26892]

Mr. Ingram: On Monday 26 January the High Court in Belfast granted leave for a judicial review of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's decision of 27 October 1997 that the cases of the Guardsmen should be referred back to the Life Sentence Review Board in October 1998. No date has yet been set for the hearing.

Sports Council

20. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to allocate sufficient funding to the Sports Council of Northern Ireland for it to provide comparable specialist and competition facilities to those in Great Britain. [26884]

Mr. Worthington: The provision of specialist and competition facilities comparable to those in Great Britain is being pursued under proposals for the United Kingdom Sports Institute. Funding for the Institute will be drawn from the National Lottery.

Mr. Kevin Barry Artt

23. Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she consulted the Attorney-General (a) before making a public statement relating to the extradition of Mr. Kevin Barry Artt from the United States and (b) instructing Northern Ireland's Director of Security to discuss the case with Mr. Artt's solicitors. [26888]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Any public comments that the Secretary of State made were in accordance with normal Government policy on such cases, namely that bail in Artt's case is a matter for the US authorities, whose policy, as I understand it, is to oppose bail in extradition cases. Also, it remains our policy that time served abroad by prisoners at large from the UK does not normally count towards sentences served in this jurisdiction. At the Secretary of State's request the Director of Security in the NIO, who was accompanying her in America, met Artt's attorney to listen to and pass on their representations.

Nursery Education

24. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on nursery education in Northern Ireland. [26889]

Mr. Worthington: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Murphy).

Local Government

26. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress with transferring responsibilities to local government in Northern Ireland. [26891]

Marjorie Mowlam: If widely acceptable arrangements can be agreed in the talks process it is the Government's intention to transfer a wide range of responsibilities to new democratically elected institutions in Northern Ireland.

Road Investment

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on road investment in the current and next two financial years. [26874]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Our intention is to spend approximately £155 million and £145 million on road investment in 1997/98 and 1998/99 respectively. The level of funding for 1999/00 is dependent on the outcome of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review.

Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she intends to review the role of the Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company. [29277]

Marjorie Mowlam: Yes. I have initiated a review of the Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company and I plan to announce the outcome later this year.

Council of the Isles

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, when she last met the representatives of political parties, they discussed the concept of a Council of the Isles. [26865]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The paper 'Propositions on Heads of Agreement', which was tabled in the talks on 12 January, put forward, amongst other things, the idea of an intergovernmental Council to deal with the totality of relationships. This is akin to the idea of a Council of the Isles. The idea was discussed in the talks on 28 January.

Grammar Schools

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the percentage of children in Northern Ireland who attend grammar schools. [26886]

Mr. Worthington: Some 41 per cent. of schools pupils aged 11–18 attend grammar schools i.e. 35 per cent. of pupils aged 11–16 and 72 per cent. of pupils aged 16+.

SCOTLAND

BSE

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effect which the phasing out of support for the rendering sector will have on (a) the viability of the knackery sector and (b) the number of fallen beasts which are buried on farms. [24388]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 21 January 1998]: The support was a transitional measure to enable the industry to adjust to the new circumstances after 20 March 1996. The impact will be a matter of economic adjustment among the various sectors of the meat industry affected. Information on numbers of fallen beasts buried on farms is not available. My officials monitor the situation, however, and have been informed by the enforcement authorities that there is no noticeable increase in the illegal disposal of fallen animals.

Civil Service Staff

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of Civil Service staff of grade 5 and above within his Department (a) have spent their entire civil service career within his Department, (b) have had secondments to (i) the private sector and (ii) other departments and (c) have come from other departments. [26025]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 28 January 1998]: Of the total number of Senior Civil Service staff within my Department at 31 December 1997:

(a) 66% have spent their entire civil service career within The Scottish Office;

(b) (i) 11% have had secondments to the private sector;

(ii) 13% have been seconded to other Departments; and

(c) 10% have come from other Departments.

[percentages have been rounded to the nearest whole number].

In addition, 47 per cent. of Senior Civil Service staff within my Department, including some from each of the above categories, have experience of work in other public sector organisations or the private sector prior to their joining the Civil Service.

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27847]

Mr. Dewar: The information for my Department and its agencies is set out in the table. Computer systems with a capital cost of under £250,000 have been excluded. The costs shown are capital purchase cost including VAT. Information relating to NDPBs is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28385]

Mr. Dewar: A Supplementary Notice regarding protecting the environment is issued by The Scottish Office with the terms and conditions of all contracts which requires suppliers to satisfy themselves that no product supplied to the Department contains materials derived from threatened species or threatened environments.

My Department has neither specified nor acquired any Brazilian mahogany in 1996 or 1997.

Public Opinion Research

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many contracts for public opinion research his Department has awarded since 1 May; if he will indicate the (a) purpose, (b) cost, (c) value and (d) duration of each contract; and which companies (i) bid for and (ii) were awarded each contract. [28874]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 10 February 1998]: My Department has not let any contracts for public opinion research since 1 May 1997. The Government are, of course, keen to consult with the public wherever appropriate and my Department does seek to assess the impact of current policy initiatives through its programmes of research.

Water Industry

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of water charges in current prices and the percentage annual change for each region of Scotland for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [28553]

Mr. Macdonald: The figures are as in the following tables.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current proposed price changes for water services in Scotland; and when he will complete his examination of water charges submitted by the water authorities. [28555]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend is giving full and detailed consideration to this matter.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of investment in water services in current prices and the percentage annual change, in Scotland, by region, for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [28554]

Mr. Macdonald: Since taking over water services in April 1996, the water authorities have made investment plans which cover the whole of their areas, and are not disaggregated to former regional areas.

Local Government Officials

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received concerning employment issues at West Dunbartonshire Council; and what discussions he has had with (a) COSLA, (b) West Dunbartonshire Council and (c) Unison concerning the procedures for terminating the contracts of senior council officials. [28590]

Mr. Macdonald: One letter has been received by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. No discussions have taken place with the above bodies concerning the procedures for terminating contracts of senior council officials since, as independent corporate bodies, local authorities have powers to appoint officers on such reasonable terms and conditions as they think fit. In doing so they are, of course, required to comply with employment law. Ministers have no locus to intervene in such matters.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines he has issued with reference to safeguarding the non-political status of senior council officials; what is the role of councillors in respect of the termination of employment contracts for senior council officials; and what guidelines he has issued regarding the termination of employment contracts for senior council officials. [28589]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government believe it is important that councils and the public can rely on politically impartial service from senior local government officials, and that councils respect the political neutrality of officials. The political activities of certain local government officials are restricted by Part 1 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 and by regulations made by the Secretary of State under that Act. Scottish Development Department Circular 28/89 advised local authorities of the effects of the 1989 Act and letters of 25 April 1990 and 1 August 1990 from the Scottish Development Department advised local authorities about the regulations made under the 1989 Act. I have arranged for copies of these to be placed in the Library of the House. The Government intend to review the number and level of local government officers covered by political restrictions.

Councillors, as employers, have a role should they consider there is the need to terminate the contracts of Chief Executives or chief officers. Local government, through COSLA, have in place agreed procedures which allow councillors to report such matters and participate in any investigating and disciplinary committees which are set up. However, given the unique position of Chief Executives, arrangements are in place between the local authority employers and staff associations for any proposed disciplinary action to be investigated by an independent third party.

No guidelines have been issued by central government regarding the termination of employment contracts for senior council officials. This is a matter for local authorities themselves and would depend on the terms and conditions on which the appointment had been made.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what role he has in respect of breaches of (a) the National Code of Local Government Conduct and (b) the Conditions of Service for Chief Officials of Local Authorities (Scotland). [28591]

Mr. Macdonald: The Secretary of State has no role in respect of breaches of the National Code of Conduct. Neither has he any role in respect of breaches of the conditions of service for local authorities' chief officials which are entirely matters for local authorities as the employer.

The Government are, as part of our consideration of the ethical framework for local government in the light of the third report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, considering what changes may be necessary to the code of conduct for councillors and how a revised code might be enforced.

Council Houses

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each unitary local authority the number of council houses affected by (a) dampness and (b) condensation at 31 March 1996. [28982]

Mr. Macdonald: The table sets out local authorities' estimates of the position, as at 31 March 1996.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef on the Bone

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many butchers have been (a) cautioned and (b) prosecuted for selling beef on the bone; and if he will make a statement. [28004]

Mr. Rooker: Enforcement of the prohibition on the sale of bone-in beef by butchers is the responsibility of local authorities. I am not aware that any butchers have been cautioned or prosecuted for such sales although I understand the Procurator Fiscal is currently considering a possible prosecution in Scotland. Normal practice would be to take legal action only after warnings and advice had been given. Local authorities are enforcing the law, and I expect them to continue to do so.

Quarantine Kennels

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the quarantine kennels which have (a) agreed and (b) not agreed to abide by the voluntary code of practice on welfare standards in quarantine kennels. [27941]

Mr. Rooker: Yes.

(a) Those quarantine premises which have agreed to abide by the code are as follows:

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27844]

Mr. Morley: It is not possible to answer this question fully because to do so would incur disproportionate costs. However, the following information may be helpful. This shows the number of IT projects completed/planned in each of the years requested and total costs incurred/estimated for core-MAFF and Agencies. Major project areas where total costs fall in the range £1 million-£10 million, or exceed £10 million, are also identified.

Knackers Industry

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what meetings he has had with representatives of the knackers industry in respect of current problems with the disposal of fallen stock; and if he will make a statement. [26820]

Mr. Rooker: I met representatives of the Licensed Animal Slaughterers' and Salvage Association (LASSA) on 17 November 1997 to discuss the disposal of fallen stock. The Government consider that it is the responsibility of the livestock industry to ensure that there are suitable arrangements for the collection and disposal of fallen stock. My officials are discussing future arrangements with LASSA, the Meat and Livestock Commission and the farming industry.

Sheepmeat

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will investigate the methods of slaughter of (a) chilled and (b) frozen sheepmeat imported into the UK from (i) within and (ii) outside the EU; and if he will assess the extent to which it meets UK slaughtering and meat hygiene standards. [27064]

Mr. Rooker: The slaughter of sheep in all EU Member States must comply with Community rules governing the protection of animals at the time of slaughter and killing (Directive 93/119/EC). It is a requirement of these rules that meat imported from Third Countries must be from animals slaughtered or killed in accordance with conditions equivalent to those applying in the Community. Common rules on meat hygiene standards, applicable in all Member States, are similarly laid down in Directive 64/433/EEC. For imports from third countries, Directive 72/462/EEC requires compliance with equivalent conditions to those in Directive 64/433/EEC for the hygienic production of fresh meat.

Beef Imports

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by what means his Department monitors the beef import regulations introduced on 1 January. [25673]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 28 January 1998]: All consignments of animal products imported directly into the United Kingdom from outside the European Union (EU) are subject to checks at designated Border Inspection Posts (BIPs), including checks on the certification requirements on specified risk materials introduced under the Specified Risk Materials Order 1997. Single Market rules permit only random spot-checks at destination on animal products traded within the Community. Consistent with those rules, a daily sample of randomly selected consignments from EU member states are subject to documentary checks by Ministry officials for conformity with the new unilateral controls relating to specified risk material.

Data on the number, type and results of veterinary checks on beef consignments at Border Inspection Posts, most of which are operated by local authorities, and the number and outcome of the random documentary spot-checks on beef consignments arriving from or via other EU Member States are being collated on a monthly basis from 1 January 1998, the date when the Specified Risk Material Order came into force. No data are yet available. They will be published in the Ministry's BSE Enforcement Bulletin which is placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average age of cattle at slaughter from which beef is imported from (a) the Republic of Ireland, (b) the Netherlands, (c) France, (d) Botswana, (e) Namibia and (f) Australia. [20714]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 16 December 1997]: European Community rules do not require the certification or documentation accompanying beef traded within the Community or imported from third countries to include information on the age of animals at slaughter.

The sale of meat for human consumption originating from animals over 30 months old from the Republic of Ireland, the Netherlands or France would be a breach of our legislation. Botswana, Namibia and Australia are exempt from these requirements.

Genetically Modified Food

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Barnsley, Central (Mr. Illsley) of 15 January 1998, Official Report, columns 292–93, when the results of the studies into genetically modified foods listed will be completed; and when they will be made public. [28225]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The requested information on completion dates is given in the table. Once final reports have been received and evaluated, they are made available through the Department's library and their availability publicised in the Government's Food Safety Information Bulletin. This usually occurs within three months of the project completion date. However, publication of results in peer reviewed scientific journals is encouraged throughout the lifetime of the Department's research projects, and in many cases precedes the availability of the final reports.

Indian Restaurants

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will assess the contribution of the Indian restaurant sector to the economy; and if he will make a statement. [25693]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Separate official statistics are not available on this sector of the wider catering market. However, the Department is aware of the contribution of the sector and looks forward to further dialogue with the representative organisations.

HEALTH

Correspondence

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long on average it takes his Department to answer letters from hon. Members; what target date his Department sets; what percentage receive replies within the target date; and what assessment he has made of how long it takes to deliver a letter after it has been typed. [27038]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 2 February 1998]: The Department aims to reply to Ministerial correspondence within 20 working days of receipt; 76 per cent. of letters received replies within that target during 1997; and the average time taken for reply was 19 working days. Replies are posted within one working day of signing by a Minister.

Tobacco and Alcohol

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has evaluated of changes in the level of consumption of alcohol and tobacco by under-age youngsters; and what assessment he has made of the causes of those changes. [27925]

Ms Jowell: Information about the consumption of alcohol and tobacco by young people aged 11 to 15 years is contained in the reports on surveys carried out by the Office for National Statistics on behalf of the Department of Health, entitled: "Young teenagers and alcohol in 1996" and "Smoking among secondary school children in 1996: England".

"Young teenagers and alcohol in 1996" set out the latest biennial teenage drinking figures, and looked for the first time at the social and educational factors associated with young people's drinking. This and other evidence is being considered by the Ministerial Group on Alcopops which will be meeting in the autumn to review the effectiveness of the steps taken so far by the industry to tackle under-age alcohol misuse.

An Office for National Statistics survey "Teenage smoking attitudes in 1996" looked at the smoking behaviour, knowledge and attitudes of secondary school children.

Copies of these reports have been placed in the Library.

District Health Authorities

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a comparative list of district health authorities, or combinations of district health authorities, as constituted before and after 1 April 1996. [28003]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested has been placed in the Library. On 1 April 1996 the 105 district health authorities and 90 family health services authorities were abolished and 100 health authorities were created.

Civil Servants

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many civil servants in his Department at grade 3 or above have (a) resigned, (b) retired before pensionable age and (c) moved to different responsibilities within the Department since 1 May 1997; if he will indicate the Ministers to whom each was responsible; and if he will make a statement. [26925]

Ms Jowell: Since 1 May 1997, at the equivalent to Grade 3 and above in the Department of Health, three civil servants have resigned, three have retired early and none has been moved to different responsibilities. The three people that resigned left this Department in July and August 1997 after serving the normal three months' notice. The three early retirements were planned. All these moves were made without Ministerial involvement.

Radiation

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to commission further research on (a) the health impact of low level radiation and (b) the health effects of internal radiation. [28467]

Ms Jowell: The Department of Health maintains a Radiation Protection Research Programme which funds several projects concerned with the possible health effects from environmental radiation exposure and from exposure to internal radiation. These projects are carried out at various research institutes and universities in the United Kingdom. The National Radiological Protection Board also carries out work in these areas.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the impact of low level radiation on genome stability. [28466]

Ms Jowell: The Department has not commissioned research into the effects of radiation on genetic stability. The Medical Research Council fund work in this field. This is undertaken at their Radiation and Genome Stability Unit at Harwell. The results of this work are published in the scientific press and current information has been considered by the National Radiological Protection Board and made available to the independent advisory Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28386]

Ms Jowell: No Brazilian mahogany was acquired or specified by the Department in the years 1996 and 1997.

This Department follows the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' published guidance in "Green Guide for Buyers Part 1: Policy and Practice". This guidance, while having regard to the need to secure best value for money, requires minimum use of virgin materials, and then only from sustainable sources.

Severn Caseload Scheme

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the Severn caseload scheme at the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital; and what plans he has to expand the scheme across the country. [28286]

Mr. Milburn: No assessment is planned at national level. The scheme will be independently evaluated locally and the findings will then inform local commissioning priorities.

One-to-one midwifery projects such as this are advocated as good practice in "Changing Childbirth", but their introduction is a matter for local commissioners.

Local Government Finance (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the social services SSA and the level of special transitional grant for Buckinghamshire County Council in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99, expressed (i) in cash terms and (ii) per head of population in Buckinghamshire. [28693]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested for Buckinghamshire County Council is as follows:

	1997–98	1998–99
Personal social services standard spending assessment	50.586	53.125
Personal social services standard spending assessment per head of population	106.94	111.94
Special transitional grant	2.356	2.475
Special transitional grant per head of population	4.98	5.21

The Special Transitional Grant is subject to Parliamentary approval.

Deaths (Nuts and BSE)

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths in the UK have been attributed to (a) consumption of nuts and nut products and (b) BSE in each of the last 10 years. [27680]

Mr. Darling: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Andrew Stunell, dated 11 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent question asking for the numbers of deaths in the United Kingdom attributable to (a) consumption of nuts and nut products and (b) BSE in each of the last 10 years.

Deaths in the United Kingdom attributable to nuts and BSE/nvCJD[1], 1993–1996

Year	Nuts	Nut products[2]	BSE
1993	4	n/a	0
1994	1	n/a	0
1995	5	n/a	3
1996	2	n/a	10
1997	n/a	n/a	10

[1] New variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (nvCJD) was identified in March 1996; to date there have been 23 deaths. Although the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC) have concluded that there is convincing evidence that the agents causing BSE and nvCJD are the same, the scientific evidence to date does not tell us anything about the route of infection. SEAC's advice is that the most likely explanation for the nvCJD cases to date is exposure to BSE before the specific bovine offals ban in 1989.

[2] We are unable to identify nut products.

Data for years prior to 1993 can only be retrieved at disproportionate cost.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Office Costs Allowance

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Council what are the higher limits of office costs allowance for hon. Members with disabilities; and what are the assessment processes for qualification to receive such allowances. [28667]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The higher limits are set out in the resolutions of the House of 14 July 1988, Official Report, column 686, and 9 March 1995, Official Report, column 529, and are respectively 2.57 and 1.33 times the standard limit of the Office Costs Allowance. The assessment processes will vary according to the particular needs and circumstances of the hon. Members concerned.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Council what allowance is made for additional costs incurred by hon. Members with disabilities in meeting additional costs of accommodation in (a) London and (b) their constituency. [28668]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: None.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Council what is her policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28062]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Were any such letters received, the Privy Council Office would seek to reply in the language used by the correspondent.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Training Providers (ESF)

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from voluntary organisations that are training providers for people with learning disabilities on the effects of delays of approval of ESF funds. [24357]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Since 1 May 1997, my right hon. Friend has received representations about delays in approving ESF funds from a provider of training to people with learning difficulties in Gloucester and I have received representations from a similar organisation in Milton Keynes. In 1996 the eligible period of spending was extended by six months to June 1997 to avoid the danger of large underspends. The Gloucester project was funded from these underspends to run until June 1997. The extension to the programme will mean later final payments but enable full funding of the project.

The final payment to the Milton Keynes project was delayed because of an appreciation in the value of sterling against the ECU in 1997, which left insufficient funds to pay all claims. It has now received payment in full.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what mechanisms he has put in place to ensure the Government's objective of promoting sustainable development is reflected in the outcome of the comprehensive spending reviews for his Department. [25908]

Dr. Howells: The DfEE Departmental Spending Review is looking at all areas of the Department's activities and expenditure, many of which contribute to sustainable development objectives including improving economic prosperity and ensuring that economic and environmental benefits are available to everyone. The Government's New Deal, including the Environmental Task Force, is a clear example of taking sustainable development and environmental concerns into account in the formulation of policy. However, no specific mechanism has been put in place to consider environmental matters in isolation.

New Deal Hotline

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funding will be allocated to the New Deal hotline; and how many operators there will be in each standard region. [25565]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 26 January 1998]: The New Deal hotline, 0800 163 339, which is the point of contact for participants, employers and providers already involved in New Deal, is an important element in ensuring a quality service to New Deal clients. It will be open between 8am and 6pm and we have initially trained two people per region. We are closely monitoring the demand for the hotline from Pathfinder areas and will adjust the staffing levels accordingly in advance of the national start of the New Deal in April. During the first month approximately 30 calls were received.

There is, in addition, a New Deal information line, 0845 606 2626 which is the main inquiry point for members of the public, employers and providers who would like more details about New Deal. This line is open 24 hours a day and is presently handling 490 calls per week.

New Deal (Cornwall)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many contracts have been (a) awarded, (b) finalised and (c) signed for the New Deal in Cornwall. [25465]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 26 January 1998]: Seven contracts have been awarded in Cornwall and all of these have been finalised. One contract has been signed. In addition 105 employer agreements have been signed with firms and other organisations interested in providing New Deal employment.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many contracts have (a) been awarded at tender, (b) signed at the tender price and (c) signed at a price below tender for the New Deal in Cornwall. [25466]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 26 January 1998]: I can confirm that seven contracts have been awarded from 19 tenders. Six contracts have been agreed at tender price, one at below tender price.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants of jobseeker's allowance restrict their availability for work because of ill health or disability; and how many of these are over the age of 50 years. [26164]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Jim Fitzpatrick, dated February 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question relating to the number of Jobseeker's Allowance claimants who restrict their availability for work because of ill-health or disability and how many of these are over age 50. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Employment Service Chief Executive.

Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations allow people with physical and mental health problems to restrict their availability, providing the restrictions are reasonable in the light of their condition. Jobseekers agree any restrictions with advisers when they draw up their Jobseeker's Agreement when they first claim Jobseeker's Allowance.

Unfortunately, I am unable to provide the precise information you require. We do not hold information about how many jobseekers there are who place restrictions on ill-health or disability and are over 50 years of age. Statistics are available on the number of claims referred to and decisions made by the adjudication authorities where there is a doubt on availability because an unreasonable restriction has been identified. These can be found within the Analysis of Adjudication Officers Decisions, a copy of which is retained within the House of Commons Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Correspondence

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how long on average it takes his Department to answer letters from hon. Members; what target date his Department sets; what percentage receive replies within the target date; and what assessment he has made of how long it takes to deliver a letter after it has been typed. [27041]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 2 February 1998]: The Department target is to respond to letters within 15 working days of receipt. Since the election Ministers have responded to 73 per cent. of letters within their deadline. This includes all Ministerial replies, not only those letters from hon. Members. On average Ministers have responded to all letters in 18.2 calendar days.

No assessment has been made of how long it takes to deliver a letter after it has been typed.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy that he and his Ministers personally read the letters sent to them by hon. Members on constituency matters. [27669]

Dr. Howells: I can confirm that Ministers read all letters sent to them by hon. Members.

New Schools

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department issues on the appropriate size of sites for new schools. [27387]

Mr. Byers: The Department's Building Bulletin 82, Area Guidelines for Schools, was published in 1996. This includes guidance on site areas for new schools.

Foreign Students

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the gross cost of setting up mechanisms for the means testing of citizens of other EU member states to assess their eligibility to pay tuition fees. [27718]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Havant (Mr. Willetts) on 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 191.

NVQ Provision

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to monitor the quality of NVQ provision in the workplace. [27709]

Dr. Howells: The quality assurance of NVQs is primarily a matter for the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority and the awarding bodies. The Department is currently providing £1.5 million to support additional external verification of NVQs by awarding bodies to help in assuring standards of assessment. In addition the delivery of training funded through Colleges and TECs, which includes NVQ provision in the workplace, is inspected by the Further Education Funding Council and the Training Standards Council.

New School (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of Portsmouth City Council's proposals to build a school on the site of the East wing of St. Mary's Hospital in respect of the adequacy of the site for a school of the size proposed. [27885]

Mr. Byers: I can confirm that Portsmouth City Council has put forward a public-private partnership proposal to provide a new secondary school. I understand that the Council is still considering a number of possible sites for the school. As part of the new process for assessing the viability of local authority PPP/PFI projects, the Council's proposal is currently being considered by the interdepartmental Project Review Group. An announcement about approved projects is expected shortly.

Education Budgets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the difference between the education budget and the general schools budget for each local education authority in the country; and how much of that amount was spent on service strategy and regulation activity in the last year for which figures are available. [27500]

Mr. Byers: The following table sets out, for each local education authority in England, the difference between its total education budget and its General Schools Budget, and its Service Strategy and Regulation expenditure for 1996–97.

Welfare to Work

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the contractual arrangement for the delivery of the New Deal services to provide Welfare to Work. [27687]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Miss Anne McIntosh, dated February 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question relating to the contractual arrangements for the delivery of the New Deal. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Employment Service Chief Executive.

There are currently three principal contracting models for delivering the New Deal for unemployed young people:

- a joint venture partnership: where a consortium is formed to deliver the whole of the New Deal in a unit of delivery and the Employment Service agrees with members of the consortium jointly to develop and implement a delivery proposal. The contract is between the Secretary of State (acting through the Employment Service) and lead members of the partnership;
- a single consortium: where a consortium is formed, as above, and the Secretary of State has a single contract with either a designated lead organisation or the consortium which has established itself as a legal entity;
- a series of individual contracts: the Secretary of State (acting through the Employment Service) enters into a series of individual contracts, which in aggregate deliver the full New Deal services required in a district.

I hope this is helpful.

New Deal (Child Minders)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost of training 50,000 child-minders under the New Deal; which organisations will be expected to carry out such training; and how many participants are expected to be (a) young people unemployed for more than six months, (b) single parents and (c) others. [27712]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 237, on the number of young people likely to train as childcare workers under the New Deal for 18–24 year olds. Potentially, participants on the New Deal for long-term unemployed people could also train as childcare workers under these options, and participants on the New Deal for lone parents could be helped to find employment as a childcare worker.

There are different arrangements for training and funding young people to become childcare workers for each of the options for the New Deal for 18–24 year olds. On the Voluntary Sector (VS) and Employment options young people will be provided with work experience by voluntary childcare organisations, and by private and local authority nurseries respectively, which will work with training organisations to enable participants to attend an approved childcare course for at least the equivalent of a day per week. On the Full Time Education and Training (FTET) option young people will attend approved childcare courses provided by training organisations. In addition to the allowances that will be payable to participants on the FTET and VS options, voluntary organisations will be paid a placement fee for each participant in the VS option (the amount depending on contract), employers will receive a job subsidy of £60 per week per participant under the Employment option, and training organisations will receive a fee which is negotiated locally under the FTET option. Organisations providing placements on the VS and Employment options, will also be paid £750 per participant for training. The overall cost will depend upon the level of take up on each of the options.

Post-16 Students

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to establish equity of funding for all post-16 students. [28471]

Dr. Howells: The scope for achieving greater equity of funding is being considered as part of the Department's Comprehensive Spending Review which has not yet been completed.

Lifelong Learning

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what response he has made to the recommendation of the National Advisory Committee on Lifelong Learning on a common inspection framework for schools and further education colleges. [28474]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State intends to set out his proposals for harmonising inspection arrangements in the forthcoming consultation paper on Lifelong Learning.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve the accountability of further education corporations to the communities in which their colleges are located. [28473]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to announce his plans for improving the local accountability of governing bodies of further education colleges in the forthcoming consultation paper on Lifelong Learning.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28377]

Dr. Howells: No Brazilian mahogany was acquired or specified by the Department in 1996 or 1997.

Shropshire LEA

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what additional funding he is making available to Shropshire Local Education Authority; and how the decision was announced. [28451]

Mr. Byers: In response to an application by Shropshire Local Education Authority for assistance with their capital programme, we have made £2.5 million available for essential capital work as Supplementary Credit Approvals of £500,000 for 1997–98 and £2,000,000 for 1998–99. This information was given to the Authority by means of a letter from officials.

Post-compulsory Education

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to establish a national framework for strategic planning of post-compulsory education at national, regional and local levels. [28472]

Dr. Howells: We are considering, with the Further Education Funding Council and the Local Government Association, how to work with them and other partners to develop a more co-ordinated approach to post-16 education.

Gas Installers

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy to provide funding support for the compulsory training of gas installation industry employees. [28462]

Dr. Howells: We have no plans to provide funding support for the compulsory training of gas installation industry employees. It is up to employers and self employed people to pay for the training they need to meet their business needs and to comply with gas safety legislation. The proposed National Training Organisation will assist employers in finding accredited training.

National Curriculum Tests

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research his Department has evaluated on the extent to which the results of National Curriculum tests in English at Key Stage 3 can be used to predict a pupil's achievement in GCSE English examinations. [28793]

Mr. Byers: The Department commissioned a major national project on value added in 1994 which reported last year. The project found that the National Curriculum tests in English at Key Stage 3 were highly related to achievement in GCSE English examinations, but that the average test level across the three core subjects at Key Stage 3 was the best basis for predicting achievement in GCSE English examinations. A copy of the final report is available in the Library.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the agencies commissioned by the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority to evaluate arrangements for statutory assessment at Key Stages 1, 2 and 3 in 1997; what was the cost of each evaluation; when the evaluation reports were (a) made available to the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority and (b) published; and in what ways the evaluation reports have informed arrangements for statutory assessment in 1998, including the content of the tests and arrangements for marking. [28849]

Ms Estelle Morris: The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority commissioned the following evaluations of the 1997 Key Stage 1, 2 and 3 assessment arrangements:

Agency	Focus of evaluation
Institute of Education, University of London	Key Stage 1 assessment arrangements
University of Nottingham	Key Stage 2 assessment arrangements
Social & Market Strategic Research Ltd.	Key Stage 3 assessment arrangements
National Foundation for Education Research	Key Stage 1 English
CFAS, University of Manchester	Key Stage 1 and 3 mathematics
National Foundation for Education Research	Key Stage 2 English
MAK2, University of Leeds	Key Stage 2 mathematics
CRIPSAT, University of Liverpool	Key Stage 2 science
University of Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate	Key Stage 3 English and science

Total budgetary provision in 1997–98 was £270,000. The contracts for evaluation work are tendered annually and the value of individual contracts is therefore commercially sensitive. The evaluation reports were submitted to QCA in September 1997. The six Key Stage subject reports will be published this month and the three Key Stage general reports in March. The evaluations have helped QCA to identify areas of the tests, marking and administrative arrangements which could be strengthened in 1998.

Early Years Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans he has to require LEAs to monitor and provide advisory support to private and voluntary sector providers of early years education; [28902]

(2) what plans he has regularly to monitor the quality of public, private and voluntary sector provision of early years education; [28903]

(3) what plans he has to monitor the quality of and provide support to the private and voluntary early years education place providers in North Yorkshire. [28904]

Ms Estelle Morris: All private and voluntary sector providers included in an Early Years Development Plan and in receipt of grant funding will be subject to regular inspection by a Registered Nursery Inspector recruited, trained and registered by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. Providers registered under the Children Act 1989 will also be subject to the normal inspection arrangements under that Act. We will shortly be consulting on the current regulatory regimes and how to bring them closer together.

The Early Years Development Plan should indicate how local authorities intend to raise standards of provision whilst maintaining a wide range of providers. This should include, among other aspects of quality assurance, details on how progress will be made towards the involvement of a qualified teacher in raising standards in all settings.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans he has to allow LEAs to state a minimum requirement of free places that have to be offered by private or voluntary providers to entitle them to be included in an Early Years Development Plan; [28901]

(2) what is the minimum number of places a private or voluntary provider of early years education has to have in order that they can be included in a LEA Early Years Development Plan. [28905]

Ms Estelle Morris: Providers which satisfy the eligibility criteria can be included in an Early Years Development Plan as long as they have at least one place available for an eligible four year old.

Early Years Development Plans cannot include providers who, in addition to receiving grant, charge parents fees for the minimum early education entitlement of five two and a half hour sessions a week for 33 weeks in a year. Where parents are willing to pay, private, voluntary and independent sector providers can charge for additional services (such as a longer session or associated daycare). However, they must agree with the Partnership a maximum number of places which will be offered to parents giving the minimum early education entitlement for the grant alone, with no requirement on the parent to buy additional services. It will be for the provider and Partnership to agree how many such places will be offered, based on an assessment of local demand, but for the provider to be included in the Plan there must be at least one such place.

Further Education

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to establish a national framework for pay and conditions of service within the further education sector. [28695]

Dr. Howells: Pay and conditions are matters for colleges to decide individually. Colleges are independent institutions, responsible for setting their own pay and conditions. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to remove that responsibility from them.

School Meals

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when school breakfast clubs started. [28812]

Ms Estelle Morris: Whether to organise school breakfast clubs is a matter for local decision. Information about them is not collected centrally.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what monitoring he has evaluated on recent changes in the nutritional values of school meals. [28821]

Ms Estelle Morris: Statutory nutritional standards for school meals were abolished by the previous Administration in 1980. Local education authorities and schools have since been responsible for deciding and monitoring the nutritional values of meals they provide. The Government propose to introduce new nutritional standards and will be consulting on these.

Pupil Statistics

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each local education authority in England, the total number of pupils on the roll of maintained schools in its area for the financial year 1997–98. [28269]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The information requested will be available in the summer.

Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many NVQs were awarded at each of the five levels in the 11 framework areas for vocational qualifications in each of the last three years. [28199]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 10 February 1998]: According to the Qualifications Curriculum Authority (QCA), the numbers of NVQs awarded at each level in the 11 framework areas in each of the last three years are shown in the following tables:

1994–95 Framework Area	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4	Level 5	All Levels

Disabled Students

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to extend the mandatory disabled student allowance to postgraduate students who are not registered for PGCE qualifications. [27501]

Dr. Howells: The Disabled Students' Allowances are part of the mandatory awards system and as such are available to those receiving mandatory awards who are also disabled. Mandatory awards apply to full-time first degree courses and to the post-graduate certificate of education.

The National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education (the Dearing Committee) recommended the extension of eligibility to part-time students, to postgraduates and to those who have become disabled since taking a first degree and who now wish to obtain a different first degree level qualification. These recommendations are currently being considered and we hope to make an announcement later this year.

The Government are sympathetic to the needs of disabled students. We have already announced the ending of means-testing for disabled students' allowances and have also increased the rates payable, including doubling the non-medical personal helpers' allowance.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to support students with disabilities with the costs directly associated with their disabilities on postgraduate legal practice courses. [27502]

Dr. Howells: Disabled people, including those on postgraduate Legal Practice Courses, may be entitled to support from the Benefits Agency. We are still considering a recommendation from the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education (the Dearing Committee) about extending the Disabled Students' Allowances to postgraduate students.

Sheffield Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the amounts held in the accounts of Sheffield TEC. [28233]

Dr. Howells: The latest published accounts for Sheffield TEC provide the following information at the year ended 30 March 1997:

School Security

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will estimate the number of assaults made on teachers by (a) pupils,

(b) parents and (c) others in the last academic year; what assessment he has made of the trends in those numbers; and what plans he has to tackle the problem of assaults on teachers; [28979]

(2) if he will estimate the number of times the police were called to deal with incidents in schools in the last academic year; and what assessment he has made of the trend in the number of such incidents. [28980]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information is not collected centrally on either the number of assaults on teachers or the number of times police are called to deal with incidents at schools. We recently issued guidance, 'School Security: Dealing with Troublemakers', to help schools deal promptly and effectively with such difficult incidents. We have also announced a further programme of grants to help improve security in schools, supporting an extra £22 million of spending in 1998–99.

Student Finance

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if students beginning courses in 1999–2000 and beyond will be eligible to claim travel allowance on the same basis as at present. [29211]

Dr. Howells: We are considering the detail of some of the supplementary allowances for new students in 1999–2000 and beyond, including travel. In considering the arrangements for travel we will have regard to the particular circumstances in Scotland.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment who will be responsible for administering the new hardship loan scheme; how much money in total has been allocated for this purpose; how much each individual student will be able to claim in the form of a hardship loan; if all students who apply will be given a hardship loan; when and how those who take out hardship loans will be expected to repay them; and if he will make a statement. [29212]

Dr. Howells: £5 million has been made available in 1998–99 in England and Wales. New students starting their courses after 1 September 1998 who are eligible for the normal student loan will be eligible to apply additionally for the hardship load, which is discretionary and intended to contribute towards the living costs of students in financial hardship. The amount available to individual students will be £250 per year. The hardship loan will be repayable on an income contingent basis under similar arrangements to the normal loan.

The other points raised are currently being considered and we will be consulting interested parties on the details shortly.

Mines and Quarries

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many improvement notices have been issued against employers relating to the control of dust at work for each of the geographical areas of the Mines and Quarries Inspectorate for each year over the last 20 years. [28637]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has not issued any improvement notices in respect of mines.

For mines, the Coal Mines (Respirable Dust) Regulations 1975 apply and these require the owner of a coal mine to notify HSE's Inspectorate of Mines when the levels of dust exceeds the permitted amount. The information in respect of notifications to HSE's Inspectorate of Mines for each year over the last 20 years for each geographical area could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The HSE has issued improvement notices in relation to the control of dust or other substances hazardous to health in quarries. Details of the numbers of improvement notices issued in each geographical area since 1990 are available and are as shown. The geographical areas represent the current HSE Regional structure.

DEFENCE

Trident

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the cost of the Trident programme in the next financial year. [28205]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 11 February 1998, Official Report, columns 240–41.

Non-career Civil Servants

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many non-career civil servants have been appointed to his Department since 1 May 1997. [25857]

Mr. Spellar: The number of casual, fixed term appointees and special advisers appointed between 1 May and 30 November 1997, which is the latest information available, is 3,032, broken down as follows:

Special advisers: 2

Fixed term appointments: 840

Casual appointments (including sandwich course students): 2,190.

This figure does not include fee earners such as consultants, chaplains and medical staff.

The 840 fixed term appointments includes, for example, management accountants brought in to implement Resource Accounting and Budgeting, and administrative support staff at the Army Personnel Centre in Glasgow. Casual staff are employed for a variety of reasons, for example, to cover temporary increases in workload, maternity or long term sick leave, and in situations where units or establishments are due to close.

Civil Servants

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civil servants in his Department at grade three or above have (a) resigned, (b) retired before pensionable age and (c) moved to different responsibilities within the Department since 1 May 1997; if he will indicate the Ministers to whom each was responsible; and if he will make a statement. [26924]

Mr. Spellar: Since 1 May 1997; (a) no civil servants within the Department at grade three or above have resigned; (b) two civil servants within the Department at grade three or above have retired before pensionable age; (c) nine civil servants within the Department at grade three or above have moved to different responsibilities.

Civil servants are not normally directly responsible to individual Ministers but serve them collectively.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by grade the number of officials in his Department at grade 3 or above who have (a) taken early retirement, (b) taken official leave, (c) been dismissed, (d) changed jobs within the Department, (e) moved to another Department and (f) been offered and rejected an alternative position (i) within the Department and (ii) in another Department since 1 May. [27455]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Since 1 May 1997, two Grade 3 officials within the Department have taken early retirement.

Information on official leave is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

No officials at Grade 3 or above within the Department have been dismissed.

Seven officials at Grade 3 have changed jobs within the Department. One official at Grade 2 has changed jobs within the Department. One official has changed jobs on promotion from Grade 3 to Grade 2.

One official at Grade 3 has commenced a period on loan to another Department.

No officials at Grade 3 or above have been offered and rejected alternative positions either within the Department or in another Department.

Military Assistance Overseas

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 244, if he will make a statement on progress to date on his review into the release of details of military assistance provided to other countries; and when he expects the review to be completed. [28495]

Dr. Reid: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply which I gave him on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 196.

Annualised Budgeting

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what proportion of Ministry of Defence (P E) projects have been delayed by the need to conform to annualised budgeting in each of the years 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97; [28322]

(2) what proportion of Ministry of Defence (P E) projects have incurred cost increases due to delay owing to annualised Ministry of Defence budgeting in each of the years 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96, and 1996–97. [28321]

Mr. Spellar: The most recent report published by the Comptroller and Auditor General on the progress and costs of major projects (Major Projects Report 1996) identified budgetary constraints as a cause of delay on 13 out of the top 25 projects. However, the information on project cost increases is analysed on a different basis and not directly correlated to budgetary constraints.

The forward defence programme is re-costed and, where necessary, adjusted annually to reflect the latest assessment of individual project timescales and costs, and to ensure that the programme remains affordable within projected annual provision.

Information covering the five years in question as to the total numbers of projects which were changed solely to keep within projected annual budgets and any consequent cost increases could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

NATO Headquarters, Gibraltar

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the NATO headquarters in Gibraltar. [28660]

Dr. Reid: As part of the implementation of NATO's new command structure GIBMED, the NATO headquarters based in Gibraltar will close. The UK national headquarters in Gibraltar will continue to be available for NATO use when required, and NATO facilities will also remain based on Gibraltar. The defence and security of Gibraltar will of course remain the direct responsibility of the UK.

Small Training Aircraft

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the small training aircraft the RAF proposes to purchase. [28794]

Dr. Reid: A competition is currently underway to procure flying hours to meet the University Air Squadron and Air Cadet flying requirements. The contract would also cover provision of a range of support services at the University Air Squadron sites. Bidders have offered a choice of aircraft which will be owned by the contractor. We have recently asked the bidders to 'revise or confirm' their prices and aircraft selection will be made following evaluation of their responses taking into account such factors as cost, operational effectiveness, suitability for task and safety. I very much hope that this process will be completed within the next two months.

Coastal Charts

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people have been employed in each of the last three years by the Royal Navy on coastal charts around Scottish territorial waters; what facilities for map making the Royal Navy maintains in Scotland; how many coastal survey charts have been produced by the Royal Navy for Scottish territorial waters in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [28550]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 11 February 1998]: The number of people employed in each of the last 3 years by the Royal Navy on surveys for coastal charts inside the Territorial Waters of the United Kingdom adjacent to Scotland and on the United Kingdom Continental Shelf adjacent to Scotland was:

Year	Number of personnel
1995	13

These figures comprise the complements of the ships and Naval Parties which took part in those surveys. Additionally, in excess of 500 personnel at the UK Hydrographic Office, Taunton, assisted in the compilation and production of charts covering Scottish waters during each year.

There are no facilities for Chart production in Scotland, all such production being carried out centrally at the UK Hydrographic Office at Taunton. The Hydrographer of the Navy maintains a Chart Correction Unit at Faslane which currently employs 4 people.The number of new coastal Charts, and new editions of existing charts, covering UK Territorial Waters adjacent to Scotland which were produced following the surveys referred to above in the last 3 years were:

Year	New Charts	New Editions
1996	7	1

Royal Naval Armaments Depot, Broughton Moor

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will meet representatives of the local community prior to any decisions being announced on the future of RNAD Broughton Moor, Cumbria. [29068]

Mr. Spellar: I have already written to my hon. Friend agreeing to meet Local Authority representatives with him.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) individuals and (b) organisations who have expressed an interest in developing the RNAD site at Broughton Moor, Cumbria. [29066]

Mr. Spellar: Twenty expressions of interest in purchasing all or part of the site have been received since August 1991. Of this total, twelve, comprising one individual and eleven organisations, expressed an interest in developing the site. We have received three other expressions, of which two individuals and one organisation were interested in developing, but not purchasing, the site. I am not releasing the names of the companies or firms concerned under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he intends to announce his decisions on the future of RNAD Broughton Moor, Cumbria; [29067]

(2) what surveys are being undertaken on the alternative disposal uses of Broughton Moor RNAD. [29069]

Mr. Spellar: A professional firm of Chartered Surveyors is currently advising the Defence Estate Organisation on potential alternative uses for the site. In addition, consideration is currently being given to what entitlement, if any, former owners might have under the Crichel Down Rules. When the former owner question has been resolved, it is intended to run a campaign inviting expressions of interest in the site.

AWE Aldermaston

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 12 January 1998, Official Report, columns 132–33, on the cost of decommissioning old buildings and equipment at AWE Aldermaston, when he expects to be able to provide the information. [28226]

Mr. Spellar: It is a convention that detailed information as to the outcome of the Department's Long Term Costings, of which the decommissioning of old buildings and equipment at AWE Aldermaston forms a part, and the projections and assumptions on which they are based, are not published. Accordingly, I am withholding this information under exemption 2, internal discussions and advice, of the Code of Practice on Government Information.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what (a) number and (b) percentage of members of the judiciary and other consultees who were asked for an opinion on the suitability of applicants for silk, declined to express an opinion in the last year for which figures are available. [28176]

Mr. Hoon: Of those asked for an opinion on the suitability of applicants for silk, during the current round, approximately 157 consultees have not commented, which represents 37 per cent. of the total number consulted.

Shrewsbury and Telford County Courts

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what volume of work was undertaken in (a) Shrewsbury and (b) Telford county courts each year since 1990. [27934]

Mr. Hoon: The volume of work undertaken by (a) Shrewsbury and (b) Telford county courts since 1990 is as follows:

(a) Shrewsbury

1990	5,560	4,118	0	0	811	439	46	190

Note:
Bankruptcy petitions include company winding up, creditor and debtor petitions.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what spare capacity there is in Telford County Court. [27933]

Mr. Hoon: Telford County Court has three court rooms that are used approximately 40 per cent. of the time only.

Television Licences

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many summonses for non-payment of a television licence have been heard at (a) Colchester and (b) Harwich magistrates' courts in the past 12 months. [28579]

Mr. Michael: I have been asked to reply.

Information held centrally by my Department on the number of persons prosecuted under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 to 1967 does not identify the offence of television licence evasion separately from other offences under these Acts.

In 1996, there were 922 persons prosecuted (under summons) at Colchester Magistrates' Court for offences under the above Acts. This figure includes intake from the Harwich court, which was amalgamated with Colchester during 1996.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Overseas Visits

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost to public funds of travel by spouses and partners of Ministers of each of the last five years. [25884]

Dr. David Clark: This information is not available [for the whole period requested]. The total cost of Ministerial travel over the last five years was set out by the Prime Minister on 9 February 1998, Official Report, columns 16–17.

CABINET OFFICE

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he has discussed the matters raised with Commissioner Liikanen during his recent meeting with (a) Ministers from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (b) representatives of the Prime Minister's Office. [28740]

Mr. Mandelson: I was accompanied at the meeting by a senior official from UKRep Brussels. The main points arising from my meetings in Brussels have been reported in the normal way.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister without Portfolio in what capacity he recently met Commissioner Liikanen; what matters were discussed; at whose request the meeting took place; from which Department the civil servants present came; and if he will make a statement. [28739]

Mr. Mandelson: I met Commissioner Liikanen in the course of a programme arranged by the UK Permanent Representation to the European Union (UKRep). I discussed with Commissioner Liikanen his responsibilities for budget, management and staffing issues. I was accompanied by a senior official from UKRep.

Florence Lecture

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister without Portfolio in what capacity he gave his Florence lecture in January; at what public expense; and what consultations he had with representatives of the Foreign Office beforehand. [28741]

Mr. Mandelson: I was invited by HM Ambassador, Rome to give the lecture at the European University Institute as the first in a series of lectures to mark the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union. The cost of my visit was approximately £970.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister without Portfolio to what extent his ministerial responsibilities cover relations with (a) the European Union and (b) the European Commission. [28835]

Mr. Mandelson: I am a member of the Ministerial Sub-Committee on European Issues ((E)DOP).

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Housing (London)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year since 1990 the total expenditure for each London borough on construction of (a) local authority, (b) housing association and (c) co-operative housing and in each case the estimate for 1998–99. [27429]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 4 February 1998]: The available information is set out in the table, expressed in financial years. Estimates of expenditure outturn in 1998–99 are not yet available.

Figures for housing associations and co-operatives are not available separately, and cannot be provided at local authority level for years prior to 1993–94.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to respond to the recommendation of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee that the Government should address the circumstances in which radioactive sources should be defined as wastes. [28469]

Angela Eagle: We are considering the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee's advice on the import and export of radioactive waste, which included the question of when radioactive sources are defined as waste, with a view to developing detailed guidance for the regulators. Such guidance will be subject to public consultation.

Vehicle Checks

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how frequently the Vehicle Inspectorate are carrying out vehicle checks at Portsmouth and Poole following consultations with the ferry companies; and what is the difference in the level of checks since last year. [27708]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate Agency, Mr. Ron Oliver, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 12 February 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how frequently the Vehicle Inspectorate are carrying out vehicle checks at Portsmouth and Poole following consultations with the ferry companies; and what is the difference in the level of checks since last year.

During 1996/97 the number of checks were as follows:

Portsmouth: 4 per month

Poole: 2 per month.

We carry out vehicle checks at ports with the agreement of the port authorities and aim to ensure that all ports are treated fairly and equitably in the way we carry out our enforcement activity. Owing to one port requiring us to reduce our activity, we have accordingly regulated vehicle checks at other ports to ensure they are proportionate with the volume of traffic coming in. As a result, the level of checks for 1997/98 is as follows:

Portsmouth: 4 per month until July and thereafter reduced to 2 per month

Poole: 2 per month until December and thereafter reduced to 1 per month

This does not represent a reduction in the level of our enforcement activity as resources will be redeployed on vehicle checks elsewhere.

Asda Development

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce his decision on whether to call in the proposed Asda development in Wealdstone, Harrow. [28565]

Mr. Caborn: The planning application is under consideration and we hope to reach a decision shortly.

Radioactive Material

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if radioactive material, whose destination is Sellafield, is routinely carried by aircraft whose flight paths cross Lancashire. [28505]

Ms Glenda Jackson: British Nuclear Fuels Limited have informed me that radioactive material destined for Sellafield is not transported by air across Lancashire.

Packing Waste

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to encourage Railtrack and train operators to take responsibility for the packing waste generated by their retail activities. [28483]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The responsibility for packing waste rests with individual retailers. Railtrack and the train operating companies expect their tenants to meet the obligations set out in the Environmental Proctection Act 1990 and encourage them to keep station facilities free of litter. There are already Regulations in place to encourage larger businesses to recover and recycle more packaging waste. In a reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment on 17 December 1997, Official Report, columns 139–94, proposals were set out for a fundamental review of the Regulations in 1998.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy that a revised contract for the construction of a high speed rail link from the Channel Tunnel will continue to require (a) completion of the route in one phase, (b) termination at St. Pancras with a direct link to the West Coast Main Line and (c) availability of the route for freight; and if he will make a statement. [28335]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions made a statement to the House on 28 January 1998, Official Report, columns 466–74, about the Channel Tunnel Rail Link (CTRL). London and Continental Railways currently hold the Development Agreement for the CTRL and, through that, have 30 days from that time in which to come forward with revised proposals. My right hon. Friend will make a further statement about the CTRL in due course.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what criteria he will use in awarding the revised contract for the construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. [28604]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The case does not arise. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions made a statement to the House on 28 January 1998, Official Report, columns 466–74, about the Channel Tunnel Rail Link (CTRL). London and Continental Railways have 30 days from that time in which to come forward with revised proposals.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what meetings he has had with Railtrack to discuss its involvement in the construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. [28602]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend meets Railtrack from time to time to discuss a range of railway infrastructure issues, including Railtrack's thinking on the Channel Tunnel Rail Link.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he had received in respect of Railtrack's interest in the construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. [28603]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend has received representations from various quarters recently about the provision of Channel Tunnel Rail Link, including the possible future involvement of Railtrack.

EU Driving Licence

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the EU states that have not yet fully implemented the first

EU driving licence as amended in 1991; and if he will list the EU states currently applying the discretionary approach allowed for in the 1991 revision. [27439]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 9 February 1998]: We do not have complete information about implementation of the Second EU driving licence directive (which repealed the first directive), or about practice in other Member States. However, we understand that Germany have not yet implemented the Directive and that infraction proceedings may be taken against them. We understand that Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands, Sweden and France make some use of the provision in the second directive allowing Group 2 licences to be issued to insulin-treated diabetics in very exceptional cases.

Diabetic Drivers

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he proposes to take to enforce within the United Kingdom the conditions of the Second EC Driving Licence Directive relating to the driving of lorries between 3.5 and 7.5 tonnes (cat. C.1) and minibuses with 9 to 16 passenger seats (cat. D.1.) by insulin-treated diabetics in order to ensure that EU licence holders from EU countries that have not fully implemented the relevant directive (91/439) will not be able to drive on United Kingdom roads. [27440]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The second directive requires licences issued by Member States to be mutually recognised. This applies to licences issued both before and after the directive came into force. It is for the European Commission to monitor implementation of the Directive and, if necessary, take action against those Member States which have not complied with its requirements. Drivers of vehicles in categories C and D (including C1 and D1) who become resident in the UK are required to register with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency and to meet the medical standards applying in this country.

Housing (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much money has been allocated by (a) his Department and (b) the Housing Corporation to support new social housing in the Southampton City Council area in each of the last five years. [27557]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department provides funding for new social housing through grant-in-aid to the Housing Corporation. The grant is allocated to Registered Social Landlords through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme. Local authorities can also choose to invest in new social housing. Local authority spending on the provision of new social housing by Registered Social Landlords which meets the Housing Corporation's criteria is reimbursed by Local Authority Social Housing Grant from the Corporation.

Allocations for the provision of new social housing by Registered Social Landlords in Southampton are shown. Additional social lettings are also provided through grants to tenants to help them buy a new home and vacate their existing dwelling for reletting, and the Housing Corporation's Do-It-Yourself Shared Ownership scheme for tenants (DIYSO). Expenditure on these home ownership schemes is excluded from the figures.

Local authority spending on the provision of new social housing by Registered Social Landlords which meets the Housing Corporation's criteria is reimbursed by Local Authority Social Housing Grant from the Corporation.

Allocations for the provision of new social housing by Registered Social Landlords in the Rushmoor Borough Council area are shown. Additional social lettings are also provided through grants to tenants to help them buy a new home and vacate their existing dwelling for reletting, and the Housing Corporation's Do-It-Yourself Shared Ownership scheme for tenants (DIYSO). Expenditure on these home ownership schemes is excluded from the figures.

Local authority social housing grant	1.46	2.50	1.70	5.54	1.66

1. 1997–98 figures are start of year allocations.
2. The figures include allocations for new build social housing and the purchase and rehabilitation of existing private sector properties for social housing. The figures exclude allocations for: works to existing stock owned by Registered Social Landlords; temporary social and market rent housing; grants to help tenants buy a new home and vacate their existing property for reletting; and the Housing Corporation's Do-It-Yourself Shared Ownership scheme.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many properties formerly owned by government departments have been made available to (a) the council and (b) housing associations in the (i) Havant Borough, (ii) Eastleigh, (iii) Test Valley Borough and (iv) New Forest District council areas in the last three years. [28152]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in the last three years from (a) public bodies, (b) voluntary organisations, (c) the private sector and (d) local associations in the (i) Havant Borough, (ii) Eastleigh Borough, (iii) Test Valley and (iv) New Forest District council areas about housing needs for each area. [28153]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State receives a number of representations from groups and information is not held centrally in the format requested about housing needs.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much money has been allocated by (a) his Department and (b) the Housing Corporation to support new social housing in the (i) Havant Borough, (ii) Eastleigh, (iii) Test Valley Borough and (iv) New Forest District council areas in each of the last five years. [28154]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department provides funding for new social housing through grant-in-aid to the Housing Corporation. The grant is allocated to Registered Social Landlords through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme. Local authorities can also choose to invest in new social housing. Local authority spending on the provision of new social housing by Registered Social Landlords which meets the Housing Corporation's criteria is reimbursed by Local Authority Social Housing Grant from the Corporation.

Allocations for the provision of new social housing by Registered Social Landlords in the Havant, Eastleigh, Test Valley and New Forest areas are shown. 1. 1997–98 figures are start of year allocations.
2. The figures include allocations for new build social housing and the purchase and rehabilitation of existing private sector properties for social housing. The figures exclude allocations for: works to existing stock owned by Registered Social Landlords; temporary social and market rent housing; grants to help tenants buy a new home and vacate their existing property for reletting; and the Housing Corporation's Do-It-Yourself Shared Ownership scheme.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people are on the housing (a) transfer and (b) waiting lists of the (i) Havant Borough, (ii) New Forest District, (iii) Test Valley Borough and (iv) Eastleigh Borough councils; and what were the equivalent figures at the same time in each of the last five years. [28155]

Mr. Raynsford: Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their housing register/waiting list (excluding existing tenants awaiting a transfer) at 1 April each year in their annual Housing Investment Programme (HIP1) returns; no data are collected centrally on transfer lists. The reported data for 1997 and the previous 5 years are as follows:

	Havant	New Forest	Test Valley	Eastleigh
1992	1,965	502	2,997	1,789
1993	2,074	546	2,788	1,844
1994	1,959	672	2,561	1,090
1995	2,131	760	2,199	643
1996	2,194	771	1,781	1,409
1997	2,120	746	1,873	967

Local authorities have different practices for compiling and managing their housing register/waiting lists which mean that simple comparisons between authorities can be misleading. Authorities' practices may change which can also affect comparisons over time.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many properties formerly owned by government departments have been made available to (a) the council and (b) housing associations in the Rushmoor Borough Council area. [28370]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally.

Waste Water Treatment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of each type of treatment of waste water currently undertaken in the UK on bathing water quality; [28708]

(2) what assessment he has made of the advantages of the use of ultra-violet treatment of sewage in waste water treatment facilities; [28842]

(3) what is the Government's policy on the inclusion of ultra-violet treatment of sewage in waste water treatment facilities. [28843]

Angela Eagle: Bathing water quality monitoring shows that, depending on local circumstances, the required water quality standards can be met by a wide range of treatment methods and outfall arrangements. The approach to treatment will vary accordingly and with the requirements of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive. This is a matter, in the first instance, for the discharger and the environmental regulator.

On the issue of the advantages of ultra-violet treatment of sewage effluent, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 613.

South Downs

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the timetable for considering the results of the recent consultation on the future of the South Downs. [28653]

Angela Eagle: The Countryside Commission are currently considering the results of the recent consultation on the future of the South Downs and hope to bring the results and advice to Ministers in the late Spring.

Waste Fuels (Burning)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ban the burning of hazardous composite waste fuels by industry. [28968]

Angela Eagle: The burning of such waste derived fuels by industry is regulated under the Integrated Pollution Control (IPC) regime. The Environment Agency is responsible for the enforcement of both IPC and the waste management licensing regime in England and Wales. These regimes provide for rigorous controls and the Agency has powers to prevent or prohibit potentially harmful industrial activities, where it sees fit. The Government have made it clear that they expect the Agency, in performing its functions, to set appropriate standards which fully protect public health and the environment and then to enforce those standards firmly, in accordance with its statutory duties. We expect the Environment Agency to continue to consider applications to burn fuels comprised of waste on their merits, in this light.

Strategic Environmental Assessment

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government will support the European Union's draft directive on strategic environmental assessment. [29020]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government have decided not to put the proposed directive on environmental assessment of plans and programmes to the Council of Ministers during the UK Presidency. However, we support the principle of environmental appraisal at all stages of decision making. Guidance has been published to ensure that environmental considerations are taken into account by Government Departments and agencies and by local authorities, and further work on this is in hand.

Mesothelioma

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people were diagnosed as suffering from mesothelioma in (a) 1993, (b) 1994, (c) 1995 and (d) 1996 in each (i) parliamentary constituency and (ii) local authority area. [29235]

Angela Eagle: Data on cancers, including mesothelioma, are collected by regional cancer registries, but the latest complete year for which data are available is 1991. The Health and Safety Executive maintains registers of deaths in Great Britain for which mesothelioma is mentioned on the death certificate. The numbers of mesothelioma deaths in 1993, 1994 and 1995 by local authority are shown in table 1 which has been placed in the Library of the House. Information on mesothelioma deaths is not yet available for 1996 or for parliamentary constituencies.

Air Quality

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the forthcoming Finance, Management and Policy Review of the Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards. [29751]

Mr. Meacher: As part of the Government's programme of regular, five-yearly finance, management and policy reviews of non-departmental public bodies my Department will conduct a thorough review of the advisory Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards, beginning immediately. The first stage of the review will take a "prior options" study. This will assess the extent to which the Panel's functions are necessary for the achievement of the Government's policies, and whether there is scope for privatising, contracting out or transferring all or part of its functions to another body. This is the first such review of the Panel.

To minimise the uncertainty the prior options study will cause, I expect that study will be completed within three months. Should the Government conclude at the end of the prior options stage that the Panel should continue its work, there will be a further review of its finance, management and policy functions. The time required for this second review cannot be foreseen, but I would expect it to last no more than a further three months.

In carrying out the study my Department will consult the Environment Agencies and the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency, representatives of local authorities, business and industry, environmental and health groups, experts in the field of air pollution and health and others with an interest in the Panel's work.

Comments from interested parties would be welcome by 23 March 1998.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Belfast City Council

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of votes were cast for each political party in the May 1997 elections for Belfast City Council; what proportion of council seats was won by each political party; what proportion of council committee chairs and vice-chairs has been allocated to each political party; what is the proportion of council members in each party nominated to outside authorities; and what is the proportion of council members in each party represented on partnership boards. [27401]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The information is as follows:

Witnesses

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to interview the potential witnesses who came forward in response to a public appeal by Christy Walsh published in the Irish News on 1 July 1996. [27400]

Mr. Ingram: This case now falls to be dealt with by the Criminal Cases Review Commission. Any new evidence should therefore be made available to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations she has received on extending the statutory remit of the SACHR in line with the Paris Principles endorsed by the UN General Assembly in December 1993; and if she will make a statement. [27404]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights raised this with me for the first time at a meeting on 4 February. SACHR have for many years been providing advice on issues beyond those set out in their statutory remit; this is a situation that has been endorsed by successive Secretaries of State. I am aware of a call from SACHR to extend the statutory base and will take their views strongly into account in any decision that I take.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she plans to respond to the 1996–97 report of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights. [27403]

Marjorie Mowlam: I issued a full response to the twenty-second Annual Report of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights on 3 February.

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the organisations and other interested parties which have been consulted anent her response to the recommendations of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights; and if she will make a statement. [28628]

Marjorie Mowlam: I consulted no organisations or other interested parties outside Government before issuing my response to the Commission's recent annual report.

Prisoners

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many prisoners currently serving (a) a determinate sentence and (b) a life sentence in each paramilitary faction are due to be released in each year until the last is released; [27394]

(2) many republican and loyalist prisoners have time left to serve of (a) one year or less, (b) two years, (c) three years, (d) four years, (e) five years, (f) six years, (g) seven years, (h) eight years, (i) nine years, (j) 10 years, (k) 11 years, (l) 12 years, (m) 13 years, (n) 14 years, (o) 15 years, (p) 16 to 20 years, (q) 21 to 25 years, (r) 26 to 30 years, (s) 31 to 35 years, (t) 36 to 40 years and (u) over 40 years. [27395]

Mr. Ingram: Statistical information in the format requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I will arrange for a written reply to my hon. Friend which details available information on prisoners with perceived paramilitary affiliations serving both determinate and indeterminate sentences in Northern Ireland for offences connected to terrorism and their sentence lengths.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the staffing levels of the RUC in each Belfast sub-division broken down by (a) gender and (b) perceived religious/community origin. [27402]

Mr. Ingram: The tables indicate the staffing levels of the RUC in each Belfast sub-division by gender and perceived religious/community origin as at 1 January 1998.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will estimate the gross cost of setting up mechanisms for the means testing of citizens of other EU member states to assess their eligibility to pay tuition fees. [27717]

Mr. Worthington: No realistic estimate of cost is yet possible.

Decisions about joining the Department for Education and Employment scheme and an estimate of the cost will be made in the light of the outcome of consultations with Education and Library Boards.

Fair Employment

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which district councils have submitted Section 31 Reviews to the Fair Employment Commission. [27954]

Mr. Ingram: The Fair Employment Commission has received section 31 reviews from all 26 District Councils.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which district councils did not meet the requirements of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989 in respect of affirmative action and outreach programmes in the recent monitoring reviews; and what action will be taken in respect of them. [27955]

Mr. Ingram: The findings of individual employers' Section 31 reviews and any action arising from these is a matter for the employers and the Fair Employment Commission (FEC). The FEC has advised me that it is its policy not to comment publicly about its discussions with individual employers and their Section 31 reviews.

The Commission has advised me that there are 15 Councils with whom it is still in discussion about their affirmative action programmes.

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to place the Policy Appraisal Fair Treatment guidelines on a statutory basis; and if she will make a statement. [28627]

Mr. Worthington: The Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights has provided a major report on Employment Equality which includes over 160 recommendations, one of which is to place PAFT on a legislative basis. The important thing is that, whatever system we have for injecting equality of opportunity into Government policy in Northern Ireland, it really is an effective one. The Government's consideration of the recommendations, including those on Policy Appraisal and Fair Treatment, is well advanced and the Government's response will be given in a full document to be published shortly.

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to meet representatives of (a) the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights, (b) the Fair Employment Commission, (c) the Equal Opportunities Commission and (d) the Commission for Racial Equality before she publishes her response to the Employment Equality Review; and if she will make a statement. [28626]

Mr. Worthington: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will meet with representatives of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights to discuss the Employment Equality Review on 20 February. It is also proposed to have a Ministerial meeting with representatives of the Fair Employment Commission prior to publication of the Government's forthcoming paper on employment equality. If appropriate, meetings may be arranged with the Equal Opportunities Commission for Northern Ireland and the Commission for Racial Equality for Northern Ireland.

Political Prisoners

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what contact either she or her officials have had with the South African Government concerning processes for the release of political prisoners; what assessment she has made of the applicability of such processes to Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [29073]

Mr. Ingram: A number of the participants in the political process and others have made proposals to the Government in respect of prisoners. Some of these proposals have cited the process in South Africa as an example and as a consequence the Prison Service requested factual information from the South African High Commission in November of last year. To date no response has been received and no assessment has been made of the applicability of such processes to Northern Ireland. The Secretary of State is aware of the significant differences between the situations and does not imagine that solutions adopted in one environment will transfer to another. However, she has said that she is prepared to discuss prisoner issues with the participants in the talks process and to work on an account of what could happen in respect of prisoner releases in the context of a peaceful and lasting settlement being agreed. The request for information regarding the approach to the issue taken in other jurisdictions is fully consistent with that undertaking.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

MI6

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will release for public scrutiny the files held by MI6 relating to the Zinoviev letter. [24746]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 26 January 1998]: The records of the Secret Intelligence Service are not released: they are retained under Section 3 (4) of the Public Records Act 1958. Having reviewed the arguments, I recognise that there is an overwhelmingly strong reason for this policy. When individuals or organisations co-operate with the service, they do so because an unshakeable commitment is given never to reveal their identities. This essential trust would be undermined by a perception that undertakings of confidentiality were honoured for only a limited duration. In many cases, the risk of retribution against individuals can extend beyond a single generation.

But I want to be as open as I can. The records of the SIS for the relevant period are incomplete, and offer an inconclusive picture on whether the Zinoviev letter was a forgery. But I have commissioned the FCO Historians to write a short memorandum, drawing on papers held by the SIS, as well as those in the FCO archives. When the memorandum has been prepared, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii)1997–98 to date. [27797]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 5 February 1998]:

Cost of theft and fraud

FCO	54,408	32,606	121,385
Agencies	Nil	Nil	Nil
NDPBs (British Council)	76,518	35,050	16,216

Great Lakes Region

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives he proposes to restrict the export of arms from the EU to the Great Lakes Region. [28971]

Mr. Doug Henderson: A variety of initiatives exist to restrict the export of arms from the EU to the Great Lakes region. Arms exports to the Democratic Republic of the Congo are prohibited under an EU arms embargo imposed against the then Zairean regime in 1993. Arms exports to Rwanda are subject to a UN embargo imposed following the 1994 genocide. In 1995 this embargo was lifted in respect of the Government of Rwanda. Its restrictions still apply to arms exports to neighbouring countries, including Burundi, if that supply is for end use within Rwanda.

All applications to export arms to the Great Lakes are scrutinised on a case by case basis. Under the arms export criteria announced by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, we will not issue an export licence if there is a clearly identifiable risk that the proposed export might be used for internal repression or international aggression. The need not to affect adversely regional stability, and the risk of the export being re-exported or diverted to an undesirable end-user, will also be taken into account.

Diplomatic Personnel

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about (a) the payment of private school fees for the children of HM diplomatic personnel out of public funds and (b) the provision of return air flights to and from the United Kingdom to the children of HM diplomatic personnel in posts overseas out of public funds. [28984]

Mr. Doug Henderson: In the context of the Comprehensive Spending Review, the Chief Secretary to the Treasury has asked a number of questions about the independent review of FCO Overseas Allowances carried out by Sir Derek Hornby in 1996. Sir Derek's review includes recommendations on the provision of education for the children of HM Diplomatic Service Personnel overseas. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no communication with Treasury Ministers about the provision from public funds of return air flights to and from the UK to the children of HM Diplomatic personnel in Posts overseas.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost to the Exchequer in the current financial year of (a) providing return air flights to and from the United Kingdom out of public funds to the children of diplomatic personnel posted overseas and (b) the payment of school fees out of public funds for the children of HM diplomatic personnel. [28985]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We estimate that the cost of providing return air flights for such children who are being educated in the UK will be £895,000 in the current financial year. This excludes the cost of travel for children who are accompanying their parents to and from overseas Posts for which we have no separate estimates.

We estimate that the education costs for the children of diplomatic personnel over the same period will be £10,708,000. Of this, Boarding School Allowance, which contributes to the cost of fees at UK boarding schools is £7,732,000, and the cost of education at local schools overseas is £2,976,000.

Mr. Nazakat Ali

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the letter to the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 19 January (ref. no. 303198), for what reasons entry clearance has not yet been issued to Mr. Nazakat Ali. [29072]

Mr. Fatchett: Entry clearance was issued to Mr. Ali on 6 February 1998.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Attorney-General what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28390]

The Attorney-General: My Department has not (a) acquired or (b) specified any Brazilian mahogany in 1996 or 1997.

French Convalescent Home

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Attorney-General if he will review the decision of the Charity Commissioner to permit the disposal of the French Convalescent Home. [28681]

The Attorney-General: I do not have any power to review the decisions of the Charity Commissioners. Like other interested parties I could have appealed to the High Court and asked it to quash the Commissioners' decision but I was not persuaded that grounds for an appeal were made out.

Cannabis

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Attorney-General what is his estimate of the total time and cost entailed in prosecuting those accused of cannabis offences in each of the past five years. [29136]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service holds no central records of the time or cost committed to prosecuting particular offences.

PRIME MINISTER

Political Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister how many secretarial and support staff work full-time in support of his political advisers. [25196]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 23 January 1998]: Four Personal Secretaries work full-time in support of the Special Advisers in 10 Downing Street.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister how many times his wife has accompanied him on overseas visits; and what was the cost of her travel and other expenses. [25139]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 23 January 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Spelthorne (Mr. Wilshire) on 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 15.

Civil Servants

Mr. Burns: To ask the Prime Minister how many non-career civil servants have been appointed to the staff of (a) No. 10 Downing Street and (b) the Cabinet Office under the Minister without Portfolio since 1 May. [25878]

The Prime Minister: Twenty non-career civil servants have been appointed on fixed term contracts, as casuals or as Special Advisers to No. 10 Downing Street since 1 May 1997. None have been appointed to the Cabinet Office under the Minister without Portfolio since that date.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister how many non-career civil servants are employed in No. 10 Downing Street; and what was the number one year ago. [26011]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 28 January 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) today for the present figures. The number of people appointed on fixed-term contracts, as casuals or as Special Advisers in No. 10 Downing Street in the financial year 1996/97 was 15.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister how many non-career civil servants are employed as information officers in Government departments; and what the number was one year ago. [26010]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 28 January 1998]: A non-career civil servant is someone appointed other than on a permanent contract, e.g. fixed term appointments, casuals and special advisers. The figures are as follows:

Department	January 1997	January 1998
Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	0	0
Department for Culture, Media and Sport	0	0
Ministry of Defence	3	1

Millennium Compliance

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Prime Minister if he will establish a central contingency fund which Government departments may draw on to address the millennium computer compliance problem. [27285]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 February 1998]: Each department must find the funds required from within its own budget.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Prime Minister if he will give overall responsibility for overseeing the millennium computer compliance problem in both the private and public sector to one Minister. [27284]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 February 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has responsibility for overseeing the millennium computer compliance problem in central Government systems. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has set up Action 2000 to help turn awareness into action in the private sector. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade also chairs a Cabinet Committee to drive action across the public and private sectors to ensure that the national infrastructure is not damaged.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister what advice has been issued to strategic industries and Government departments on drawing up contingency plans in the event of the failure of computer systems to be millennium compliant; and if he will make a statement. [27869]

The Prime Minister: This is one of the issues which is being discussed by the Ministerial Group on the Millennium Date Change. With regard to contingency planning by Government departments I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster gave to my right hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Mr. Brown) on 30 January 1998, Official Report, columns 403–04.

Country Landowners Association

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister on which dates since 1 May he met representatives of the Country Landowners Association; and what matters were discussed. [27487]

The Prime Minister: I have had no formal meetings with representatives of the Country Landowners Association. Ministers in other Departments have met a wide range of groups with interests in countryside matters, including the Country Landowners Association, to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Social Exclusion

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Prime Minister how many people the Government estimate to be socially excluded; and if he will break down the figures by age group and sex. [27714]

The Prime Minister: There is no agreed measure of social exclusion. The Social Exclusion Unit has been asked as part of its work programme to draw up key indicators and recommend how these can be tracked to monitor the effectiveness in reducing social exclusion.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date. [27807]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 5 February 1998]: In respect of my office, nil.

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27808]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 5 February 1998]: In respect of my office, none.

Bank of England

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister for what reasons the announcement of the appointment of the next Governor of the Bank of England has been delayed; and if he will make a statement. [28394]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Economic Secretary on 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 642.

Welsh Consumer Council

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will transfer responsibility for the Welsh Consumer Council from the Department of Trade and Industry to the Welsh Office; and if he will make a statement. [28989]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to transfer responsibility for the Welsh Consumer Council from the Department of Trade and Industry to the Welsh Office.

The position of the Welsh Consumer Council has been considered in the context of the creation of a National Assembly for Wales. The Government's present policy is that the functions of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales will be transferred to the assembly. Consumer protection policy is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Ministerial Code

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Prime Minister if the Paymaster General submitted the case of his interest in the Orion trust to him for determination in accordance with the requirements of paragraph 109 of the Ministerial Code. [25486]

The Prime Minister: [holding answer 26 January 1998]: No. This paragraph does not require every case to be submitted to me.

WALES

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27846]

Mr. Ron Davies: The only major purchase by my Department in the last 5 years was £540,000 on the purchase of replacement hardware and software for a Unix computer system. The planned date of commissioning of this system is the end of February 1998. My Department has no plans for the purchase of major computer systems during the next financial year.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what procedure he intends to follow in designating locations in Wales, away from the main meeting place of the Assembly, where meetings can occur; and if plenary meetings of the Assembly will take place in these centres. [27480]

Mr. Ron Davies: Decisions on holding meetings in locations other than the main Assembly building will be a matter for the Assembly to determine. It will also be for the Assembly to determine whether it holds plenary sessions in locations other than the main Assembly chamber.

Welsh Office (Relocation)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the cost of relocating the Welsh Office from Cardiff to Swansea; and if he will make a statement. [27482]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have no plans to relocate the Welsh Office from Cardiff to Swansea. If I decide that the Assembly should be based in Swansea, the bulk of the support staff will still remain in Cathays Park, Cardiff.

Farm Prices

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the average price obtained by farmers in Wales for (a) lamb, (b) beef and (c) milk for each year since 1990. [28274]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information requested is as follows:

Finished sheep and cattle prices

Year	Pence per kilo
	Finished Sheep[1]	Finished Cattle[2]
1990–91	—	104
1991–92	—	106
1992–93	87	114
1993–94	105	128
1994–95	113	121
1995–96	115	122

[1] From January 1992, sheep price reporting has been undertaken on a liveweight basis. This followed the discontinuation of the variable premium scheme at the end of 1991. The market price is therefore now the producer's total return.

[2] Figures are derived from auction market information obtained from a sample of Welsh markets. The prices shown are liveweight averages for finished steers, heifers and young bulls.

Note:

The 1996–97 figure will be published in 'Welsh Agricultural Statistics 1997' available in March 1998.

Milk prices: average net prices paid to wholesale producers

Year	Pence per litre North Wales	South Wales	Gwent[1]
1990–91	19.089	19.199	19.137
1991–92	19.833	19.964	19.958
1992–93	20.881	20.825	20.932
1993–94	22.308	22.136	22.355

[1] Figures for Gwent cannot be identified separately and those shown relate to the West Midlands region of the Milk Marketing Board of which Gwent forms a part.

Note:
Later figures are not available due to the demise of the Milk Marketing Board.

Commission for Racial Equality

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of alleged racism regarding the Welsh language have been reported to the Commission for Racial Equality during the past five years; how many have been acted upon; and if he will make a statement. [27973]

Mr. Ron Davies: I understand the Commission for Racial Equality does not keep records that would readily enable it to identify any such cases. However if the hon. Member writes to the CRE at its London or Cardiff office with details of his specific concerns, CRE will, I am sure, make every effort to be helpful.

Ministerial Transport

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the cost of (a) Ministerial cars and drivers and (b) the Department's bill for taxis in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year. [27736]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The cost of Ministerial cars and drivers in my Department is as follows:

1995–96: £183,778

1996–97: £196,868

1997–98: £165,115 (to date)

1997–98: £203,900 (estimate).

The information relating to the cost of taxis in my Department is not held centrally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Young Offenders Institution, Colchester

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the capital cost of establishing the Young Offenders Institution, Colchester; [26237]

(2) if the monitoring of those offenders who have served sentences at the Young Offenders Institution, Colchester, will continue after its closure; [26211]

(3) what arrangements have been made in respect of those offenders who are serving sentences at the Young Offenders Institution, Colchester, after it closes. [26213]

Ms Quin: The cost of establishing Colchester Young Offender Institution was approximately £460,000. About £49,000 of this represented capital costs.

Data on young offenders will continue to be monitored after the closure of Colchester and the outcomes will be compared with those of other similar offenders.

Those young offenders currently at Colchester who will not be able to complete their sentences there will be transferred to other establishments.

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27840]

Mr. Straw: The available information for computer systems purchases over the past five years, with an initial purchase price over £500,000, is given in the table in cost bands to protect commercial confidentiality.

Initial purchase cost band	Computer system	Date
£500,000 - £1,000,000	Prison Service Local Inmate Database	1994
	Criminal Cases Review Commission Information System	1997
£1,000,000 - £[illegible],000	Prison Service Inmate (Criminal Justice Act 1992) Information System	1993
	National Criminal Intelligence Service, Alert System	1994
	Prison Service Personnel System	1994
	Business and Accounting Strategic Systems, Resource Accounting System	1995
	Prison Enterprise Services Management Information System	1996
	Prison Service Industries and Farms System	1996
£5,000,000 - £10,000,000	Immigration and Nationality Directorate Suspect Index System	1993
£10,000,000 - £20,000,000	Prison Service Inmate Information System	1993
	Prison Service Finance System (FOCUS)	1997

Note:
These figures exclude support, maintenance, Home Office costs, upgrades and infrastructure projects. No new computer systems over £500,000 are reported for the next financial year by the Home Office, Prison Service, United Kingdom Passport Agency, Forensic Service or Fire Service College.

In addition, the Immigration and Nationality Directorate is engaged in a major project using the Private Finance Initiative, which will introduce a new computerised casework system to replace the current paper-based processes.

A full answer could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Consultants

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on external consultants in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year; and if he will also estimate the cost savings resulting from the employment of such consultants for each of the above years. [26675]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: My estimate of expenditure of my Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) on external consultants is as follows:

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98[1] (to date)	1997–98
Home Office	[2]10,200,000	1,956,535	557,975	1,754,412
Agencies	[2]10,200,000	9,848,449	3,300,000	4,000,000
NDPBs	944,000	713,000	493,000	580,000

[1]To end November 1997 (latest available figure).
[2]Estimated figure for Home Office and agencies.

The cost savings resulting from the employment of external consultants by the Home Office, its agencies and NDPBs for each of the above years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27788]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Items recorded stolen or lost from the Home Office between 1 April and 30 September 1997, and valued at more than £25, are as follows:

Nature of loss or theft	Number of cases
Laptop computers	10
Desktop personal computers	6
Computer printers	3
Computer disk drives and memory	3
Cash	11
Stock (office equipment, clothing)	4
Phonecards	1
Field Gates	1
Tools	4
Video equipment	3

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the rates of absenteeism in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date; and if he will make a statement. [26676]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster gave him on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 116.

Service Providers

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken in the UK to give legal effect to the decision of the European Court of Justice in the cases of Vander Elst [1994] ECR 1–3803 on the rights of third country national employees of service providers based in another member state to provide services in the UK. [28302]

Ms Quin: We observe the terms of this judgment by not requiring work permits of third country national employees of service providers established in another member state when they are sent to fulfil a contract in the United Kingdom.

Immigration

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many non-EEA family members who arrived in possession of entry clearance holding an EEA family permit have been refused entry by immigration officers at the British port of entry since 1 February 1997. [28296]

Ms Quin: We do not keep records of the number of persons refused entry in possession of a family permit, although we estimate that the numbers are very small.

Passports

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passports or identity documents purported to be issued by a member state presented by passengers on arrival in the UK have been the subject of inquiries with the authorities of the member state to determine (a) the document's genuineness and (b) that issue to the holder was correct since 1 February 1997. [28301]

Ms Quin: The information requested is not available. This is because Immigration Service document experts using specialist equipment and reference materials rarely need to consult the authorities of European Union member states to confirm the genuineness of a passport or identify document. It would be neither worthwhile nor cost effective to maintain statistical records in these circumstances.

Security Service Files

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make it his policy to disclose all representations received from members of the Government relating to the destruction of files held on them by the security service; [28037]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 589, for what reasons it is not his policy to give information about any representations he has received from hon. Members, Ministers or from other sources in relation to the destruction of files held by the security service; [28036]

(3) for what reasons it is not his policy to specify the total numbers of representations received from (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals in respect of the destructions of security service files. [28121]

Mr. Straw [holding answers 6 February 1998]: I am not prepared to give any information about representations received in relation to the destruction of files held by the Security Service, including the number of such representations, where the provision of such information might enable the identity of any individual to be deduced, or might give rise to speculation about their identity. I consider it important that people should feel free to make representations on such matters in the knowledge that their confidentiality will be respected. This applies to any representations from people in the categories mentioned by the hon. Member as it would to others.

Hedges

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will include the loss of light due to high hedges as a category of neighbour nuisance in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords]; and if he will make a statement. [28518]

Mr. Michael: No. The proposal for anti-social behaviour orders in the Crime and Disorder Bill is intended to prevent criminal or near-criminal activity affecting families and communities. It is not intended to deal with neighbour disputes of this sort. We have no plans to amend the Bill to make special provision for such categories.

Vehicles (Police)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers police officers have to intervene to prevent contractors removing a vehicle in circumstances where the police believe no offence has been committed. [28504]

Mr. Michael: I understand that my hon. Friend has in mind action taken by contractors on behalf of a local authority which carries out on-street parking enforcement under provisions contained in the Road Traffic Act 1991. The Act provides for orders to be made in respect of particular geographical areas which transfers the enforcement responsibility from the police to the local authority. Arrangements of this kind operate throughout London and in certain other parts of the country. Vehicles contravening parking regulations are issued with penalty charge notices (PCNs). The penalty charges are civil debts, due to the local authority and enforceable through a streamlined version of the normal civil debt recovery process.

As the whole purpose of these parking provisions is to enable responsibility for enforcement to be transferred from the police to local authorities, the police have no specific powers to intervene in the type of situation which concerns my hon. Friend.

Drivers who wish to dispute local authority enforcement action, which may include wheelclamping and vehicle removal, are entitled to make representations to the authority concerned. If these are rejected, they may appeal to the independent adjudicators who are appointed by the Parking Committee for London which oversees local authority parking enforcement as the Metropolis under section 73 of the Road Traffic Act 1991.

Alcohol (Petrol Stations)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has undertaken into the behaviour of people when buying alcohol from garages and petrol stations. [28326]

Mr. George Howarth: None.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28379]

Mr. Straw: There are no central records relating to the purchase of Brazilian mahogany for the Home Office. Initial inquiries suggest that none has been purchased or specified by my Department during 1996 or 1997, but this could be verified only at disproportionate cost.

It is Home Office policy to ensure that, as far as possible, wood used in building works, furniture etc. comes from sustainably managed forests. Furniture purchased through the Department's central call-off contract does not use Brazilian mahogany, and the Home Office Procurement Manual states that, where possible, building materials using unsustainably produced tropical hardwoods should be avoided.

Housing (Wormwood Scrubs)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many flats and houses are empty on the Wormwood Scrubs site; for how long they have been empty; and what plans exist for their future use. [28392]

Ms Quin: There are 19 empty flats at the Du Cane Road site as at 6 February 1998. All have become vacant since September 1997 and are in a deteriorating condition. Five flats remain occupied: these will not be re-allocated when they next become vacant.

There are no plans to make further use of the dwellings as they are deemed to be beyond economic repair and potentially dangerous. The Prison Service plans to demolish them to enable redevelopment on the frontage of Wormwood Scrubs.

Wormwood Scrubs also has two flats and one house that are not on the Du Cane Road site that are empty and on sale on the open market.

Prisoners

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many, and what percentage of prisoners (a) nationally and (b) in Leicestershire are (i) of Asian origin and (ii) of Afro Caribbean origin. [28578]

Ms Quin: Information on the ethnicity of prisoners is given in the table.

Percentage of prisoners in prison by ethnic group on 31 December 1997

(Provisional) Ethnic Group	Leicestershire		England and Wales
	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.	Number
White	82	2,016	81	50,271
Black African	1	30	2	1,387
Caribbean	6	148	8	4,694
Other	3	83	3	1,598
Total	11	261	12	7,679
South Asian
Indian	3	84	1	788
Pakistani	2	46	2	1,048
Bangladeshi	—	7	—	146
Total	6	137	3	1,982
Chinese and Other	1	36	3	2,108
Total	100	2,450	100	62,040

Percentages have been calculated independently and may not sum to 100.
The symbol '—' = less than 0.5 per cent.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of prisoners in (a) Leicestershire and (b) each individual prison in Leicestershire. [28575]

Ms Quin: The figures requested are given in the table.

Total population of prisoners in prison in Leicestershire on 31 December 1997

Prison	Number
Ashwell	454
Gartree	363
Glen Parva	844
Leicester	333
Stocken	456
Total	2,450

Prison Suicides

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many suicides there were in Leicestershire prisons in 1997. [28576]

Ms Quin: The number of self-inflicted deaths in Leicestershire prisons from 1990 to date is given in the following table:

Year	Ashwell	Gartree	Glen Parva	Leicester	Stocken
1993	0	0	0	3	0
1994	0	1	0	3	0
1995	0	0	0	1	0
1996	0	1	2	1	1

Note:
Not all self-inflicted deaths conclude with a verdict of suicide.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce the incidence of suicides in British prisons. [28577]

Ms Quin: The Government are committed to doing everything possible to reduce the number of suicides in prisons.

The Prison Service has a well-developed and well-respected strategy for caring for prisoners who are at risk of suicide or self-injury. It involves the identification and support of those prisoners who are considered to be at risk. Every prison has a multi-disciplinary suicide awareness team which meets regularly and oversees the implementation of the strategy in their establishment.

Prison staff also work closely with the Samaritans, who befriend prisoners in crisis through visits to prisons and by telephone. Over the last five years, the Samaritans have been actively involved in setting up listener/befriender schemes in prisons where selected prisoners are trained to provide peer group support for fellow prisoners in crisis. Listener schemes provide a valuable contribution in reducing the likelihood of suicide and self-injury.

I recently held a meeting with a range of representatives from interest groups concerned about suicides in prisons. The meeting provided a useful forum for the exchange of ideas on how to develop further strategies for reducing suicides in prisons.

The suicide awareness support unit (SASU), in Prison Service headquarters, examines each death in prison custody to see whether lessons can be learnt. They also provide advice and support to establishments, particularly those who are experiencing a cluster of deaths. The suicide awareness strategy in establishments is also audited by the Prison Service standards audit team. Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons in England and Wales has been asked to carry out a thematic review of suicides in custody.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service reviewed its management guidelines on suicide awareness and prevention and published a revised policy document on 1 August 1996, individual or wing-based copies of which are available to staff in each prison. A synopsis of the guidelines identifying specifically the role and responsibilities of prison officers has been issued to every officer with prisoner contact in the Service.

Multi-disciplinary suicide awareness and management groups meet in each prison at least quarterly to discuss local suicide management issues, identify potential difficulties and recommend appropriate action where necessary.

The Samaritans provide regular support services in most prisons and are currently engaging with prison management in discussions regarding the potential for establishing the first listener scheme in a Northern Ireland prison later this year.

The Scottish Prison Service is currently re-examining its suicide awareness and prevention strategy. A revised strategy document is to be implemented in the near future: revised documentation is to be piloted in four prisons over a one-month period to establish if it is workable. Upon completion of the pilot study, the findings will be acted on as appropriate and it is hoped that the strategy will be implemented in full shortly thereafter. Teams of three staff from each prison are being trained in the delivery of the strategy: this process should be completed by the end of April. The pilot study is running in parallel with the current strategy.

Artificial Earths

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number and location of artificial earths. [28484]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is not collected and we are not aware of any such estimates.

Domestic Violence

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the steps he intends to take to promote best practice in eradicating domestic violence across Europe during Britain's Presidency of the EU. [28449]

Mr. Michael: Combating violence against women is a significant priority of the United Kingdom Government. In an address on 2 February to the European Parliament, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security announced that, during our Presidency, we shall be working closely with the Commission, fellow members and the European Parliament towards organising a Europe-wide Conference of member states and applicant countries including non-Governmental organisations. The purpose is to raise awareness of ways to tackle domestic violence and we hope the conference can be held towards the end of 1999. Our Presidency will also be co-ordinating European Union member states' approach to the meeting in March of the United Nations Commission of the Status of Women, a major theme of which will be violence against women. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary with responsibility for Women will be leading the European Union delegation and will deliver a speech on behalf of the European Union Presidency.

Retractable Metal Batons

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to review the use by the police of retractable metal batons; [28166]

(2) what assessments of injuries sustained by the public his Department has evaluated since the introduction of new-style retractable metal batons. [28165]

Mr. Michael: Decisions about what types of baton to issue are the responsibility of individual chief police officers, except that, in the Metropolitan Police district, the Commissioner requires the consent of the Home Secretary as Police Authority before introducing a new piece of defensive equipment.

The Home Office has not carried out any evaluation and has no plans at present to review the police use of metal retractable batons. The use of batons and other equipment is kept under review by the Self-Defence and Restraint Committee of the Association of Chief Police Officers. In reaching decisions, chief officers also have available expert technical advice from the Home Office Police Scientific Development Branch. This suggests that friction lock batons have an impact force slightly or moderately higher than the traditional wooden truncheon. Training provided to officers carrying metal retractable batons emphasises that, when striking a suspect, areas such as the head and neck should be avoided except as a last resort because of the high probability of causing serious harm or death, and that officers must be prepared to justify striking such areas.

Europol Officers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with ministers of European Union countries concerning the issue of immunity of Europol officers; and if he will make a statement. [28848]

Mr. Michael: The immunities which will be granted to Europol officers are set out in the Protocol on Privileges and Immunities of Europol, which was signed on 19 June 1997, following extensive discussions with all member states of the European Union at both ministerial and official level. The Protocol must be ratified by all member states before it enters into force. The United Kingdom will complete this process shortly: following debates in both Houses, an Order passed through the Privy Council on 17 December 1997.

Europol will not be an operational police force, and its staff will not be able to perform executive policing functions. Their role will generally be limited to the handling of information and the analysis of criminal intelligence in support of the law enforcement agencies of member states. The immunities that they will be given will apply only in situations where they are performing these official functions, and in all other situations they will be subject to the legal process in the normal way. The Government believe that the immunities which will be granted to Europol officers are appropriate for the tasks which they will undertake and are necessary for the proper functioning of the organisation. Were Europol's role to be extended beyond what is allowed under the present Convention, there is specific provision in the Protocol requiring the question of privileges and immunities of its staff to be reviewed.

Police Funding

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the real terms change in the level of Home Office (a) revenue, (b) capital and (c) total grant for the police from 1997–98 to 1998–99. [28846]

Mr. Michael: The latest Gross Domestic Product deflators issued by Her Majesty's Treasury indicate that the real terms change in the level of Home Office grants from 1997–98 to 1998–99 is:

Revenue grant: +2.2 per cent.

Capital grant: –14.9 per cent.

Total grants: +1.8 per cent.

Total grant also includes grant paid under section 48 of the Police Act 1996, party conferences grant, and loan charges grant paid on pre-1990 debt.

Altcourse and Parc Prisons

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contractually specified (a) services and (b) facilities were not available when the Altcourse and Parc prisons opened; what steps the Prison Service is taking to secure full contract compliance in each case; and if he will make a statement. [28841]

Ms Quin: Her Majesty's Prisons Parc and Altcourse opened one month and six months respectively ahead of their contractual opening date. This early opening was undertaken by the contractors in recognition of the Prison Service's urgent need for additional accommodation. Altcourse is building up its population ahead of schedule and thereby providing additional relief to the pressure on prisoner places in the north west.

As a consequence of this early opening, some services and facilities were incomplete or not available when the prisons opened. Deficiencies have been, or are being, addressed at each prison in respect of the areas set out in the list.

HMP Parc

(a) Services

the level of work and training;

automatic transmissions between the prison's own information system (PIMS) and the Prison Service central database;

a bail information scheme for prisoners;

direct debiting of telephone costs from prisoners' cash;

drug testing;

prisoners' consultation committees; and arrangements for prisoners' visitors.

(b) Facilities

a creche for visitors' children.

HMP Altcourse

(a) Services

throughcare;

personal officer scheme;

legal advice information;

sentence planning;

the levels of work and education;

shop and haircutting arrangements;

drug testing

number of drug sniffer dogs; and arrangements for prisoners' visitors.

(b) Facilities

a creche for visitors' children; and fitting out of workshops.

All of these have been brought to the contractors' attention in writing locally, as requiring remedial action. In addition, there have been, and continue to be, regular (approximately fortnightly) meetings at corporate level with the Prison Service to discuss issues of particular concern. When the prisons reach full occupancy, there will be a full audit of contractual compliance which will also ensure that remedial action is being implemented to an agreed timetable.

Where specified performance measures are not being delivered, performance penalty points are being applied. Cumulatively, these may lead to a reduction in the contract price.

Young Offenders

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 15 and 16 year old females are on remand in (a) young offender units and (b) women's prisons in (i) London and (ii) the Home Counties. [28788]

Ms Quin: The latest available information is for 31 December 1997. On that date, no females aged 15 or 16 years were held on remand in prisons in England and Wales.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the percentage of convictions of young offenders after admittance on remand to young offender units. [28786]

Mr. Michael: Information on the sentencing of young offenders held in remand at young offender units is not collected centrally. Information is available on the sentencing of young offenders remanded in custody by the court, although the place of remand is not available.

Youths remanded in custody are usually remanded to local authority accommodation. Exceptionally, 15 or 16-year-old boys meeting certain conditions are remanded to a remand centre or prison. These conditions are:

that the defendant is charged with a violent or sexual offence on one punishable in the case of an adult with imprisonment for a term of 14 years or more; or that the defendant has a history of absconding while remanded in local authority accommodation and is charged with or has been convicted of an imprisonable offence alleged or found or have been committed while he was so remanded; and in either case, that the court considers that only a remand to a remand centre or prison would be adequate to protect the public from serious harm.

In 1996, 70 per cent. of 15 or 16-year-old male defendants remanded in custody and charged with a violent or sexual offence (or one punishable in the case of an adult with imprisonment for a term of 14 years or more) were convicted. No information is available on either previous propensity to abscond or court deliberations.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offender units have an in-take of males in the age range of 15 to 21 years in (a) London and (b) the Home Counties. [28787]

Ms Quin: There is one young offender institution (YOI) in London, Her Majesty's YOI Feltham. This is the only YOI in London and the home counties which takes 15 and 16-year-old male offenders. In the home counties, there are seven YOIs. These are listed in the table with their age intake.

At age 21, male offenders are deemed to be adults and on conviction will be sent to an adult prison.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many 15 and 16 year old males were admitted on remand to young offender units in (a) London and (b) the Home Counties in each of the last five years; [28791]

(2) how many 15 and 16 year old males were admitted on remand to young offender units in the last quarter for which figures are available in (a) London and (b) the Home Counties. [28790]

Ms Quin: The information requested is given in the table.

Prison Accommodation

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons had spare cell accommodation on 1 February. [28669]

Ms Quin: Spare accommodation is defined as the in use certified normal accommodation (CNA) at an establishment less the number of prisoners held on a specific date. The table lists the establishments reporting spare accommodation on 30 January 1998 (the nearest day to 1 February for which data are available).

Police (Bicycles)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department takes to encourage police officers to use bicycles while they are on patrol duty. [28656]

Mr. Michael: The Home Office does not take any steps specifically to encourage the use of bicycles. Guidance on how police forces can make the most effective use of patrol is set out in the handbook, "Tackling patrol effectively", which was issued in November 1996 jointly by the Home Office, the Audit Commission, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and the Association of Chief Police Officers. The handbook stresses that which should be designed to meet local needs.

"there is no single model for the organisation and management of patrol work"

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for political asylum were being dealt with by his Department on 1 February. [28665]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As at 31 December 1997, (the most recent date for which information is available) there were 51,795 applications for asylum in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, awaiting an initial decision by the Asylum Directorate of the Home Office.

Licensed Premises

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what multi-agency measures his Department is taking to tackle disorder within licensed premises. [28837]

Mr. George Howarth: We are determined to tackle alcohol-related disorder. We have agreed with the drinks industry a significant increase in the use of toughened glasses, to reduce injuries caused by "glassings". We have reminded the courts of their exclusion order powers to prohibit from licensed premises anyone convicted of a violent offence there. We are considering how the licensing regime might deal more effectively with premises which are the focus of disorder.

Disorder (Town Centres)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will create fora to bring together representatives from licensing authorities, town centre management, the police and community safety practitioners to tackle disorder in and around town centres. [28836]

Mr. Michael: The Crime and Disorder Bill will require the police and local authorities together to undertake a crime and disorder audit in the district, borough or unitary authority area, in consultation with other agencies and the wider community. They will then have to develop a local strategy to tackle the identified crime and disorder problems. The work of the partnerships created to implement the local strategies, which will include clear targets, will include action at a much more local level within the local authority area. If the process identifies town centre disorder as a problem, the partners would be expected to draw together those who have an interest in tackling the problem or to work with any existing forum in order to develop strategies for tackling the identified problems. Whether a forum of the form described by my hon. Friend would be the right vehicle would depend on local circumstances but may well play a significant role. The test of a forum approach would be whether it is clearly focused and effective in cutting crime and disorder.

Travellers

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to clarify the law in respect of gatherings of travellers on private land; and if he will make a statement. [28710]

Mr. Michael: We have no plans to change sections 61 and 62 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, which provides the police with the power to remove trespassers in certain circumstances. I understand that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has no plans to change sections 77 to 79 of the Act, which provide local authorities with the power to direct unauthorised campers to leave land. In exercising the wide discretion which they have under these powers, it is important for the police and local authorities to work together. Many police forces have, or are negotiating, agreements with local authorities, and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is currently developing good practice guidelines for local authorities.

Custodial Sentences

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the oral statement of 5 February 1998, Official Report, columns 225–27, if he will estimate the weekly numbers of people convicted for the first time of a criminal offence that could be followed by a custodial sentence of six months or more. [28811]

Mr. Michael: Information available centrally on previous convictions relates to standard list offences only. It is estimated that, on average, 2,400 people were convicted in each week of 1995 for a first such offence (this is the latest year for which figures are available). Standad list offences included all indictable and some of the more serious summary offences. As 98 per cent. of those sentenced for standard list offences in 1995 were sentenced for offences that carry a maximum sentence of six months or more, exclusion of offences with a lower maximum penalty would not materially affect this estimate.

Some offences not on the standard list also carry a maximum sentence of six months' imprisonment. These accounted for 134,000 of all those sentenced in 1995, but their contribution to the estimate requested is not known.

Citizenship

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 637, if he will list the statutory requirements for British citizenship. [28724]

Ms Quin: The requirements applicable in most cases for registration or naturalisation as a British citizen are set out in the British Nationality Act 1981. Further provision is made by the British Nationality (Falklands Islands) Act 1983, the Hong Kong (War Wives and Widows) Act 1996 and the British Nationality (Hong Kong) Act 1997.

Circus Animals

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the video produced by Animal Defenders on the treatment of animals in circuses, a copy of which has been sent to him; [29132]

(2) if he will make it his policy to ban the use of animals in circuses; [29131]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the legislation in respect of the welfare protection afforded to circus animals. [29133]

Mr. George Howarth: I understand that the video and other material have been passed to the police. It would not, therefore, be appropriate for me to comment on Animal Defenders' allegations.

The Protection of Animals Act 1911 makes it an offence to ill-treat or cause any unnecessary suffering to any domestic or captive animal. The maximum penalties for offences under the Act are a fine of £5,000, or six months' imprisonment, or both. The court may, in addition, deprive a person of ownership of an animal and order its removal if it is satisfied that to leave the animal with the owner would expose it to further cruelty.

In addition, the Performing Animals (Regulation) Act 1925 requires trainers and exhibitors of animals to be registered with the local authority. Under this Act, the police and officers of local authorities (who may include veterinary surgeons) have the power to enter and inspect premises where animals are being trained and exhibited. If cruelty or neglect is found, magistrates' courts can prohibit or restrict the training or exhibition of the animals and suspend or cancel the registration granted to the trainer or exhibitor.

These are widely based legislative provisions which apply to travelling circuses and winter or training quarters.

The All Party Parliamentary Group for Animal Welfare is currently preparing a full report on the welfare of circus animals. The Government will consider carefully any recommendations.

Cannabis-related Offences

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the totals and percentage of those accused of (a) possession of and (b) dealing in cannabis who were (i) found not guilty, (ii) fined and (iii) imprisoned in each of the past five years in each police area. [29139]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is not available by police force area. It could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Figures for the United Kingdom are given in the table.

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not available in the form requested since there is no limit in theory to the amount of fine which may be imposed. However, information relating to the number of fines imposed for cannabis offences by various amount bands is routinely published. Data for 1991–95 (the latest available) are given in the table.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total annual cost of imprisonment of those convicted of possessing or dealing in cannabis in each of the past five years. [29137]

Mr. George Howarth: The cost of imprisonment for those convicted of possessing or dealing cannabis is not calculated separately from other offenders. The available information gives an average cost per place in cash terms for all prisoners. This is shown in table A. Table B provides information on immediate custodial sentences handed down in England and Wales for offences of possession or unlawful supply of cannabis. This is available only for the five year period commencing 1991.

Prisoners (Prescriptions)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prescriptions were issued per 100 prisoners in British jails for (a) tranquilisers and (b) other medicinal drugs in each of the last five years. [29127]

Mr. George Howarth: Information is available only for the year 1996–97. Based on a sample of six prisons in England and Wales representing 4.2 per cent of the average daily population for that year, it is estimated that prescriptions which might generally be termed as tranquillisers amounted to 224 per 100 inmates. For other medications, the estimate is 2,078 per 100 inmates.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give for (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the Netherlands, (i) the number of heroin addicts per 1,000 of the population, (ii) the average age of heroin addicts, (iii) the number of deaths from ecstacy, (iv) the number of deaths from glue sniffing and (v) the number of cannabis users per 1,000 of the population, in each of the past five years. [29134]

Mr. George Howarth: Information relating to the Netherlands cannot be provided.

The number of heroin addicts per 1,000 of the United Kingdom population notified to the Home Office in each year from 1992 to 1996 was 0.2924, 0.3251, 0.3821, 0.4186 and 0.5199 respectively. Information concerning the average age of these addicts is not available. However, the average age for all notified addicts, of whom between 66 and 70 per cent were addicted to heroin, in the years in question was 29.4, 29.2, 28.8, 28.7 and 28.4 years.

With regard to the number of deaths from ecstasy and glue sniffing, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 21 January 1998, Official Report, columns 533–34.

Information concerning the number of 'cannabis users' per 1,000 of the United Kingdom population is not available. However, the British Crime Survey 1996 (which covers England and Wales) indicates that about 9 per cent. of persons in the 16–59 age group had used cannabis in the year prior to interview.

Prisoners Formerly in Care

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many current prison inmates are known to have previously been in care as children or young people; what proportion of the prison population this represents; and if he will make a statement. [27269]

Ms Quin: It is not known how many current prison inmates have previously been in care as children or young people since this information is not held centrally. However, according to the 1991 National Prison Survey, 26 per cent. of prisoners said that they had been taken into local authority care at some time.

HEALTH

Secure Accommodation

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the locations of those new places in local authority secure accommodation which (a) have been provided and (b) it is planned to provide within the next five years and which were not planned for on 1 May 1997. [25932]

Mr. Boateng: The location of the new places provided under the secure accommodation development programmes is shown in the table.

Correspondence

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy that he and his Ministers personally read the letters sent to them by hon. Members on constituency matters. [27672]

Ms Jowell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and his Ministers read and take account of the representations made to them on constituency and other matters.

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. The Department's executive Non Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) have implemented no major Information Technology (IT) systems during this period.

Major planned systems in the Department of Health for 1998–99 are given in the table:

System	£ Planned cost
Personnel System	443,000
Office System Upgrade	3.8 million

No agencies or NDPBs have plans for spend on major IT systems in 1998–99.

Surplus Land (Essex)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral answer of 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 139, how many acres of land in Colchester are planned to be disposed of by (a) the Department of Health, (b) the Regional Health Authority, (c) North Essex Health Authority, (d) Essex Rivers Healthcare Trust, (e) North Essex Mental Health Trust and (f) New Possibilities Health Trust. [28005]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive's North Thames Regional Office is leading on the planning and disposal of all the surplus land in Colchester held by the Department of Health, Essex Rivers Healthcare NHS Trust and North East Essex Mental Health NHS Trust.

The amount of land is as follows:

	Acres
Department of Health	89
Essex Rivers Healthcare NHS Trust	3
North East Essex Mental Health NHS Trust	108
Total	200

Note:
All these figures are approximations.

No land is to be disposed of by North Essex Health Authority or the New Possibilities NHS Trust. Regional Health Authorities were abolished in 1996.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral answer of 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 139, if he will invite the three NHS trusts in the Colchester constituency to merge their property and estate portfolios. [28006]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive's North Thames Regional Office is working on behalf of all three trusts in Colchester to dispose of their surplus estate. We have no plans to invite the trusts to merge other aspects of their property and estate portfolios.

GP Recruitment

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to deal with shortfalls in GP recruitment; and if he will make a statement. [28288]

Mr. Milburn: We are introducing a series of measures to enhance the attractiveness of general practice. Measures such as the salaried doctors scheme, an improved retainer scheme and Primary Care Act pilots will provide more flexible employment opportunities and be of particular help in areas with the greatest recruitment problems. The establishment of Primary Care Groups, as set out in the White Paper "The New NHS", will also give general practitioners and other primary care professionals greater scope to influence the development of health services locally.

Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the proportion of private beds in (a) each PFI contract approved and (b) each PFI contract being planned; and how many private and NHS beds there are in these contracts. [28308]

Mr. Milburn: Information on the number and proportion of private and National Health Service beds planned at the major acute approved Private Finance Initiative schemes and currently proposed for the major acute schemes testing for PFI is provided in the table. Information is also provided on the number of private beds currently provided at these trusts.

Information is not held centrally on the provision of private beds in smaller scale (capital value of £10 million or less) and non-acute PFI schemes.

Trust	Current number of private beds	Number of NHS beds provided by PFI scheme	Number of private beds provided by PFI scheme	Proportion of private beds provided by PFI scheme (%)
Norfolk and Norwich	18	809	20	2.5
South Buckinghamshire	11	535	[1]14	2.6

Bishop Auckland	1	341	1	0.29
Greenwich	[4]0	565	[7]0	0
South Tees	2	980	0	0

[1] This is the initial planned figure; there is provision for the total to increase to a maximum of 28.
[2] This may decrease to 14 during the detailed design phase.
[3] There is the possibility that a small number of NHS beds at the new hospital may be used for private patients.
[4] There are currently no dedicated private beds but some amenity beds are used for private patients.
[5] There are no plans for dedicated private beds but the current arrangement of using amenity beds for private patients will continue.

GP Commissioning

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on non-medical staff requirements of the implementation of GP commissioning; and if he will make a statement. [28289]

Mr. Milburn: As set out in the White Paper "The New NHS", the development of primary care groups will be evolutionary. These primary care groups will involve a range of primary care professionals as well as general practitioners. As part of the process of establishing primary care groups, we shall be considering the role of such bodies in securing an appropriately qualified and competent workforce. Guidance on these and other related issues will be prepared by the National Health Service Executive and issued in due course.

Evesham Community Hospital

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to respond to the letter from the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire of 9 December 1997 concerning the future of Evesham Community Hospital; and if he will make a statement. [28609]

Mr. Milburn: I replied to the hon. Member on 9 February.

Female Circumcision

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations of female circumcision were carried out in the NHS in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997. [28486]

Ms Jowell: None. The Prohibition of Female Circumcision Act 1985, makes it an offence to carry out the practice. It also makes it an offence for anyone to aid, abet, counsel or procure the carrying out of these procedures by any other person on her own body.

Nytol

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has assessed on the use of Nytol in conjunction with Ecstasy; and if he will make Nytol a prescription only drug. [28499]

Ms Jowell: The Department has not received any reports of the use of Nytol, a medicine containing diphenhydramine for temporary sleep disturbance, in conjunction with Ecstasy.

Medicines are restricted to prescription control if they are frequently, and to a very wide extent, used incorrectly, and as a result are likely to present a direct or indirect danger to human health. The Medicines Control Agency keeps the safety of all medicines under regular review and, wherever necessary, takes appropriate action to safeguard public health on the basis of new information. There is at present, no evidence to justify making Nytol a prescription only medicine.

School Expulsions (Drugs)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who in health and social services should provide advice and help to a child expelled from school for the use of drugs below school leaving age and to the parents concerned. [28814]

Ms Jowell: Where a young person's drug misuse is problematic, and treatment is required, the health authority is responsible for ensuring that treatment is provided, within available resources and in the light of local priorities. The Children Act 1989 provides a framework of powers and responsibilities to ensure that children receive the care and protection they need. Section 47 of the Act requires local authority social services departments to make inquiries where they have reasonable cause to suspect that a child in their area is suffering, or is likely to suffer, significant harm and this may include situations where a child is misusing drugs. There may also be situations where there are concerns about a child's well-being and development as a result of drug misuse but where abuse is not the issue. Section 17 of the Children Act requires local authorities to provide support and services for children in need.

Department for Education and Employment Circular 4–95 "Drug Prevention in Schools", issued to all schools in May 1995, offers guidance on dealing with drug-related incidents. The document places particular emphasis on the development of an agreed policy to deal with drug-related incidents and the desirability of schools developing a repertoire of responses to incidents.

Our strategy on drugs makes young people a priority. Guidance sent to health authorities and directors of social services in March last year asked them to work together with their Drug Action Team on ensuring that agencies are clear about their responsibilities, and that services for drug misusers are properly planned locally. The guidance recommended that services should be structured to meet the requirements of and be sensitive to the needs of particular groups such as young people. The Department launched in November 1997 three documents aimed at helping all agencies concerned to meet the needs of young people for drug services. This included advice on which groups are at most risk of problematic drug misuse, based on the available evidence. Young people excluded from school are identified as being at particular risk of problematic drug use.

Public Health

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the ways in which his health targets vary from the equivalent previous targets. [28828]

Ms Jowell: The targets we have proposed will allow us to focus on our key aims: to improve the health of the population as a whole by increasing the length of people's lives and the number of years people spend free from illness, and to improve the health of the worst off in society and to narrow the health gap.

The targets differ from those in the previous strategy because they cover different time periods, different combinations of diseases, different age groups (for cancers) and, in the case of accidents, a measure of illness and disability rather than one for mortality. While Health of the Nation targets contained a mixture of outcomes and determinants, only four national outcome targets have been proposed in Our Healthier Nation, one in each of the four priority areas. This will help to focus the strategy on improving health outcome. A wide range of actions will be needed to achieve these targets and health benefits should accordingly occur across a broad front.

Our Healthier Nation goes substantially beyond Health of the Nation, as it acknowledges the impact that social and economic factors can have on producing health inequalities, and sets out national contracts which show what action can be taken at Government, local and individual level to improve health. Built into this process is the opportunity to set local targets which will allow local areas to address their particular concerns and to tackle the health problems of those local neighbourhoods or groups which suffer more from poor health. In association with other measures identified in Our Healthier Nation this will help to address the major health inequalities which exist.

The targets proposed in Our Healthier Nation have been set to be challenging yet realistic. They were set by taking into account recent historical trends in this country, international trends where available, and examination of other relevant factors—for example, the fact that progress is likely to get harder and slower to achieve as the easy challenges are overcome and the really difficult and most deep-seated problems are tackled. There are signs of this happening in other countries who are further along the progress curve than we are. In Australia, for instance, long-standing steady progress on coronary heart disease is showing signs of some slowing down. It cannot, therefore, be assumed that past trends will continue indefinitely.

The proposed targets are now the subject of consultation. A full list, along with the nearest related Health of the Nation targets, were given in reply to the hon. Member for Runnymede and Weybridge (Mr. Hammond) on 10 February 1998, Official Report, columns 153–54.

Asthma

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the relative contributions of (a) the house mite with central heating and (b) motor vehicle pollution to asthma and changes in the incidence of asthma. [28810]

Ms Jowell: The prevalence of asthma has doubled in the United Kingdom over the last 15–20 years, in line with trends in other western countries. Asthma is a complex disease which is likely to be due to a number of different factors, including environmental. Neither the exact cause of asthma nor the precise reasons for this increased prevalence are known. A range of factors are known to trigger attacks in asthmatics including: exposure to allergens, infections, environmental tobacco smoke, high levels of outdoor air pollution, breathing cold dry air, exercise, and emotion.

It is not possible to estimate the relative contribution of these different factors to the prevalence of asthma. Central heating and well insulated homes provide the sorts of conditions in which house dust mites thrive. Sensitivity to the house dust mite allergen is certainly common in the UK. Motor vehicles are a major source of outdoor air pollution, high levels of which can lead to a worsening of symptoms in asthmatics. Also, there is some evidence that those who live close to busy roads are more likely to suffer from respiratory ailments and more asthma attacks.

A number of projects in a £3 million Department of Health/Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions/Medical Research Council research programme on air pollution and health are currently examining some of the possible links between asthma and outdoor air pollution. The results of these should be known early next year. In addition, contracts for a three year £1 million joint DH/DETR indoor research programme looking at aspects of the indoor environment have just been let. When both these programmes have been completed, our understanding of some of the mechanisms at play in the development of asthma should be greatly improved.

NHS Management Costs

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of NHS health authority management costs in England and Wales; and if he will list each authority in order of management costs per head of population, showing (a) annual expenditure, (b) expenditure per head of population and (c) management costs per head of population. [28670]

Mr. Milburn: Health authority costs in England were £450 million in 1996–97. Action is in hand to reduce these costs by £18 million in real terms in 1997–98 and then by a further £12 million in real terms in 1998–99. The figures requested have been placed in the Library. Health authority costs in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

General Practitioners

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discretion GPs will have to refer patients as they wish when ECRs are abolished; and what will be the source of funding of referrals not covered by contracts. [28891]

Mr. Milburn: Under the proposals set out in the White Paper, "The new NHS", all but a small minority of general practitioner referrals to hospitals should be covered either by long term agreements reflecting the views of all local GPs or by the new high level commissioning arrangements for specialist services. The new system will continue to allow for instances where a patient's special clinical needs or personal services require a GP to make individualised arrangements, but will eliminate the bureaucracy of the current system of extra-contractual referrals.

The Government's proposals for funding patient treatment currently covered by extra-contractual referral invoicing are set out in paragraphs 9.16 and 9.17 of the White Paper, "The New NHS". Copies have been placed in the Library.

More detailed advice will be issued by summer 1998.

Aricept

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the Government's policy on the prescribing of Aricept (Donepezil); and if he will make a statement. [28863]

Mr. Milburn: The Standing Medical Advisory Committee is currently considering the benefits of the drug Aricept and is preparing guidance for clinicians in the National Health Service. Health authorities and clinicians already have access to a number of sources of information on Aricept, on which they can make decisions about the use of this drug.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the National Health Service of the abolition of compulsory competitive tendering. [29008]

Mr. Milburn: The continuing requirement to market test the three hotel services, catering, cleaning and laundry, is being considered currently as part of a review of market testing policy. Whatever the outcome of the review, we are committed to achieving the best value in terms of both cost and quality of service for all National Health Service patients.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the reasons for the disparities in life expectancy for those suffering from breast cancer in (a) the UK, (b) France and (c) the USA. [29128]

Mr. Boateng: We are very concerned about the incidence of breast cancer in the United Kingdom and that so many women die from this condition. Despite the volume of research into breast cancer both here and abroad, we do not have definitive answers on the reasons for this. We do know that contributory factors include diet, lifestyle and hormonal (eg late menarche, childlessness) and hereditary factors.

There are substantial international variations in recorded survival rates, but these may reflect in part differences in factors such as varying levels of completeness of cancer registration. International comparisons are also potentially misleading because only a limited number of countries, including the UK, have comprehensive cancer registration systems. In the United States of America, only 12 per cent. of the population is covered. It is difficult to establish conclusive links between, for instance, treatment and survival rates when data on other factors which may influence the eventual outcome are lacking.

Clearly, we want to do all we can to ensure that all women with breast cancer receive the best possible treatment to maximise outcomes. This is why we have made clear our commitment to improving cancer services across the board. We have already made an extra £10 million available for breast cancer services. This will help speed access to diagnosis and treatment as a first step towards reducing waiting times, and improving specialist breast cancer services to ensure that women are diagnosed quickly and receive the best possible treatment.

Traumatic Brain Injury

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients treated by the NHS in the last three years for traumatic brain injury were (a) in permanent in-patient care, (b) receiving day care and (c) cared for by primary care teams in the community. [24278]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 21 January 1998]: There were an estimated 66,600 in-patient episodes of care with a primary diagnosis of traumatic brain injury in England in 1995–96 compared with an estimated 70,000 in 1994–95 and 73,300 in 1993–94. The same person may be counted more than once if they have more than one episode of care.

A revised international statistical classification of diseases and related health problems (ICD10) became effective from 1 April 1995 and several thousand new classification codes were introduced. It is therefore not always possible to provide an exact equivalent match between an ICD10 code and the former ICD9 classification when a time series is required.

The information available is shown in the table and is based on finished consultant episodes, which represent the number of episodes of care under individual consultants. There is no separate information for those receiving permanent in-patient care, day care or those cared for by primary care teams in the community.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what contingency plans he has formulated to ensure that visitors can get to the Dome if the completion of the Jubilee Line is delayed. [27485]

Mr. Mandelson: London Underground publicly confirmed earlier this week that the Jubilee Line Extension will be completed, with up to 24 trains an hour running through from Stanmore to Stratford from spring 1999, well before the opening of the Millennium Experience at Greenwich. The proposed level of service will cater fully for the substantial number of visitors expected to travel to the Greenwich site on the Jubilee Line in 2000.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will estimate the rates of absenteeism in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date; and if he will make a statement. [26627]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 116.

Sporting Events

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 133, if any of the nine international events will be staged in (a) the North West or (b) Lancashire. [28454]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The World Cup in Orienteering (Events 3 & 4) will be staged in the Lake District in May, this year. The Sports Acrobatics World Championships were staged in Manchester in September 1997. Should the Football Association's bid to stage the Soccer World Cup (2006) in England be successful, it will be held at venues across the country, including the North West.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 133, if he will list the locations for each of the successful bids for events to be held in the United Kingdom later this year. [28455]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The World Disabled Athletics Championships are to be held at the Alexander Stadium in Birmingham from 10–17 August 1998.

The European Showjumping Championships are to be held at the Showground in Harrogate from 25–28 August 1999.

The World Orienteering Championships are to be held in Inverness and the Scottish Highlands from 1–8 August 1999.

The IAAF World Cross Country Championships are to be held in Belfast from 27–28 March 1999.

Broadcasting

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the timescale for the transition from analogue to digital terrestrial broadcasting; and if he will make a statement. [29660]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have today published a Government consultation paper "Television: the Digital Future" alongside the report "A Study to Estimate the Economic Impact of Government Policies towards Digital Television" which outlines the results of research undertaken, by National Economic Research Associates (NERA) and Smith System Engineering Ltd., on behalf of my Department and the Department of Trade and Industry's Radiocommunications Agency. I have placed copies of both documents in the Libraries of the House.

SCOTLAND

Railways

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for what reason the promotion of private legislation in Scotland to permit the building of new railway lines is to remain a Westminster matter. [23303]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 16 January 1998]: The provision and regulation of railway services is proposed to be a matter in respect of which legislative competence is reserved to the Westminster Parliament by virtue of Section 2 of Head 5 of Schedule 5 of the Scotland Bill. Therefore, any legislation, whether private or public, in respect of that reserved matter is properly a matter for the Westminster Parliament as it will be outwith the competence of the Scottish Parliament to legislate in relation to reserved matters.

It is sensible in practical terms that safety, security and regulatory matters should be reserved to the UK Parliament to achieve consistent standards across the whole GB network and to allow for the smooth operation of services.

Confederation of British Industry

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to address the concerns of CBI Scotland in relation to the tax issues they raised with him on 30 January. [28795]

Mr. Dewar: I had a useful and constructive meeting with CBI Scotland. As I indicated to them, the Government will shortly be issuing a paper setting out their proposals for dealing with a range of second order issues relating to the operation of the Scottish variable tax rate. The paper will cover the main issues raised with me by CBI Scotland and I believe that it will meet their main concerns. The Government will take account of any further views expressed in response to this paper before preparing the appropriate secondary legislation.

Community Pharmacists

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what basis he calculated the dispensing fee of (a) 89p per item and (b) 60p per item for second and subsequent dispensings for patients considered to be at risk for community pharmacy contractors; what research he (i) commissioned and (ii) evaluated into the adequacy of this level of remuneration; and if he will make a statement. [28649]

Mr. Galbraith: Community pharmacy remuneration is based on a global sum for spending on pharmaceutical services. In order to deliver the overall global sum to pharmacists a statistical model is used which takes into account both historical data and predicted growth in prescription volume. The community pharmacists' professional allowance and the feescale for specific items have been set in accordance with the model to deliver a global sum in 1997–98 of £72.6 million; an increase of 2.4 per cent. on the previous year.

Crime (Knives)

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is taking to tackle crimes involving knives. [28804]

Mr. McLeish: The Government implemented the main provisions of the Knives Act 1997 on 1 September 1997. These create an offence of marketing a knife in a way which suggests that it is suitable for combat or which encourages violent behaviour. They supplement existing legislation, including the Knives (Scotland) Act 1993, aimed at preventing or dealing with knife-related crime. The Crime and Disorder Bill includes provisions for extended sentences for violent offenders which will enable the courts to impose supervised release beyond the end of a custodial term where this is required for the protection of the public. We remain open to proposals for measures which will address the problem of the use of knives as weapons without interfering with their legitimate everyday use.

NHS Dentists

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to increase the number of NHS dentists in Scotland. [28806]

Mr. Galbraith: In August of last year, I introduced the Scottish Dental Access Initiative to encourage dentists to set up or expand NHS practices in areas where there is unmet demand by patients for NHS general dental services. "Return to Work" grants have also been made available to encourage dentists on a career break to return to the profession and join established dental practices in areas of unmet demand to offer NHS general dental services.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was allocated to Glasgow City Council for the provision of warden services in sheltered housing for 1997–98. [28807]

Mr. Galbraith: The Government do not allocate funding for these services separately. It is for councils to determine from their available resources the level of funding for a particular service.

Hospital Patients

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the average length of patient stay in each hospital trust in Scotland in each of the last five years. [28808]

Mr. Galbraith: The information requested is provided in the table.

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28053]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The Scottish Office has received no letters recently in the languages listed at (b) to (e). Correspondents who write in Gaelic may expect to receive a reply in Gaelic.

Gaelic Broadcasting

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations have been made to him regarding a possible conflict of interest in the appointment of a consultant to undertake a report on the opportunities for Gaelic broadcasting in the digital era; and if he will make a statement. [29214]

Mr. Wilson: Three letters have been received. Replies have pointed out that there is no conflict of interest, since the Scottish Office has no role in the award of licences for programme service providers or in contracts for television production. These are matters for the Independent Television Commission and the broadcasters respectively.

Student Awards

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the membership of the committee set up to review the handling of grant applications by the Student Awards Agency for Scotland; when the review committee will meet; and when the review committee will publish its findings. [29176]

Mr. Wilson: The membership of the Steering Committee which is overseeing the Review of the Student Awards Agency for Scotland follows. The Committee held its first meeting on 22 January. I expect the findings of the Review, which will be made public, to be reported to Ministers in April.

Chairman

Mr. G. R. Wilson, Secretary, The Scottish Office Education and Industry Department

Members

Mr. E. J. Weeple, The Scottish Office Education and Industry Department

Mr. N. G. Campbell, The Scottish Office Home Department

Mr. D. M. Cattanach, Committee of Scottish Higher Education Principals

Mr. A. T. McKechnie, Committee of Scottish Higher Education Principals

Mr. T. J. Kelly, Association of Scottish Colleges

Mr. K. Lloyd-Jones, National Union of Students (Scotland)

Mr. R. C. S. McKendrick, The Scottish Office Trade Union Side

Ms E. McQuater, Bank of Scotland

Mr. A. G. Grant, General Accident

Mrs. M. D. Campbell, Standard Life.

Teacher Training

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what factors underlay the decision to give the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council the responsibility for deciding the annual intake figures for teacher training courses. [29178]

Mr. Wilson: Since its inception, the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council has been responsible for allocating funded student places to individual institutions offering teacher education courses. The Secretary of State has made recommendations to SHEFC about overall intake levels to the different types of teacher education courses. In his report on teacher education and training for the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education, Sir Stewart Sutherland recommended that we should consider the desirability and implications of increasing the maximum intake to courses of teacher education. In responding to that recommendation I have indicated that we have no plans to abandon entirely controls on the numbers of new teachers being trained. We have, however, decided that the Government should focus in future on their strategic objectives for teacher education and supply, including minimum requirements for newly trained teachers. In keeping with its responsibilities for funding higher education generally, it will be for the Funding Council to set intakes to teacher education courses as it considers appropriate, while ensuring that the Government's strategic objectives are met. This should introduce more flexibility into the teacher education system while ensuring that the needs of the school system are met.

Student Travel Allowance

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if students beginning courses in 1999–2000 and beyond will be eligible to claim travel allowance on the same basis as at present. [29173]

Mr. Wilson: We are considering the detail of some of the supplementary allowances for new students in 1999–2000 and beyond, including travel.

Student Loans

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if students beginning courses in 2000 who are over the age of 50 years will be able to take out a student loan under the new arrangements. [29174]

Mr. Wilson: The question of the upper age limit for student loans under the new student support arrangements is under consideration.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who will be responsible for administering the new hardship loan scheme; how much money in total has been allocated for this purpose; how much each individual student will be able to claim in the form of a hardship loan; whether all students who apply will be given a hardship loan; when and how those who take out hardship loans will be expected to repay them; and if he will make a statement. [29175]

Mr. Wilson: £0.64 million has been allocated for this purpose in 1998–99 in Scotland. New students starting their courses in 1998–99, who are eligible for the student loan, will be able to apply for the hardship loan. It will be discretionary and is intended to contribute towards the living costs of students who may need extra help. The maximum amount available to individual students will be £250 per year and it will be repayable on an income contingent basis under similar arrangements to those for the student loan for new students in 1998–99 and beyond.

The other points raised are currently being considered as part of the work on the new scheme.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Incomes

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his oral answer of 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 1132, on farmers' incomes, if he will tabulate income levels in pounds above and below the median, in octiles as a percentage of all holdings in the United Kingdom for the latest year for which figures are available and 1990, adjusted for inflation. [27020]

Mr. Rooker: The information is given in the table for England and Wales. Comparable information for the United Kingdom could not be provided in the time available. These figures are based on grossed up data from the 2,500 full-time farms in the Farm Business Survey.

Net farm incomes in octiles (England and Wales)

Octile	Octile income (£/farm)
	1990–91 (adjusted to 1996 prices)	1996–97
1.	−5,000	−1,500
2.	2,300	6,000
3.	7,200	11,200
4. (median)	11,700	17,600
5.	17,300	25,400
6.	26,900	36,800
7.	44,600	61,100

Correspondence

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy that he and his Ministers personally read the letters sent to them by hon. Members on constituency matters. [27666]

Dr. John Cunningham: I and my ministerial team read all letters sent to us by hon. Members on constituency matters.

Beef Exports

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he proposes to take to regulate the export of beef and bonemeal from the United Kingdom to non-EU destinations. [27510]

Mr. Rooker: The export of beef derived from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK and of all meat and bonemeal is prohibited by European Commission Decision 96/239/EC, as amended. The Government have submitted proposals to the European Commission for two schemes which would permit the export of deboned beef, and products made from that beef, from the UK. Those proposals, which include strict control measures to regulate such exports, are under consideration by the Commission in accordance with the procedures agreed at the Florence European Council.

BSE

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the Belgian authorities on the incidence of BSE in that country, and the regulation of meat imports therefrom; and if he will make a statement. [27470]

Mr. Rooker: Belgium has had one case of BSE. That case has been discussed extensively by the European Commission's Standing Veterinary Committee on which the UK is represented by the Chief Veterinary Officer or one of his veterinary staff. On the basis of the controls on the production and marketing of meat laid down in Community law, there is no reason for imposing additional controls on the import of meat from Belgium.

Veterinary Surgeons

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many veterinary surgeons are employed by (a) his Department and (b) other public bodies, for animal inspection duties; and what proportion of these are (i) United Kingdom citizens, (ii) citizens of other EU countries and (iii) other nationals. [27468]

Mr. Rooker: In the State Veterinary Service, there are 310 directly employed Veterinary Surgeons. Of these, 301 are UK Citizens, five are Citizens of other EU Member States and four are other nationals.

In the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group there are 13 directly employed Veterinary Surgeons. Of these 12 are UK Citizens and one is a Citizen of another EU Member State.

In the Veterinary Laboratories Agency there are 93 directly employed Veterinary Surgeons. Of these, 91 are UK Citizens and two are Citizens of other EU Member States.

The Meat Hygiene Service directly employs 48 Veterinary Surgeons. Of these, 39 are UK Citizens, six are Citizens of other EU Member States and three are other Nationals. The Meat Hygiene Service also contracts out Veterinary Services to Veterinary Agencies and Practices. There are 486 Official Veterinary Surgeons employed in this way. Of these, 408 are UK Citizens, 73 are Citizens of other EU Member States and five are other nationals.

The Department does not keep records of Veterinary Surgeons employed by other Public Bodies.

Slaughter Process (Public Health)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish comparisons of charges made to ensure public health in the slaughter process in the United Kingdom with those prevailing in other EU states. [28114]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is not available. Council Directive 85/73/EEC (as amended) on the financing of veterinary inspections and controls, requires Member States to recover the costs of those hygiene inspections conducted at licensed fresh meat premises in accordance with harmonised EC meat hygiene rules. The Directive sets minimum standard charges (in ECUs) applicable in all Member States, for hygiene inspections of red meat, poultry meat and game meat dependent on the species and size of animals being slaughtered. Subject to meeting specified criteria, such as the efficiency of operations at individual plants, the Directive provides for the standard charge to be abated by up to 55 per cent. Conversely, where the actual cost of inspection exceeds the standard charge, the Directive provides for actual costs to be charged. Similar principles apply in respect of charges for cutting plants. The European Commission is responsible for ensuring that individual Member States comply with their Community obligations.

Beef on the Bone

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the requirement to remove bone from beef applies to animals killed on the farm for farmers' own consumption. [27855]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The Beef Bones Regulations do not require meat to be de-boned if it is derived from a bovine animal slaughtered on the farmer's farm for his own consumption. Such slaughter must be carried out in accordance with the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995 and the Specified Risk Material Regulations 1997. If the bovine animal is sent for slaughter off the farm, then meat must be de-boned before it is returned to the farmer for consumption in his household.

Fishery Quotas

Mr. Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the quota system, as a system of national quotas, is a derogation from the general rule of equal conditions of access to fishery resources and the principle of non-discrimination. [28655]

Mr. Morley: The system of national quotas under the Common Fisheries Policy applies without discrimination to all Member States and is not a time-limited derogation.

Meat Prices

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will instigate an investigation into the level of meat prices in United Kingdom supermarkets; what representations he has made to UK supermarkets concerning (a) the price of meat and (b) the promotion of British meat; and if he will make a statement. [27913]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The levels of retail prices for meat are set by competition, which is strong in the food retailing sector. The Director General of Fair Trading keeps the market under review to ensure that it continues to remain competitive. I see no case, at present, for separate investigation, or for specific representations to food retailing firms. As regards beef, we are introducing a voluntary beef labelling scheme in the United Kingdom with effect from 1 April 1998; this will allow consumers to make informed choices about the beef they purchase and will reassure them that British beef meets the traceability requirements.

Scotch Whisky

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the requirements and enforcement of legislation in EU nations regarding the definition and labelling of Scotch whisky. [27904]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 12 February 1998]: Council Regulation 1576/89 lays down EU rules on the definition, description and presentation of spirit drinks (including Scotch whisky) which must be enforced in all Member States. In the United Kingdom, local authorities are empowered by statutory instrument to enforce the provisions through their trading standards, environmental health and port health officers. The same officers enforce the purely domestic provisions of the statutory instrument defining Scotch whisky made under the Scotch Whisky Act 1988.

Farmers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the impact of a farmers' early retirement scheme on the overall level of production in the (i) livestock, (ii) arable and (iii) dairy sectors. [28855]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 10 February 1998]: None. We can undertake such research only when we have fully assessed what measures we can take in this regard and have consulted the industry on them.

Beef

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many officials are currently directly involved in (a) the entry-point monitoring of beef imports and (b) the point of sale monitoring of beef on the bone sales. [27910]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 February 1998]: These checks are carried out by local authority staff. It is possible to answer the question only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the procedures adopted to monitor the import of beef; what documentation is required by beef importers to satisfy the conditions on imports set by the United Kingdom Government; and if he will make a statement on the procedures in place to ensure the adequate traceability from herd to point of sale for all beef imports. [27911]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Consignments of all animal products imported into the European Union (EU) are subject to documentary, identity and physical checks at designated Border Inspection Posts (BIPs). All consignments are subject to documentary checks. The levels of identity and physical checks, which are laid down in Community legislation, depend on the product and country of origin. Single Market rules permit random spot-checks only at destination on animal products traded within the Community.

Beef imported from other EU Member States or third countries must, in accordance with Community law, be accompanied by commercial documentation or health certification, depending on the country of dispatch. Certain animal products imported into the UK require additional official veterinary certification relating to Specified Risk Materials (SRM). The certification confirms that the product does not contain and was not derived from SRM; or was produced before 1 January; or contains only materials derived from animals born, reared and slaughtered in New Zealand or Australia.

In order to aid traceability, all imported beef must have the health markings provided for in Council Directive 64–433, which identify the approved establishment from which it originated. Commercial documentation or veterinary or other certification accompanying imported beef must also contain details of the approved establishment so that, if necessary, problems can be referred back to the relevant authorities in the exporting country.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of beef imports to the United Kingdom come from countries with a record of BSE incidence in their herds; and if he will make a statement. [27912]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Official Overseas Trade Statistics for the year to 31 October 1997, showing the quantities and percentages of beef, beef preparations and beef offal imported from countries with recorded cases of BSE in home-bred animals, are set out in the following table.

UK imports of bovine meat, offal and meat preparations November 1996-October 1997 tonnes	percentage of total imports

Belgium-Luxembourg	2,067	0.9
France	5,396	2.3
Irish Republic	72,769	31.2
Netherlands	18,775	8.1
Portugal	0	0.0
Others	133,883	57.5

TREASURY

Economic and Monetary Union

16. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on preparations for economic and monetary union. [27217]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The Government consider it vital that British business is ready for the single currency when it arrives on 1 January 1999 and that the British people have a genuine choice whether or not to join EMU early next Parliament.

The Business Advisory Group on the euro which I established last July has reported. Its key message is that UK business must prepare for the strategic implications of the introduction of the euro on 1 January 1999.

The Bank of England is continuing its excellent work to ensure that the wholesale financial markets are ready for January 1999.

The Standing Committee I set up to oversee preparation has agreed a programme to ensure business has the information it needs to prepare. It will publish an outline plan around the end of the year on how the UK might change over to the euro if we join.

29. Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from business on the European single currency. [27230]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The Government receive a large number of representations from business on a wide range of issues, including Economic and Monetary Union. In July, I announced the establishment of a Business Advisory Group on EMU to allow dialogue between the Government and business on the practical and strategic implications of the single currency. A report summarising the conclusions from the group was published on 30 January and is available in the House Library.

30. Jacqui Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met his EU counterparts to discuss the single currency. [27231]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I met my EU counterparts at ECOFIN on 19 January, when the items for discussion included the preparations for stage 3 of EMU.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 572, which parts of the statutes of the Bank of England and the related Acts of Parliament would need to be (a) deleted, (b) amended and (c) inserted in preparation for, or consequent to, the United Kingdom joining the third stage of Economic and Monetary Union. [28896]

Mr. Darling: Amendments would have to be made to the provisions of the current Bank of England Bill in relation to aspects of the independence of the Bank of England and its integration in the European System of Central Banks. The statutory basis of the ways and means facility provided by the Bank of England pursuant to section 12 of the National Loans Act 1968 would have to be repealed. The Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 would have to be amended to enable effect to be given to the provisions of the Maastricht Treaty dealing with foreign reserves. Finally, the legislation dealing with notes and coin, in particular the provisions of the Currency and Bank Notes Acts 1928 and 1954, would have to be amended in order to reflect the substitution for sterling of euro notes and coin and their status as legal tender.

Hypothecated Taxes

17. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase the use of hypothecated taxes. [27218]

Mr. Darling: There are great difficulties with hypothecation. However, we look at each case on its merits.

Married Women's Taxation

18. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his plans for the future of independent married women's taxation. [27219]

Mr. Darling: Decisions on tax are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement. The hon. lady would not expect me to anticipate it. But my right hon. Friend has already made clear that there will be no return to the pre-1990 system in which a married woman was effectively treated as a chattel for tax purposes.

Windfall Tax

19. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to use the revenues accruing from the windfall tax. [27220]

Ms Blears: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy on spending the windfall levy. [27237]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The receipts of the Windfall Tax are being used not only to provide new work and training opportunities for young people, the long-term unemployed, lone parents and persons who are sick and disabled who want the right to work, but also to fund £1.2 billion of capital expenditure for schools, and is contributing to the development of a National Child Care Strategy. I can tell the House that £2.6 billion of the sum has already been paid by the utilities.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much will be raised in the present financial year from the windfall levy. [27215]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The windfall tax is expected to raise some £5.2 billion in total, payable in two equal instalments. The payments made to date are fully in line with our forecast of some £2.6 billion this financial year.

Public Pay

20. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the impact of the public pay review bodies' recommendations on the public spending limits of 1998–99. [27221]

Mr. Darling: The recommendations would have cost some £1.3 billion. Staging their implementation means that the settlements will cost some £896 million in 1998–99. These costs will be contained within existing spending plans.

Inflation Forecasts

21. Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what forecasts he has made for inflation up to 2000. [27222]

Mr. Darling: The November 1997 Pre-Budget Report (Cm 3804) included inflation forecasts up to the end of 2000.

Overseas Visits

22. Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many official visits to Brussels have been made by Ministers in his Department since 1 May to discuss offshore trusts. [27223]

Mr. Darling: There have not been any Ecofin discussions about off-shore trusts as such. There have of course been several discussions about various aspects of taxation particularly in the context of the Harmful Tax Competition Package agreed at Ecofin last December.

Land Settlement Associations

23. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the tax treatment of compensation awarded to former tenants of the land settlement associations. [27224]

35. Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the tax treatment of compensation for former tenants of the land settlement associations. [27236]

Mr. Darling: Representations have been made querying the raising of a tax charge in respect of out of court compensation paid by MAFF to a number of former tenants of the Land Settlement Association. It has been explained that under tax law, compensation received for a capital loss, or for personal hardship, is not liable to income tax, but where a payment is made to compensate a restriction of trading opportunities, or to fill a hole in profits, it is taxable as trading income. And that the nature of a compensation payment in an out of court settlement is decided by the evidence of the claims for compensation. Just how much of a compensation payment received is for restricted trading opportunities, capital loss, or personal hardship is a matter for agreement between the recipient and the Inspector of Taxes.

Families (Fiscal Support)

24. Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of existing fiscal support for the family. [27225]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Support through the tax system is provided by the married couple's allowance and the additional personal allowance. Additional personal allowance is available to those who have a dependent child living with them but are not married and to married men whose wives are incapacitated and have dependent children.

Support through the benefit system is provided through:

Child Benefit which helps all families with the extra cost of having children; child and family premia in Income Support which help those families who cannot work; and Family Credit which provides targeted help to those with children who are in work and on low incomes.

My hon. Friend will also be aware that I have asked Martin Taylor to lead a task force looking at streamlining and modernising the tax and benefits system. And, as I said in my pre-Budget report, the Government are examining the possibility of introducing a Working Families Tax Credit, which would provide support to more working families on low incomes.

VAT (Fuel)

25. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from pensioners' organisations on his reduction in VAT on fuel. [27226]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: I am pleased to tell my hon. Friend that we have reduced VAT on fuel to 5 per cent., the lowest level permitted to us under EC regulations. It has been well received throughout the country, particularly by pensioner communities.

Offshore Tax Havens

26. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures his Department is taking to obtain information from offshore tax havens on funds held for the benefit of United Kingdom residents. [27227]

Mr. Darling: Provisions in the UK's bilateral Double Taxation Agreements with other countries enable information to be exchanged between the UK and treaty partner tax authorities.

Trusts (Taxation)

27. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy in respect of the taxation of trusts. [27228]

Mr. Darling: We are committed to taking action to close any tax loopholes which may exist.

MIRAS

28. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations have been received on the future of MIRAS. [27229]

Mr. Darling: Since May 1997 Treasury Ministers have received about 180 letters concerning the future of mortgage interest relief. Of these the vast majority have come from individuals.

Tax Evasion

31. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the extent of revenue lost through tax evasion in the last year for which figures are available. [27232]

Mr. Gordon Brown: No such estimate has been made. There is no generally accepted method of producing a reliable estimate. But during the fiscal year 1996–97, Inland Revenue investigation and compliance work brought approximately £1.5 billion additional tax into charge.

Tax Yield

32. Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cumulative total tax yield to be received by the Exchequer by the end of the financial year 2001–02 from the tax changes he has so far announced since 1 May 1997. [27233]

Mr. Darling: The forecast cumulative revenue yield for 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000 for the changes announced in the July 1997 Budget are shown in table 2.2 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report (HC85).

Inland Revenue Services

33. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had on future provision of Inland Revenue services in remote rural areas. [27234]

Mr. Darling: The Inland Revenue is considering the best way to provide services to all its customers as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, and the 10 year programme to reorganise the Department's network of local offices. A small number of representations about the offices to be included in the final stage of the reorganisation programme have been received.

R and D Projects (Tax Breaks)

34. Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce tax breaks for companies investing in research and development projects involving partnership with United Kingdom educational establishments. [27235]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The Chancellor and President of the Board of Trade are taking a wide-ranging look at ways of improving the UK's record on investment in research and development. As a first step I am sponsoring a working group on the financing of high technology companies. Given the nearness of the Budget I am unable to comment on particular matters of taxation.

Individual Savings Accounts

37. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the £50,000 limit he proposes for individual savings accounts. [27238]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Our proposals for the ISA were issued for consultation. The consultation period has now finished and we are considering the responses received. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor will make a further announcement about the ISA in his Budget on 17 March.

Mozambique (Debt Relief)

38. Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made within the Paris Club in agreeing the terms of debt relief for Mozambique. [27239]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Negotiations are still continuing in a number of international fora on the issue of providing debt relief for Mozambique under the HIPC initiative. The UK is working hard to secure a quick solution that will provide a full and sustainable exit for Mozambique from its debt problems.

National Insurance Contributions

39. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on increasing the upper earnings limit on national insurance contributions; and if he will make a statement. [27240]

Mr. Darling: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 15 January 1998, Official Report, column 307.

Financial Planning

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) areas of expenditure and (b) the amounts involved, where (i) money has been saved and (ii) new income (1) has been raised and (2) is anticipated, which were not in the previous Government's financial plans for the two financial years ending on 1 April 2000. [24224]

Mr. Darling: As part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, Departments have been looking to deliver services and priorities more efficiently and to reallocate money towards the Government's top priorities. A statement on the conclusions of the review will be made in the summer.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what rate inheritance tax on agricultural property relief is currently available to an in-hand farmer who has owned the property for seven years, in the case of (a) the farmhouse, assuming no non-agricultural value, (b) the cottage of an agricultural worker prospectively protected under the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 and (c) a cottage occupied under the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 by a former agricultural worker who retired after 31 August 1995. [26847]

Dawn Primarolo: Agricultural value of farming assets can qualify for up to 100 per cent. relief from inheritance tax if the appropriate statutory conditions are satisfied. The availability, or otherwise, of relief could therefore be determined only in the light of all the relevant facts. The information provided by the hon. Member is not sufficient for me to provide answers to the specific points raised.

Correspondence

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy that he and his Ministers personally read the letters sent to them by hon. Members on constituency matters. [27675]

Mr. Gordon Brown: This has always been our policy.

Income Tax

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce a top rate of tax for those earning over £40 million per year. [28271]

Dawn Primarolo: Decisions on taxation are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement.

VAT (Church Buildings)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 23 January 1998, Official Report, column 708, who was involved in the decision not to reduce VAT on church buildings. [28010]

Dawn Primarolo: No decision was required. EC law does not allow a reduced rate for church buildings. There is no conflict between our policy objectives and EC law.

The Government believe it is more efficient to help to preserve the heritage by means of direct grants.

Civil Servants

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by grade the number of officials in his Department at grade 3 or above who have (a) taken early retirement, (b) taken official leave, (c) been dismissed, (d) changed jobs within the Department, (e) moved to another Department and (f) been offered and rejected an alternative position (i) within the Department and (ii) in another Department since 1 May. [27461]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The information requested is as follows:

a) none has taken early retirement;

b) official leave details are not held centrally;

c) none has been dismissed;

d) 2 (1 grade 3 equivalent and 1 grade 2 equivalent on promotion from grade 3) have changed jobs within the Department;

e) 1 grade 3 equivalent has moved to another Department;

f) i) none has been offered and rejected an alternative position within the Department; and

f) ii) information on those who have been offered and rejected an alternative position in another Department, from 1 May 1997, is not held centrally.

Market Research

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what expenditure has been incurred by his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies (a) in 1996–97 and (b) since 1 May 1997 on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; if he will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each; and if he will make a statement. [26571]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 5 February 1998]:

International Passenger Survey	Numbers and expenditure of tourists needed for input to balance of payments and tourism policy.
General Household Survey	Demographic, social and health data needed for social policy purposes.
Royal Mint:
Product survey	Survey of views on Royal Mint products.

Smuggling

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate HM Customs and Excise has made of the effect on the level of cigarette smuggling of the recent price increase. [28510]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs and Excise estimates of cross-channel smuggling of cigarettes are based on data from their surveys of sea and Tunnel passengers, conducted in June each year. Therefore, no estimate of the effect on smuggling of the most recent price increase is available.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 648, if the conclusions of the report on alcohol and tobacco smuggling, cross border shopping and fraud currently being prepared by HM Customs and Excise, and the views of independent retailers of tobacco on the subject of illegal re-sale of tobacco, imported from Belgium, will be considered in preparing his Budget statement. [28580]

Dawn Primarolo: The findings of the review, which was undertaken in consultation with the trade, is currently being considered by Ministers in the run up to the spring Budget.

Excise Duty

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions are planned in ECOFIN during the British Presidency to reduce the gap in excise duties on tobacco and alcohol between the United Kingdom and its continental partners. [27928]

Dawn Primarolo: It is my current intention to discuss the minimum rates of excise duty for tobacco products in ECOFIN following production of the European Commission's report on their review. The report on alcohol is overdue but at present it seems unlikely that the Commission will complete their work during our Presidency.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the amounts received by the Exchequer in each of the last five years from (a) vehicle excise duty and (b) excise duty on (i) leaded petrol, (ii) unleaded petrol and (iii) diesel, broken down by receipts from (A) Scotland, (B) England, (C) Wales and (D) Northern Ireland. [28067]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is shown in the tables.

(a) UK vehicle excise duty—net revenue received

1994–95	3,959	360	130	4,449
1995–96	4,716	435	138	5,289
1996–97	5,138	162	156	6,056

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28382]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury has not acquired any Brazilian mahogany during the periods in question. Nor has it knowingly acquired any goods containing mahogany; or specified Brazilian mahogany in any procurement.

The Treasury's domestic environmental policy states

"The Department will avoid, wherever possible, the purchase of goods which are manufactured or obtained in such a manner that the resources used to produce those goods is put under threat, e.g. certain hardwoods".

Customs and Excise

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the complement of established civil servants in the National Investigation Service of Customs and Excise; and what are the current numbers. [28477]

Dawn Primarolo: The 1997–98 staff year allocation for the National Investigation Service is 1,756.5. The current deployment of staff is in line with that allocation.

Job Vacancies

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many vacancies were advertised through jobcentres in each constituency in Wales on 31 December 1997 or the nearest date for which figures are available. [28892]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Julie Morgan, dated 12 February 1998:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question on vacancies advertised through jobcentres in each constituency in Wales.

Information on the number of vacancies advertised through jobcentres is not available by parliamentary constituency. However, this information is available by jobcentre area.

The number of vacancies advertised through jobcentres for jobcentre areas in Wales can be obtained from the Nomis database accessed by the House of Commons Library.

Tax Allowances

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of allowing married couples to transfer all or part of an unused personal tax allowance, at the basic rate, to the working spouse. [28180]

Dawn Primarolo: The full year cost in 1998–99 of allowing married couples to transfer their unused personal allowance to their spouse at the basic rate is estimated to be £2.9 billion.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the tax allowances in force, together with their cost to the Exchequer in revenue forgone and the number of beneficiaries of each allowance in the most recent year for which figures are available. [28666]

Dawn Primarolo: Tax allowances, expenditures and structural reliefs are listed with their estimated costs in tables 1.6, and annexes B1 and B2 of Inland Revenue Statistics 1997 published in September 1997. Estimates of the costs of the main allowances, expenditures and reliefs were updated in the Tax ready reckoner and tax reliefs in December 1997. A copy of these publications can be found in the Library.

I regret that to provide estimates for the number of beneficiaries for each allowance could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Car Warranties

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy towards the issuing of non-insurance based warranties linked with the sale of motor vehicles; and what trends he has assessed in the ratio of sales of insurance-based and non-insurance-based car warranties. [28044]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Insurance backed warranties sold with motor vehicles are now subject to the higher rate of Insurance Premium Tax. Customs and Excise have been monitoring the effect of the introduction of the higher rate and have observed that in the motor vehicle sector there has been a marked movement away from insurance backed warranties to similar products backed by the manufacturer or by a specialist provider. This supports the view that the sale of such insurance products was at times motivated by the opportunity it gave for tax avoidance.

Sterling

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the present level of sterling on (a) jobs and (b) export volumes over the next year. [28549]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The precise impact of sterling's appreciation on both employment and export volumes is hard to isolate. The Pre-Budget Report forecast showed growth in export volumes slowing to around 5 per cent. in 1998, with strong growth in UK export markets helping to mitigate the effects of the strong pound. Latest data show employment continuing to grow throughout the economy. A fully updated forecast will be published with forthcoming Budget.

Legal Profession (Cash Basis Accounting)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on barristers of his proposed cash basis tax reforms; and if he will postpone their implementation. [28684]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The Inland Revenue Press Release issued on 22 December invited comments on the proposals to withdraw the cash basis practices available to professional businesses, not just to barristers. The Inland Revenue has received a large number of responses and I myself have received several. The Inland Revenue has also had a number of meetings with representative bodies, including the Law Society, the Bar Council, and the different accountancy bodies. The consultation period ends on 14 February. Thereafter we will be considering the various points made on the proposals, including those concerning the timing of their implementation.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the proposed withdrawal of cash basis accounting practices available to professional businesses with particular reference to barristers, solicitors and accountants. [28685]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The proposal to withdraw the cash basis practices available to professionals is the subject of a consultation process which was started by the issue of an Inland Revenue Press Release on 22 December 1997. Comments were invited by 14 February 1998. Thereafter we will be reviewing the proposal in the light of the comments received.

Public Opinion Research

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many contracts for public opinion research his Department has awarded since 1 May; if he will indicate the (a) purpose, (b) cost, (c) value and (d) duration of each contract; and which companies (i) bid for and (ii) were awarded each contract. [28881]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 February 1998]: No public opinion research contracts have been awarded by the Treasury during this period.

Commemorative Coins

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of producing the commemorative coin celebrating the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Communities; and how many such coins have been minted (a) in total and (b) as a proportion of all 50 pence pieces minted since the commemorative coin was first minted. [28730]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The cost of producing commemorative fifty pence coins is less than their face value or selling price. The detailed figures are commercially sensitive in view of the Royal Mint's export business. 5.2 million commemorative fifty pence coins have been minted, accounting for 22 per cent. of all fifty pence coins so far minted in 1998.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he received on the advantages of minting a coin commemorating the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Communities. [28732]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The Royal Mint recommended that a commemorative fifty pence coin should be issued to mark both the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union and the 25th anniversary of our accession, taking account of precedents in 1973 when a fifty pence coin was issued to mark the United Kingdom's accession to the EEC and in 1992–93 when a further fifty pence was issued to celebrate the previous United Kingdom Presidency and the completion of the single market.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the Ministers consulted over the creation of a 50 pence piece commemorating the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Communities. [28731]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 February 1998]: Decisions on United Kingdom commemorative coins are matters for the Chancellor of the Exchequer, subject to the approval of Her Majesty The Queen. No consultations took place with Ministers of other Government Departments in this case.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received from (a) private pensions companies and (b) local authorities on the impact on pension fund contributions of abolishing advance corporation tax credits for pension funds; and if he will make a statement on the content of those representations. [29206]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: We have received a number of representations expressing concern about the possible effects on contributions to or benefits from pension schemes as a result of removing payable tax credits on UK dividends. However, the corporation tax changes introduced in the last Budget will be good for the economy as a whole. This will benefit pensioners, along with everyone else.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the latest year for which figures are available, how many companies had profits in the large, medium and small categories as defined for the new system of advance payments of corporation tax. [29193]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Estimates in respect of accounting periods ending in 1995–96 of the numbers of companies in the large, medium and small categories of taxable profit, as governed by the rate at which their profits were taxed, are 40,000, 15,000 and 350,000 respectively.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Benefits

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the Government's policy towards disability benefits for those with acute disabilities. [29201]

Mr. Denham: We are committed to modernising the Social Security system so that it helps people to work as far as they are able, provides appropriate support to those who cannot work and makes the most effective use of the resources available. Benefits for people who are sick or disabled, and their carers, are part of our comprehensive spending review. The review is on-going and no decisions on future policy have yet been made.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the procedures under which those with acute disabilities have their benefit reduced. [29203]

Mr. Denham: Disability Living Allowance (DLA) and Attendance Allowance (AA) are available for severely disabled people to help meet the extra costs associated with disability. Entitlement is determined by the level of help needed with personal care and/or getting around.

The Benefit Integrity Project helps ensure the correctness of awards of DLA. Up-to-date information is being gathered from those getting benefit about their care and mobility needs, so that we can check that they are receiving the correct amount of DLA.

It is important that decisions about benefit entitlement are made fairly and are seen to be fair. From 9 February we have taken action to improve the quality of decisions made by the Project which involve a reduction or removal of benefit. No decision resulting in reduction or removal of entitlement to DLA will be made solely on the evidence provided by the claimant—there will always be additional evidence to support the decision. This new initiative underlines our determination to act properly to get the benefit right, to listen and to act upon any concerns.

National Insurance

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the loss of revenue from raising the starting level of employers' national insurance contributions to the same level as income tax for a single person. [29191]

Mr. Denham: The estimated reduction in revenue from employer Class 1 National Insurance contributions, gross of contracted-out rebates, would be £110 million in a full year. The estimate assumes that there are no changes to the other earnings brackets for employer contributions.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what has been the total bill for housing benefit payments in each of the last five years in the Gosport Borough Council area; [27583]

(2) what has been the total bill for housing benefit payments in each of the last five years in the (a) Havant Borough, (b) Eastleigh, (c) New Forest District and (d) Test Valley District council areas; [28151]

(3) what has been the bill for housing benefit payments in each of the last five years in the Rushmoor Borough Council area. [28372]

Mr. Field: The information requested is set out in the table:

Council Area	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97 provisional out-turn
Gosport	8,620	10,800	12,140	12,970	14,110
Havant	9,150	11,150	11,920	12,710	13,640

Family Credit

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many households in receipt of family credit there are two adults; and in how many of those the benefit is paid to the man. [29189]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Of the 757,000 families currently in receipt of Family Credit, 406,000 are couples. The vast majority of couple families have a female recipient as there is a requirement for the female member of a couple to be the claimant. There are, however, occasional exceptions to this rule, for example, to cover mental incapacity.

All figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many households currently in receipt of family credit the principal earner is (a) a man and (b) a woman; and in each case what is the average amount of family credit paid per week. [29188]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information requested is set out in the table.

Family credit by gender of main earner, and average weekly awards—August 1997

Gender of main earner	Number of claimants	Average weekly award (£)
Male	326,000	57.17
Female	431,000	60.41

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Vertical Agreements

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she will announce her conclusions on provisions in the Competition Bill dealing with vertical agreements. [13042]

Mrs. Beckett: Shortly.

Non-career Civil Servants

Mr. Burns: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many non-career civil servants have been appointed to her Department since 1 May 1997. [25840]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I have asked for replies on behalf of Executive Agencies to be provided separately.

For the headquarters area of the Department, the number of temporary appointments made since 1 May 1997 is 71, in the categories shown below.

Casual Appointments: 49

Fixed-term Appointments: 15

Period Appointments: 7.

There were 45 temporary DTI appointments in Government Offices during the same period, of which 33 were Casual and 12 were Fixed-term.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 12 February 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the appointment by The Insolvency Service of non-career civil servants.

In the period from 1 May 1997 to 1 January 1998 The Service appointed 84 non-permanent staff. Some of these have subsequently left The Service or have been converted to permanent status.

The number does not include staff taken on from employment agencies and who are not civil servants.

Letter from Martin Wilson to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 12 February 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply, in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS), to your question about numbers of non-career civil servants appointed to the Department of Trade and Industry since 1 May 1997.

Since 1 May 1997, fifty-three casual staff and three short notice clerks have been appointed to the Employment Tribunals Service.

I hope that this is helpful.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 12 February 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the appointment of non-career civil servants since 1 May 1997. There have been three such appointments in this Agency during the period in question.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 12 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding how many non-career civil servants have been appointed to her Department since 1 May 1997.

Within Companies House Executive Agency, there have been a total of 142, all of whom are either casuals or Fixed Term Appointments. You may wish to note that, of these, 51 have moved on from Companies House and 91 are still employed, typically for periods of up to a year.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 12 February 1998:

Since 1 May 1997, the Agency has employed 7 sandwich students and 3 casual clerical staff. In addition, during the Summer 11 vacation students were given placements for between 8 and 10 weeks each.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 12 February 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about non-career Civil Servants.

Since 1 May 1997 we have offered employment to 42 staff from employment agencies, 17 IT contractors and 1 general contractor.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the level of trade between Britain and Sri Lanka. [28594]

Mrs. Roche: In 1997, trade in goods between the United Kingdom and Sri Lanka was worth £485 million, 28 per cent. higher than the previous year. The value of UK exports of goods increased by 42 per cent. to £211 million, while UK imports increased by 18 per cent. to £275 million. Information on trade services with Sri Lanka is not available.

Information on UK trade in goods with Sri Lanka over the last five years is given in the following table:

£ million

	UK exports	UK imports	Crude balance
1993	126	142	−16
1994	154	186	−32
1995	156	206	−50
1996	148	232	−84
1997	211	275	−64

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Ms Drown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received from British companies in support of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [28818]

Mrs. Roche: My officials are in contact with representatives of the CBI and ICC-UK (International Chambers of Commerce) as well as other business representatives. They have been generally supportive of the Government's approach.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will convene a meeting of Ministers of her Department, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Treasury and the Department for International Development to discuss the Multilateral Agreement on Investment in advance of the meeting of OECD Ministers on 16 and 17 February. [29024]

Mrs. Roche: The UK objectives for the MAI negotiations have been discussed extensively among the Departments mentioned and others. Officials have consulted closely over preparations for the 16–17 February meeting. Further consultations will be necessary as we approach the final phase of the negotiations in the spring.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many meetings of officials from her Department have attended meetings on the subject of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment at which there were (a) only officials from the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, (b) only officials from the Department for International Development, (c) only officials from the Treasury and (d) officials from the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Department for International Development and the Treasury. [29025]

Mrs. Roche: My officials in the International Investment Policy Unit have been in constant contact with officials from all Government Departments with an interest in the Multilateral Agreement on Investment, and have held meetings on numerous occasions at which officials from a number of other Government Departments have been present.

Carrier Pre-selection

Mr. Timms: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the deadline of 1 January 2000 set by the European Union for the implementation of carrier pre-selection will be achieved in the United Kingdom. [29001]

Mrs. Roche: The requirement to introduce carrier pre-selection arises from an amendment to the EC Interconnection Directive (97/33/EC), which has not yet been adopted. However, OFTEL and DTI are consulting industry and consumer bodies about the arrangements for UK implementation of carrier pre-selection within the time limits set out in the draft Directive. The Common Position currently requires the introduction of carrier pre-selection by 1 January 2000, but allows Member States to request a deferment of this obligation if they can prove that it would impose an excessive burden on certain organisations or classes of organisation.

Utilities (Standing Charges)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will take steps to abolish standing charges on domestic energy supplies and telephones. [29168]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Some electricity and gas supply tariffs have no standing charges. These tariffs may be particularly attractive to small users, many of whom will be pensioners or those on low incomes. However, the structure of tariffs on energy supplies and telephones is a commercial matter for the companies concerned. Where competition has developed in these industries, consumers have been offered a wider choice of tariffs.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Mr. Coaker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people suffered accidental carbon monoxide poisoning in the home in each of the last five years; how many of these died as a result; what steps are currently being taken and what measures are planned to reduce the number of such cases. [28978]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 11 February 1998]: The following figures refer to accidents involving faulty heating appliances.

In the period 1992–96 (available figures to date) the estimated figures for non-fatal accidental injuries (resulting in attendance at Accident and Emergency) due to carbon monoxide poisoning in Great Britain from faulty home heating appliances are estimated as follows:

1992: 244

1993: 105

1994: 211

1995: 125

1996: 247.

The estimated fatalities from carbon monoxide poisoning owing to faulty domestic heating appliances are:

1992: 50

1993: 31[1]

1994: 30[1]

1995: 28[1]

1996–97: 21[1] (provisional figure).

[1] Flammable gas source only.

Figures are drawn from the Office for National Statistics, the DTI Home Accident Surveillance System, the DTI report on Carbon Monoxide poisoning from Domestic Heating Appliances, and the Health and Safety Executive.

More comprehensive information could be produced only at disproportionate costs.

In September 1997 I initiated a five point campaign to tackle the issue of carbon monoxide poisoning. This has resulted in:

A safety advice leaflet, containing vital information on safeguarding against CO poisoning, being circulated to doctors' surgeries up and down the country.

The continuing re-broadcasting of our three TV safety adverts, together with a new fourth advert.

19 million households receiving our safety advice leaflet enclosed in their gas bills.

A further distribution of 100,000 separate booklets concentrating on the dangers from faulty gas and solid fuel appliances.

The publicising of Freephone advice numbers for gas and solid fuel users.

Concessionary Coal

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the current situation in connection with concessionary coal allowances to miners and their families. [29071]

Mr. Battle: As I announced yesterday, it would be premature at this stage to introduce new arrangements for concessionary coal entitlements provided to former employees (and their dependants) of British Coal. I am therefore extending the consultation period for a while longer to consider all relevant issues before we make necessary changes.

My aim is to find a solution to future entitlements which is fair to all concerned, and which complies with EU legal requirements and the Fuel Agreements. I have listened to representations and the views of beneficiaries expressing concern about the entitlements, and have decided to make no change to existing entitlements while full and wide ranging consultations are in progress. Beneficiaries can be assured that they will continue to receive their present fuel type at existing tonnages while the consultations are under way.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Servants

Mr. Forth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil servants in his Department at grade 3 or above have (a) resigned, (b) retired before pensionable age and (c) moved to different responsibilities within the Department since 1 May 1997; if he will indicate the Ministers to whom each was responsible; and if he will make a statement. [26931]

Dr. David Clark: For this purpose, the Cabinet Office includes the Prime Minister's Office and the Office of Public Service and its executive agencies. Grades 1–5 were replaced by the Senior Civil Service on 1 April 1996. One civil servant of grade 3 and above has resigned; none have retired before pensionable age; and five have moved to different responsibilities within my Department since 1 May 1997. The civil servant who resigned was responsible to me and, of those moving, three were responsible to me and two to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list by grade the number of officials in his Department at grade 3 or above who have (a) taken early retirement, (b) taken official leave, (c) been dismissed, (d) changed jobs within the Department, (e) moved to another Department and (f) been offered and rejected an alternative position (i) within the Department and (ii) in another Department since 1 May 1997. [27466]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 5 February 1998]: For this purpose the Cabinet Office includes the Prime Minister's Office and the Office of Public Service and its executive agencies. Grades 1–5 were replaced by the Senior Civil Service on 1 April 1996. The numbers relating to staff at equivalent levels to the old grades, for my Department, are as follows:

	Grade 1	Grade 2	Grade 3
(a)	nil	nil	nil
(b)	information not held centrally
(c)	nil	nil	nil
(d)	nil	1	4
(e)	nil	4	7
(f) (i)	nil	nil	nil
(f) (ii)	nil	nil	nil

Millennium Compliance

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to increase confidence in the Government's handling of the millennium computer compliance problem. [29509]

Dr. David Clark: The Government intend to increase public confidence in their handling of the millennium bug problem by continuing with our policy of open public scrutiny. As I outlined in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Mr. Brown) on 30 January 1998, Official Report, columns 403–04, I shall provide regular reports to the House.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what assessment his Department has made of the advantages of installing photovoltaic solar cells in the Millennium Dome; and what proposals there are to use photovoltaic technology (a) in the Millennium Dome and (b) in the Millennium Experience exhibition. [28202]

Mr. Mandelson: The cladding of the Millennium Dome, which will house the Millennium Experience, is translucent, allowing through natural daylight. The New Millennium Experience Company considered installing photovoltaic cells but concluded that this would reduce translucency and hence increase the power needed for artificial lighting. The NMEC is, however, currently investigating the potential for using a number of sustainable power sources within the Dome for demonstration and educational purposes.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the greatest number of unsuccessful applications made for silk by a barrister in the last 10 years. [28500]

Mr. Hoon: According to departmental records, the greatest total number of unsuccessful applications made by a barrister who has applied in the last ten years is twenty five.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the shortest time a barrister has practised at the bar before taking silk in the last 10 years. [28502]

Mr. Hoon: According to departmental records the shortest time that a barrister has practised at the bar in the last ten years before taking silk is thirteen years.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many High Court judges had their applications for silk rejected at their (a) first, (b) second and (c) third attempt. [28506]

Mr. Hoon: Of the ninety seven High Court Judges currently in post, nineteen had their first application for silk rejected, six had their second application rejected and two had their third application rejected. Nine High Court Judges did not take Silk.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the greatest number of applications for silk made by an individual who has taken silk in the last 10 years. [28501]

Mr. Hoon: According to our departmental records, the greatest number of applications made by an individual who has taken silk in the last ten years is fifteen.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimate he has made of the number of QCs who are non-practising. [28503]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Department does not keep records of whether QCs are practising or non-practising, because the Lord Chancellor has no Ministerial responsibility for the practice of individual barristers.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by his Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28391]

Mr. Hoon: No Brazilian mahogany has been acquired or specified by my Department in either 1996 or 1997.

Immigration Determinations

Ms Oona King: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department where members of the public can obtain access to comprehensively indexed collection of determinations by immigration adjudicators. [28303]

Mr. Hoon: There is no collection of indexed adjudicator determinations in existence. Copies of adjudicator determinations are retained on tribunal files, and are available to members of the public with permission from an adjudicator.

Immigration Appeal Tribunal Decisions can be obtained from the Supreme Court Library on demand. They will also soon be available to subscribers on the Electronic Immigration Network Database via the Internet. This service should be available from April.

WALES

Private Residential Homes (Abuse)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of abuse were reported against the elderly in private residential homes in Wales over the last five years. [26987]

Mr. Win Griffiths: While local authorities in Wales investigate all complaints made to them by or on behalf of elderly people in private residential homes, there is no clear or agreed basis for defining abuse in these circumstances. The information that is collected is therefore not available on a consistent basis but my officials will work with local authorities to examine how an effective reporting framework can be developed as an essential tool in helping to measure the quality of care provided for elderly people in residential homes.

Wind Farms

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to continue granting permissions for the establishment of wind farms; and if he will make a statement. [28615]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Responsibility for determining planning applications for wind farms rests initially with local planning authorities. The Secretary of State is responsible for determining appeals and applications which have been called in. Decisions on all such applications should be made in accordance with Government Policy set out in Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy, Technical Advice Note (Wales) 8: Renewable Energy, and policies in development plans, unless material considerations indicate otherwise.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Passport Fees

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on passport fees. [29769]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Privy Council has approved an Order in Council, the Consular Fees Order 1998, which gives authority for an increase in passport fees on 26 March. The fee for a standard 32 page passport will increase from £18 to £21 and for a 48 page passport from £27 to £31. The fee for amending an existing passport will increase from £5 to £11, to reflect the economic cost. The cost of a separate passport for children will be £11 for a passport valid for five years. An additional charge of £10 will be introduced for those making applications in person in the United Kingdom and for applications made abroad to reflect the greater cost of providing these services. The fee for a collective passport, for organised trips for schools and youth groups, will remain unchanged at £40.

This is the first general increase in passport fees since November 1992 and, for the over 80 per cent. of applicants who apply by post, is in line with the level of inflation for the period. In relation to the cost of travel abroad, a fee of £21 for a standard ten year passport still represents very good value for money.

Prison Service

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the resources available to the Prison Service. [29957]

Mr. Straw: Following the Audit of Prison Service Resources last summer, I made available to the Prison Service additional funding of £43m over two years to increase capacity and regime activity. In the event, the Service has done well in containing costs and has not had to call on the extra provision for 1997–98.

I am now making available £112m in 1998–99 on top of the existing budget of £1,704m.

This will be used to fund continued use of Her Majesty's Prison Weare, to build six more houseblocks, to fund conversion of accommodation to cell usage to hold extra prisoners in new prisons and to carry out repairs on the prison estate. It provides additional staffing and funding for regime activities, to keep prisoners constructively occupied.

With this money, this Government have provided for 1,540 new places in prisons and have supported the placing of an additional 2,280 prisoners in existing accommodation.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently held in category A prisons. [29182]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The available information on persons detained solely under Immigration Act powers in those prisons in England and Wales that contain category A accommodation is given in the table.

I regret that reliable information on the detention location of asylum seekers can be obtained only by examining individual case records and is, therefore, only available at disproportionate cost.

Persons recorded as being detained solely under Immigration Act powers in prisons in England and Wales which contain category A accommodation[1] [2] as at 31 December 1997[3]

Prison establishment	Total detainees
Belmarsh	9
Bristol	7
Doncaster	3
High Down	19
Manchester	2
Other	2
Total	42

[1] These prisons may also contain accommodation of categories other than category A.
[2] Detainees may be held in accommodation of a category other than category A.
[3] Data are provisional.

Cannabis

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost in police time of detaining, arresting and prosecuting all those cautioned, prosecuted or convicted of offences involving cannabis in each of the past five years. [29138]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The information requested is not collected for any such offences either centrally or locally. The cost of doing so would be prohibitive in terms of money and police resources.

EU Asylum and Immigration Policies

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with European Union nations concerning asylum and immigration policy since 1 May; what decisions have been made on policy matters; and if he will make a statement. [28845]

Mr. Straw: Since 1 May 1997, I have attended two formal Justice and Home Affairs (JHA) Councils, on 26–27 May and 4–5 December 1997, and two informal JHA Councils, on 9–10 October 1997 and 29–30 January 1998. At each of these, asylum and immigration policy has been discussed, as it has usually been at regular bi-lateral meetings with my counterparts from other member states of the European Union.

The decisions on immigration and asylum policy matters adopted by the Council since 1 May 1997 are:

A resolution on combating marriages of convenience:

A Decision on the exchange of information concerning assistance for the voluntary repatriation of third-country nationals:

A Decision on monitoring the implementation of instruments concerning asylum:

A Resolution on unaccompanied third-country national minors:

A Joint Action concerning the financing of specific projects in favour of asylum seekers and refugees;

A Joint Action concerning the financing of specific projects in favour of displaced persons who have found temporary protection in the member states and asylum seekers;

An Action Plan concerning the influx of migrants from Iraq and the neighbouring region.

Ministers of the member states of the European Union, meeting as the Article 18 Committee—established by the Convention determining the State responsible for examining applications for asylum lodged in one of the member states of the European Communities (Dublin Convention)—have also adopted, since 1 May 1997:

Rules of procedures of the Committee set up by Article 18 of the Dublin Convention:

Conclusions on the practical application of the Dublin Convention.

SCOTLAND

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on Scottish local authority expenditure constraints in 1998–99. [29916]

Mr. Dewar: The 1998–99 local government finance settlement is extremely tight and councils will have to make difficult choices when they set their budgets for next year. There is no scope to increase overall support for councils but, following discussions with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, I am pleased to announce a scheme which will allow many councils throughout Scotland to increase spending on front-line services by a further 0.25 per cent. of base budgets on top of the limits determined by my provisional capping principles. I hope that councils will direct this additional spending at our shared priorities, such as education. To offset this increase they will have to reduce their capital expenditure by the same amount.

I am also determined to keep council tax levels down, so local authorities will be allowed to take up this flexibility only if they keep their Band D council tax increase next year below £60. Councils will continue to face difficult decisions but this scheme will allow them the flexibility to make their own choices suitable to their local circumstances.

I have placed a copy of Scottish Office Finance Circular 3/98, which describes the details of the scheme, in the Library.

Foxes

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which Scottish fox destruction societies have had their government grants cancelled. [28629]

Mr. Macdonald: None. Under a modified grant scheme to be introduced on 1 April 1998 the cost of the upkeep of hounds will no longer be supported, following a review which found these costs to be disproportionate to the benefits achieved.

PRIME MINISTER

National Pensioners Convention

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met representatives from the National Pensioners Convention. [29572]

The Prime Minister: While I have not had any formal meetings with the National Pensioners Convention (NPC), their representatives have met my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security and the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Social Security, my hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham), who is responsible for pensions. The most recent meeting was on 28 January.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27798]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The following list has been compiled.

Item	Date	Value (£)
Telephone answer machine	June 1997	50
Computer printer and screen	June 1997	450
Computer processor	June 1997	1,000
Laptop computer	October 1997	3,000

Arms Exports

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions on arms exports from Britain he held during his visit to South East Asia in 1997; and if he will make a statement. [29119]

Mr. Fatchett: Defence sales issues, including our new criteria for considering export licence applications, were discussed in Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines during my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's visit to the region in August 1997.

Correspondence

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to reply to the letter of 2 December 1997, from the hon. Member for South Suffolk regarding his constituent, Mr. Reginald Clarke. [29384]

Mr. Fatchett: We await further details from the High Commission in Nairobi about this case. The Migration and Visa Department will write to the hon. Member within the next few days.

Ponsonby Rule

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 16 December 1997, Official Report, column 101, if he will list all such treaties subject to the Ponsonby Rule laid before Parliament since 1 January 1997 indicating the last date of the 21 day period; and what form notification of Parliament took in respect of each treaty. [26236]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: A total of 15 treaties subject to the Ponsonby rule have been laid before Parliament since 1 January 1997. They are listed below. The last day of the 21 day period is indicated on the list. These treaties have all been laid with an Explanatory Memorandum (EM) bringing to the attention of Parliament the main features of the treaty with which it is laid.

TREASURY

Asbestosis

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were diagnosed as suffering from asbestosis in 1996 in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) local authority area. [29234]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from John Fox to Mr. Michael Clapham, dated 13 February 1998:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) to answer your recent question on the number of people diagnosed as suffering from asbestosis in 1996 in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) local authority area. I am replying in the Director's absence.

The only information centrally available covers deaths from asbestosis in 1996. There are no registers kept on cases of asbestosis diagnoses whilst people are still alive. Data from Hospital Episode Statistics (Department of Health) are not suitable because they relate to the number of treatments rather than the number of individuals.

The deaths figures are given in the following table:

Deaths from asbestosis in England and Wales by local authority of residence, 1996

Notes:
1. The table shows only those local authorities in which a death occurred. Similar data at parliamentary constituency level could be presented only at disproportionate cost.
2. Deaths from asbestosis were identified as those certified with an underlying cause coded to ICD9 code 501 (International Classification of Diseases Ninth Revision).

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the rates of absenteeism in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date; and if he will make a statement. [26573]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to my hon. Friend the Member for City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg) on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 116. The figures in the table are estimates of average days of sickness absence per member of staff for the financial years requested, and may not therefore be consistent with the published figures, which are on a calendar year basis.

(c) The non-departmental public bodies for which the Chancellor of the Exchequer is responsible do not employ any staff.

Smuggling

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 648, if he will list the (i) trade associations, (ii) public agencies, (iii) organisations and (iv) individuals who have contributed to the production of the report on alcohol and tobacco smuggling, cross border shopping and fraud currently being prepared by HM Customs and Excise; and if he will make a statement. [28527]

Dawn Primarolo: Seventy-one trade associations, public agencies and organisations contributed to the production of the review report. In addition 14 individuals contributed mainly from the fields of health and the off licence trade.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what methods are used to dispose of seized smuggled or bootlegged alcohol and tobacco and its products. [27926]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs aims to dispose of seized alcohol and tobacco by the most environmentally friendly means. Beer is recycled into agricultural products, and spirits into methylated spirits, although more recently Customs have set up arrangements which allow the resale of bulk consignments back to the originating UK manufacturer. Wine and tobacco products, because of their limited shelf life and the need to store them in the right conditions, are destroyed.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many WTE customs officers have been working on countering the smuggling or bootlegging of tobacco and alcohol in each year since 1991. [27931]

Dawn Primarolo: The following number of Excise Verification Officers have been deployed by Customs to counter excise smuggling at the beginning of each financial year since the advent of the Single Market on 1 January 1993:

Year commencing: 1 April 1993: 230
Year commencing: 1 April 1994: 230
Year commencing: 1 April 1995: 240
Year commencing: 1 April 1996: 260
Year commencing: 1 April 1997: 330.

These frontline officers are backed up by specialist investigation and intelligence teams whose resources have been increased since 1993.

Prior to the introduction of the Single Market on 1 January 1993, Customs staff at ports of entry dealt with the full range of social and fiscal prohibitions and restrictions; there was no separate group dedicated solely to countering excise smuggling.

Customs and Excise

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total budget of the National Investigation

Service of Customs and Excise for the current financial year; and what is the anticipated end of year outturn figure. [28475]

Dawn Primarolo: The Budget for the National Investigation Service for the current financial year is £95,162,053. The end of year outturn is anticipated to be in line with this.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Council Tax

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what would be the average council tax for each local authority in England if each authority's net revenue expenditure 1998–99 was set at the provisional capping level and, excepting the receipts from each local authority's share of NNDR, had to be met entirely from council tax receipts. [28285]

Mr. Raynsford: I have today placed in the Library of the House a table showing the information requested.

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27803]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The total value of those items valued at more than £25 each that have been stolen or lost from my Department and its Agencies since 1 May 1997 is £15,427. The cases comprise 16 items of IT equipment, one electronic stapler, one dictating machine, one portable telephone, 16 pagers, nine radios, two sets of clothing and one pair of binoculars.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date. [27802]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I am able to provide the following information about the cost of theft and fraud to (a) the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date.

	1995–96 cost (£)	1996–97 cost (£)	1997–98 to date cost (£)
DETR (central)	112,510	148,219	52,256
Agencies	108,646	52,991	27,117
NDPBs	157,283	74,725	96,062

The information on agencies and NDPBs is that available centrally in DETR and the costs are the most recent estimate net of recoveries.

The costs include those borne on the Administration and Programme Votes.

Local Plans

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if HM Government have (a) made and (b) proposes objection to the contents of the draft Verwood, Three Legged Cross and St. Leonards and St. Ives Local Plan. [28523]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State made eight objections in January 1993. These objections have been maintained.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government will direct East Dorset District Council to withdraw the Verwood draft local plan. [28482]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State has no power to direct withdrawal of a draft plan.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce a maximum period within which a local authority has to adopt a draft plan after completion of all stages prior to adoption; and if he will make a statement. [28481]

Mr. Raynsford: No, but we will be issuing a consultation paper on changes to development plan procedures shortly.

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on the public consultation on the Third Report on the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 3702) announced by the Prime Minister on 8 July 1997. [28313]

Mr. Raynsford: Following the end of the consultation period on 31 October 1997, we have been considering carefully with the Local Government Association and other interested bodies how best to develop a new ethical framework designed to ensure the highest standards of conduct by all those involved in local government. We intend to publish our proposals in the next month or so.

Housing (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much money has been allocated by (a) his Department and (b) the Housing Corporation to support new social housing in the Portsmouth City Council area in each of the last five years. [27549]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 6 February 1998]: The Department provides funding for new social housing through grant-in-aid to the Housing Corporation. The grant is allocated to Registered Social Landlords through the Housing Corporation's Approval Development Programme. Local authorities may also choose to invest in new social housing. Local authority spending on the provision of new social housing by Registered Social Landlords which meets the Housing Corporation's criteria is reimbursed by Local Authority Social Housing Grant from the Corporation.

Allocations for the provision of new social housing by Registered Social Landlords in Portsmouth are shown below. Additional social lettings are also provided through grants to tenants to help them buy a new home and vacate their existing dwelling for reletting, and the Housing Corporation's Do-It-Yourself Shared Ownership scheme for tenants (DIYSO). Expenditure on these home ownership schemes is excluded from the figures below.

£m

Year	Approved Development Programme	Local Authority Social Housing Grant
1993–94	4.02	4.68
1994–95	4.44	1.20
1995–96	1.61	0.86
1996–97	6.22	1.59
1997–98	2.00	0.54

Notes:

1. 1997–98 figures are start of year allocations.
2. The figures include allocations for new build social housing and the purchase and rehabilitation of existing private sector properties for social housing. The figures exclude allocations for works to existing stock owned by Registered Social Landlords; temporary social and market rent housing; grants to help tenants buy a new home and vacate their existing property for reletting; and the Housing Corporation's Do-It-Yourself Shared Ownership scheme.

Waste Management

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what steps he is taking to encourage local authorities to choose a recycling route for waste management in place of incineration; [28509]

(2) what independent scientific advice he has sought in respect of the optimum size of a waste to energy facility which will not undermine the potential for mechanical recovery of recyclables; [28459]

(3) what steps he is taking to ensure that each local authority regularly receives the option of establishing a properly balanced waste management strategy. [28460]

Angela Eagle: The option to establish a properly balanced waste management strategy is open to all local authorities at any time. It is for each local authority to decide on its use of the various waste management options within its available resources.

In October 1997 I announced that the Government accepted in full the recommendations of the Review Group on the Local Authority Role in Recycling, which reported in February 1997. One of its key recommendations was that Waste Disposal Authorities should work closely with their constituent Waste Collection Authorities to establish a fully integrated municipal waste management strategy.

The Department is also shortly to issue revised guidance to local authorities on the preparation and revision of recycling plans. I hope that all local authorities will look at all the available options for managing waste in developing an integrated municipal waste management strategy with other authorities, the public, the private and voluntary sectors. Recycling is to be preferred to incineration with recovery if and when it represents the best practicable environmental option. Equally, incineration with energy recovery is generally likely to be preferable to disposal.

That guidance also advises authorities developing integrated strategies that the high capital costs of energy from waste plants generally require long-term waste contracts to be agreed. Local authorities considering energy from waste will therefore wish to guard against over-reliance on this option, and will wish to take a view on likely future developments in waste management practices and technology. In particular, they will wish to ensure that the use of energy from waste plants does not divert waste from recycling and composting, and, indeed, allows scope for increases in recycling and composting activity.

The Department has not sought independent scientific advice on the optimum size for waste to energy incinerators.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on accelerating public inquiry procedures for waste incineration at waste to energy plants. [28507]

Mr. Raynsford: I am not aware of any specific representations on accelerating public inquiry procedures for waste incineration at waste to energy plants, although my officials maintain a regular dialogue with the Energy from Waste trade association.

Public Servants (Political Impartiality)

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when proposals to reform the Housing and Local Government Act 1989 relating to politically restricted posts will be brought forward; and if he will make a statement. [28314]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government remain firmly committed to the principle of political impartiality among senior and other front line public servants, but we are reviewing the restrictions on political activity by local government officers to ensure that their detail and coverage are appropriate. We intend to publish proposals for consultation by the early spring.

Waste Water Treatment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the extent and cause of eutrophication in Langstone Harbour; and what counter-measures his Department has taken. [28705]

Angela Eagle: Advice from the Environment Agency indicates that Langstone Harbour is subject to effects of eutrophication such as regular and extensive dense weed growth. The Agency has identified water from the Eastern Solent as the major source of nutrients in the Harbour.

The Environment Agency has not taken any counter-measures in the Harbour. However, the Agency has considered the case for designation of the Harbour as a eutrophic sensitive area as part of the first review of designations required by the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive. We shall be considering the Agency's recommendations from this review shortly.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the official water category status under the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive of the Solent area; and what plans he has to alter this status. [28798]

Angela Eagle: The Solent is an estuarine water body under the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive. Sewage treatment works which serve a larger than 2000 population equivalent and which discharge into estuaries are required to meet the Directive's secondary treatment standards. The Environment Agency considered the potential for identification of the Solent as a eutrophic sensitive area, in order to make recommendations to Government on the first review of designations required by the Directive. We shall be considering the Agency's recommendations from this review shortly.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what preliminary research his Department undertook prior to the determination of the standards required in the discharge consents granted to Southern Water's waste water treatment plants in the Solent; and by what means his Department evaluates the current discharge consents; [28799]

(2) what standards were applied to the procedures used to determine the standards required for the discharge consents for the proposed new Southern Water sites at Portsmouth and Havant; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which these standards were complied with; [28801]

(3) what assessment he has made of the ability of the proposed new Southern Water sites at Portsmouth and Havant to meet the required water quality standards; [28702]

(4) what assessment the Environment Agency has made of the compliance of the current storm overflow at Budds Farm with EU water standards; [28650]

(5) what account the Environment Agency took of representations from local people in determining the standards required in the discharge consent for Langstone Harbour and the Solent. [28800]

Angela Eagle: The existing standards for the discharges to the Solent were set by the Environment Agency to secure compliance with all relevant environment quality standards contained in EC Directives in force at the time. The Environment Agency is required to review discharge consents at least every four years.

So far as the current proposals are concerned, the Environment Agency undertook a substantial review of existing data in 1993–94 to confirm that the Solent should be designated as an estuary under the terms of the Urban Waste Waster Treatment Directive. This means that all qualifying discharges into the Solent, including the Portsmouth and Havant schemes, are required to receive secondary biological treatment by 2000.

The Environment Agency will derive the appropriate quality standards for the Portsmouth and Havant discharges by applying national policy and technical guidance relating to water services companies' discharges. This is currently set out comprehensively in the AMP2 Guidelines Version 2 in the Environment Agency's Discharge Consents Manual.

An important element of the proposals is to provide secondary biologically treated effluent for flows arising from the Portsmouth, Havant and Hayling Island catchments discharging through the Eastney long sea outfall into the Solent. The Environment Agency is currently determining the consent applications and has employed external consultants to audit the proposals rigorously to ensure they fully comply with the requirements of all relevant Directives. So far as the Bathing Water Directive is concerned, the Environment Agency will ensure continued compliance with the Imperative standards and is assessing the achievement of the more stringent Guideline standards.

All relevant EC Directives have been taken into account in assessing the compliance of the current storm overflows at Budds Farm. In particular, the Dangerous Substances Directive and the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive apply directly to Langstone Harbour. The Environment Agency exerts control for the purposes of the Dangerous Substances Directive by imposing upon water services companies, requirements for limiting trade effluent discharges to sewers. Studies have shown the impact of the storm overflows in relation to the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive sensitive waters requirements are not significant. The treatment scheme will also address aesthetic improvements to storm overflows and will significantly reduce spill frequencies in recognition of the important commercial, amenity and conservation interests within Langstone Harbour.

The Environment Agency has issued, for comment, copies of discharge consent applications and supporting documentation to all statutory consultees, including local authorities, the County Council, MAFF (Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science), Southern Sea Fisheries and English Nature. The Environment Agency will take account of their comments when determining the discharge consents. The applications have also been advertised in accordance with the Control of Pollution (Applications, Appeals and Registers) Regulations 1996. The Environment Agency has responded to all correspondence received, which will also be taken into account when determining the discharge consents.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance his Department issues on the appropriate treatment of waste water in (a) estuaries and (b) sensitive water areas. [28707]

Angela Eagle: The EC Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive lays down requirements for treatment of waste water discharged to estuaries and designated sensitive areas. All discharges to estuaries serving population equivalents greater than 2000 must receive secondary treatment. Discharges to sensitive areas must receive more stringent treatment involving the removal of nitrogen or phosphorus. The Environment Agency is responsible for determining, through the discharge consent system, how these requirements should be applied in particular cases. However, in July 1997, my Department issued a Guidance Note for dischargers and regulators on the implementation and interpretation of the Directive's requirements, which had been developed in consultation with other Government Departments, the water industry and its regulators.

Housing (Tenancies)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will enable housing corporations to use introductory tenancies and selective lettings in the way that local authorities were enabled to do under the Housing Act 1996. [28864]

Mr. Raynsford: Housing companies which are registered with the Housing Corporation as Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) are subject to the Corporation's Performance Standards and Regulatory Guidance. These will allow RSLs to use assured shorthold tenancies effectively as introductory tenancies, in defined circumstances.

The Housing Corporation requires RSLs to seek the agreement of the relevant local authority when contemplating the use of such introductory tenancies.

Drinking Water Quality

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure that standards of lead in water at the domestic tap meet future health standards. [28720]

Angela Eagle: Water suppliers must ensure that the water they supply complies with the standards that have been set for drinking water quality. New standards for lead will be introduced by the new EC Drinking Water Directive when it is adopted.

Out-of-Town Retail Developments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons the Government do not hold central records of planning permissions granted for major out-of-town retail developments. [28635]

Mr. Raynsford: Most decisions on planning applications for major out-of-town retail developments are taken by local planning authorities. They provide statistical returns of all major "retail, distribution and servicing" applications which they handle, in order to provide an overall picture of planning activity. These data do not classify applications by location. The Government are anxious to keep their requirements for data from local authorities to a necessary minimum. We do, however, propose to set up a system with the Planning Inspectorate, which should enable us to provide information on such permissions granted on appeal or following call in by the Secretary of State for recent and future development.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many planning permissions were granted on appeal or following call-in by the Secretary of State for major out-of-town retail developments (a) between January 1988 and April 1997 and (b) since 1 May 1997. [29210]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The information requested is not held on this basis. The results of appeals are not classified by size or by location. It is, therefore, not feasible at the moment to assemble such information, except at disproportionate cost. We propose to set up a system with the Planning Inspectorate, which should enable us to provide this information for recent and all future developments.

Ordnance Survey (Scotland)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people are employed by Ordnance Survey in Scotland, broken down by job category; what facilities for map making the Ordnance Survey maintains in Scotland; and if he will provide a breakdown of Ordnance Survey spending in Scotland as a ratio of overall spending in each year since 1990. [28551]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 11 February 1998]: Ordnance Survey in Great Britain currently employs 66 people in Scotland, 63 of whom are based in the seven Scottish field offices which are located in Inverness, Aberdeen, Glenrothes, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Hamilton and Ayr. These people are directly involved in the surveying and capturing of mapping data to update the National Topographic Database (NTD) and other related products (eg ADDRESS-POINT™). In addition, Ordnance Survey Scottish Region is responsible for the re-mapping of parts of Cumbria. The data collected are sent to Ordnance Survey's headquarters in Southampton where they are incorporated into the NTD and related databases; no actual map making is carried out in the field offices.

The table provides a breakdown of the types of jobs Ordnance Survey staff based in Scotland are engaged in:

Job title	Number of staff
Region Manager	1
Chief Surveyor	5
Surveyors	49
Administrators	5
Survey Assistants	3
Field Sales Executive for Scotland	1
Regional Account Manager for Scotland	1
Assistant Regional Account Manager for Scotland	1
Total	66

In addition to the people included in the table, many of 1,300 Ordnance Survey staff based at its headquarters are also engaged in activities related to the capture of mapping data (eg from aerial photographs, the taking of which is co-ordinated from Southampton and undertaken from an aeroplane which flies from Blackpool), and the production of maps and related products, of both Scotland and the rest of Great Britain.

Ordnance Survey updates its maps primarily in relation to the local rate of change in the landscape. Thus more work is done locally where new roads, housing estates, etc are created than in mountain and moorland areas. No specific breakdown of effort has been made in the past between England, Scotland and Wales but systems will be put in place to provide such statistics to the Scottish Parliament (the hon. Lady may already be aware that the subject matter of the Ordnance Survey Act 1841 is reserved in the Scotland Bill published last December). The best estimates currently possible are that Ordnance Survey expends approximately 7.5 per cent. of its total out-goings on re-mapping Scotland and that this fairly reflects a combination of continuous revision caused by new developments in Scotland and periodic revisions to cover the whole country.

Standard Spending Assessments (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the Social Services SSA for Buckinghamshire County Council for 1998–99 would be calculated on the basis of the composition and weighting of the SSA formula in 1997–98 (a) in cash terms and (b) per head of population in Buckinghamshire. [28738]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 11 February 1998]: If calculated using the SSA formulae applicable for 1997–98, and the data and national totals applicable for 1998–99, the Personal Social Services SSA for Buckinghamshire Country Council would be: (a) £54.205 million; and (b) £114.22 per Buckinghamshire resident.

Executive Mayors

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce executive mayors; on what timescale; and if he will make a statement. [29228]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 12 February 1998]: In our consultation paper "Local Democracy and Community Leadership", which we published on Monday 9 February, we recognised that there is a strong argument for councils' adopting political and management structures which involve a separation of executive and representational roles. It will be open to local authorities to pilot such structures, including those of executive mayors, if the Local Government (Experimental Arrangements) Bill is enacted. This Bill, to which the Government are giving all the support that they can, is currently being considered in another place. I will consider the responses we receive to the consultation paper, and we will publish our proposals in a White Paper later this year.

Industrial Land (Reclamation)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what projects his Department is funding to restore land previously used for industry to its natural state. [29374]

Mr. Raynsford: Through its programmes and agencies the Department of the Environment, Transport and Regions sponsors a range of projects in which the reclamation of land forms a part. Land is reclaimed for both hard end uses such as housing, commercial and industrial development, and soft end uses, for example parks and forestry. Further information is available in the Department's Annual Report 1997 (Cm. 3607), but it is not possible to list projects individually, nor to identify the previous land use.

Local Government Finance

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his oral statement of 5 February 1998, Official Report, column 1258, on local government settlements for Derbyshire, on what evidence he based his statement that there were difficulties in financing Derbyshire for some years under the previous administration. [29140]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 12 February 1998]: In their representation on the proposed settlement, Derbyshire pointed out that they had the lowest cumulative increase in cap limit of any shire county between 1989–90 and 1997–98; and among the lowest cumulative increase in Government assessment of need to spend over that period.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his oral statement of 5 February 1998, Official Report, column 1258, on Derbyshire's local government settlements, what plans he has to redress the effects of the discrimination in recent settlements which he has identified. [29142]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 12 February 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has made several changes to the distribution of Government grant to local authorities to improve the overall fairness of the local government finance settlement. He has also made clear his intention to passport a wider range of increases in SSAs through the capping guidelines. We shall hold discussions with local government during 1998 to identify further possible improvements to the way in which grant is distributed among authorities.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his oral statement of 5 February 1998, Official Report, column 1258, on local government settlements for Derbyshire, what assessment he has made of the level of discrimination in local government settlements for those counties whose standard spending assessments are lower than Derbyshire. [29141]

Mr. Raynsford: Standard spending assessments (SSAs) vary between authorities for a number of reasons. These include variations in local circumstances, such as total population and numbers of children of school age; and the way in which those variations are treated in the calculation of SSAs.

Jubilee Line

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what estimate he has made of the final cost of the Jubilee Line extension; and if he will make a statement; [29484]

(2) if he will make a statement on the problems causing delay in the construction of the Jubilee Line extension; [29486]

(3) when he expects that the Jubilee Line extension will be in operation; and if he will make a statement. [29485]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Underground announced on Monday 9 February that it now plans to open a full through Jubilee Line service from Stanmore to Stratford in the spring of 1999.

The Jubilee Line Extension is one of the largest construction projects in Europe. With a project of this size and complexity, problems are bound to arise. Serious delays arose when tunnelling on two contracts had to be stopped for some months as a precautionary measure following the 'New Austrian Tunnelling Method' collapse on the Heathrow Express project. Additional delays arose from construction problems at some stations, in particular the complex Westminster station where construction has taken place around the existing District and Circle Lines and very close to the foundations of Big Ben. Tunnelling and other civil engineering works are now complete, fitting-out is under way and the new trains are being introduced to passenger service on the existing Jubilee Line. Development of the high technology signalling system for the line is however taking longer than anticipated, leading to the need to prepare and install more conventional signalling for use until the new system is ready.

London Transport currently estimate the total cost of completing the Extension to be £2.76 billion.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the function of the Sustainable Development Unit. [29437]

Angela Eagle: The Sustainable Development Unit is located in the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Working with the Scottish Office, Welsh Office and Northern Ireland Office, it has a Government-wide remit to promote sustainable development and concern for the environment across Government. The Unit's work programme includes the review of the UK Sustainable Development Strategy; the Greening Government initiative; Freedom of Access to Information on the Environment; Government promotion of Local Agenda 21; and sponsorship of and responding to the Government Panel on Sustainable Development, the UK Round Table on Sustainable Development and the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution.

French Lorry Drivers' Dispute

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much compensation has been paid to British hauliers following the French lorry drivers' dispute in 1997. [29388]

Angela Eagle: This information is not available. Because British hauliers had advance notice of last year's dispute, most managed to avoid the disruption, and so it is expected that few claims will have been submitted.

DEFENCE

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27837]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence defines major computer systems as those whose estimated costs exceed £50m. Many of these systems are acquired in a phased manner, with delivery and payment occurring over a number of years. Projects which have completed their delivery over the past five years are shown in Table 1.

Table 1
Projects completed

System		In service date (ISD)	Total cost (£ million)
AD CIS	Air Defence Command and Control Information Systems (Army)	1995–96	71
BATES	Battlefield Artillery Target Engagement Systems (Army)	1996	360
DAWN	Delivery of the Abbey Wood Network (Procurement Executive)	1996	70

Table 2 contains projects which have delivered some elements during the past five years, with further phases to be delivered over the next financial year and beyond.

Table 2. Projects to be completed

UNICOM: Unit Computing Project (Army)

CASH: Computer Assistance Support to Headquarters (Army)

CHOTS: Corporate Headquarters Office Technology System (MOD Centre)

FAAITS: Fleet Air Arm Information Technology System (Navy).

Information concerning the costs and In Service Dates of UNICOM, CASH and CHOTS are published in Table 8 of Chapter 4 and Annexe E of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1996 (Cmd 3223). For FAAITS, the original estimate of programme cost was £50m; the majority of the phases of the project have been delivered, with final elements to be delivered by August 1999.

Major computer systems under development are set out in Table 3. These systems will deliver over the next financial year and beyond.

Table 3. Projects under development

LITS: Logistics IT Systems (RAF)

CAPITAL: Resource Accounting and Budgetary System (MOD Centre)

UPKEEP: Naval Logistics System (RN)

ASPECT: Computer Support Tools for Procurement Executive

RAF CCIS: Command and Control Information System (RAF)

CATT: Battlegroup Trainer (Army)

CSS: Command Support System (Navy)

JBD: Battlespace Digitisation (Joint)

TAFMIS: Training Administration Financial Management Information System (Army Training and Recruitment Agencies)

AFPAA: Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency Information System

PPA: Pay and Personnel Agency Partnership Programme.

The allocations of funds to the projects in Table 3 are included in the Department's Long Term Costings. The Department's internal plans represent projections and assumptions which inform advice to Ministers on the affordability of particular elements of the Defence Programme. Accordingly, I am withholding the costing information requested, which constitutes internal decisions and advice, under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Information on the original estimates of cost and planned In Service Dates, where these are relevant, is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In addition to the above there are certain security-related projects, information about which I am also withholding under Exemption 1 of The Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii)1997–98 to date. [27762]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The estimated cost of fraud and theft to the MOD, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies for the years 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98 to date is as follows:

	Value £000
1995–96	506.5
1996–97	466.2
1997–98 (to date)	75.0

These figures relate to in-house cases of fraud and theft and are based on reported suspicions and proven cases. They are subject to change as investigative and disciplinary action progresses.

The cost of fraud by contractors is difficult to quantify because it may not affect the Department's funds directly and may involve conjecture about what would have happened otherwise. Costs recorded in a given year may also relate to cases first identified several years before. Subject to these qualifications, the costs for the years in question (on conviction) were:

	Value £000
1995–96	2.7
1996–97	0.0
1997–98 (to date)	0.0

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27763]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Reported cases of loss arising from proven or suspected theft are held centrally on a summary basis. Items or groups of items valued at more than £25.00 lost through suspected or proven theft since 1 May 1997 are as follows:

Batteries	110
Clothes	2,287
Arctic clothes	6,955
Bedding and furniture	150
IT modem	199
Tableware	1,400
Binoculars	519
Aluminium strips	2,187
Balances	997
Laser printer	800
Television	340
Lap top computers and computer parts	15,000
Tool kit	307
Vehicle straps	536
Petrol	120
	31,907

The MOD keeps no central record of items lost other than through theft or fraud. Potential losses are investigated by Commands and budget areas with a view to recovering the item in question and preventing a recurrence. Write-off action must be pursued where a loss is established. Individual losses are separately identified in Appropriation Accounts only where the value exceeds £100,000. Below that figure they are recorded in bulk, and the identification of individual cases valued at more than £25.00 could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the rates of absenteeism in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date; and if he will make a statement. [26634]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 116. Information for 1997 will not be available until later this year. The Ministry of Defence has recently taken steps to raise awareness of the issue of absenteeism by producing a booklet for line managers and staff to encourage best practice in monitoring and improving attendance.

Empty Properties

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the (a) annual cost and (b) total value of the empty properties owned by (i) his Department, (ii) his agencies and (iii) other public bodies for which he has responsibility, in (A) 1995–96, (B) 1996–97, (C) 1997–98 to date and (D) 1997–98 full year. [26635]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: There are no central records held and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Buildings Refurbishment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will make a statement. [26637]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The information is not collected centrally.

Ammunition (Test Centre)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is his policy to continue to implement the NATO standardisation agreements for small calibre ammunition by conducting in-service surveillance of ammunition at a NATO-certified test centre in the United Kingdom. [28042]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The Ministry of Defence's current policy on the implementation of NATO standardisation agreements for small calibre ammunition is that in-service surveillance is carried out at a NATO certified United Kingdom test centre. It should be noted that the policy also covers qualification approval and production tests at the test centre.

Porton Down

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about his recent initiatives concerning former Porton Down volunteers. [28897]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. David Atkinson, dated 13 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your request for a statement on the recent initiatives concerning Porton Down volunteers.

Throughout their history, the Ministry of Defence laboratories at Porton Down in Wiltshire, now the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA), have been involved in the research and development that has underpinned the UK's biological and chemical defence capability. Volunteers from the Armed Forces have been a vital part of the research programme as subjects in a whole range of trials. In all, over 20000 volunteers have visted Porton Down; in the last thirty years, more than 5000 have participated in projects looking at defence against or medical treatment for chemical and biological agents.

The vast majority of the volunteers who have visited Porton Down have come and gone, quite unconcerned about their attendance. Indeed, studies have always been, and continue to be, carried out with the utmost regard for the safety, health and well-being of volunteers. Nevertheless, in the las few years about 150 have enquired about the trials in which they took part, sometimes out of curiosity, but sometimes because they have concerns about their health and wonder whether there is a link.

In the past, many of the actual records and reports of the experiments were, quite justifiably, kept secret in the interests of national security. Understandably, this has fuelled the concerns and uncertainties. Further, some people have not known where to go for information, or they believe that it is being withheld. The recent initiatives, prompted by the Minister for the Armed Forces, are aimed at making it easier for former volunteers to get information about their attendance at Porton Down.

DERA has set up a dedicated helpline to take enquiries from former volunteers (0845 603 9140) and has produced a leaflet to explain the type of information and help that may be available, with useful addresses. Staff at Porton Down will look at individual records and formal technical reports to provide volunteers with as much information as possible about the trials in which they participate. It will also be possible for former volunteers to visit Porton Down to see the records for themselves or to talk to the medical and scientific staff about their experiences.

I hope that this information is helpful.

Trident

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 12 January 1998, Official Report, column 135, where each of the 23 UK personnel working in the US and the four US employees working in the UK are located; and if he will make a statement on their current duties. [28819]

Mr. Spellar: As of 11 February 1998, the number of UK personnel stationed in the US reduced to 22, following the disestablishment of the Personal Secretary post in Washington. Of these, four are located in Washington and a further three in California with duties associated with the 1958 UK/US Mutual Defence Agreement: the remaining 15 are located at Crystal City, Arlington, Virginia (12), Kings Bay, Georgia (1), New London, Connecticut (1), and Laurel, Maryland (1), with duties associated with the Polaris Sales Agreement, as amended for Trident.

Of the four US personnel serving in the UK, three are located at Bristol and one at Barrow. Their duties are related to the Polaris Sales Agreement, as amended for Trident.

In this context it has been brought to my attention that in my reply to my hon. Friend's related question on 12 January 1998, Official Report, column 136, I referred inadvertently to the "Atomic Control Office Washington". This should have read "Atomic Co-ordinating Office, Washington".

Hunting

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what restrictions in respect of hunting are placed on armed forces personnel in the United Kingdom. [28631]

Mr. Spellar: Participation in hunting may not take priority over military commitments. Personnel must be of an appropriate skill level and must wear the appropriate protective headgear. Transport of horse and rider, and any hunt subscription, must be met entirely at private expense.

Vermin Control

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on setting snares for fox control in areas of his Department's estate where there is regular public access. [29311]

Mr. Spellar: Snares set for the purposes of fox control are not placed in areas of regular public access on the Defence estate.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on the use of rifles as a means of vermin control at night in areas of his Department's estate which are being used for military training at that time. [29312]

Mr. Spellar: For obvious safety reasons, access to areas of the Defence estate where military training is taking place at night is restricted.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many of the disability living allowance awards re-examined as part of the Benefit Integrity Project up to 31 December have been referred to a fraud officer; and of those how many have been (a) recommended for prosecution, (b) prosecuted for fraud and (c) cleared of fraud; [29180]

(2) how many (a) terminally-ill people receiving payments under Special Rules, (b) paraplegics, (c) quadriplegics, (d) people who are both deaf and blind, (e) double amputees and (f) people who fall within the Benefits Agency's definition of severe mental impairment have been mistakenly included in the Benefit Integrity Project to date. [29181]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Benefits should go to those who are properly entitled to benefit. This is why we have continued with Benefit Integrity Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 12 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP).

The BIP was conceived as a response to the Benefit Review which identified a potential for up to £499m DLA fraud annually; it is essentially a measure designed to secure benefit integrity—that is to get the right amount of benefit to the right people—rather than an explicitly anti-Fraud measure. The methodology adopted, which takes account of the sensitivities involved in approaching large numbers of the most seriously disabled people in society, makes it unlikely that overt fraud will be uncovered but maximises the likelihood of revealing incorrect provision.

As at 31 December 1997, the BIP has identified 89 cases in which fraud was suspected, of which 36 have been referred to the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service for further investigation, which have not yet been completed. In the remaining 53 cases, fraud staff in the Disability Benefits Directorate decided that there was no realistic prospect of determining whether fraud had occurred and the files were closed without further action.

Special action is taken to try and minimise unnecessary disruption to customers suffering from certain categories of illness so they will not be contacted as part of BIP. These include customers suffering from; a terminal illness (where life expectancy is likely to be under six months); quadriplegics; paraplegics; people who are both deaf and blind; double amputees and those within the BA definition of severe mental impairment. These categories were introduced following a meeting with Disability organisations in June 1997.

From June 1997 customers included in these categories have been identified from computer records. A small number of customers have more than one disabling condition and our computer records make provision for only one to be recorded, as a result some customers in the relevant categories have not always been screened out. Since November 1997 a clerical check of these records has been introduced to identify as many as possible of these cases. Regrettably there is a small number of customers whose clerical records do not provide sufficiently detailed information for us to identify them as persons who should not be contacted. I apologise for these errors.

The number of customers mistakenly contacted is set out in the attached table.

Whilst all efforts are taken to avoid these customers being contacted, should it occur, and evidence is gathered, the Adjudication Officer would have to take the information into account when deciding entitlement. Entitlement to DLA is based on the effects of a person's disabling condition on their day-to-day life, rather than on the basis of the disabling condition itself.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the disability benefits assessment made in respect of Mrs. Carol Preston of Stockport. [29205]

Mr. Denham: The administration of the Benefits system is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Winnick, dated 12 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding whether she would review the disability benefits assessment made in respect of Mrs. Carol Preston of Stockport.

A request for a review of this decision was received on 18 December 1997. It was supported by the local Citizens Advice Bureau who provided more detailed information about Mrs. Preston's need for care at night. A different Adjudication Officer looked at the papers again and referred the case to a Benefits Agency Medical Officer for advice. The AO's decision was notified to Mrs. Preston on 9 February 1998.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases in the last five years officials involved in assessing claims for disability benefit have been disciplined for reducing or refusing such claims. [29204]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Winnick, dated 12 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to respond to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding how many cases in the last five years officials involved in assessing claims for disability benefit have been disciplined for reducing or refusing such claims.

There have been no recorded cases within the last five years.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have had their disability benefit reduced in the last 12 months. [29202]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Winnick, dated 12 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding how many people have had their disability benefit reduced in the last 12 months.

The number of Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance customers in Great Britain who have had their benefit reduced in the 12 months ending November 1997, is 28,900. This figure includes renewal cases and reductions as a result of changes other than to the disability, for example, hospitalisation. It is a rounded figure based on the 5% extract.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans the Government have to reduce the disability living allowance and which groups representative of disabled persons she has consulted. [29510]

Mr. Denham: Disability benefits, including Disability Living Allowance, are included in the Department's Comprehensive Spending Review, which was announced on 11 June last year. The review is an important step in our plan to modernise and improve the Social Security system, so that it helps people to work as far as they are able; provides appropriate support to those who cannot work; and makes the most effective use of the resources available.

No decisions have yet been made. When we have identified specific proposals we will consult disabled people, their organisations and others with an interest. We will not implement any changes without first consulting them.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will revoke the Jobseeker's Allowance (Amendment) Regulations 1998 (S.I., 1998, No. 71) which were laid before the House on 23 January 1998. [29436]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We will be revoking the Jobseeker's Allowance (Amendment) Regulations 1998 (S.I. 1998 No. 71) in due course.

Elderly People

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if it is her policy that social services should backdate financial assistance for elderly people living in residential or nursing homes who did not claim assistance when their savings fell below £16,000 because they were unaware that assistance was available. [28865]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

There is no provision for social services departments to backdate financial assistance for elderly people living in residential or nursing homes who did not claim assistance once their savings fell below £16,000.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef Imports

Mr. Walter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his oral answer of 22 January 1998, Official Report column 1136, for what reason he was unable to provide a written reply to the hon. Member for North Dorset on the subject of beef imports from the European Union. [25941]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 27 January 1998]: I have now written to the hon. Member, and placed the letter on the board. I apologised to the hon. Member via a telephone message late on 22 January since I was not able to reply on that date as promised. I was unable to consult the relevant officials in time as they were undertaking surveillance operations away from London.

Civil Servants

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by grade the number of officials in his Department at grade 3 or above who have (a) taken early retirement, (b) taken official leave, (c) been dismissed, (d) changed jobs within the Department, (e) moved to another Department and (f) been offered and rejected an alternative position (i) within the Department and (ii) in another Department since 1 May 1997. [27457]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Since 1 May 1997, one member of the Senior Civil Service in grades equivalent to former Grade 3 and above has taken early retirement. All members of staff in these grades are officially entitled to take annual leave of up to 30 days a year. No members of staff in these grades fall into the other categories.

British Produce

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has to encourage the public to support British farmers by buying British produce; [28456]

(2) what plans he has for a campaign to promote the sale of British farm products in supermarkets and local shops. [28374]

Mr. Rooker: My colleagues and I take every opportunity to promote British produce, but a Buy British campaign would contravene the Treaty of Rome. Our aim is to encourage UK producers to provide the kind of food that everyone will want to buy, and to market it effectively.

Rural Assistance

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance he plans to provide to those rural communities which are dependent upon agriculture during the present farming crisis. [28457]

Mr. Rooker: I have no plans, at present, to make any additional payments to farmers other than those announced by my right hon. Friend in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for High Peak (Mr. Levitt), on 3 February 1998, Official Report columns 591–92.

Beef Products (Labelling)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to enable supermarkets to be in a position to label beef guaranteed BSE-free. [28646]

Mr. Rooker: The Government have adopted stringent safeguards, based on the most up-to-date scientific advice, with the objective of ensuring that consumers are not exposed to the BSE agent through the beef they buy, whether the beef is purchased from supermarkets or independent butchers.

BSE

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the numbers of BSE cases confirmed in (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales, (d) England, and (e) each EU country in (i) 1997 and (ii) 1998. [28797]

Mr. Rooker: The table shows the number of cases of BSE confirmed in 1997 and 1998 for the relevant countries.

County	1997	1998
Northern Ireland	28	1 as at 9 February 1998
Scotland	165	18 as at 9 February 1998
Wales	375	32 as at 9 February 1998
England	4,307	419 as at 9 February 1998
Belgium	1	— as at 27 January 1998
France	6	1 as at 27 January 1998
Germany	2	— as at 27 January 1998
Luxembourg	1	— as at 27 January 1998
Netherlands	2	— as at 27 January 1998
Portugal	30	2 as at 27 January 1998
Republic of Ireland	77	9 as at 27 January 1998

As far as the United Kingdom is concerned, some of the cases confirmed in 1997 will have been reported in 1996. The majority of the cases confirmed in 1998 were reported in 1997.

Data for other EU Member States are notified by the Commission. The latest figures for 1997 were supplied on 20 January 1998.

Cattle Passports

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department will take to ensure that the cost of cattle passports will be shared throughout the value chain. [28719]

Mr. Rooker: We expect that the cattle passport charges which will pay for the computerised Cattle Tracing System will be reflected in the price paid to cattle breeders by their customers, and thence passed up the marketing chain. Moreover, farmers should benefit from the introduction of the Cattle Tracing System through improved customer confidence, which should in turn help demand for farmers' products.

Food Standards

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that food imported into the United Kingdom and consumed within the United Kingdom is subject to the same food standards regime as food produced in the United Kingdom. [28718]

Mr. Rooker: Most products of animal origin imported for human consumption from member states or from third countries must comply with harmonised Community rules. These rules are intended to ensure that, in general, equivalent health requirements apply whatever the origin of the products. Products not subject to Community rules may be imported only if they comply with our national rules. Food which fails to meet food safety requirements can be refused entry into the UK or it can be seized and taken before a Magistrate for condemnation, under provisions of the Food Safety Act 1990.

Publications

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by title the publications produced by his Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998. [26332]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Publications produced by the Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 January 1998 are listed as follows:

Hill Farmers

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the increased payments to hill farmers announced on 22 December 1997; and if he will make a statement about his decision not to allocate the total compensation to the LFA. [28735]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The Department has received a great many representations following my right hon. Friend's statement on 22 December 1997, Official Report, columns 677–79. EU rules on agrimonetary compensation limit the extent to which Member States can favour one type of production over another by concentrating aid on particular groups of recipients. Cattle and sheep farmers outside the less favoured areas (LFA) have also been affected by green rate revaluations, and, in our judgment, the balance of the revised package announced on 3 February 1998, Official Report, columns 591–92, is fully justified and equitable.

Tobacco Subsidy

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made in abolishing the tobacco subsidy to EU growers. [29051]

Mr. Rooker: The Commission is expected to introduce its proposals for reform of the tobacco regime at the Agriculture Council on 16/17 February. The Government will continue to press for disengagement from support. With producer Member States in a majority, abolition of the subsidy is unlikely.

Meat Imports

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each country from which (a) beef, (b) sheep meat, (c) pigmeat and (d) poultry meat was imported into the UK during 1997. [29309]

Mr. Rooker: The tables list the countries from which beef, sheep meat, pig meat (including bacon and ham) and poultry meat were dispatched to the UK between January and October 1997, the most recent month for which data are available.

Note:
All data are provisional and subject to amendment.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what checks are made on meat imports from other EU countries which originate from non-EU countries. [29308]

Mr. Rooker: All consignments of all animal products imported into the European Union (EU) are subject to checks at designated Border Inspection Posts (BIPs) regardless of the Member State for which they are destined. All consignments are subject to documentary checks. The levels of identity and physical checks are laid down in Community legislation and are determined by the product and country of origin. Once consignments have passed through a BIP, Single Market rules permit random spot checks only at the final destination.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies his Department has undertaken concerning the incidence of meat and meat products from other EU countries which originated from non-EU countries but have been relabelled as of EU origin. [29307]

Mr. Rooker: None. Monitoring of label information on food sold in the UK is the responsibility of locally based food law enforcement authorities.

Sheep Premium

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the mechanism for calculating sheep annual premium payments at EU level in respect of the setting of the average market price in the EU; and if it will be his policy to direct higher levels of premium towards those parts of the Union with lower prices. [29306]

Mr. Rooker: I recognise that the rise in the average EU market price for sheepmeat in 1997 is almost entirely attributable to the revaluation of currencies in particular sterling. At the same time, the price of sheepmeat on the domestic market has fallen sharply. I cannot accept, however, that we should seek to reshape the rules for the calculation of the Sheep Annual Premium simply because they do not suit the UK in any particular year. When sterling weakened, UK producers were to some extent over compensated. I cannot, therefore, agree that supplementary premia should be paid in those Member States where the average market price is below the Community average.

Rural Communities

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the parliamentary constituencies which he defines as being rural and the criteria he uses for defining rurality; and if he will make a statement. [27345]

Mr. Morley: There is no generally accepted definition of what is rural. For example, the Rural Development Commission defines rural communities as those with up to 10,000 inhabitants. The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development defines rural areas as those with a population below 150 inhabitants per square kilometre. But other definitions may be appropriate for particular circumstances.

In terms of parliamentary constituencies the review of Parliamentary Constituencies 1991 defined Borough Constituencies as 'predominantly urban' and County Constituencies as 'containing more than a small rural element'.

Lists of County and Borough Constituencies are available in the Library.

Milk Production

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the accuracy of his Ministry's milk production figures; what is the current year's national milk quota; and what assessment he has made of how close to the target the level of United Kingdom milk production will be. [27705]

Mr. Rooker: The wholesale milk production figures are compiled by the Intervention Board using returns submitted by approved purchasers of milk. Adjustments are regularly submitted by those purchasers throughout the year, in an attempt to maintain as accurate a figure as possible. The figures are supplied as a guide as to how the UK's milk production is measuring against quota. The Intervention Board is wholly reliant on purchasers to provide accurate production figures in order to compile their production statistics.

Direct sales are not monitored against quota during the quota year.

As at February 1998 the national milk quota for the 1997–98 quota year (including quota in the National Reserve) stood at:

Wholesale: 13,936.2 million litres

Direct sales quota: 229.3 million litres.

The production figures to the end of January 1998 show butterfat adjusted delivery figures running 110.74 million litres ahead of the quota profile for the period April 1997 to January 1998. It is not possible to make a reasoned assessment of UK production against quota until after the current quota year has ended on 31 March 1998.

Cornish Handline Quota

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to increase the Cornish handline quota. [28178]

Mr. Morley: The UK's quotas for 1998 are due to be allocated to industry in March. As in previous years, there will be a separate allocation for the mackerel handline fishery. The uptake of quota will be monitored closely so that appropriate steps can be taken to keep the fishery open.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Electricity Industry

Mr. Rammell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will ensure that local and national consumer organisations have an opportunity to make representations in the event of a bid for the Energy Group plc and Eastern Electricity by (a) Nomura International and/or (b) Texas Utilities. [29496]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Nomura International stated publicly on 10 February that it had withdrawn from talks with The Energy Group. Following Nomura International's announcement, Texas Utilities stated publicly that it continued to be in talks with The Energy Group which may lead to an offer. In the event of a bid which qualified for consideration under the Fair Trading Act 1973, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade would decide, in the light of the advice of the Director General of Fair Trading (DGFT) and the views of the Director General of Electricity Supply (DGES), whether or not to refer the merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC). The DGFT and DGES would, in formulating their advice and views, take account of any third party representations, including any representations they received from consumer organisations.

Written Answers

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to answer the questions from the hon. Member for Wokingham tabled for answer on 29 October 1997 (reference 13046 and 13042). [29535]

Mrs. Beckett: The right hon. Gentleman received an answer to his question 13046 on 29 October 1997, Official Report, column 826.

As regards his question 13042, I replied yesterday.

I apologise that the original question was not picked up by my Parliamentary Branch. Each morning notice of questions is now obtained electronically from HMSO. However the system has no trace of having received electronically question 13042. Steps are being taken to ensure that this does not recur.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Iraqi Students

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many Iraqi students are currently attending British universities; if he will list the subjects which they are studying; and what assessment he has made of the sources of their funding. [29303]

Dr. Howells: The latest figures for the 1996–97 academic year show that there were 143 Iraqi students on higher education courses in higher education establishments in the UK. Their subject of study and source of funding are given in the table.

Ofsted Inspections

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will make a statement on whether Ofstead has made a comparison between its judgments of inspected schools' performance and a corresponding value added assessment based upon longitudinal pupil records in those LEA areas where such value added data are available; [28519]

(2) what were Ofsted's definitions for each school year from 1993–94 of judgments in inspection reports stating pupils' achievements of Key Stage 2, and which were (i) in line with national expectations, (ii) below national expectations, (iii) in line with national standards, (iv) below national standards, (v) in line with national norms, (vi) below national norms, (vii) in line with national averages and (viii) below national averages. [28520]

Mr. Byers: These are matters for HM Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

New Deal Awards

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish the criteria for the New Deal money being awarded to schools where his Department prioritise the bids. [27825]

Mr. Byers: In the first round of the New Deal for Schools the criteria that were used to decide which applications would be successful were the contribution of the proposed projects to improvements in educational standards, their urgency, and their soundness and cost-effectiveness.

In the second phase of NDS, local education authorities (LEAs) and the Funding Agency for Schools (FAS) have been asked to prioritise all their applications into four objective categories which relate to building condition. In deciding allocations to schools, we shall follow these priorities, also taking account of the nature of the work proposed, the overall cost, and the outcomes which would be secured, including in particular higher educational standards, and value for money.

Employment Service (Ethnic Monitoring)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what information will be provided by the planned ethnic monitoring of the Employment Service's New Deal clients. [27242]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about ethnic monitoring of New Deal clients.

Once the New Deal for 18–24 year olds is launched nationally in April we will be collecting information by ethnic origin in relation to the numbers of young people eligible for New Deal; invited to initial interview; starting on Gateway programmes; placed in unsubsidised jobs; starting on the four New Deal options and starting in self-employment. Information will also be collected by ethnic origin on the destinations of those leaving the New Deal options.

Our approach to ethnic monitoring on New Deal has been developed in consultation with the Commission for Racial Equality.

I hope this is helpful

Welfare to Work

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the borough and district councils which comprise the Colchester District under the Welfare to Work New Deal proposals. [27295]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Bob Russell, dated February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question relating to the borough and district councils which comprise the Colchester District under the Welfare to Work New Deal proposals.

I list below those councils whose responsibilities fall within the area covered by the Colchester District of the Employment Service:

Braintree District Council
Causeway House
Bocking End
Braintree
Essex CM7 9HB

Chelmsford Borough Council
Civic Centre
Duke Street
Chelmsford
Essex CM1 1JE

Colchester Borough Council
PO Box 884

Colchester
Essex CO1 1FR

Maldon District Council
Prince's Road
Maldon
Essex CM9 5DL

Tendring District Council
Town Hall
Station Road
Clacton-on-Sea
Essex CO13 9BU

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment who has been selected as the private sector Lead Partner in the Colchester District for the Welfare to Work New Deal proposals. [27296]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Bob Russell, dated February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about the private sector lead partner for New Deal in the Colchester District.

The competition to identify private sector organisations to lead the organisation and delivery of New deal for 18–24 year olds in Colchester and seven other locations in England and Wales has reached the shortlisting stage. Five organisations have been shortlisted in respect of Colchester. They are:

Capita Group Plc.

Instant Muscle Ltd;

North & Mid Essex Chamber of Commerce and Industry;

SEETEC Business Technology Centre;

Training and Business Group (London) Ltd.

We expect the identity of the successful private sector organisation to be announced by the end of February.

I hope this is helpful.

Home Energy Efficiency Programmes

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many tenders have been (a) submitted and (b) awarded for home energy efficiency programmes under the New Deal; and in each case what is the average cost for placement. [27279]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about the number of tenders that have been submitted, and awarded, for home energy efficiency programmes under the New Deal.

I regret that this information is not yet available because we are still in the contracting process for the New Deal. Although the New Deal started in 12 Pathfinder Districts on 5 January, full national coverage will not be in place until April. It will be some time after this before all contracts will have been signed.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful at this stage.

Further Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to impose tuition fees on students studying for the Postgraduate Certificate in Education/Certificate of Education (Post 16). [28906]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Gerrard) on 2 February 1998, Official Report, columns 564–65.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase the number of places available to train teachers of further education to meet the expansion of student numbers forecast for the next four years. [28907]

Dr. Howells: It is for universities and colleges to decide what courses to offer in response to demand from students and employers, including demand for potential teachers of further education. We are keeping the situation under review and will continue to consult with the sector.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total amount of government funding allocated to British further education institutions in 1998–99; and what the amount was in each of the past five years. [28909]

Dr. Howells: The Department will allocate £3,114m in 1998–99 to the Further Education Funding Council. The table shows the levels of funding in the last five years, including payment in respect of claims for demand-led funding in 1996–97 and 1997–98.

£ million

Year	Amount
1993–94	2,778
1994–95	2,914
1995–96	3,025
1996–97	3,154
1997–98	3,138

The responsibility for further education colleges in Scotland and Wales lies with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with the Further Education Funding Council on current budget deficits of further education colleges. [28694]

Dr. Howells: Departmental officials are in regular contact with the Further Education Funding Council on a range of issues affecting further education colleges.

Student Loans

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the minimum age at which borrowers with existing student loans will continue to be repaying such loans; when the decision was taken to raise the age limit from 50 years; and for what reasons Parliament was not informed. [28911]

Dr. Howells: The cancellation arrangements applying to the existing student loan scheme are set out in the Education (Student Loans) Regulations 1998. The maximum age at which a borrower might be repaying his or her loan under these arrangements is 59 in cases where the borrower was aged 40 or over when the loan was taken out, and 49 in other cases. We have no plans to change the cancellation arrangements for borrowers under the existing scheme.

The Government are proposing that the age at which the liability to repay income contingent loans is cancelled should be 65. This is because income contingent loans will typically be repaid over a longer period than loans made under the existing scheme. The decision to set the age limit for cancellation at 65 was one of a number of detailed decisions about the implementation of the new arrangements that we have made since we first announced our proposals for student support on 23 July 1997. It was published in the "Progress Report on New Student Support Arrangements in Higher Education from 1998–99" which was placed in the Library and distributed to other interested parties last month.

The cancellation arrangements applying to borrowers taking out income contingent loans from 1998–99 will be set out in regulations to be made later this year under the Teaching and Higher Education Bill, once enacted.

Higher Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total amount of government funding allocated to British higher education institutions in 1998–99; and what the amount was in each of the past five years. [28908]

Dr. Howells: The total Government funding for higher education institutions in England for 1998–99 and the previous five years is given in the table. The total includes the grant to the Higher Education Funding Council for England, the grant to the Teacher Training Agency (for initial teacher training and INSET), and the public contribution to fees.

Funding for higher education institutions

£ million

	Total funding
1993–94	4,291
1994–95	4,561
1995–96	4,696
1996–97	4,606
1997–98	4,664
1998–99	[1]4,682

[1] In addition higher education institutions will receive an estimated £130 million in private contributions to fees in 1998–99 under the Government's new higher education funding policy.

Primary School Admissions Procedure

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what legal advice he has received about the application of the Rotherham Judgment of 4 December 1997 to primary schools admissions procedures. [28706]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department understands that the recent judgment on Rotherham LEA's admission arrangements confirms the primacy the legislation gives to meeting an expressed parental preference when allocating primary and secondary school places, while making clear that the use of catchment areas is not in itself unlawful.

HEALTH

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional bans on tobacco advertising he estimates will be in effect by May 2002. [28820]

Ms Jowell: A common position text on the European Union Tobacco Advertising Directive (on banning tobacco advertising) was agreed at the Health Council meeting on 4 December 1997. This text will now be considered by the European Parliament.

Following completion of the EU Parliamentary process and adoption, and if unchanged, the following timetable will apply to the Directive:

Timetable
by the end of year 3	domestic legislation to be implemented
by the end of year 4	application to written press
by the end of year 5	application to sponsorship
by the end of year 8	application to existing sponsorship of exceptional global events which have been allowed subject to diminishing levels of sponsorship and voluntary reduction of associated advertising.

1 October 2006 is the final date by which the Directive must be implemented in its entirety.

Secure Units (Females)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local authority secure units exist in (a) London and (b) the Home Counties (i) in total and (ii) for young females. [28792]

Mr. Boateng: The table gives the number and location of secure units as at 11 February 1998, in England. All units are approved to accommodate boys and girls.

Secure Accommodation: current national local authority provision England

Unit	Local Authority
London
1. Stamford House	Hammersmith and Fulham
2. Orchard Lodge	Southwark

Whittington Hospital Trust

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the new Chairman of the Whittington Hospital NHS Trust was appointed; and if he will make a statement. [29502]

Mr. Milburn: Dr. Michael Abrams was appointed on 27 January to chair the Whittington Hospital National Health Service Trust until 31 October 2001.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people with tuberculosis have been detained against their will in each of the last 10 years; when each person was detained, where they were held, and for how long. [29503]

Ms Jowell: The information requested is not routinely collected.

A person with infectious tuberculosis of the respiratory tract may be detained in hospital under section 37 of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act, 1984. This would happen only when all other routes to establish treatment compliance has been exhausted and the person was deemed a risk to public health. Although compulsory admission to hospital is allowable under the law, compulsory treatment is not.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 16 February 1998

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Social Exclusion

8. Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action his Department is taking to assist the Government's initiative on social exclusion. [27592]

26. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the role of his Department in combating social exclusion. [27610]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My Department is working with the Social Exclusion Unit to ensure that we make the fullest use of opportunities for all DCMS sectors to play their part in helping to tackle the problems of social exclusion.

Royal Opera House

12. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on the management of the Royal Opera house. [27596]

Mr. Fisher: My Department has received approaching 1,300 letters on the issue of opera. A number of these has addressed the question of management of the Royal Opera House.

Media Diversity

13. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions he has had with Rupert Murdoch or his representatives on diversity in the British media; and if he will make a statement. [27597]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have not held any meetings with Mr. Murdoch or his representatives from News International or News Corporation since the election last May. I have indeed met Mr. Mark Booth, the Chief Executive of BSkyB, in which News International has a 40 per cent. shareholding, to discuss a range of broadcasting issues.

Public Libraries

15. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to encourage the use of libraries by children. [27599]

Mr. Fisher: It is very important that children are introduced to the wealth of information available in libraries at an early age. This is primarily the responsibility of local library authorities, but the Government have role in establishing the framework for the delivery of public library services. My Department therefore requires all library authorities to report on their services to children in their Annual Library Plans.

21. Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to encourage use of information technology in libraries. [27605]

Mr. Fisher: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Luton, South (Ms Moran).

National Lottery (Disbursement)

18. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the equity of lottery funds distribution as between London and the rest of the United Kingdom. [27602]

Mr. Chris Smith: In our White Paper, "The People's Lottery" we made it clear that we wish to see Lottery funds allocated fairly and equitably in the light of need across all regions and parts of the United Kingdom. I am pursuing this through measures in our Lottery Bill and through changes to the Policy Directions which I issue to distributors.

Press Complaints Commission

20. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he plans to meet the chairman of the Press Complaints Commission to discuss its code of practice. [27604]

Mr. Chris Smith: On 25 September 1997 I welcomed Lord Wakeham's proposals for strengthening the newspaper industry's code of practice, and added that I intended to discuss further protection for people in all walks of life with him. I propose to do so in due course.

National Lottery (East Anglia)

23. Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to ensure that national lottery distributors take account of local needs in the East Anglian region. [27607]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Lottery Bill will require distributors to produce strategic plans for their funding activities, which reflect their assessment of needs. The plans will be drawn up after wide consultation, which will include local authorities and other local and regional interests.

Tourism Forum

28. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the new Tourism Forum will help the tourism industry in the Yorkshire region. [27612]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I am working closely with the Tourism Forum and its Working Groups to develop an effective, comprehensive strategy for tourism which will benefit all regions, including Yorkshire, into the next century.

Health Care Projects

29. Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on his proposals for a sixth good cause from health care projects in the Bexley and Greenwich area of south-east London. [27613]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have received no such representations.

National Lottery (Women's Interests)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to ensure women's interests are properly reflected in lottery awards. [27608]

Mr. Chris Smith: Securing access to the benefits of the Lottery for everyone is a fundamental aspect of our policy on Lottery distribution. Among our proposals which I expect to benefit women particularly are funding for out of school child care and healthy living centres, and distributors' plans for a one-stop shop service for community grants.

Television Licences

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list those categories of person entitled to concessionary television licences; if he will review the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [29274]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 13 February 1998]: Entitlement to the concessionary television licence is determined by the accommodation occupied and the way it is provided or managed. Details of the qualifying criteria are set out in a leaflet prepared by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The Government's Agreement with the BBC provides for a review of future funding arrangements prior to March 2002. We shall conduct that review in good time to allow decisions to be taken before then. It will include a detailed consideration of licence fee concessions. However, there are no plans for changes to the concessionary scheme in advance of that review.

Film Industry

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to encourage overseas film-makers to use British studios and expertise. [27703]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I am currently co-chairing with Stewart Till of PolyGram Filmed Entertainment a Film Policy Review which, amongst other things, is looking at further ways of promoting inward investment into the UK.

The British Film Commission and the network of regional film commissions already undertake work to encourage overseas film production to this country.

In addition, the introduction in the Budget of accelerated 100 per cent. write-off on film production and acquisition has been widely welcomed as an incentive to increase investment. The British Screen Advisory Council has estimated that the new tax relief will generate a 31 per cent. increase in investment in film production over the next three years.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Radioactive Material

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent estimate has been made by his Department or its non-departmental public bodies or consultants reporting to his Department of the number of radioactive packages (a) imported into, (b) exported from and (c) transported within the United Kingdom within the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will outline the conditions under which any shipment of radioactive material has to be notified in advance to his Department. [27988]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Data on the number of radioactive packages transported into, from and within the UK are not collected by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions or by the Environment Agency. However, it can be estimated that of the order of 500,000 packages of radioactive material are carried by road annually in the United Kingdom (source: Radiation Exposure from the Normal Transport of Radioactive Materials within the UK 1991 Review, by R. Gelder, NRPB Report NRPB-R255, a copy of which is held in the Library).

Requirements for notification in advance of shipment are given in paragraph 456 of the International Atomic Energy Agency's Regulations for the Safe Transport of Radioactive Material 1985 Edition (As Amended 1990), a copy of which is held in the Library. Notification is required for:

all type B(M) packages; all transports made under special arrangement; and any type B(U) packages containing radioactive material in excess of defined quantities.

Freight

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the amounts of freight transported in England and Wales in 1996. [28009]

Ms Glenda Jackson: 1,724 Million tonnes of freight was loaded for transport by road, water and pipeline in England and Wales in 1996. Information for rail freight is available only for GB as a whole. In 1996 a total of 100 million tonnes was loaded for transport by rail for delivery within GB. There will be an element of double counting in these figures as some freight shipments will be transported by more than one mode in a single journey.

Rail Services

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the percentage of scheduled rail services cancelled or which failed to reach their final destination, (b) the percentage of scheduled rail services which ran to within 10 minutes of the scheduled arrival time and (c) the subsidy per 1,000 km of scheduled train mileage in (i) 1997 and (ii) 1992. [28611]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Passenger's Charter Performance figures for the years in question are:

		Percentage
	1997	1992–93
Punctuality[1]	90.3	89.7
Reliability[2]	98.8	98.7

[1] Percentage of trains arriving within 5 or 10 minutes of scheduled time.

[2] Percentage of trains which were not cancelled or terminated before destination.

Note:

Full details of the methods for calculating the punctuality and reliability measures for individual train operating companies are set out in the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising's Performance Bulletin.

Information on subsidy per 1,000km of scheduled train mileage is not available. Estimates of grant paid per 1,000 passenger kilometres are:

Year	£
1997–98	[1]52.17
1992–93	[2]41.04

[1] Based on estimated outturn OPRAF grant and Metropolitan Special Grants to PTAs of £1,800 million and 34.5 billion passenger Km.

[2] Based on Central Government and PTE grants paid to British Rail of £1,301 million and 31.7 billion passenger Km.

Note:

Figures in outturn prices.

Energy-to-waste Facilities

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what independent scientific advice he has evaluated on the quality of emissions from energy to waste facilities. [28508]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency is responsible for authorising emissions to air, water and land from large scale energy from waste facilities under the integrated pollution control system.

The Agency publishes guidance to its inspectors on the standards with which such plant should comply. This guidance takes account of the Agency's own technical expertise, advice of consultants, non-governmental organisations and industry, and other relevant studies and reports from the UK and around the world.

Alcohol (Petrol Stations)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has undertaken into the safety aspects of people buying alcohol from garages and petrol stations when driving. [28325]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I appreciate my hon. Friend's concern about the sale of alcohol at garages and petrol stations. At present there are few outlets of this kind and it would be difficult to mount a representative survey. We are not aware of any significant problem of drivers who consume alcohol purchased at off-licences during journeys. Driving after drinking at public houses and similar establishments is a far more widespread problem.

Railtrack

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to tighten the regulatory regime under which Railtrack operates. [28605]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We want to make regulation of the rail industry more effective and accountable. We shall announce proposals in the Spring.

Langstone Harbour

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if pollution in Langstone Harbour has resulted in the reclassification of shellfish; what assessment he has made of the effects on the local fishing industry; and if he will make a statement. [28651]

Angela Eagle: Classification of shellfish production areas, as required by the Shellfish Hygiene Directive, lays down health conditions for the production and marketing of live bivalve molluscs (such as oysters, mussels, clams). Under this system, shellfish harvesting waters at the northern end of Langstone harbour were downgraded in 1994 from category B to category C (which meant that shellfish products required a longer period of cleansing or heat treatment, before being offered for sale). Waters elsewhere in the Harbour remained category B. This reflects a monitored deterioration in water quality which may have been due to increased pollution from one or more sources such as a sewage treatment works, riverine inputs or run-off from agricultural land. There has been no further reclassification of shellfish waters in Langstone Harbour.

Waste Water Treatment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of capital investment restrictions on the amount of finance water companies put into the upgrading of waste water treatment facilities. [28647]

Angela Eagle: We do not place restrictions on capital investment by the private sector water companies in England and Wales. In setting price limits, the Director General of Water Services takes account of the needs of water companies to finance the investment necessary to meet required standards, including standards for waste water treatment.

Ofwat

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are OFWAT's K factor predictions for each of the next 10 years. [28648]

Angela Eagle: The table lists the K factors determined by the Director General of Water Services, taking into account any subsequent adjustments, for each of the water and sewerage companies and water supply companies in England and Wales for each of the years 1997–98 to 2004–05. K factors for the years 2000–01 to 2004–05 will be redetermined by the Director General at the 1999 periodic review of prices. No K factors have yet been determined for subsequent years.

Water Quality

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps OFWAT is taking to improve water quality standards. [28701]

Angela Eagle: The regulation and enforcement of water quality is principally the responsibility of the Environment Agency, in respect of the water environment, and the Drinking Water Inspectorate, in respect of drinking water quality. Water companies themselves have the responsibility to ensure that they meet the quality standards set by legislation and enforced by those regulators. The Director General of Water Services has a primary statutory duty to secure that water companies properly carry out, and are able to finance, their functions. He also has general duties including one to further conservation of, among other things, flora and fauna, and one to take account of the effect of proposals on flora and fauna, but he is not responsible for improving water quality.

Water Industry

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the relationship between the Environment Agency, OFWAT and the water companies. [28634]

Angela Eagle: The Government are reviewing the regulation of the utilities, including the water companies and the role of the Director General of Water Services. There are no present plans to review the relationship between the Environment Agency and either the Director General or the water companies.

Water Charges

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress his Department has made with regard to future policy for water charges; and if he will make a statement. [28683]

Angela Eagle: The Government are reviewing the system of charging for water and sewerage services and will make proposals on water charging in a consultation paper to be issued shortly.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate his Department has made of the number of domestic water consumers (a) who have chosen to have water meters installed and (b) who now live in properties with water meters where there is no rateable value. [28682]

Angela Eagle: (a) The Office of Water Services reports that between 1990–91 and 1996–97 inclusive, 500,453 household customers in England and Wales opted to have water meters installed. Figures for earlier years do not identify whether meters were installed at the customer's request.

(b) No separate figures are kept for the number of metered households in properties with no rateable value.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce an obligation on water companies to provide a free meter installation service for customers. [28721]

Angela Eagle: Most water companies already provide free meter installation in some or all circumstances for household customers on request. The installation and use of meters is being considered as part of the Government's review of the system of charging for water and sewerage services. We shall make proposals on water charging in a consultation paper to be issued shortly.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he will take to ensure that any undertakings made by London and Continental (Union Railway) to affected parties on the route of the CTRL outside their parliamentary undertakings will be honoured by any successor company. [28679]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As my right hon. Friend explained in his statement of 28 January 1998, Official Report, columns 461–74, the CTRL Development Agreement provides for London and Continental Railways to come forward with revised funding proposals in the following 30 days. The question raised by the hon. Member does not, therefore, arise at this point.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what noise and pollution alleviation measures for residents in London will be required for those proposing to construct the high speed Channel Tunnel rail link. [29497]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In designing and constructing works authorised by the Channel Tunnel Rail Link Act 1996, the nominated undertaker must comply with certain Environmental Minimum Requirements, including a Code of Construction Practice. In preparing submissions for approval by local planning authorities under the Act, the nominated undertaker must take into account various objectives and measures set out in the Code. The Code also requires the preparation and implementation of several Environmental Management Plans, including ones for Traffic, Dust and Noise and Vibration.

Driving Licence (Elderly People)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will require drivers aged 70 years and over to have their health questionnaire from the DVLA countersigned by their family doctor. [28895]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have no current plans to change the present arrangements under which applicants, of whatever age, for issue or renewal of ordinary driving licences are required to declare any relevant or prospective disabilities. False declaration is a serious offence. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency makes further inquiries of doctors or specialists where necessary.

Vehicle Imports

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will limit the charges vehicle manufacturers can levy to issue a certificate of compliance when importing vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [28958]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are no current plans to introduce a limit. The charge manufacturers may make for issuing a Certificate of Conformity in relation to a vehicle Type Approval is effectively part of the cost of the vehicle and is not prescribed. To assist the movement of vehicles between member states in the EU, the European Commission has issued guidance which says that charges should be reasonable and not exceed about £67.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action his Department took to ensure that drivers of 3.5 tonne vehicles were properly notified of the change in status of their vehicles to heavy goods vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [28957]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There has been no change in the classification of goods vehicles between 3.5 and 7.5 tonnes, which remain "light goods vehicles". The only recent change relating to such vehicles concerns driving licences. Since 1 January 1997 higher health standards and a separate driving test have applied to new drivers. The higher health requirements have also applied since 1 January 1998 to pre-1997 car licence holders with automatic entitlement to drive such vehicles wishing to renew that entitlement group when their car licence expires. These requirements also apply to minibuses with 9–16 passenger seats. This change was publicised in a Department of Transport Press Notice (No. 129) of 12 June 1997. The driver and Vehicle Licencing Agency also notify drivers before their existing licences expire.

Severn Bridge Tolls

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on charging one-way tolls on the Severn Bridge; if he will review the policy of one-way tolls on the bridge; and if he will make a statement. [28363]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 10 February 1998]: Representations from local authorities have been received on this matter and in liaison with those authorities we have carried out studies to determine to what extent one-way or two-way tolling can lead to traffic diversion. These studies have not provided evidence that the benefits of a change to two-way tolling would justify the costs involved.

Goods Vehicle Operator Licences

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce legislation to make parish councils statutory consultees when awards of goods vehicle operator licences are being considered. [28364]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 10 February 1998]: I am aware that a number of parish councils favour a statutory right of objection to applications for goods vehicle operator licences. This would require primary legislation and there would first need to be full consultation. We are currently reviewing this issue, but I would encourage local authorities to take the views of parish councils into account when considering whether to use their statutory right of objection.

Road Safety

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what proportion of road deaths he estimates alcohol is a contributing factor; and if he will make a statement. [28953]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In 1996, a total of 15,500 people were killed or injured in accidents involving a driver over the legal limit of 80 mg of alcohol per 100 ml of blood. Of those, an estimated 540 were fatalities. Records of the blood or breath alcohol reading of a driver involved in an accident are not normally kept in cases where the level is below the legal limit.

The consultation paper "Combating drink driving: next steps" reviews the available data on drink-drive accidents and estimates the likely effect of a reduction in the legal blood alcohol limit. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of road accidents and deaths are caused by (i) excessive lorry driver hours, (ii) tachograph interference and (iii) defective lorries; and if he will make a statement. [28954]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Comprehensive information is not collected on causation factors in road accidents. It is not therefore possible to supply the specific information requested. The Department is, however, undertaking a number of research projects in order to improve its knowledge of accident causation generally. We are also planning research into the relationship between driving and working hours and fatigue related accidents.

Integrated Transport

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what environmental appraisal will be undertaken of the implications of the Integrated Transport White Paper. [29019]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Environmental issues will be at the heart of the Integrated Transport White Paper. The policies under consideration for the White Paper are being appraised against their potential to contribute to the Government's overall environmental objectives.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" is currently that used by Government departments undertaking environmental appraisals. [29022]

Mr. Meacher: Yes, the guidance in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" still applies, though further guidance is being prepared in the light of the July 1997 KPMG report. This report was commissioned by the last Administration to gauge how far they were meeting their commitment to assess the potential environmental impact of new policy proposals; it showed that more needed to be done to ensure that policies were systematically considered.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions will shortly be issuing Policy Guidance for non-specialist staff across Government, explaining in relatively simple terms when and how to carry out an environmental appraisal.

The Department is also working on further technical guidance for appraisal specialists, in co-operation with the Government Group on Environmental Costs and Benefits. A contract for a scoping study has been awarded to Dr. David Pearce, who is due to report in the Spring. This work will inform decisions on the nature and format of new guidance scheduled for the Autumn.

Maritime Rescue

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the total number of (a) incidents, (b) incidents requiring co-ordinating action and (c) false alarms or hoaxes handled by each of the maritime rescue co-ordination centres in 1996; [29412]

(2) if he will list the total number of (a) incidents, (b) incidents requiring co-ordinating action and (c) false alarms or hoaxes handled by each of the maritime rescue sub-centres in 1996. [29413]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is detailed in the tables:

Co-ordination centres	Total incidents	Assistance rendered	False alarms and hoaxes
Aberdeen	670	188	482
Clyde	415	256	159
Dover	559	258	301

Coastguard

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the cost of setting up the integrated coastguard communications system project. [29414]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The overall cost of setting up the Integrated Communications System for the period May-December 1997 was £30,041. We have yet to invite tenders or this project and to disclose the anticipated cost of the system at this time would distort the process of competitive tendering.

Aviation Industry

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent studies (a) his Department and (b) the Civil Aviation Authority have commissioned into the economic value of the aviation industry to the United Kingdom. [29706]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No studies have been conducted by the Department or Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) on the economic value of the aviation industry to the UK, but studies have been undertaken on additional capacity. Such studies include the RUCATSE study on runway capacity in the South East published in 1993, the evidence submitted by the Department and the CAA to the T5 Inquiry and a study by CAA (CAP 638) on the economic value of new air services to regional airports.

Beaches

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidelines his Department issues relating to beach (a) hygiene and (b) safety. [29543]

Angela Eagle: My Department provides support to the Tidy Britain Group which promotes the Seaside Awards and Blue Flag awards, both of which are designed to encourage cleanliness and safety standards on beaches.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of beaches in the United Kingdom fail to comply with EU standards. [29545]

Angela Eagle: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment on 4 December 1997, Official Report, columns 289–91, to my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie).

Speed Limits

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow local highway authorities to set 20 mph limits within urban areas without reference to his Department. [29603]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Hazel Grove (Mr. Stunell) on 11 February 1998, Official Report, column 228.

British Rail Land (Newhaven)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to prevent the sale by British Rail of land in Newhaven. [29446]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have endorsed the policy that BR should continue to dispose of its surplus land at market value. Interest in the Newhaven site has been expressed by more than one party including railway interests and BR is proposing to put it out to tender.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what monitoring of the impact of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips on (a) the aquatic environment, (b) the soil environment and (c) fisheries (i) has been carried out and (ii) is planned by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29724]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency, which is responsible for monitoring the aquatic environment and for day-to-day management of freshwater fisheries in England and Wales, has initiated monitoring programmes to assess the impact of sheepdip compounds (including synthetic pyrethroids) on the chemical quality of the aquatic environment (including any effects on fish populations). Monitoring has been targeted on the most intensive sheep rearing areas, including Wales and the Midland region. There is no specific monitoring of soil.

Last month the Government published draft groundwater regulations relating to England, Wales and Scotland which specify additional monitoring requirements for groundwater, including synthetic pyrethroids.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sanctions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress she has made in developing her policy of applying sanctions which are targeted at elites rather than ordinary people. [29748]

Mr. Foulkes: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development on 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 288.

Conferences

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the conferences held by her Department since 1 May 1997, giving in each case the (a) purpose and (b) estimated cost. [27734]

Clare Short [holding answer 10 February 1998]: I have listed the conferences held by my Department since 1 May 1997.

Conferences held by DFID since 1 May 1997

Foreign Direct Investment

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to ensure that flows of foreign direct investment benefit poorer countries and contribute to development. [29690]

Clare Short: My Department is working extensively to increase the amount of beneficial trade and investment flowing to the developing world, particularly the poorer countries. The best way to increase such trade and investment is likely to be through efforts to secure a more open and transparent international trading regime. Apart from engaging in the international policy debate over fairer trade policy, we are working with our partner governments to encourage growth of the private sector within poorer countries. The Department's support for economic reform packages assists countries achieve macro-economic stability. Our good governance agenda aims to increase the competence and strength of government, including the key interfaces with the private sector such as the judicial system and revenue collection.

I have also provided a grant to support the Ethical Trading Initiative which brings together the private sector, NGOs and unions to work on the implementation of ethical codes of practice for the production of goods sold in our shops. This will help promote best practice in overseas enterprises including many financed through foreign direct investment by improving the working conditions of their employees.

Philippines

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support the British Government are contributing to the land reform programme in the Philippines. [29118]

Clare Short: We are not making any direct contributions, but Christian Aid are using their block grant from my Department to part-fund a project to educate farmers in Cebu and Leyte of their legal rights under the Agrarian Reform Law and to establish People's Organisations capable of representing their interests. Similarly, Oxfam have been using their grant on a legal training project with indigenous peoples which includes issues of land and ancestral rights. The European Union is financing a 20 million ecu Agrarian Reform Support project.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Family Law

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve the family court welfare work of the Probation Service and other related services. [30171]

Mr. Straw: As part of the comprehensive spending review, my right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are considering the range of services currently provided to the courts on child welfare matters within family law by the Probation Service. Guardian ad Litem and Reporting Officer Service and the Official Solicitor's Department. We believe that a new integrated service subsuming the work of each of the above could provide an improved service to the courts, better safeguard the interests of children, reduce wasteful overlaps and so increase efficiency.

I have therefore agreed with my right hon. Friends that further detailed work involving practitioners and other users of the services should be undertaken to form the basis for public consultation.

The detailed terms of reference for the work are as follows:

To identify the range of welfare services currently provided by the Probation Service, Guardian ad Litem and Reporting Officer Service and the children's work of the Official Solicitor's Department and other agencies in family proceedings, and to consider the scope for improvements to the effectiveness of their work through the creation of a new unified service.

To make proposals on the structure of a new service; to provide preliminary analysis of the estimated costs and benefits as a basis for public consultation; and to consider the implications for any new structure of the Government's plans to establish a Welsh Assembly.

Fraud Trials

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review alternative methods to jury trial in serious fraud cases. [30172]

Mr. Michael: The Government are determined that there should be effective measures in place for tackling financial fraud.

The Government recognise that there are concerns that the present system for handling some major complex fraud trials is not working satisfactorily. Therefore, I have today issued a consultation document which has been placed in the Library. This invites views on the principle of whether the system is likely to operate better and with a greater degree of public confidence if, in a small number of complex fraud trials, a traditional jury were to be replaced by another method of determining the facts. Views are also sought on four possible alternative methods of trial. The Government have not reached a conclusion on whether the ending of a jury trial in serious fraud cases is desirable in principle or formed an opinion on any particular option for change and will not do so until the consultation process is complete. The purpose of the consultation is to provide a full opportunity for the principle of change to be considered in the context of the problems presented by these case and possible alternative trial methods.

Comments on the document are invited by 31 May 1998 and we shall consider them all carefully before reaching any conclusions as to whether any changes should be made.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in relation to the Data Protection Bill [Lords], he will ensure that the Data Protection Commissioner is empowered to enforce the rights granted to data subjects by Clause 12 of the Data Protection Bill [Lords]; and if he will make a statement. [29042]

Mr. George Howarth: Clause 12 empowers courts to order the rectification, blocking, erasure and destruction of inaccurate data and opinions based on them. Clause 38 enables the Commissioner to serve enforcement notices in respect of such material.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce data protection measures to ensure that any information concerning fair obtaining is given to the data subject, in advance of any processing by the data controllers, and if he will make a statement. [29040]

Mr. George Howarth: Paragraph 2 of Schedule 2 of the Data Protection Bill, introduced in another place on 14 January, specifies the content and timing of such declarations.

Hillgrove Farm, Witney

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost to the police of protecting Hillgrove Farm in Witney in 1997. [28997]

Mr. Straw: I understand from Thames Valley Police that the total cost of policing Hillgrove Farm in 1997 was £415,935.

Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the PA Consultancy has been asked to recommend whether his Department should (a) continue with its current timetable for the awarding of the planned PFI contract for providing information technology services, (b) award the contract several months earlier than currently proposed or (c) discontinue the PFI. [29389]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 13 February 1998]: Given the speed of change in information technology (IT), the Home Office will continue to keep under review the options for taking forward its IT projects. PA Consulting has been commissioned to examine the interface between the planned Private Finance Initiative procurement, the Department's Year 2000 compliance projects, and other planned upgrades of office systems. It is too early to say whether this work will lead to changes in current plans.

Charity Act 1992

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects Part III of the Charity Act 1992 to be implemented; and if he will make a statement. [29304]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 13 February 1998]: Consideration is currently being given to the implementation of Part III of the Charities Act 1992, which seeks to rationalise the provisions for the licensing of street collections and house to house collections currently contained in the Police, Factories, etc. (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 and the House to House Collections Act 1939. It is not envisaged that Part III will be in force before the end of 1998; the practical issues involved are complex and it is essential that these are fully examined before any decision is made. Later this year, I hope to be in a position to announce proposals for taking this matter forward.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28936]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The information requested for official and constituency engagements in January is as follows. In addition, I attended a number of meetings within central London by car.

Tuesday 6 January

Visits to Her Majesty's Young Offender Institution Brinsford, West Midlands Probation Service, West Midlands Fire Service and Her Majesty's Prison Grendon, near Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire. Train from London to Wolverhampton. Car used to travel between venues and return to London.

Friday 9 January

Constituency meetings in Blackburn. Train from London to Preston and return by train on Saturday 10 January.

Thursday 15 January

Visit to West Yorkshire Probation Service Victim-Offender Unit in Leeds.

Visit to Ravenscliffe Estate in Bradford. Aeroplane to Leeds/Bradford Airport. Car used to travel to Bradford from Leeds and then from Bradford to Blackburn.

Friday 16 and Saturday 17 January

Constituency meetings in Blackburn. Train from Preston to London.

Monday 19 January

Visit to a Refugee Council Day Centre, Vauxhall, London. Car.

Friday 23 January

Visit to Her Majesty's Prison Wayland.

Visit to North West Norfolk, for speech at Kings Lynn. Car.

Thursday 29 and Friday 30 January

Chaired Informal Justice and Home Affairs Meeting in Birmingham. Train from Euston to Birmingham. Return journey by car to Oxfordshire 30 January and London 1 February.

Animal Procedures Committee

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which the Animal Procedures Committee has met (a) representatives from Imutran and (b) representatives from Novartis giving in each case the purpose and outcome of the meetings. [29445]

Mr. George Howarth: Representatives from Imutran, led by the Director of Research, made presentations to the Animal Procedures Committee on two occasions. The first was made to the primate sub-committee on 23 January 1997. The second was made to the whole Committee on 29 January 1998.

On both occasions, the presenters outlined the benefits of xenotransplantation for human patients and examined the current research programme involving the transplantation of genetically modified pig hearts to baboons, with particular reference to immunosuppression.

The purpose of these presentations was to provide the Animal Procedures Committee with up to date information on the Imutran research programme and to facilitate consideration of applications from Imutran for project licence authorities under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Imutran was taken over by Novartis in April 1996. There have been no meetings with the Animal Procedures Committee by representatives from Novartis outside these two occasions.

Civil Defence

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his budget for defence of the civil community from nuclear attack and aid from his Department in the event of terrorist and other nuclear incidents in the current year; and if he will make a statement; [29717]

(2) what is his budget for defence of the civil community from chemical and biological attack and for aid from his Department in the event of terrorist and other chemical and biological incidents in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [29718]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office is responsible for civil defence and provides grants to some local authorities as a contribution towards the cost of their emergency planning arrangements. In the current financial year, the total civil defence grant available is £14,457 million. The grant is provided to support emergency planning for the complete range of incidents, however caused.

A series of classified contingency plans exist for responding to a wide range of terrorist threats, including those which might involve the threatened or actual use of nuclear, chemical or biological materials.

The Department of Trade and Industry is the lead Government department for nuclear incidents at civil installations in England and Wales.

Cannabis

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been cautioned for possession of cannabis (a) once, (b) twice and (c) three or more times, by police force region, in each year since 1986. [29249]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not available since data are not routinely collected on whether a particular caution is the first or a subsequent one given by the police to an individual. However, special exercises were carried out for the 1991 and 1994 Criminal Statistics using information from the Home Office Offenders Index. These indicate that in 1994, of those cautioned, 15 per cent. had a previous caution, compared with 20 per cent. in 1991. The later sample was drawn after Home Office circular 18/1994 had been issued. This circular specifically discouraged repeat cautioning and cautioning for the most serious offences.

Speed Cameras

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to pass funds raised from fines for speeding identified using a speed camera to the police forces concerned. [29761]

Mr. Michael: None. Hypothecating the revenue from speeding fines would result in expenditure on traffic enforcement being determined by the income generated rather than the relative priority of the activity. We are examining the current funding arrangements for the cameras to see what more might be done.

World Cup

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure the safety of British fans at the World Cup finals in France. [27590]

Mr. Michael: The Government are determined to do everything possible to help ensure that British fans attending the World Cup Finals in France this summer do so in a safe and secure environment. To achieve this, we have established a World Cup Co-ordinating Group which brings together official, policing and football representatives from both England and Scotland. They are all working closely with the French authorities, who are responsible for the management and security of the tournament. This is to ensure a co-ordinated approach to maximise the safety and security of supporters en route to and from France and whilst attending matches during the tournament.

We are very pleased that the French Organising Committee (CFO) are adopting the stewarding methods used in this country so impressively during Euro '96. We are also aware that the French authorities have studied the British system of crowd safety management. There has been considerable liaison and consultation between the French authorities and British representatives and we will continue to ensure that we provide that high level of co-operation up to and throughout the tournament.

Later this month, my right hon. Friend will be hosting a seminar in Blackburn on the policing of football which will bring together relevant experts from across the European Union to discuss policing, safety and security arrangements for the World Cup and to share advice and expertise.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of CCTV on the crime rate in neighbouring areas; [29364]

(2) what statistical evidence his Department has collated on the impact on crime levels of the introduction of CCTV. [29365]

Mr. Michael: The Home Office Police Research Group study, "CCTV in Town Centres: Three Case Studies" has shown that closed circuit television (CCTV) can be effective in reducing crime and fear of crime, particularly when it is deployed as part of a wider crime reduction strategy. This research, and also research sponsored by the Scottish Office on a CCTV scheme in Aidrie, revealed no evidence of displacement of crime from areas which had CCTV coverage to neighbouring areas which did not. The Department keeps under review the research literature on CCTV and we will be assessing the evaluations of effectiveness produced by the schemes which have received funding under the CCTV Challenge competition.

Human Rights Bill [Lords]

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if (1) the Advertising Standards Authority, (2) the Association of British Travel Agents, (3) the Automobile Association, (4) the Bar Council, (5) the BBC, (6) the Broadcasting Standards Council, (7) British Airways, (8) the British Medical Association, (9) British Midland, (10) British Railways Board, (11) the British Tourist Authority, (12) BT, (13) Cable and Wireless, (14) Cambridge Water Company, (15) the Charity Commission, (16) the Church of England, (17) the Church of Scotland, (18) the Confederation of British Industry, (19) the Defence Research Agency, (20) the Financial Services Authority, (21) the Football Association, (22) the Gaming Board for Great Britain, (23) the General Dental Council, (24) Great Western Trains, (25) the Independent Television Commission, (26) the Law Society, (27) the London Stock Exchange, (28) London Weekend Television, (29) the Millennium Commission, (30) National Express, (31) the National Heritage Memorial Fund, (32) National Power, (33) National Savings, (34) the National Trust, (35) the Newspaper Society, (36) the Office for Standards in Education, (37) the Office of Electricity Regulation, (38) the Office of Telecommunications, (39) the Press Complaints Commission, (40) the Prince's Trust, (41) PowerGen, (42) the Radio Authority, (43) Railtrack, (44) Ridge Parish Council, (45) the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Westminster, (46) the Royal Opera House, (47) the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors, (48) the Rugby Football Union, (49) Southern Electric, (50) the Sports Council, (51) Stagecoach, (52) Transco, (53) United Utilities, (54) the Universities and Colleges Admissions Scheme, (55) the University of Cambridge, (56) Virgin Trains and (57) Yorkshire Water are organisations (a) whose acts or omissions it is intended should be able to be challenged and (b) which perform functions of a public nature under the Human Rights Bill [Lords]. [29529]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 13 February 1998]: Clause 7(1) of the Human Rights Bill enables an act of a public authority to be challenged on the ground that it is unlawful under clause 6(1) of the Bill because it is incompatible with a Convention right. As to the definition of "public authority" under clause 6 of the Bill, I refer the right hon. Member to the replies I am giving today to his earlier Questions on this matter. It would be for a court or tribunal to decide in individual cases whether an organisation is obviously a public authority or, if it is not, whether it is nevertheless to be regarded as a public authority because it performs functions certain of which are of a public nature. In the latter case, it would also be for the court to determine whether the particular act or omission which it was sought to challenge was of a private nature.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if, to constitute a public authority for the purposes of the Human Rights Bill [Lords], a body must (a) receive public money and/or (b) fulfil a statutory responsibility and/or (c) have on the governing body one or more persons appointed by the Government; [29171]

(2) if a body which (a) receives public money, and/or (b) fulfils a statutory responsibility and/or (c) has on its governing body one or more persons appointed by the Government is automatically a public authority for the purposes of the Human Rights Bill [Lords]. [29172]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 12 February 1998]: Clause 6 provides for a non-exhaustive definition of "public authority" for the purposes of the Human Rights Bill. The term includes (i) organisations, such as central government and the police, which are so obviously public authorities that it is not necessary expressly to define them as such; (ii) a court or tribunal; and (iii) any person certain of whose functions are functions of a public nature, except where the nature of the act is private. The definition specifically excludes either House of Parliament or a person exercising functions in connection with proceedings in Parliament. Following amendments to the Bill in Another place, the definitions in (ii) and (iii) above are currently qualified by clauses 6(5) and 6(6) respectively.

It will be for a court or tribunal to decide in individual cases which come before it whether a person falls within the above definition.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Functions

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister what was the occasion of the official function held on 7 May at No. 10 Downing Street; who attended; and at what cost to public funds. [23836]

The Prime Minister: This was an official reception for Ministers. The approximate cost was £250.

Official Residence

Mr. Forth: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 26 January 1998, Official Report, column 66, if he will list for the period since 1 May 1997, the items and costs of refurbishment of and improvements to the domestic living accommodation in Number 11 Downing Street. [26215]

The Prime Minister: I do not propose to list every item in the domestic living accommodation in No. 11. I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 26 January 1998, Official Report, column 66, where I have accounted fully for refurbishment costs.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list by item the furniture, fittings and decorations purchased since 1 May with public funds for his official flat in Downing Street indicating the cost of each item not subjected to a formal competitive tendering process; if he will list for each item the reasons it was not subjected to competitive tendering; if more than one quotation was sought; whether the lowest price was accepted; what was the lowest quotation submitted; and what factors led to more than one quotation not being sought in respect of certain items; [26063]

(2) if he will list by item all furniture, fittings and decorations purchased with public funds since 1 May for his official flat in Downing Street indicating the cost of each item subjected to a formal competitive process; and what was the lowest tender price submitted for each item; [26065]

(3) if he will list the country of origin of each item of furniture, fittings and decoration purchased with public funds since 1 May for his official flat in Downing Street; and what factors led to the purchase of items whose country of origin was not the United Kingdom; [26067]

(4) if he will list the date and time of delivery to Downing Street of each item of furniture, fittings and decorations purchased with public funds since 1 May for his official flat in Downing Street; and what factors governed the delivery time of each item delivered outside normal working hours. [26068]

The Prime Minister [holding answers 30 January 1998]: No. I do not propose to list every item in the domestic living accommodation in No. 11. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) on 26 January 1998, Official Report, column 66, where I have accounted fully for refurbishment costs.

Foreign Secretary's Private Office

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Prime Minister what evidence underlay the press briefing by his official spokesman that Ms Anne Bullen's appointment was a political one. [27282]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 February 1998]: Ms Anne Bullen was selected for the post of Diary Secretary by the then Foreign Secretary, Lord Hurd. Ms Bullen was appointed under Paragraph 2(i) of Schedule 2 of the Diplomatic Service Order in Council 1991 which allows for exceptions to the normal Civil Service rules of recruitment.

Mr. Gavyn Davies

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what meetings he has had with Mr. Gavyn Davies of Goldman Sachs in the last three months; and if he will make a statement; [27689]

(2) what contact there has been between the No. 10 Downing Street Policy Unit and Mr. Gavyn Davies of Goldman Sachs over the last three months; and if he will make a statement. [27690]

The Prime Minister [holding answers 5 February 1998]: My staff and I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if Mr. Gavyn Davies of Goldman Sachs will be part of the Government team visiting the United States of America this week; in what capacity he will be attending the talks in Washington; and if he will make a statement. [27691]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Mr. Davies was not a member of the official delegation.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister with whom Mr. Gavyn Davies will be attending meetings during his visit to Washington with the Prime Minister over the period 4 February to 7 February; and if he will make a statement. [28353]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Mr. Davies was not a member of the official delegation, although he did attend an informal seminar at my invitation.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what is the cost to public funds of taking Mr. Gavyn Davies to Washington for meetings with the US Administration; and if he will make a statement. [28367]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 February 1998]: Mr. Davies met his own travel and accommodation costs for the trip to Washington.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28938]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 January 1998]: During January I have undertaken fourteen engagements in the London area where I have used a car; one engagement outside London where I have used a car, and; two engagements outside London where I have used a combination of car and train.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Prime Minister if, under paragraph 69a of the Ministerial Code, Cabinet Ministers may take their spouses or permanent partners overseas at their own expense on official visits without his written permission. [28949]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the final sentence of paragraph 70 of the Ministerial Code, a copy of which was placed in the Library in July 1997.

Millennium Compliance

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Prime Minister if he will appoint one Minister with overall responsibility for overseeing the millennium computer compliance problem. [29505]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 12 February 1998, Official Report, columns 327–28.

TREASURY

Hotels (VAT)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the full-year annual cost of reducing the rate of value-added tax on hotel accommodation to (a) 8 per cent. and (b) 5 per cent. taking into account the revenue effect deriving from the elasticity of demand for this service; and if he will make a statement. [28396]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 February 1998]: There are no reliable figures available on the amount of Value Added Tax paid on hotel accommodation.

Official Cars

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many official cars are available for use by Ministers in his Department; and how many new cars have been acquired for the use of Ministers in his Department since 1 May. [25182]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 23 January 1998]: Each Treasury Minister has one official car available for use. The Government Car Service renews all official cars on a cyclical basis.

EU Budget Contribution

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the estimate of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Community for 1998–99 on the same basis as the figure in Table 5.A4 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98, page 123. [29606]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government's latest estimate of the United Kingdom's net payments to European Community Institutions for 1998–99 is £2,440 million.

Self-assessment

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the response of taxpayers to the introduction of self-assessment; and if he will make a statement. [28365]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 February 1998]: Eight million taxpayers sent in their self assessment tax returns by the 31 January deadline. It is particularly reassuring to know that over 95 per cent. of those taxpayers without professional tax advisers met the deadline. This illustrates that the vast majority of ordinary taxpayers understood what they had to do and dealt with this aspect of the new system.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the advantages of exempting pensioners from fines resulting from the late completion of self-assessed income tax returns. [28206]

Dawn Primarolo: Only a small minority of pensioners are required to complete self assessment tax returns. And the large majority of people who are not represented by tax advisers, into which group many tax paying pensioners will fall, submitted their completed tax returns to the Inland Revenue well within the deadline. Anyone who had a reasonable excuse for failing to submit a tax return on time may appeal against the penalty.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he took to ensure that taxpayers who (a) completed their self-assessment tax returns before 30 September 1997 and (b) before 31 January 1998 were aware that they had to make a payment on account for the tax year 1997–98 in addition to their 1996–97 payment; what are the penalties for failing to make a payment on account for 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [28366]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 February 1998]: Information identifying the need to make a payment on account on 31 January 1998 for the tax year 1997–98, and how to calculate it, was included in the tax return package issued to all self assessment taxpayers.

Income Tax

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how much the income tax take will be (a) as a percentage of gross domestic product and (b) in cash terms in each year from 1997–98 to 2002–03 on current taxation plans; and how much of this is attributable to the abolition of dividend tax credits. [29194]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 February 1998]: Projections for income tax as a percentage of GDP were published in Table B3 of the November 1997 Pre-Budget Report. Figures for income tax in cash terms for the years 1997–98 and 1998–99 were published in Table S2.4 of the Supplementary Document to the November 1997 Pre-Budget Report. Projections of money GDP were published in Table B2 of the November 1997 Pre-Budget Report. Figures for the effects of the abolition of dividend tax credits on income tax receipts were published in Table 2.2. line 5. of the July 1997 FSBR.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the loss in revenue resulting from an increase in the single person's income tax allowance of (a) £50, (b) £100, (c) £150, (d) £200, (e) £250 and (f) £300; and how many people would be taken out of tax in each case. [29184]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 February 1998]: Estimated full year costs at 1998–99 income levels are given in the table.

Increase in non-aged and aged personal tax allowances £	Full year cost at 1998–99 income levels £ million	Number of taxpayers taken out of income tax 000
50	310	100
100	620	180
150	920	280
200	1,230	410
250	1,540	530
300	1,840	630

Euro

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the impact on employment of changes in the petro-currency status of the national currency upon the United Kingdom's accession to the euro zone, with particular reference to periods of international crisis. [28742]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The Chancellor has set out the five economic tests which will be used to assess whether it is in the UK's economic interest to join the single currency, and has made it clear that the bottom-line is the impact on UK employment and growth. The Treasury paper "UK Membership of the Single Currency: As Assessment of the Five Economic Tests" (published in October 1997) sets out the factors that would need to be considered, and identifies the UK role as an oil exporter as one of these factors.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the extent to which United Kingdom industry and commerce will price their goods and services in the euro after its introduction but before the decision is taken on United Kingdom membership. [26809]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has not made any estimate of the extent to which United Kingdom industry and commerce will price their goods and services in the euro.

However, the work of the Business Advisory Group indicates that the euro is likely to be used more widely by business than other foreign currencies are today. Firms with operations in, and firms that export to, countries which join the single currency are most likely to decide to price their goods and services in euro. In addition, although the euro will not be legal tender in the UK in 1999, firms will be able to use it here for various commercial purposes if they wish.

Finance (No. 2) Act 1997

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations his Department has received since the enactment of the Finance (No. 2) Act 1997, on measures contained in the Act. [24883]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 January 1998]: I received a number of representations prior to the enactment of the Finance (No. 2) Act 1997.

Diesel Duty

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost of reducing duty on ultra low sulphur diesel to 2p per litre less than the duty on ordinary diesel. [26353]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs estimate that the cost of a 2p differential between duty on a litre of ordinary diesel and a litre of ultra low sulphur diesel from April 1988 would be about £5 million in financial year 1998–99.

Spirits Duty

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the revenue cost in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000 of a 4 per cent. cut in spirits duty, commencing on 6 April 1999. [26354]

Dawn Primarolo: Cutting the spirit duty by 4 per cent. on 6 April 1999 will have no effect on revenue in 1998–99, but will cost approximately £30 million in 1999–2000.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many estates in the most recent year for which figures are available were entitled to the inheritance tax exemption for farmland; and what revenue he estimates was lost as a result of this exemption. [26195]

Dawn Primarolo: Available information is in terms of inheritance tax relief for all agricultural property which covers farmland and other related assets. In 1997–98 it is estimated that about 1,200 death estates will benefit from agricultural property relief, at a cost to the Exchequer of around £70 million.

Hypothecation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of hypothecation of taxation. [27163]

Mr. Darling: There are great difficulties with hypothecation. However, we look at each case on its merits.

Smuggling

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 22 January 1998, Official Report, columns 647–48, on tobacco smuggling, if he will list the factors which account for the increase in the amount of tobacco smuggled, seized by HM Customs and Excise year on year since 1993; and what plans he has to set targets in conjunction with his EU counterparts to reduce the amount of tobacco smuggled. [28528]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no doubt many factors but the two principal ones are the growth in tobacco smuggling itself and the increased effectiveness of Customs in tackling the smugglers. Also, since the introduction of the Single Market in 1993, the number of Excise Verification Officers has been increased from 220 to 330 in 1997.

An EU High Level Group was formed in March 1997 to analyse the nature and causes of tobacco and alcohol fraud, to identify solutions and to guide action at the relevant level within the appropriate Community framework. The Group is due to complete its work by the Spring.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 648, if he will publish the original timetable for the publication of the report on alcohol and tobacco smuggling, cross border shopping and fraud currently being prepared by HM Customs and Excise; and if he will make a statement. [28517]

Dawn Primarolo: I asked the review team to present its findings by 31 December 1997. I and my Ministerial colleagues are considering the findings of the review in the run up to the Spring Budget.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of confiscated smuggled or bootlegged (a) tobacco and its products and (b) alcohol in each year since 1991. [27935]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that figures on the value of confiscated smuggled tobacco and alcohol products are not available. The revenue that would have been due on tobacco and alcohol products smuggled from other EU member states and detected by Customs in each financial year since the advent of the Single market has been as follows:

£ million

Year	Tobacco	Alcohol
1993–94	1.3	0.80
1994–95	4.0	2.75
1995–96	6.8	8.00
1996–97	17.6	11.80

I regret that no figures are available for the years prior to 1993–94.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence Customs and Excise has obtained of tobacco and its products and alcohol originating in countries outside the EU being smuggled or bootlegged into the United Kingdom; if he will list the countries concerned; and what price differential there is between alcohol and tobacco and its products in those countries and the United Kingdom. [27929]

Dawn Primarolo: There is very little evidence of alcohol being smuggled into the United Kingdom from outside the EU. The main area of concern is cigarettes smuggled from the Canary Islands, Andorra, the Baltic States and from Cyprus transited through the Lebanon, Egypt, Libya and Malta.

Information is not readily available on the price differential between alcohol and tobacco and its products in these countries and the United Kingdom.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) discussions he has had with and (b) what representations he has received from the European Commission regarding the impact on the travel insurance market of the introduction of higher rate insurance premium tax; and if he will make a statement. [22625]

Dawn Primarolo: I have had no discussions with the European Commission about their higher rate of Insurance Premium Tax. Officials in Customs and Excise have supplied information to, and had discussions with, the Commission on this measure.

Welfare to Work

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what grounds he has decided to exclude spending on the Welfare to Work scheme from the control total. [28181]

Mr. Darling: We made it clear before the election that the resources needed to fund the New Deal would be provided from the Windfall Tax and would be additional to the spending plans set by the Conservatives.

DEFENCE

Market Research

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure has been incurred by his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies (a) in 1996–97 and (b) since 1 May 1997 on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; if he will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each; and if he will make a statement. [26632]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executives of the Defence Analytical Services Agency, the Meteorological Office and the Hydrographic Office. I have asked the Chief Executives to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Paul Altobell to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 16 February 1998:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding expenditure incurred by his department, agencies and non-government public bodies in (a) 1996–97 and (b) since 1 May 1997 on (i) opinion polling (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency.

Apart from surveys undertaken by HYDR(O) and MET(O) who will respond separately, the department commissioned surveys of the general public to the value of:

£481,383: 1996–97

Details of the surveys are given in the tables attached.

Unfortunately, we have no central records of the methodology employed in each survey so cannot subdivide according to your categories (i), (ii) or (iii).

In addition the department, from time to time, undertakes surveys of its own employees, the Armed Services and other stakeholders. Information on these surveys is not kept centrally.

I hope you will find this information useful.

Letter from J. P. Clarke to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 16 February 1998:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence a Parliamentary Question about the levels of expenditure incurred on opinion polls, focus groups and market research. As this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the United Kingdom Hydrographic Office, I have been asked to reply to you directly.

Details of expenditure incurred for the periods requested and the surveys upon which this was expended are as follows:

1996/97

(i) Opinion Polling—Nil

(ii) Focus Groups—£32,500. User group meetings were held to establish worldwide customer requirements for a future Electronic Navigational Chart Service currently under development by the UKHO.

(iii) Other forms of market research—£9,000.

This covers a general survey of professional merchant marine operators to identify strengths and weaknesses of UKHO products for future marketing action.

Since 1 May 1997

(i) Opinion Polling—Nil.

(ii) Focus Groups—£500. This relates to a meeting of ship operators or those related to ships operations to discuss user friendliness of UKHO Charts and Publications.

(iii) Other forms of market research—£37,800.

The expenditure covers three separate market research exercises as follows:

a. £8,300 was incurred in a survey at the London and Southampton Boat Shows in order to identify the interests of those visiting the UKHO exhibition stand (eg the balance of leisure to commercial customers) to assist improvements in the staffing, product displays and services offered at future shows.

b. £15,000 was expended on a consultancy review of UKHO Customer Service Strategy which sought to provide an independent assessment of current UKHO customer service delivery performance and provide a strategy for developing customer friendly services and improving customer support.

c. £14,500 has been incurred in obtaining consultancy support to develop an appropriate and acceptable pricing structure for Electronic Navigational Charts. The UKHO expects to be the first national Hydrographic Office to provide an electronic charting service. We therefore have no equivalent benchmark against which to set prices.

I hope this reply has been of assistance.

Letter from Peter Ewing to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 16 February 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about expenditure incurred by his department, agencies and non-governmental public bodies during 1996–97 and since 1 May 1997 on (i) opinion polling (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research. As Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office, supply of information in respect of this Agency falls within my area of responsibility.

I attach a list of the surveys commissioned by the Met. Office during the periods concerned. The expenditure incurred, exclusive of VAT, amounted to £32,180 for 1996/97 and £116,874 for the period from 1 May 1997. Apart from £2,000 spent in this financial year on a CAA customer satisfaction survey, which was clearly aimed at a specific focus group, all of this expenditure falls into the third of your categories, other forms of market research. This research is, of course, in support of our activities as a Trading Fund with an annual turnover of £152M.

Survey	Year	Purpose
Public Perception Survey	1996–97	Establish Met. Office performance against targets laid down by the government to ensure proper public spending.
Corporate Perception Survey	1996–97	Establish the perception of the branding and position of the Met. Office within the weather market.
Employee Attitude Survey	1996–97	Establish the morale of The Met. Office in a time of change.
Economic benefit of offshore industry for UKMO	1996–97	Establish the economic benefit of the offshore industry business to UKMO
CAA customer satisfaction survey	1997–98	Establish satisfaction criteria of customers and users for the CAA.

DREAM Rig, Pendine

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department and its agencies have spent on developing and constructing the DREAM rig at Pendine to date; and what is the projected work load for this facility in each of the next five years. [28039]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 9 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 16 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the cost and projected work load of the DREAM (Dynamic Research, Evaluation and Assessment of Munitions) rig.

The DREAM rig is located at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) range at Shoeburyness in Essex, not at Pendine. It was designed and constructed by Hunting Engineering in 1988–89 for research on the behaviour of small scale 'model' warheads against a variety of horizontal and vertical surfaces at a cost of £68,000 (about £100,200 at 1997 prices).

Last year the rig underwent a major modification at a cost of £58,000. The DREAM rig is now used to conduct research on the attack of high value fixed land targets.

The estimated use of the rig is 10 days for each of the next two years. There are, as yet, no details of the likely use beyond that date.

I hope this information is helpful.

Military Exercises

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list exercises by British forces outside Europe in 1997 by country and by participants. [29448]

Dr. Reid: I cannot provide a complete answer to this question since some information could, if disclosed, cause harm to defence, security and international relations. I am therefore withholding certain details under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Furthermore, exercises vary considerably in scale and full central records of all activity in which our forces have been engaged are not available. However, we do not have records of the more significant exercises, and details of British participation in exercises is given, by area, in the table. This table also includes details of the participating UK service and, where information is available, any overseas participants other than the host country. Where we have records that the host nation did not participate, this is indicated:

Overseas Tours of Duty

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to amend his Department's regulations relating to military and civil personnel being accompanied by their spouses on overseas tours of duty. [27683]

Dr. Reid: We have no plans at present to amend the regulations relating to military and civil personnel being accompanied by their spouses on overseas tours of duty, although the situation is kept under review. Separately, consideration is being given to a revision of current rules relating to short-term visits by spouses who accompany senior officers on official duties.

Ammunition Test Centre

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of transferring the NATO certified test centre for small-calibre ammunition from Cold Meece to Pendine at 1998 prices. [28041]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The cost of the construction of the NATO certified test centre for small calibre ammunition at Pendine at 1997 prices was £1,008,563. Inflation figures for 1998 are not yet available, so it is not possible to calculate the cost at 1998 prices.

Small Arms Test Centre

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what conclusions were reached by the study produced in 1993 on moving the NATO small arms test centre in respect of the Eskmeals range; and if he will place a copy of that study in the Library. [28040]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The decision to move the small arms test centre from Cold Meece to Pendine was taken when the ranges were part of the Directorate of Proof and Experimental Establishments. Records of meetings held during July 1992 indicate that a working group considered three options for the relocation: to Pendine, to Shoeburyness, or to split the centre between Pendine and Shoeburyness. For strategic reasons, Pendine was chosen as the small arms test centre in January 1993. No consideration appears to have been given to the possibility of moving the centre to the Eskmeals range. Subsequently, the DGT&E Land Systems Asset Study was published, D/DTE (Land)9/24 dated 23 March 1993, which discusses two possibilities for the facility: Kirkcudbright and Shoeburyness. Both Eskmeals and Pendine were recommended for closure in this report. The report was, at the time, deemed to contain confidential information; I have asked for it to be reviewed to determine whether it can be placed in the Library of the House.

Low Flying

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what requirements govern the permissible noise levels for low-level RAF flight training; and if he will make a statement; [29477]

(2) what measures his Department takes to monitor the noise pollution generated by low-level flight training; and if he will make a statement; [29478]

(3) what plans he has to introduce restrictions on the level of noise that flight training may create at ground level; and if he will make a statement. [29479]

Mr. Spellar: My Department already places restrictions on the heights, speeds and operating procedures of military aircraft in the UK, which are designed to ensure that noise levels experienced on the ground represent a sensible balance between our essential training requirements and environmental considerations. The restrictions are kept under continuous review to reflect medical and scientific advice and experience of noise measurement surveys carried out by, or on behalf of, my Department.

High-level Flights (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Terry Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many high level flights, by military aircraft, over Greater Manchester there were in each of the last six months. [29255]

Mr. Spellar: Area specific information on air traffic movements is not available.

Nuclear Weapons (Test Veterans)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will establish an Internet website for information on studies undertaken into health problems of nuclear weapons test veterans. [29273]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked my officials to investigate the possibilities of making such information available on the Internet. I will write to the hon. Member when these inquiries have been completed and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Exports

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the principal export markets for British military sales; and what is the Government's strategy for promoting exports to them. [29196]

Mr. Spellar: The principal markets for UK defence exports are in The Gulf, Asia Pacific and North America. The Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) of my Department has developed, with industry, a five year Strategic Plan which identifies within these regions the top 22 markets and also the major prospects and sets out how Government and industry will work together to win business. This Plan is fully consistent with our foreign and security policy our international obligations and with Government Commitment to a strong defence manufacturing industry. It has helped DESO and companies to organise their resources more effectively and is improving our national performance in winning export orders which increased by 10 per cent. in 1997 compared with 1996.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ministerial Cars

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the models of cars which (a) Government Ministers can choose from and (b) are currently used by all Government Ministers. [23581]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Cabinet Ministers are provided with an appropriate car, normally a Rover Sterling or another car from the Rover 800 series. Ministers of State and Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State are provided with a choice of cars normally within the Rover 400 series or equivalent cars such as the Ford Mondeo, Vauxhall Vectra or Nissan Primera with a comfortable but not extravagant level of fit.

The Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister currently have the use of a Daimler 4.0 litre and a Jaguar respectively. Other Ministers use cars in the above categories. The main exceptions are where a difference model is used for security reasons or where cars of a different model were used by Ministers of the previous administration and to replace them would not be an efficient use of public resources.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Murder Victims (British Citizens)

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British subjects have been murdered abroad in the last 20 years; and in which countries. [29762]

Mr. Fatchett: Our records in their current form date back to 1985. Since then 619 murders of British Nationals abroad have been reported to us. The countries concerned are:

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his discussions with his counterparts from other European Union countries indicated variance in the recollection of events relating to Schengen opt-in procedures agreed at Amsterdam. [29760]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Although it would not be appropriate to enter into the details of every discussion with other Ministers, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is not aware of any disagreement about what was said at the European Council. Not every Member State was categorical on whether a Spanish text was circulated. We are clear that it was not.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answers of 30 January 1998, Official Report, column 440, and 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 144, to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) concerning the Schengen opt-in procedure, which Minister consulted the Irish Foreign Minister; and what reasons underlay the difference between the two answers. [29766]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This was due to an administrative error. The answer I should have given on 10 February was as follows:

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary consulted with the Irish Foreign Minister on the Schengen opt-in procedure as a matter of mutual interest. It would not be appropriate to publish details of these discussions.

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on article K.7 (6) of the Amsterdam Treaty. [29375]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Article K.7 (6) of the Treaty on European Union, as amended by the Treaty of Amsterdam, will allow a member state or the Commission to review the legality of framework decisions and decisions adopted by the Council under Article K.6.2 (b) and (c) of the Treaty on European Union.

The grounds of review listed in Article K.7 (6) are identical to those already found in Article 173 of the Treaty establishing the European Community under which the validity of Community acts can be challenged.

Article K.7 (6) will not permit challenge of measures taken by member states to give effect in their national law to any obligations resulting from framework decisions or decisions.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 9 February 1998, Official Report, columns 36–37, on weapons inspections in Iraq, if he will list the British manufacturers of equipment found by inspectors in Iraq; and, in each case, itemise the equipment found and the number of the export licence. [29279]

Mr. Fatchett: I have nothing to add to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) on 9 February 1998, Official Report, columns 36–37.

UN Resolutions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those UN resolutions which have not been fully complied with since 1968. [29381]

Mr. Fatchett: The UN Security Council has adopted 908 Resolutions since 1968. The General Assembly adopted an average of 144 resolutions a year between 1968 and 1975 and an average of 236 resolutions a year since then. These are publicly available. The information requested in the question could be obtained therefore only at disproportionate cost.

European Convention on Human Rights

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 2 February 1998, Official Report, columns 544–45, if he will list the primary and secondary legislation brought forward to implement the judgments in each of the cases cited in his answer. [29501]

Mr. Fatchett: The primary legislation brought forward in order to implement the judgments of the European Court of Human Rights was as follows:

Sunday Times (1979): Contempt of Court Act 1981;

Young, James and Webster (1981): Employment Act 1982, sections 2–14;

X (Mental Patient) (1981): Mental Health (Amendment) Act 1982, section 28 and Schedule 1.

Campbell and Cosans (1982): Education (No. 2) Act 1986, section 47;

Malone (1984): Interception of Communications Act 1985;

O, H, W, B and R (Parental Access) (1987): Children Act 1989, sections 22 and 34;

Thynne, Wilson and Gunnell (1990): Criminal Justice Act 1991, section 34;

Boner and Maxwell (1994): Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1995, section 42;

Hussain and Singh (1996): Crime (Sentences) Act 1997, section 28;

Chahal (1996): Special Immigration Appeals Commission Act 1997.

The subordinate instruments brought forward in order to implement the judgments of the European Court of Human Rights were as follows:

Golder (1975): Prison (Amendment) Rules 1976 (S.I. 1976/503);

Dudgeon (1981): Homosexual Offences (Northern Ireland) Order 1982 (S.I. 1982/1536; N.I. 19);

Silver and Others (1983): Prison (Amendment) Rules 1983 (S.I. 1983/568);

Abdulaziz, Cabales and Balkandali (1985): Statement of Changes in Immigration Rules, laid before Parliament on 15 July 1985 (HC 503);

McCallum (1990); Campbell (1992): Prison (Scotland) Amendment Rules 1993 (S.I. 1993/2227);

McMichael (1995): Children's Hearings (Scotland) Amendment Rules (S.I. 1996/1199); Benham (1996): Legal Advice and Assistance (Scope) (Amendment) Regulations 1997 (S.I. 1997/997).

The primary legislation already brought forward which in the Government's view ensured that United Kingdom law was compatible with subsequent judgments of the European Court of Human Rights was as follows:

Fox, Campbell and Hartley (1990): Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1987, section 6;

Findlay (1997); Coyne (1997): Armed Forces Act 1996, section 5 and Schedule 1; section 15; section 16 and Schedule 5; section 17.

In some cases, the action taken to ensure the compatibility of United Kingdom law with a judgment of the European Court of Human Rights may have been a combination of the above and other measures.

Immigration

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the compatibility of world trade agreements and national trade-related legislation which enables countries to bar spouses and their children from entry. [29292]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Under the General Agreement on Trade in Services, a country may regulate the entry of foreign nationals as long as this does not impair or nullify benefits accruing under GATS commitments.

USA (Exclusions)

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made on behalf of British women and children banned from the USA under trade-related legislation. [29289]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I and my colleagues continue to take every opportunity to make clear to the US Administration and Congress that we entirely reject such legislation.

Helms-Burton Act

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom women and children have been banned from the USA under the Helms-Burton legislation. [29290]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We are aware of two British families which have been affected by title IV of the Helms-Burton Act which allows the President to exclude individuals from the US.

HEALTH

Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assumption concerning private sector income has been made in (a) each PFI contract approved and (b) each PFI contract being planned. [28309]

Mr. Milburn: Two major acute Private Finance Initiative schemes involving private beds—Norfolk and Norwich Health Care National Health Service Trust and South Buckinghamshire NHS Trust—have reached financial close; their contracts include assumptions about income from these beds. Four other major acute PFI schemes are proposing to include private beds, but these projects have not yet reached financial close and assumptions about income from these beds is still subject to negotiations.

Information is not held centrally on assumptions concerning income from private beds in smaller scale (capital value of £10 million or less) and non-acute PFI schemes.

The assumptions in the PFI contracts about income from private beds at Norfolk and Norwich Health Care NHS Trust and South Buckinghamshire NHS Trust are as follows:

Norfolk and Norwich

The new PFI hospital will include a private patients ward with 20 beds. Patients will be treated by NHS staff and use NHS facilities for which the trust receives a fee. The trust anticipates that income from these beds will be approximately £2.6 million at 1996–97 prices.

South Buckinghamshire

A private patient operator will lease an area of the new building at High Wycombe from the trust's consortium (United Healthcare) and will pay for the construction of a private patients unit. The trust will receive an income of £100,000 per annum from private beds which will be operated by the private patient operator, rising to a maximum of £200,000 as the operator's turnover increases. In addition, the trust will receive income from the use of NHS clinical and other NHS services by the private sector operator.

Health Service Funding

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what proportions spending on the NHS has in real terms grown in each year and on average per year during each Parliament since 1968; and what was the overall annual average. [28809]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is set out in the table. Information on National Health Service total spending prior to 1973–74 is not available as the data are not comparable with those for subsequent years.

Year	NHS total net expenditure percentage real terms growth[1]	NHS total gross expenditure percentage real terms growth[1]

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to announce the restoration of real terms increases of NHS funding to the average over the past three decades. [28813]

Mr. Milburn: We have increased the National Health Service spending plans inherited from the previous administration by almost £1.5 billion. We shall announce plans for future years in due course.

New Smokers

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the weekly numbers of new smokers. [28817]

Ms Jowell: No reliable estimate has been made centrally. However, information about the smoking habits of young people aged 16–24 in 1996, leads to an estimate of about 3,000–5,000 new smokers each week on average.

Community Pharmacists

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the likely impact on the number of community pharmacies of the abolition of resale price maintenance on over-the-counter medicines. [28697]

Mr. Milburn: The Department has made no such estimate. The question of resale price maintenance has been referred by the Director General of Fair Trading to the Restrictive Practices Court. Should the Court grant leave for the case to be heard, the implications for community pharmacies will no doubt receive full and proper consideration.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the financial savings to the NHS resulting from healthcare advice provided by community pharmacists. [28696]

Mr. Milburn: We have made no such assessment.

NHS Hospital Beds

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is (a) the number of NHS hospital beds in each health authority area in England and Wales and (b) the number per head of population in each area, arranging the health authorities in order of the number per head of population. [28673]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested for England has been placed in the Library. Figures relating to Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

General Practitioners

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is (a) the number of NHS GPs in each NHS health authority area in England and Wales and (b) the number per head of population in each area, arranging the health authorities in order of the number per head of population. [28672]

Mr. Milburn: The available figures for England have been placed in the Library. Questions relating to Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Homicide Inquiries

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many independent inquiries into homicides committed by mentally ill people established under HSG(94)27 have not yet published reports but which are due to publish reports; [28658]

(2) how many independent inquiries set up under Health Service Guidelines HSG(94)27 into homicides committed by mentally ill people have published reports since the publication of the Clunis report; [28657]

(3) if he will make it his policy that the recommendations contained in inquiry reports published under HSG(94)27 are implemented by the NHS throughout England and Wales. [28659]

Mr. Boateng: Thirty two independent inquiries set up under Health Service Guidelines HSG(94)27 have published reports.

Twenty four independent inquiries are currently underway.

The purpose of independent inquiries in England is to ensure that lessons are learnt and remedial action is taken at local level. We expect the commissioning agencies to develop robust action plans in the light of recommendations. The National Health Service Executive monitors closely the implementation of these action plans.

It would not be appropriate to require recommendations contained in local inquiry reports to be implemented nationally. We would, of course, take into account any recommendations which had significance for national policy. We are already funding the National Confidential Inquiry into Suicide and Homicide by People with Mental illness to develop a national overview.

There are separate arrangements in Wales for local mental health inquiries.

Infant Formula

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to introduce new guidelines on information and educational materials relating to the Infant Formula and Follow on Formula Regulations of 1995. [29014]

Ms Jowell: I met the Infant and Dietetic Foods Association, which acts on behalf of the United Kingdom infant formula companies, in October of last year and with breastfeeding support groups and health professionals in December to discuss the draft guidelines on information and educational materials relating to the Infant Formula and Follow on Formula Regulations of 1995. I listened to their concerns and will publish the guidelines later this year.

Shoulder Dystocia

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made by the working group under the auspices of the Confidential Inquiry into Stillbirths and Deaths in Infancy in preparing guidance on the management of shoulder dystocia; and when this guidance will be available. [29233]

Mr. Boateng: he report of the "Shoulder Dystocia Group" of the Confidential Inquiry into Stillbirths and Deaths in Infancy will be published in the 5th Annual Report of the Confidential Inquiry before the end of July 1998.

Guidelines on the management of shoulder dystocia will be included in the report and are currently being considered by the appropriate professional organisations with the intention of issuing guidance on clinical practice.

Hepatitis C

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to raise awareness of the hepatitis C virus; and if he will make a statement. [29002]

Ms Jowell: The Department has produced a range of publications for the National Health Service and the public to raise awareness of hepatitis C.

Injecting drug misusers who share contaminated equipment are at increased risk of acquiring hepatitis C infection. The Guidelines for Doctors on the Clinical Management of Drug Misusers, last issued in 1991, are currently being revised and will be published later this year. They will include updated advice on the management of hepatitis C in drug misusers. The guidance to purchasers of drug treatment and care services, which the Department issued in March 1997, included advice for purchasers on dealing with those who seek testing for hepatitis C.

The Chief Medical Officer's letter to all doctors in April 1995 about the hepatitis C and blood transfusion look back exercise included advice about the prevalence, epidemiology and treatment of hepatitis C.

The Department is funding representatives of the medical profession to produce clinical guidelines on the use of alpha interferon in treating hepatitis C which will be disseminated widely.

The Health Advice for Travellers booklet contains advice for those travelling abroad on avoiding the risks of hepatitis C. The revised version of the Travel Safe leaflet which will be published later this year will contain similar information.

The Department is funding the British Liver Trust to raise awareness and provide advice on hepatitis C and the Trust have produced a number of comprehensive leaflets.

The Health Education Authority has published an information leaflet on hepatitis C for the public which may be obtained from general practitioner surgeries.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned in respect of the hepatitis C virus; and if he will make a statement. [29004]

Ms Jowell: In 1996, the Department made £1 million available for research into the natural history, prevalence, transmission and treatment of hepatitis C. The results of the research commissioned so far will become available over the next three years. A further £500,000 will be allocated this year to expand the research programme. In addition, the National Health Service Health Technology Assessment is finalising the arrangements for a research project to establish the effectiveness of the early treatment of chronic hepatitis C with alpha interferon.

Creutzfeldt Jakob Disease

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of each variant of CJD were identified in 1997; and how many resulted in death. [29417]

Ms Jowell: Creutzfeldt Jakob Disease (CJD) is invariably fatal. Definite diagnosis of all types of CJD depends on the examination of brain tissue and is usually only made after the patient has died.

The Department publishes monthly statistics showing deaths from all types of CJD. The latest were issued on 2 February 1998 and copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the World Health Organisation has revised its statement of April 1996 that a link has not yet been proven between V-CJD in the United Kingdom and the effects of exposure to the BSE agent. [29757]

Ms Jowell: A further World Health Organisation consultation was held very recently. We expect to be informed of the outcome very shortly and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

War Disablement Pension

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the treatment of war disablement pension made by each local authority in calculating residential care assessments. [29284]

Mr. Boateng: There are national rules for the treatment of income to assess charges for residential care—the National Assistance (Assessment of Resources) Regulations 1992—which provide that a person must be allowed to retain £10 of their War Disablement Pension, and the remainder is taken into account in the assessment of charges.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many postcards registering opposition to xenotransplantation he has received to date. [29440]

Ms Jowell: As of 12 February, 15,675 postcards have been received.

Continence Pads (VAT)

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 2 February 1998, to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow), Official Report, column 511, if he will list the financial effects resulting from the Value Added Tax Order of 1 January 1998. [29767]

Mr. Milburn: As indicated in my earlier answer, officials are still working on these issues.

Health Authorities and Trusts (Deficits)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the deficits of each (a) health authority and (b) health trust for each of the last three financial quarters. [29511]

Mr. Milburn: The forecast surpluses and deficits for all health authorities and National Health Service trusts for the first three quarters of 1997–98 will be available in due course.

Inequalities in Health

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with other Ministers on the effect of unemployment and poor housing on inequalities in health. [29597]

Ms Jowell: We have had a number of discussions with Ministerial colleagues at various times over the impact which unemployment and bad housing have on health inequalities. We have launched a number of initiatives that aim to make society more equitable, for example the reduction of Value Added Tax on fuel to 5 per cent., and those that will have a particular effect on the health of the most needy in society are explained in the recent Green Paper "Our Healthier Nation".

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to promote research into inequalities in health; and if he will make a statement. [29599]

Ms Jowell: There is considerable research evidence about the determinants of inequalities in health, but very little to indicate wheat interventions would be effective in reducing inequalities. Consequently, the Department is commissioning a programme of research into this area. The results of the commissioning process will be announced in due course.

Additionally, the Department's Director of Research and Development chairs a co-ordinating group on research in inequalities covering funders working in this area. The Department particularly welcomes and supports the Economic and Social Research Council programme on Inequalities in health.

The Independent Inquiry into Inequalities in Health being undertaken by Sir Donald Acheson may suggest further areas where research would be valuable. The inquiry is due to report later this year.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorist Activity

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list those incidents evaluated as having potential terrorist organisation involvement which have occurred since 20 July broken down by type of incident; and what assessment the RUC has made as to the organisation involved in respect of each incident. [21516]

Mr. Ingram: The tables provide details of terrorist incidents between 20 July 1997 and 25 January 1998.

Prisoners

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what, for life sentence prisoners released in the past 25 years, was the average time served in prison for (a) Republican, (b) Loyalist and (c) other prisoners. [27393]

Mr. Ingram: The average time served in prison for life sentence prisoners released in the past 25 years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, information is available for such releases since 1985, ie those recommended for release by the Life Sentence Review Board.

Average period served by indeterminate sentence prisoners[1] released on licence since 1985

[1] Includes life sentence and Secretary of State's Pleasure prisoners.
Note:
The classification into Republican and Loyalist is the perceived affiliation at the time that the offence was committed.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Republican, Loyalist and other life sentence prisoners have been released on licence in each year since 1970; and how many in each category have subsequently (a) been arrested (b) had their licence revoked or (c) been reconvicted for a similar offence. [27392]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested, where available, is set out below. The figures relate to life sentence and Secretary of State's pleasure prisoners.

Indeterminate sentence prisoners released on licence since 1985

1998	2	3	4	9

Note:
These figures include prisoners detained at the Secretary of State's pleasure. They exclude prisoners released on medical grounds or who provided significant assistance to the authorities.

(a) This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

(b) This information is readily available only for the period commencing 1985. The total number of licences revoked is 18: three Republican, 10 Loyalist and five Other. (c) Of the 18 prisoners whose licences have been revoked two have been reconvicted of further serious terrorist type offences: one Republican and one Loyalist.

Danny McNamee

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what medical examinations of Danny McNamee have been conducted since his transfer to HMP Maze; and what medical conditions were identified. [27441]

Mr. Ingram: Medical records of individuals are confidential and are not disclosed publicly. Under the Access to Health Records (Northern Ireland) Order an application may be made personally only by the patient or other person authorised in writing to make application.

WALES

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii)1997–98 to date. [27737]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The information requested is as follows:

Local Government Finance

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the gross cost to public expenditure in Wales if all local authority rents were to be reduced by 10 per cent.; and what would be the net savings in housing benefits. [28860]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The effects on public expenditure of a 10 per cent. reduction in council rents depend on what assumptions are made about the consequential adjustments to Housing Revenue Account Subsidy. If the reduction had applied in the current financial year and other elements within the subsidy calculation remained unchanged, the Welsh Office estimates that there would be a reduction of £26.6 million in rent rebates but an overall subsidy cost of £10.6 million. Because the rent reduction would marginally reduce the rate of increase in the RPI, there would also be a saving in benefits in the UK as a whole of about £1.6 million this year, rising to £6.1 million in the following year.

Local Bus Services

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much additional money he will make available to local authorities in 1998–99 to enable them to subsidise local bus services; and if he will make a statement. [28998]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Welsh Office does not provide authorities with specific resources to subsidise bus services. Authorities have discretionary powers which—subject to available resources—enable them to subsidise local public transport services which they consider are essential to meet a social need.

Inward Investment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 2 February 1998, Official Report, column 533, on inward investment to Wales, if he will list the criteria he uses to determine the areas of Wales which need most help. [29000]

Mr. Hain: The areas which need the most help are those which have the highest levels of unemployment and those areas which have been less successful in terms of industrial and economic development and in attracting inward investment. Classic examples which display some or all of these problems are in our priority areas of the south Wales valleys, mid Wales and south and north west Wales. But, while we focus and encourage, it is the companies with which we deal which must take the final decision on location, decisions which are based on a wide range of commercial considerations.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has made to the European Commission concerning the future of EU aid to the poorer regions in the United Kingdom as a result of the new definition of eligibility for Objective 2 funds. [28995]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend met Commissioner Wulf Mathies on 12 December and underlined the importance the UK attach to the continued receipt of Structural Funds support after 1999. The eligibility of the poorer UK regions will, of course, be dependent on criteria laid out in the Structural Funds Regulations which are due to be published next month. We are already seeking to influence these and my right hon. Friend specifically asked the Commissioner to consider the inclusion of GDP within the new Objective 2 criteria, as a more appropriate measure of prosperity. Indeed this would be more consistent with the approach taken with Structural Funds more generally and with the criteria applied to Objective 1.

Air Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will undertake a study of the future needs of air services and airports in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [28996]

Mr. Hain: I am currently undertaking a series of meetings with airport and airline owners and operators, including one based in Caernarfon, to assess the potential for establishing a scheduled air service between North and South Wales. Once these discussions have been concluded, I will consider what further work is necessary and how it might best be undertaken.

Strategic Roads Programme

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to announce his strategic roads programmes for Wales; and if he will make a statement. [29430]

Mr. Hain: The responses to the consultation exercise on the review of the Welsh trunk road programme are being assessed. I am not yet in a position to say when I will be able to give any indications as to the size, composition and overall strategy of the future trunk road programme.

Rail Services

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what talks he has had with North Western Trains in respect of services on the Wrexham-Bidston Railway; and if he will make a statement. [29433]

Mr. Hain: I hope shortly to meet the Managing Director of North Western Trains to discuss the company's operations in Wales, including services on the Wrexham to Bidston line.

New Deal

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of the New Deal in Wales. [29429]

Mr. Hain: My hon. Friend will be aware that the New Deal for 18–24 year olds has been operating in the West Wales Pathfinder Area since 5 January and the early indications are that young people and employers are embracing the programme enthusiastically. Around 1,000 young people have already been interviewed and West Wales businesses have pledged 750 jobs.

The response elsewhere in Wales, where the New Deal will commence on 6 April, has been equally encouraging. Even before our advertising campaign commenced on 15 February, a considerable degree of employer interest has been evident. I welcome this interest and look forward to their involvement in making the New Deal a success.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what CCTV projects are proposed for Wales during the next 12 months. [29366]

Mr. Win Griffiths: In 1997–98 the Welsh Office has approved Strategic Development Scheme capital funding of £140,000 for Bridgend CBC and £60,000 for Wrexham CBC for the provision of CCTV.

All local authorities in Wales have delegated SDS capital and revenue resources at their disposal which they can use to support a wide range of projects including the provision of CCTV. However, we do not have firm details yet of whether local authorities have funded CCTV projects in 1997–98 or intend to do so in 1998–99.

In addition, I understand that the Home Office is funding three town centre CCTV schemes in Wales following the third round of that Department's CCTV Challenge Competition. These are located in Monmouth, Prestatyn and Wrexham. The fourth round of the Challenge Competition was announced on 24 November by the Minister of State, Home Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael).

Mobile Phones

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve mobile phone reception within Wales. [29362]

Mr. Hain: Welsh Office officials have regular dialogue with representatives of the industry to discuss improvements in mobile phone coverage in Wales which is unsatisfactory in too many cases.

Public Transport

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to improve public transport communications between North and South Wales. [29373]

Mr. Hain: I am currently undertaking a series of meetings with key transport operators to assess the potential for improved air and rail services between North and South Wales. I am also engaged in discussions with the Director of Passenger Rail Franchising. My conclusions will be reflected in a Welsh transport policy statement which will be published at around the same time as the forthcoming integrated transport White Paper.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to increase the use of public transport in West Wales. [29372]

Mr. Hain: The promotion of public transport will be one of the key objectives of the Government's integrated transport White Paper, which is due to be published in the spring. A separate Welsh transport policy statement will be published at around the same time.

SCOTLAND

Young People

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources are allocated by the Scottish Office for (a) monitoring performance regarding children's rights and (b) enabling young people's views to be represented in planning and policy making processes involving (i) the Scottish Office and (ii) local authorities. [24952]

Mr. Galbraith: The Scottish Office allocated £276,000 for the current financial year under the Social Work Grants Programme to voluntary organisations dealing with children's rights and interests. As part of my remit as Minister with responsibility for children, I will be considering the terms of a Child Strategy Statement designed to ensure that policy development across the Scottish Office takes due account of any likely effect on children's interests. I expect to issue a copy of this document to local authorities and other relevant groups. I am aware also of the Connect Youth Initiative and proposals from Save the Children Fund in Scotland, both of which seek to find effective ways of allowing the views of children and young people to be heard on a wide range of issues that affect them.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he took (a) to include other potential sites for the Scottish Parliament and (b) to invite modifications from the proponents of the existing proposals at the time when the Holyrood site was added to the short list of sites. [24951]

Mr. McLeish: A range of sites was considered before the original shortlist was drawn up. The Holyrood site was added to that list once it became clear that it would be available in a reasonable timescale. There was no reason at that point to add any other sites. Independent Design Feasibility Studies were commissioned on all four sites to allow a fair comparison of their potential to house the Parliament building.

Student Grants

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications for grants by students from Scotland to study at Scottish universities and colleges for the session 1997–98 were awaiting processing on 1 December 1997; and how many processed applications were unpaid. [26054]

Mr. Wilson: The Student Awards Agency for Scotland had a total of 13,732 applications for awards in respect of students attending Scottish universities and colleges awaiting processing on 1 December. At the same date 94,349 applications had been processed. Where the processing of an application results in a payment being due to a student, a Payable Order is generated automatically and is normally received by the student within seven days of processing. Apart from that delivery period, the only applications processed but unpaid were those which did not generate any payment due to the student. The applications awaiting processing included a significant number which were submitted late, or for which additional information had been sought.

Social Exclusion

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide more funds to voluntary organisations whose work contributes to combating social exclusion. [29070]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The Scottish Office is already a major funder of voluntary organisations in Scotland, including those whose work contributes to combating social exclusion. Forty per cent. of the £1.4 million recently allocated to voluntary sector organisations for housing purposes will support work on homelessness. Voluntary sector organisations will also benefit from the £11 million allocated under the Rough Sleepers Initiative in September last year. At least 60 per cent. of the Urban Programme funding of £67.6 million in 1998–99 is expected to be allocated to voluntary organisations. Also in 1998–99, under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968, grants totalling £6.9 million will be made to national voluntary organisations working in the field of social welfare to support their day to day work with children and families, people with disabilities or addictions, offender services and the homeless.

Further decisions on expenditure to tackle social exclusion, including support for the voluntary sector, will be considered as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. This process will be informed by the consultation exercise on social exclusion in Scotland, which is currently under way.

Hyundai

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what public funds have been spent in the preparation of the Hyundai site in Dunfermline, broken down by major items within the expenditure total. [29512]

Mr. Wilson: Expenditure by the Scottish Enterprise Network on acquiring, levelling and servicing the Hyundai site totals £14.340 million. The expenditure is made up as follows:

	£ million
Cost of land purchase	4.894
Levelling of site	3.977
Utility provision - power	3.600
Utility provision - water	0.774
Utility provision - gas	0.698
Fees	0.397

In addition, a further £5.5 million has been spent on infrastructure works related to the whole of the 1,100 acre Dunfermline East Expansion Area, including the 150 acre Hyundai site. None of this expenditure relates specifically to the Hyundai project.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Green Pound Compensation

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide a breakdown for (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Northern Ireland and (d) Wales of the green pound compensation that was to be made available under the package announced on 22 December 1997, and the new levels of compensation available for each nation under the green pound compensation package announced on 3 February 1998; if he will state the differences between the figures under the two schemes in each case; if he will provide a breakdown of these figures for the hill livestock sector; and if he will make a statement. [28261]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 6 February 1998]: The information requested is set out in the table. The figures in brackets show that part of the totals which is payable to producers in the Less Favoured Areas.

Estimated £ million

	22 December package	3 February package	difference
(a) Scotland	17.4 (14.9)	23.9 (20.6)	6.5 (5.7)
(b) England	24.7 (9.5)	34.7 (14.0)	10.0 (4.5)
(c) Northern Ireland	11.0 (8.5)	14.2 (11.0)	3.2 (2.5)
(d) Wales	6.9 (6.2)	12.2 (11.1)	5.3 (4.9)

Retirement Packages

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from other European Union countries on retirement packages for the agricultural sector. [29250]

Mr. Rooker: None.

Veterinary Products (Ivomec)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when Ivomec was first licensed for use in the United Kingdom. [29416]

Mr. Rooker: Our records show that the first use of the name "Ivomec" for a veterinary medicine was for a product licensed in June 1981. This is an injectable product for the treatment of cattle.

Sheep Exports

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will allow the export of whole carcases of sheep over 12 months old. [29310]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 13 February 1998]: The Specified Risk Material Regulations 1997 require the removal of the spinal cord of all sheep and goats more than 12 months of age by the splitting of the carcase, or by removal of a longitudinal section of the whole vertebral column containing the spinal cord. There is no exemption for carcases destined for export.

We are currently considering representations received from various organisations about the impact of this provision on exports of carcases of sheep over 12 months of age.

Food-handling Machinery (Lubricants)

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for introducing regulations to ensure that only appropriate and food-compatible lubricants are used in food-handling machinery. [28743]

Mr. Rooker: As the production or sale of any food which is injurious to health or unfit for human consumption is already an offence under the Food Safety Act 1990, we see no need at present to introduce regulations specifically relating to lubricants used in food-handling machinery.

Meat Imports

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are being taken to ensure that meat imported to the United Kingdom is from animals fed on animal foods which are as safe as those now used in the United Kingdom. [29236]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Lancaster and Wyre (Mr. Dawson) on 2 February 1998, Official Report, columns 547–48.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the rates of absenteeism in her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date; and if she will make a statement. [26594]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: My Department is responsible for 21 executive non-Departmental public bodies, 25 advisory bodies and 7 tribunals, one of which covers the 24 industrial tribunals, and another the 2 employment tribunals. I regret that only some of the information requested by the hon. Member is held centrally, and the complete details requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

For the headquarters areas of the Department, the sickness absence database of the Occupational Health Service Agency Ltd. shows the average number of days sick leave per employee for the 1995 calendar year is 8.2. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 116, which announced publication of the 1996 figures, and show this Department's average number of days sick leave per employee during that calendar year as 7.6.

I have asked the Chief Executive of the Agencies to write to the hon. Member. The management of sickness absence in the Department has been identified as a priority for line managers, with the aim of ensuring that absence rates are comparable to or better than those of similar organisations in the private sector.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 16 February 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about rates of absenteeism (sick leave) of staff in The Insolvency Service.

The Cabinet Office is responsible for publishing sick leave data. The most recent in the report was issued on 10 February 1998 containing 1996 data. The figures for Service Staff for the last two available years were (working days absences per staff year):

	1995	1996
Certificated Sick Leave	5.9	3.3
Self-certificated Sick Leave	3.6	6.05
Total Sick Leave	9.5	9.35
Staff Years	1,642	1,469

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 16 February 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply to the above Parliamentary Question with information about the Radiocommunications Agency.

The average rate of absenteeism in the Radiocommunications Agency was as follows:

1995/96: 0.74 days sick leave per staff member

1996/97: 0.76 days sick leave per staff member

1997/98 to date: 0.78 days sick leave per staff member.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 16 February 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the rate of absenteeism.

The rates of absenteeism for the last three years are set out in the table below:

Year	Days per member of staff
1995–96	11.9
1996–97	12.9
1997–98 (April to November)	10.3

It should be noted that the high figures reflect a number of long term illnesses within the Agency. Five staff (10% of total) have had long term illnesses in the period concerned.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 16 February 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply, in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS), to your question about rates of absenteeism.

The ETS gained status on 1 April 1997 and I am able to inform you that, for the six months from April to September 1997, the absenteeism rate for the agency was 5.4%. For the periods before 1 April 1997, absenteeism in the ETS would be included in the reply from the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department for Education and Employment (for the former Employment Department).

I hope that this is helpful.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 16 February 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about the rates of absenteeism. Below are the statistics for the Patent Office:

Year	Number of working days	Average per person	Percentage of working days lost
April 1995–March 1996	8,770	10.98	3.87
April 1996–March 1997	5,673	7.99	3.06
April 1997–September 1998[1]	2,663	3.70	2.93

[1] Note 6 months.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated January 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding the rates of absenteeism in DTI Agencies.

The sickness absenteeism rate for Companies House for the years in question are as follows:

1995/96: 5.6%

1996/97: 6.0%

1997/98: 5.7%.

Correspondence

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how long on average it takes her Department to answer letters from hon. Members; what target date her Department sets; what percentage receive replies within the target date; and what assessment she has made of how long it takes to deliver a letter after it has been typed. [27031]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 2 February 1998]: My Department aims to send substantive replies to 77 per cent. of all letters within 10 working days and 98 per cent. within a calendar month. Figures are collected in relation to all letters to Ministers rather than those from hon. Members alone.

Since 1 May, 56 per cent. of letters were issued within the 10 day target. The average issue time for all letters was 12 days.

The Department does not measure the time it takes to deliver a letter after it has been typed.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the powers of the dispute settlement mechanisms contained within the draft texts of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment to deal with contraventions of the OECD guidelines for multinational corporations. [29918]

Mrs. Roche: The MAI's dispute settlement procedures will not apply to the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises (MNEs) which are a voluntary code of conduct of good corporate behaviour.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the implications of the OECD guidelines for multinational corporations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [29919]

Mrs. Roche: We are pressing for the close association of the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises with the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) in a manner which will not affect their legal status.

Ms Drown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps the Government will take to ensure that reservations under the Multilateral Agreement on Investment are binding and effective. [29950]

Mrs. Roche: The Government will ensure that the UK's country-specific exceptions are drafted in such a way that they will be fully effective.

Ms Drown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make it her policy not to sign the Multilateral Agreement on Investment unless it contains binding labour standards. [29955]

Mrs. Roche: When the final text of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) is available, the Government will decide if it meets the UK's objectives. We will continue to press the case for a binding commitment not to derogate from labour or environmental standards in order to attract specific investments.

Ms Drown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations have been held with small and medium-sized businesses about the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [29978]

Mrs. Roche: My officials have consulted widely with business, including organisations which represent, among others, small and medium-sized enterprises.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has made to the OECD on the participation of developing nations in the Multilateral Agreement on Investment; and if she will make a statement. [28327]

Mrs. Roche: In the MAI negotiations at the OECD the UK has strongly supported the view that the MAI should be open to all countries willing and able to meet the MAI's obligations. The Government have also supported a proposal for language to be included in the Agreement to clarify that the special needs of developing countries should be taken into account when they apply to join.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the gross domestic product of each county in England in each year since 1977. [29481]

Mrs. Roche: The latest information for 1993 and 1995 is in the Economic Trends January 1998 edition, published by the Office for National Statistics on 15 January 1998. Information from 1977 is available in the House of Commons Library but figures are available only for selected years.

Millennium Compliance

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if a chief executive of Action 2000 has been appointed. [24379]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 20 January 1998]: The Chairman of Action 2000 has appointed Ian Eddison as Acting Director and he has been in post since 17 December 1997. Action 2000 has advertised for a permanent Director and this is progressing swiftly with approximately 100 applications received by the closing date.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when Action 2000 will be launched. [24377]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 20 January 1998]: Action 2000 launched its Millennium Bug Campaign on 22 January.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff are employed on answering the Millennium Bug Hotline; and how many phone lines can be operated simultaneously. [28582]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 9 February 1998]: I understand from Action 2000 that there are six staff permanently assigned to the Millennium Bug Hotline with immediate recourse to an additional three to cope with fluctuations in demand. There is no fixed number of lines. Action 2000 is keeping performance under review and will consider expanding the resources if the need arises.

Electricity Industry (North Yorkshire)

Mr. Hague: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she proposes to announce her decision in respect of the application by the National Grid to construct new overhead power lines across North Yorkshire. [29550]

Mrs. Beckett: I shall reach my decision as soon as I properly and practically can.

Inward Investment

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the sterling value of inward investment into the United Kingdom in (a) the three months prior to 31 January 1996 and (b) the three months prior to 31 January 1997. [28585]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Information on the value of inward investment is available on a quarterly basis only. Figures of the latest five quarters available are given in the table.

Inward direct investment in the United Kingdom

£ billion

Year	Flows	Stocks[1]
1996 Q3	5.1	137.7
1996 Q4	3.5	138.7
1997 Q1	8.7	147.8
1997 Q2	5.1	152.9
1997 Q3	3.0	155.9

[1] The stock of investment at the end of a period represents the net book value of the investment. It equals the stock at the end of the previous period plus the flow of investment during the period, together with adjustments for goodwill write-offs, revaluation of assets and exchange rate fluctuations. However, these adjustments are only carried out when the results of the annual inquiries are available. The figures for the most recent quarters are not so adjusted.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many submissions her Department has received expressing the view that differentials will be restored in whole or part following the imposition of a minimum wage. [27895]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: My Department has received a number of submissions which contain reference to the restoration of pay differentials following the introduction of a national minimum wage.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received on the impact on employment in the tourism industry in the South West Region of the introduction of a minimum wage. [29745]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have received a number of representations on the possible effects, including on employment, in the tourism and leisure industry following the introduction of the national minimum wage.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if (a) payments in kind and (b) board and lodging where living on the premises is a condition of employment, will be taken into account when assessing income for purposes of applying the minimum wage. [29805]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Low Pay Commission has been asked to make recommendations on what is to be treated as remuneration when assessing compliance with the National Minimum Wage.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the estimated costs for businesses of complying with the requirement that all employees be informed of the level of the minimum wage on pay-slips and other company documentation. [29687]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have made a commitment to consult with business over any secondary legislation to implement the National Minimum Wage Bill and indicated that they will produce a detailed appraisal of the impact associated with that secondary legislation. This would include any costs associated with a requirement to show the level of the minimum wage on pay-slips.

Concessionary Coal

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes (a) are planned and (b) have been made with respect to the free coal scheme for miners' families. [22656]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 12 January 1998]: Since liability for concessionary fuel for ex-employees of British Coal (and their dependants) transferred to the Government in March 1995, no changes have been made to the scheme.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry announced on 11 February that it would be premature to introduce new arrangements, and that we are extending the consultation period for a while longer to consider all relevant issues before we make necessary changes.

Our aim is to find a solution to future entitlements which is fair to all concerned, and which complies with EU legal requirements and the Fuel Agreements. We have listened to representations and the views of beneficiaries expressing concern about the entitlements, and have decided to make no change to existing entitlements while full and wide ranging consultations are in progress. Beneficiaries can be assured that they will continue to receive their present fuel type at existing tonnages while the consultations are underway.

British Standards Institute

Mr. Baldry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the future of the British Standards Institute. [28652]

Mr. Battle: The British Standards Institution (BSI), the national standards body, is a Royal Charter body which is independent of Government. Its future is primarily a matter for its members.

BSI's senior management, after consulting Government through my Department, have submitted proposed amendments to BSI's Royal Charter and Byelaws, which comprise its constitution, to an Extraordinary General Meeting of BSI's members on 27 February 1998. If BSI's members approve the amendments they will be submitted to the Privy Council Office.

The main aim of the amendments is to allow BSI to expand its commercial activities, with a view to seeing its long term viability, while at the same time safeguarding the future of its standards facilitation activities.

Fireworks

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice she has offered to traders holding stocks of fireworks which have become illegal to sell. [29443]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: On the few occasions the DTI has been approached by retailers they have been advised to discuss the issue of unsold stocks of prohibited fireworks with their suppliers. In some cases it is open to suppliers to re-export such fireworks to countries where national traditions mean that they are still acceptable and I understand that some suppliers are exploring this option.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what Government assistance is available to (a) firework manufacturers and (b) firework retailers to help them dispose of recently banned firework stocks. [29444]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Following discussions between the DTI and the Health and Safety Executive the latter has issued an exemption certificate to facilitate the return to suppliers of stocks of the prohibited fireworks which have been taken out of their original transport packaging. My Department has been in contact with the National Federation of Retail Newsagents to make sure retailers are informed and the information is being given to others who inquire about this issue. The trade association representing the firework industry is also aware that an exemption certificate has been issued.

Trade Union Rights

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to increase trade union rights to recognition; and if she will make a statement. [26182]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 29 January 1998]: The Government are committed to enabling trade unions to obtain recognition where a majority of the relevant workforce vote in a ballot for the union to represent them. We will consult fully on our proposals which will be set out in a White Paper to be published in the first part of this year.

MOX Fuel

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if, in assessing the future export market for MOX fuel, she will evaluate projections by independent experts, with particular reference to the international MOX assessment final report of November 1997. [29500]

Mr. Battle: Evaluation of the future export market for MOX fuel is for the commercial judgment of British Nuclear Fuels plc (BNFL), taking into account all relevant financial and economic factors.

The commercial and economic justification for the Sellafield MOX Plant is currently the subject of a further public consultation, on the justification of the proposed uranium commissioning and operation of the plant, being undertaken by the Environment Agency (EA). It is for the EA to decide on the justification for the plan on the basis of all evidence, including any reports, made available to them.

Civil Servants

Mr. Forth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many civil servants in her Department at each grade for grade 3 or above have (a) resigned, (b) retired before pensionable age and (c) moved to different responsibilities within the department since 1 May 1997; if she will indicate the Minister to whom each was responsible; and if she will make a statement. [26921]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Since 1 May the Regional Director for the North East has taken early retirement. None has resigned. There have been ten staff moves within the department involving posts at or above a level equivalent to what was formerly Grade 3 during that period. These have all been routine moves for career development or operational reasons (for example because a post has been abolished or a new one created). All Civil Servants in the Department of Trade and Industry are responsible to the President of the Board of Trade.

Transfer of Undertakings

Mr. Hanson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Government plan to amend the legislation giving employees the right to be informed and consulted through representatives in the event of a collective redundancy or the transfer of a business undertaking between employers. [29976]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My Department has today published a public consultation document seeking views on proposals to amend this aspect of the employment protection legislation.

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of current and projected skills shortages in the aerospace sector. [26810]

Mr. Battle: My Department works closely with the Society of British Aerospace Companies (SBAC) who are taking forward a programme of activities under the DTI's Competitiveness Challenge. Through the Competitiveness Challenge the SBAC have commissioned the Institute for Employment Services (IES) to conduct a survey into a number of aspects of people-management in the aerospace sector, including skills shortages. The IES's findings will be made public at the end of March.

Engineers

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had recently with business in the West Midlands regarding the availability of skilled engineers. [28529]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade visited major West Midlands manufacturing companies on 26 January 1998. Similar visits to the region were made by myself and my hon. Friend the Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry in October.

My Department is aware that skill shortages exist in the West Midlands in particular sectors, such as automotive and construction, which are key to competitiveness of the region. Local organisations, including schools, Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs) and FE Colleges are responding to such shortages to encourage more young people into engineering. Examples of activity include TEC-funded Modern Apprenticeships in engineering, schools working with the Engineering Employers' Federation to give work experience in engineering and FE colleges working with specific employers to address skill needs. A particular example is an advanced engineering centre being developed at Sutton Coldfield College in conjunction with local employers including LDV.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what environmental appraisal will be undertaken in respect of the award of contracts to renewables developers under the Fifth Round of the Non Fossil Fuel Obligation. [29017]

Mr. Battle: I expect projects to be contracted under the fifth Non Fossil Fuel Obligation to demonstrate high standards of environmental performance. This will require developers to consult widely on their project proposals so that their projects meet the concerns of the community likely to be affected. Award of NFFO contract does not confer any special privilege in the planning approval process which must be carried out in the normal way.

Disqualified Directors

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 253, if she will make a statement on the procedures (a) for selecting newspapers to which press releases are sent in the vicinity of (i) the disqualified director's private address and (ii) the address of the failed company, (b) for the timing of the press release, before or at the end of any stay period and (c) on the extent to which the disqualified director is advised on these matters, including being sent a copy of the release. [29549]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Disqualification proceedings are held in open court to which both the public and the press have access. The newspapers which are offered briefing are selected by the Central Office of Information (COI) from a list held by them, such newspapers being those relevant to both the director's home address and to the trading address of the failed company. The press release is issued as soon as possible after the court hearing at which the director has been disqualified. The press release gives the date of the disqualification order and whether the director was given leave to be a director of any other company(s).

Where directors ask whether there will be any publicity they are told that a press release will be issued and when requested a copy is made available to the director.

Gas Industry

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to (a) increase competition and (b) ensure fair pricing in the gas supply market. [29534]

Mr. Battle: By this summer, all domestic gas consumers in Great Britain should have a choice of supplier. Competition exerts a downward pressure on prices, and in the areas of the country which have already been opened to competition, consumers are able to benefit from prices which are up to 20 per cent. lower than those available from the former monopoly supplier. I am concerned that pre-payment meter users should also be able to benefit fully from the introduction of competition. This is an issue that is being considered as part of the Government's review of utility regulation.

Centrica

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received regarding the activities of Centrica. [29553]

Mr. Battle: My Department receives representations concerning a wide range of gas issues in which Centrica will have some involvement.

Transco

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received concerning the activities of Transco. [29533]

Mr. Battle: My Department receives representations concerning a wide range of gas issues in which Transco will have some involvement.

Tableware Strategy Group

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the progress to date on the reconvening of the Tableware Strategy Group. [29419]

Mr. Battle: I have been considering this suggestion, along with other options, to identify how best we can work with the ceramics industry. Following discussions with the British Ceramic Confederation (BCC) and the Treasury, it may be that the Ceramic Industry Liaison Group (CILG) would be the most appropriate forum to take this process forward. This is an existing forum at which my Department, the DETR, The BCC and CERAM Research, the industry research Association, meet regularly to discuss issues of concern to the industry. My officials are also looking at the possibility of Treasury involvement.

I mentioned this possible approach in my letter of 31 January 1998 to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Stevenson), which I have also copied to my hon. Friend. I shall consider the matter further when responses are to hand.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Experience

33. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what is his estimate of the cost of the millennium experience. [27617]

Mr. Mandelson: The cost of the Millennium Experience and its associated national programme of events will be met by a grant of £399 million (net) from the Millennium Commission and forecast income totalling £359 million from sponsorship, commercial activities, visitor revenues and disposal income.

34. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister without Portfolio to what extent the contents of the millennium dome will reflect Welsh and Scottish identities. [27618]

Mr. Mandelson: The Millennium Experience at Greenwich and its associated national programme of events and activities will appeal to and be relevant to people of all ages and interests wherever they may live. The overarching theme, "Time to Make a Difference", will encourage participation of individuals in all areas of the United Kingdom. NMEC is setting up teams in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the nine regions of England.

36. Mr. Cranston: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on progress in securing financial sponsorship for the millennium exhibition. [27620]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) are at crucial stages of very promising negotiations with a wide range of companies.

37. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on the work of M&C Saatchi in respect of the millennium experience. [27621]

Mr. Mandelson: After full competitive tendering M&C Saatchi were chosen by the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) to develop an integrated communications strategy for the Millennium Experience. This will incorporate media purchasing, production, direct marketing, Advertising Agency Service and other elements of integrated communications. That work is underway.

38. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what consultations he has held with the appropriate local authorities about the impact of traffic relating to attendance at the dome in Greenwich. [27622]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company have had regular discussions with the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions, the relevant local authorities and London Transport to ensure that there is minimal traffic impact on Greenwich and its surrounding area.

The site will be a car free zone. A multi-modal integrated public transport system, including new river boat services and the new Jubilee Line Extension, will provide a variety of means of getting to the Millennium Experience.

39. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what percentage of his total personal ministerial travel, accommodation and related subsistence expenditure in respect of his work on the millennium experience has been devoted to visits to EU countries. [27623]

Mr. Mandelson: I have visited Futuroscope in Poitiers as part of an official visit to France which cost approximately £970 in total; and Disney World in Florida as part of an official visit to the United States which cost approximately £3,450 in total.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how he intends to involve a representative selection of young people in the Millennium Dome project. [28229]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is developing proposals to ensure that young people across the country are able to put forward their views and ideas on the Millennium Experience at Greenwich and the associated national programme of events and activities. These proposals envisage Regional Junior Boards in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the nine English regions, each comprising twenty young people between the ages of 9 and 16, whom local education establishments and agencies have been asked to nominate. The Boards will be chaired by NMEC's national programme Education Managers for each region, and will meet twice a term. NMEC's objective is to arrange the first such meeting this summer.

The proposals also envisage that one member of each Regional Junior Board will sit on the National Junior Board, together with representatives of the major national youth organisations and agencies.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list (a) the United Kingdom publications and (b) the US publications in which contracts for the air-conditioning system of the Millennium Dome were advertised. [28132]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The contract for the design, manufacture and supply, testing and commissioning of mechanical and electrical plant for the Millennium Dome (including boilers, chillers, air handling units, standby generators, transformers and packaged substations) was advertised on 7 June 1997 in the Official Journal of the European Communities as required by European law on public procurement.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio, pursuant to his answer of 19 January 1998, Official Report, column 432, on transport arrangements for the Millennium Experience, what discussions the New Millennium Experience has had with Scottish public transport providers. [27982]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company has had discussions with the Association of Train Operating Companies (of which ScotRail is a member), and is exploring ticketing options with the operators of large and small coach fleets in respect of scheduled services and private hire from across the UK.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

National Curriculum Tests

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment his Department has made of the relative standards achieved at Level 4 in (a) Key Stage 2 and (b) Key Stage 3 National Curriculum English Tests; and what research underlies this assessment. [28789]

Mr. Byers: The Qualification and Curriculum Authority (QCA) is responsible for the standards demanded in statutory tests and takes a number of measures to ensure comparability of standards between Key Stages. These include cross-Key Stage pre-tests before the tests are finalised and script scrutiny to compare pupil performance across the Key Stage tests. QCA has published details of the test development process in its leaflet "Key Stages 1–3 National Curriculum Tests: Setting and Maintaining the Standards" and in its annual Standards Reports. I have placed copies of these publications in the Library.

Local Colleges

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to encourage co-operation between local colleges and high schools. [28744]

Dr. Howells: We are keen to encourage co-operation in post-16 education and training. Proposals will be published in the forthcoming consultation document on lifelong learning.

Engineering and Technology

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he intends to take to encourage more women to undertake degrees in engineering and technology. [29600]

Dr. Howells: The Government acknowledge the need for top class scientists and engineers and the important role that Universities play in helping to bring that about. The Development Unit for Women in Science, Engineering and Technology, which operates within the Office of Science and Technology, was established to encourage the increased participation of women in science, engineering and technology (SET) at all levels. It has produced various materials to encourage girls to consider engineering and technology as career options.

WISE (Women in Science and Engineering), started in 1984 with support from the former Manpower Services Commission. It has a remit to raise the number of women studying these subjects and, since then, women's representation on these courses in HE has doubled. It continues to receive support from the Department of Trade and Industry.

It is important that industry itself plays a full role in attracting girls to study engineering and technology subjects and that this will lead to satisfying career opportunities. It was unfortunate, for example, that the Women into Technology Foundation was not sustainable without public support. The Government continue to encourage industry to consider what further steps it might take, and to offer appropriate support.

New Deal

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he plans to extend the New Deal to the older unemployed. [29295]

Mr. Andrew Smith: We will be introducing the New Deal for those aged 25 and over, and unemployed for two years or more, in June. As we announced on 5 January, we have been considering a number of options for extending provision for those aged 25 or more who have been unemployed for 1 year or 18 months, and whether pilots could be introduced later this year.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the per capita funding for those unemployed who (a) are and (b) are not included in the New Deal. [29294]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Employment measures are not based on overall per capita cost. They offer a wide range of opportunities based on length of unemployment and individual need. Someone unemployed for over six months, for example, could attend a Jobclub at an average cost of £200 or undertake work based training for adults at an average cost of £2,510, including allowances. Similarly, the New Deal for 18–24 year olds could help one young person to find work during the Gateway at a cost of less than £100 to New Deal funds, and another to improve employability and then find work at a cost of over £5,000 to New Deal funds. The New Deal is in general resourced to make a real difference to the employability of young people and to contribute to reducing structural unemployment.

Welfare to Work

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the numbers of (a) young unemployed and (b) long-term unemployed expected to participate in welfare to work schemes in 1998–99, broken down by travel-to-work area. [27167]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 188.

By convention, the Government do not publish forecasts of unemployment. In January 1998, 118,000 18–24 year olds were recorded as having claimed Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) for six months or more; each month about 15,000–20,000 18–24 year olds reach six months' claimant unemployment. In January 1998 some 216,000 people aged 25 or over were recorded as having claimed JSA for more than two years; each month between 5,000 and 10,000 people who are 25 or over reach two years' claimant unemployment. It is not possible to break these data down to provide accurate estimates by travel to work areas.

SOCIAL SECURITY

New Deal

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the number of people in Warrington, North who have declined to participate in the New Deal and who are owner-occupiers. [29601]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information requested is not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

There will be a full and independent evaluation of the New Deal for Lone Parents which will examine all aspects of the programme, including participation rates. The evaluation will compare the outcomes for lone parents in the New Deal for Lone Parents areas with those in the control areas where the service is not yet available, and will be published in 1999.

PRIME MINISTER

Committee on Europe

Mr. Howard: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if costs relating to his proposed cross-party committee on Europe will be met from public funds; [25822]

(2) what criteria he will adopt for membership of his proposed cross-party committee on Europe; [25820]

(3) when he expects to form his proposed cross-party committee on Europe. [25821]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 27 January 1998]: When further details are available we will make them public.

Welfare Reform Roadshow

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Prime Minister for what reasons he will not be visiting Wales during his welfare reform roadshow. [26992]

The Prime Minister: Pressures of time make it impossible for me to visit all the places I would like to, as often as I would like to. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment did attend the welfare reform roadshow held in Wales on 5 February.

Overseas Travel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the (a) officials and (b) industrialists who accompanied him on his recent visit to Japan; and if he will list those (i) Ministers, (ii) officials and (iii) industrialists his delegation met during the visit. [28240]

The Prime Minister: I was accompanied on my official visit to Japan by:

Mr. John Holmes—Private Secretary;

Mr. Alastair Campbell—Chief Press Secretary;

Mr. Phillip Barton—Assistant Private Secretary;

plus nine No. 10 support staff providing secure communications and administrative support; one official from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; and two officials from the Department of Trade and Industry. This is in line with support provided to previous Prime Ministers when travelling abroad.

In addition, the following leading members of the business community accompanied me, at their own expense, and took part in discussions with the Japanese on developing trade links:

Sir Colin Marshall, British Airways

Mr. James Dyson, Dyson Appliances

Mr. John Rose, Rolls Royce

Dr. John Russell, ICI

Dr. Peter Sedgwick, Schroders

Dr. Michael Shears, Ove Arup

Sir Clive Thompson, Rentokil

Dr. Peter Williams, Oxford Instruments

Mr. Robert Wilson, Rio Tinto

Mr. Allen Yurko, Siebe Plc

Mr. Nick Scheele, Jaguar

Sir Iain Vallance, British Telecom.

I met the following Japanese Ministers:

Mr. Hashimoto, Prime Minister

Mr. Mitsuzuka, Finance Minister

Dr. Sakakibara, Vice Minister for International Affairs

Mr. Horiuchi, Minister of International Trade and Industry.

I also met a number of Ministry of International Trade and Industry officials.

I met the following Japanese industrialists during my visit:

Mr. Sohoiciro Toyoda KBE, Chairman, Toyota Motor Corporation

Mr. Shoh Nasu, Chairman, Tokyo Electric Power Company

Mr. Hirotaro Higuchi, Chairman of the Board, Tokyo-Mitsubushi Bank

Mr. Kozo Uchida, Director General of the Keidanren

Mr. Katsuhiro Fujiwara, Managing Director of the Keidanren

Mr. Norio Ohga, Chairman and CEO, Sony Corporation

Mr. Josei Itoh, Chairman Nippon Life Insurance Co.

Abortions

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will give responsibility for answering questions on the numbers and trends in the numbers of terminations performed under the Abortion Act 1967 to the Department of Health. [29678]

The Prime Minister: Following the creation of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) on 1 April 1996 there is an agreed division of responsibility between ONS and Departments for answering Parliamentary Questions with a statistical content. Oral questions and written questions including issues of policy are answered by the relevant Department, while written questions seeking statistics only are answered by ONS. In line with these arrangements written questions seeking only statistics on abortions in England and Wales, are delegated by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the Director of ONS for answer. There are no plans to change these arrangements.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister how often, and to which part of government, reports are made by places licensed to carry out terminations under the Abortion Act 1967. [29679]

The Prime Minister: All non-National Health Service places approved by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Health, for Scotland and for Wales, under Section 1(3) of the Abortion Act 1967, to carry out termination of pregnancy, are subject to unannounced visits and monitoring by officials of their Department. All registered medical practitioners have a statutory obligation to notify the Chief Medical Officer of the relevant Department of each termination of pregnancy they perform.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place a paper in the Library setting out the authority under international law which underpins his policy towards Iraq. [29749]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 February 1998]: Security Council resolutions are a matter of public record.

The requirement for Iraq to destroy its weapons of mass destruction under international supervision is part of the conditions laid down by the Security Council for the ceasefire established at the end of the Gulf conflict in SCR 687.

The Security Council currently has the question of Iraq's compliance under active consideration.

Amsterdam Summit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what tape recordings were made of the Amsterdam Treaty summit. [29694]

The Prime Minister: I understand that, in accordance with normal practice, the proceedings of such meetings are recorded by the Secretariat General of the Council. These recordings are made for internal purposes and are not available to member states.

TREASURY

Tax Evasion

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the loss to the Exchequer arising from evasion of (a) income tax, (b) VAT, (c) corporation tax and (d) all other taxes in the last year for which figures are available. [26416]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 January 1998]: It is not possible to determine the amount of tax that is lost through evasion.

Individual Savings Account

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many responses he has received to his consultative document "The New Individual Savings Account" broken down into (a) letters, (b) trade submissions and (c) other responses; and if he will make a statement. [24554]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 22 January 1998]: Comments were asked for by 31 January. By 4 February, the Inland Revenue had received

3,096 letters from individuals

273 trade submissions

7 other responses.

Ministers had received a further 3,303 responses by the same date, although this figure includes some duplication as a number of respondents copied their responses to more than one recipient.

We are grateful to everyone who has taken the time to share with us their views on the ISA proposals and we will consider them all carefully. Consultations of this kind allow the Government to draw on the widest possible range of experience and expertise. The ISA is an important and, we believe, exciting initiative, and we want to get it right.

Business Profits

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) of 22 December 1997, Official Report, column 471, when he expects to make a final decision to confirm the withdrawal of the practices which permit professional businesses to pay tax on profits on a cash basis. [29580]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The consultation period ended on 14 February. We will be considering the various points made on the proposals, including those concerning the timing of their implementation. There will be no announcement of any decision on the withdrawal of the cash basis practices in advance of my right hon. Friend's Budget.

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) of 22 December 1997, Official Report, column 471, what representations he has received following the decision to withdraw the practices which permit some professional businesses to pay tax on profits worked out on a cash basis. [29579]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The Inland Revenue Press Release issued on 22 December invited comments on the proposals to withdraw the cash basis practices available to professionals. The Inland Revenue has received a large number of responses and I myself have received several. The Inland Revenue has also had a number of meetings with representative bodies, including the Law Society, the Bar Council, and the different accountancy bodies. The consultation period ended on 14 February. Thereafter we will be considering the various points made on the proposals.

Inland Revenue (Invoices)

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many invoices sent to the Inland Revenue were not paid within (a) 30, (b) 40, (c) 50 and (d) 60 days in the period since 1 May 1997. [29186]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 February 1998]: Since 1 May 1997 the Inland Revenue has paid 322,816 invoices. 95.58 per cent. were paid within 30 days. The number of invoices not paid, including those in dispute, within this period is:

(a) 30 days: 14,916

(b) 40 days: 11,256

(c) 50 days: 9,969

(d) 60 days: 8,845.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the proposed system of advanced payments of corporation tax had been in force, how many companies would (a) have benefited and (b) have been disadvantaged if their size had been determined using previous years' profits rather than an accurate estimate of current year profits in each of the last three years. [29192]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The following table gives broad estimates of the numbers of companies standing (a) to benefit and (b) be disadvantaged if the criterion for allocating companies to the small, medium or large categories for the purposes of instalments (under the modern system for the payment of corporation tax published as a consultative document in November 1997) was related to profits of the previous rather than the current year.

Companies would benefit if their previous years' profits placed them in the small company category rather than a larger profit category, or the medium-sized category rather than the large company category for instalment purposes. Disadvantaged companies would be placed in larger profit groups on the basis of their previous years' profits. The table shows that there would have been substantially more companies benefiting than losing from using previous year profits in 1993–94 and 1994–95 as profits increased quickly after the earlier recession in company profits, but by 1995–96 the difference would have been small.

The estimates however exclude the cashflow benefits to many small companies from the proposed abolition of advance corporation tax and their exclusion from instalment payments. The table assumes that the use of the suggested previous year criterion would include protection against manipulation of accounting periods aimed at lessening the impact of instalments.

Accounting periods ending in the years shown

Thousands

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
(a) companies benefiting	21	20	15
(b) companies disadvantaged	11	10	14

Tax Burden

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the tax burden as a percentage of gross domestic product in each year from 1997–98 to 2002–03 on current taxation plans. [29183]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 February 1998]: Projections of the tax burden, based on the usual assumption that there are no tax changes beyond those already announced in past Budgets, were published in Table B3 of the November 1997 Pre-Budget Report.

Disposable Income

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact of the tax changes announced in the July 1997 Budget on the annual disposable income of (a) an individual on average earnings and (b) a married couple on average earnings with a £50,000 mortgage. [29195]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The only Budget 97 measure likely to have a direct effect on the disposable income of individuals aged under 60 is the reduction from 6 April 1998 in the rate at which mortgage interest relief is given from 15 per cent. to 10 per cent. Relief is limited to the interest on loans of £30,000. As a result an individual and a married couple on average earnings and a £50,000 mortgage will receive less relief. This assumes, by convention, no change to the latest available estimated average building society interest rate.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date. [27727]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The current estimate is:

£000

Department/Agency	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98 estimate to date
Inland Revenue	2,043	210	38
of which:
Valuation Office Agency	87	17	11
Customs & Excise	240	167	129
HM Treasury	40	25	18
National Savings[1]	351	459	363
Office for National Statistics	15	33	5
Royal Mint	nil	nil	nil

[1] Losses almost exclusively relate to external fraud.

Tobacco Smuggling

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of revenue lost to HM Treasury from the illegal sale of tobacco products in the most recent period for which figures are available. [26539]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise estimate that the revenue (excise duty and VAT) lost to the Exchequer through cross-Channel smuggling of tobacco products in 1997 was about £690 million. There are no official estimates for the revenue lost on tobacco products involved in commercial fraud, smuggling in freight consignments or by air passengers.

Euro

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 5 February 1998, Official Report, column 777, if he will commission research on the effect of the sale of excess reserves of (a) gold and (b) foreign currency by central banks participating in the euro on (i) world gold prices and (ii) international exchanges. [29765]

Mrs. Liddell: No.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many landowners who received conditional exemption from inheritance tax in the last three years for (a) land and buildings and (b) works of art were peers. [24954]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if local authorities are informed in every case of the land within their area to which the public has a right of access due to the owner receiving conditional exemption from inheritance tax. [24576]

Dawn Primarolo: When advising the Inland Revenue on matters relating to conditional exemption for land, the relevant Government heritage agencies consider each case on its own merits and they liaise with local authorities or national park authorities whenever it is appropriate to do so.

Fuel Tax

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of total income to the Treasury resulting from a three pence per litre increase in tax on vehicular fuel. [29491]

Dawn Primarolo: The full year revenue yield in 1998–99 from a 3 pence per litre tax increase (duty plus VAT) on road fuels is £1.1 billion.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total income to the Treasury resulting from (a) a 6 per cent., (b) an 8 per cent. and (c) a 10 per cent. annual increase in tax on vehicular fuel per annum in each year for the next five years. [29490]

Dawn Primarolo: Revenue yields for the various options for road fuels described in the question are given in the following table:

£ million

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Increase road fuel duties by:
6 per cent. per annum	1,075	2,200	3,420
8 per cent. per annum	1,425	2,935	4,580
10 per cent. annum	1,775	3,670	5,745

The estimates include consequential VAT and are for the additional revenue compared with leaving the existing duty rates unchanged in a full year. Detailed estimates for later years are not published.

Pensioners (Taxation)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pensioners, and what percentage, pay tax in each tax band; and how many, and what percentage, pay no tax. [29671]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 1998–99 are given in the table. The estimates are based on information from the 1995–96 Survey of Personal Incomes and population estimates from the Government Actuary's Department; they are therefore provisional.

Individuals aged 65 and over	Number (millions)	Percentage
Not liable to income tax	5.9	64
Lower rate	2.0	22
Basic rate	1.1	12
Higher rate	0.2	2
Total	9.2	100

Far East (Economic Instability)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 570, how much the United Kingdom has made available for assistance to Asian countries through the international financial institutions to help them deal with economic instability; and what the extent of the United Kingdom's financial commitments is in this respect. [28116]

Mrs. Liddell: No additional funds have been made available to the international financial institutions for this purpose. The loans disbursed through these institutions have been funded from their existing resources which include contributions from all their members.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the redistribution of income between couples if family credit is replaced by the proposed working families tax credit paid to the principal earner. [28182]

Dawn Primarolo: Any redistributive effects of the Working Families Tax Credit will depend on its design and this is what my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer is considering currently.

Tax Avoidance Scheme

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce legislation to counter tax avoidance schemes involving the sales of companies to avoid payment of corporation tax. [30277]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government announced at the time of the last Budget, in July, that legislation would be introduced in the next Finance Bill to counter these schemes, and the Inland Revenue have today published the legislation in draft for consultation.

The proposed legislation will strengthen measures introduced in 1994 to counter schemes which exploit the rules on company purchase and abandonment. The new legislation is designed to stop alternative schemes which have been developed since 1994. The Government are determined to curb tax avoidance, and will act to counter any further attempts to get round the rules on company purchase and abandonment, giving consideration to backdating to the commencement date for the current provisions any future measures which may be necessary to counter variants of these schemes.

Public Information

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how frequently, after what delays, and with what precision he publishes information on changes in (a) inflation, (b) unemployment, (c) benefit claimants, (d) the balance of trade, (e) the numbers taking up smoking and (f) the numbers involved in conceptions that are terminated legally and deliberately. [29674]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 17 February 1998:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question on frequency, delay and precision in publishing various information.

The requested information is given in the attached table.

	Frequency	Delays	Precision
Inflation	M	Month	One decimal place
Unemployment (LFS)	Q[1]	6 weeks	Nearest 1000[5]
Benefit claimants (Claimant count)	M	5 weeks	Nearest 100
Balance of Trade	M	Within 8 weeks[3]	Nearest £ million
Taking up smoking	N/A[2]	N/A	N/A
Conceptions terminated	Q and A	5 months and 6 months[4]	100% count

[1] From April 1997 the LFS will be published monthly.
[2] Only adult and children prevalence figures are published.
[3] Published within eight weeks of the end of the reporting period for trade with EU member states, and within four weeks of the end of the reporting period for trade with other countries.
[4] From 1997. Prior to 1997 the delay was nine months and 7–24 months respectively.
[5] Estimates of less than 10,000 are not published. This is because the data are not robust.

VCT and EIS Schemes

Mr. Horam: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to modify the VCT and EIS schemes. [20952]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Decisions on whether or not to modify the VCT and EIS schemes are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement. The hon. Gentleman would not expect me to anticipate it.

National Insurance (Upper Earnings Limit)

Mr. Martin Bell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the amount of additional revenue which would have been raised in 1997–98 if the upper earnings limit on national insurance contributions had been abolished. [25799]

Mr. Denham: I have been asked to reply.

Estimated additional revenue of some £3.7 billion would have been raised in respect of 1997–98 earnings if the Upper Earnings Limit on employees' Class 1 contributions had been removed for that year.

The figure assumes that the current 10 per cent. Class 1 contribution rate would apply to earnings above the present Upper Earnings Limit and that an Upper Earnings Limit would remain in place for the calculation of employee and employer contracted-out rebates.

Source:

Government Actuary's Department.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people would pay more tax if the upper earnings limit on employees' national insurance contributions were increased to £30,145; [26205]

(2) how much extra revenue would be raised by increasing the upper earnings limit on employees' national insurance contributions to £30,145. [26206]

Mr. Denham: I have been asked to reply.

Estimated additional revenue of some £1.5 billion would be raised in a full year if the Upper Earnings Limit on employees' Class 1 contributions was increased from its present level to £30,145, and about 3.5 million people would become liable to pay more contributions.

The figures assume that the current 10 per cent. Class 1 contribution rate would apply to earnings above the present Upper Earnings Limit and that the current Upper Earnings Limit would remain in place for the calculation of employee and employer contracted-out rebates.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ambassadors (Languages)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many ambassadors speak (a) one, (b) two, (c) three, (d) four and (e) more than four foreign languages. [29740]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: According to information held at February 1998:

(a) four Heads of Missions have competence in one language
(b) 27 Heads of Missions have competence in two languages
(c) 34 Heads of Missions have competence in three languages
(d) 33 Heads of Missions have competence in four languages
(e) 47 Heads of Missions have competence in more than four languages.

Twenty-six have competence in five, 13 have competence in six, three have competence in seven, two have competence in eight, one has competence in nine and one has competence in twelve.

This information is based on a combination of examination passes and self-declarations. During the course of 1998, procedures are being introduced which will make objective testing the only basis for recorded language competence in the FCO.

Entry Clearance Officers (Bombay)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the level of sickness among entry clearance officers in Bombay. [29564]

Mr. Fatchett: The level of sickness among Entry Clearance Officers in Bombay is low. During 1997, the 10 full time ECOs in Bombay took a total of 11 days sick leave. Seven temporary additional staff took a total of 11 days sick leave.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) allowances and (b) holidays entry clearance officers in Bombay receive. [29563]

Mr. Fatchett: Entry Clearance Officers in Bombay, as elsewhere, are drawn from both HM Diplomatic Service and the Home Office. Their conditions of service vary accordingly, although local Cost of Living and Difficult Post Allowances are paid on the same basis. Individual allowances also vary according to salary levels and family circumstances. Typically, a Home Office Immigration Officer with spouse and one child in Bombay will receive an annual package of allowances worth between £9,937 and £11,221 depending on salary. A Diplomatic Service Officer in the same family circumstances will receive from £10,261 to £10,361 again dependent on salary.

The standard leave entitlement depending on length of service is 35 to 42 days plus seven to 14 days local leave and in Bombay, 14 days unhealthy leave addition. All leave while overseas is based on a seven day week, so that weekends and public holidays falling during leave count against that settlement. In Bombay staff are entitled to six fare paid journeys during a three year tour of duty.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the level of staffing of entry clearance officers in Bombay. [29561]

Mr. Fatchett: There are currently 10 Entry Clearance Officers (ECOs) working in the visa section in Bombay. The authorised establishment is 10 officers. The section is, therefore, fully staffed. During 1997, the number of ECOs in Bombay never fell below the authorised establishment.

In addition, in 1997, the visa section was reinforced with an extra seven ECOs, to cope with the increased number of applications during the busiest months. The additional staff provided 22.5 man months of support.

In 1998, an additional seven officers will again be provided, amounting to 24.5 man months of support during the busiest period.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current salary levels of entry clearance officers in Bombay. [29562]

Mr. Fatchett: Entry Clearance Officers in Bombay, as elsewhere, are drawn from both HM Diplomatic Service and the Home Office, usually the Immigration Service. Their respective annual salary ranges are:

£12,384 to £18,228 (HM Diplomatic Service)

£12,526 to £19,970 (Home Office).

Both groups receive a Recruitment and Retention Allowance of £1,776 per annum.

Settlement Applications (Waiting Times)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to reduce the waiting times in (a) Bombay and (b) New Delhi for applicants for settlement. [29574]

Mr. Fatchett: Waiting times for applicants for settlement entry clearance are constantly monitored by the Entry Clearance Managers in Bombay and New Delhi. Appointments are allocated at the maximum rate consistent with the maintenance of service standards to non-settlement applications. The current waiting times at both Posts are within the maxima laid down. In the case of Right of Abode claimants, dependent relatives over 65 and special compassionate cases there is no waiting time at either Post.

Venezuelan Ambassador

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet the Venezuelan ambassador to Britain. [29570]

Mr. Fatchett: None. The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), met the Venezuelan Ambassador, HE Sr Chaderton-Matos, on16 October 1997.

NATO

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the enlargement of NATO. [29577]

Mr. Fatchett: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister told the House on 9 July, Britain, together with our NATO Allies at the NATO Summit on 8 July invited Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic to begin accession talks to join NATO. On 16 December, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, together with his NATO colleagues, signed the Accession Protocols. A debate on NATO enlargement will take place in the House before the Government ratify the Accession protocols.

India (UN Security Council)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the advantages of India becoming a permanent member of the UN Security Council. [29575]

Mr. Fatchett: We want to see an early enlargement of the Security Council and better representation on it for developing countries. It is widely expected that India, given its long and important contribution to the United Nations, would be a candidate for permanent membership of the Security Council if additional permanent seats were created.

United States (UN Debt)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the USA to repay its UN debt. [29576]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has made clear to Madeleine Albright on several occasions that we expect the US to pay their UN arrears and future contributions promptly and in full.

Visitor Visas

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to deal with problems arising in the issuing of visitors' visas. [29567]

Mr. Fatchett: Any problems arising from the issuing of visitors' visas are reviewed by the Entry Clearance Manager at the Post concerned. Where appropriate, the Entry Clearance Manager consults Migration and Visa Division of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for policy advice on individual cases or assistance with operational difficulties.

Bahrain

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings have been held at Ministerial level with Ministers in the Bahrain Government; and what was discussed. [29465]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence held separate meetings with the Bahraini Crown Prince and the Minister for Foreign Affairs on 28 January. They discussed many issues but focused mainly on the current crisis in the Gulf. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary also raised the question of constitutional development and the recent request to the Bahraini authorities from the Committee for Popular Petition for political dialogue.

I also met the Bahraini Minister for Foreign Affairs on 28 January. We discussed regional security issues, including Algeria and the Middle East Peace Process. We also discussed this Government's continuing concerns about human rights in Bahrain.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings the British Ambassador to Bahrain has had with (a) the Government and (b) human rights groups to discuss human rights abuses; and if he will make a statement. [29467]

Mr. Fatchett: Our Ambassador in Bahrain has frequent meetings with Ministers and officials of the Bahraini Government. Their discussions cover many areas of mutual concern, including human rights issues. There are no human rights groups in Bahrain.

Iran and Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of recent reports of meetings between representatives of the Governments of Iran and Iraq. [29868]

Mr. Fatchett: I have read them with interest. The Iranians have more reason than most to appreciate the threat which Iraq poses to its neighbours.

UK Presidency

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of those aspects of his ethical foreign policy which will affect the conduct of the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union. [29830]

Mr. Doug Henderson: During our Presidency of the EU, and beyond, we will continue to work with our European partners to ensure that human rights remains a central element in the EU's relations with the rest of the world.

European Culture Capital

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards an inquiry at European Union level on the financing of Thessalonika as European culture capital. [29827]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The financing of the annual European City of Culture programme is primarily a matter for the authorities of the city concerned. Cities raise funds from their own resources, normally with some support from their national Governments and, increasingly, from private sector sponsors.

The role of the EU is mostly limited to the process of designation. Each City of Culture receives only a nominal sum from the relevant Community cultural programme, Kaleidoscope, to help finance its operations, amounting to approximately 1 per cent. of the City's budget. In 1997, this sum was 400,000 ECU (£273,000).

As part of the overall programme, each City of Culture is also required to produce a report within six months of the end of the year. The report for 1997 by Thessalonika is due by the end of June 1998.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Circus Animals

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions have been recorded for instances of cruelty to animals within circuses for each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement. [29130]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The main legislation protecting the welfare of circus animals is the Protection of Animals Act 1911. However, court proceedings data do not identify the location of an offence. In 1996, there were 967 prosecutions under this Act of which 764 resulted in a conviction.

The table details prosecutions and convictions under the Performing Animals (Regulation) Act 1925 and the Protection of Animals Act 1934 which relate more specifically to performing animals.

On-line Lotteries

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he received from (a) BACTA, (b) Littlewoods, (c) Camelot and (d) Scottish and Newcastle between 2 May 1997 and 17 November 1997 in respect of on-line lotteries. [29837]

Mr. George Howarth: During the period in question, I received letters from the British Amusement Catering Trade Association (BACTA), and Camelot and met them to discuss various gambling issues, including on-line lotteries.

BACTA expressed the view that it would be undesirable for rapid draw on-line lotteries to be played in liquor licensed premises. Camelot was concerned that such games should not be introduced without research into their likely effects.

We did not receive any representations from Littlewoods or Scottish and Newcastle on this subject. I met Scottish and Newcastle's trade association, the Brewers and Licensed Retailers Association.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what advice he has received from the Gaming Board on (a) the legality and (b) the desirability of on-line lottery draws; and if he will place a copy of the advice in the Library; [29996]

(2) on what date he first received advice from the Gaming Board in respect of on-line lotteries. [29999]

Mr. George Howarth: The Chairman of the Gaming Board wrote to me on 16 May 1997.

The Board set out its concerns about on-line lottery games fully in its Annual Report for 1996–97, which was presented to Parliament on 11 July 1997.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned in respect of on-line lottery draws; [29993]

(2) on what date his Department received advice from Dr. Sue Fisher on the possible impact of Pronto; [29997]

(3) on which date his Department received advice from Dr. Sue Fisher on the possible social impact of Pronto. [29836]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office has not commissioned or undertaken research on on-line lottery draws.

Following informal discussion, Dr. Sue Fisher was invited to submit a paper on the possible social impact of Pronto, which was received on 12 November 1997.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport and (b) the Director General of Oflot concerning rapid on-line lottery draws. [29994]

Mr. George Howarth: In considering the policy implications of on-line lotteries, I consulted Ministerial colleagues, including an exchange of letters with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport.

We did not receive representations from the Director General of OFLOT.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those organisations consulted by the Gaming Board in respect of on-line lotteries who later advised him. [29998]

Mr. George Howarth: I understand that the Gaming Board's advice was based on its own assessment of the regulatory implications of on-line lotteries.

Hepatitis C (Prisons)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of hepatitis C there were among prison inmates in each of the last 10 years in each prison in Britain. [29838]

Ms Quin: Figures on the number of cases of hepatitis C in each prison in England and Wales have been collected only since 1995. Prisoners are not routinely screened for hepatitis C and cases are recorded only when prisoners volunteer information about their hepatitis C status. The table records the number of such cases recorded in the financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97. I have asked for official advice on the implications of introducing routine screening.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce needle exchanges in prisons to reduce the spread of hepatitis C. [29846]

Ms Quin: There are no plans at present to introduce a needle exchange scheme in prisons in England and Wales but I have commissioned advice on this subject.

Women Prisoners

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to implement the recommendations of "Women in Prison: A Thematic Review" by HM Chief Inspector of Prisons. [29199]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service welcomed the report "Women in Prison: A thematic review by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons". The Prison Service is already progressing work in a number of areas highlighted by the Chief Inspector's report.

In his thematic review, the Chief Inspector recommended that there should be a Director of Women's Prisons. This was considered within the structural review of the Prison Service which was completed recently. The Director General accepted the recommendation of the review and has created a Directorate of Regimes within which there will be a number of Assistant Directors responsible for developing policy for specific groups of prisoners. An Assistant Director for Women and an Assistant Director for Young Offenders have been appointed.

Work to develop regimes for women encompasses the areas of concern highlighted by the Chief Inspector. The Prison Service in the coming year will be piloting new constructive regimes in two women's establishments. Initiatives also in hand at the moment include: re-examination of the policy on age mixing; the development of programmes to address offending behaviour specifically tailored to women's needs; training programmes for those working with women in prison; and work on a protocol for dealing more effectively with disruptive women prisoners.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the appropriateness of custodial sentences for the majority of women offenders. [29200]

Mr. Michael: Prison is necessary for the most serious offenders, whether male or female, when the court considers such a sentence is necessary in order to protect the public or when other penalties are not appropriate. The Government wish to see full use of community sentences for women and we are seeking to increase the effectiveness of such sentences. Where prison is the sentence decided by the court, we want the time to be used constructively so that offenders are less likely to reoffend when released rather than more likely to offend or to offend more seriously. This principle applies to both men and women in prison. Last month, we announced a pilot programme of work with young prisoners before release to increase the likelihood that they will be able to succeed in the New Deal after release and go on to find work.

A number of new developments are taking place specifically in relation to Prison Service establishments for women. An Assistant Director for Women has recently been appointed. New regimes will be piloted in two women's establishments in the coming year. The Service is re-examining the policy on age mixing. Programmes for women to address offending behaviour are being designed. Work is in hand to deal more effectively with difficult and disruptive women prisoners. New training programmes are being brought in for staff. The Prison Service is working towards the standards set out in the Department of Health publication 'Changing Childbirth', revising policy on pregnant women in prison and mother and baby units; and medication levels in establishments for women are being reviewed.

Prison Secure Estate (Visits)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the wings or units within the Prison Secure Estate containing 15 or 16-year-old young persons on remand which have been visited (a) by himself and (b) by other Ministers in his Department. [29121]

Ms Quin: No complete, central record is kept of which parts of a particular prison have been visited by a Minister. However, Ministers have visited the following establishments which may contain 15 or 16 year old young persons on remand:

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary visited Brinsford Young Offender Institution (YOI) on 6 January and Feltham YOI on 13 February.

My hon. Friend the Member for Knowsley, North and Sefton, East (Mr. Howarth) visited Feltham YOI on 10 July 1997 and Lancaster Farms YOI on 13 October 1997.

My hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael) visited Cardiff prison on 31 January 1998.

I visited Exeter prison on 11 July and Glen Parva YOI on 30 October. I am visiting Low Newton on 20 February.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Clause 27 of the Data Protection Bill [Lords] applies to those personal data processed by the Security Service which are intended to assist the police in relation to serious crime; and if he will make a statement. [29116]

Mr. George Howarth: Clause 27(1) provides that personal data are exempt from the data protection principles and from Parts II, III and V and clause 52 of the Bill if the exemption is required to safeguard national security. Clause 27(2) provides for Ministerial certification of the need for exemption and clause 27(4) allows appeals by people directly affected. The form of exemption in respect of personal data processed by the Security Service is under consideration.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 29 January 1998, Official Report, column 342, concerning the compliance costs questionnaire in relation to data protection, if he will publish aggregate statistics relating to responses made by (a) local authorities, (b) Government departments, (c) large manufacturers, (d) small manufacturers, (e) financial institutions, (f) charities, (g) marketing organisations and (h) retailers, for each of the questions Q2 to Q8, Q10 to Q12, Q15, Q18, Q20 to Q23 and Q27 to Q31, indicating the breakdown between manual data and computerised data. [29117]

Mr. George Howarth: I am afraid that the information is not readily available in the precise form requested. However, following is a table giving a percentage breakdown of the costs to non-Government organisations by reference to the main categories of additional spending.

The costs to Government Departments were assessed separately, not through the questionnaire.

Estimated compliance costs of the Data Protection Directive—covering the private sector, charities and local authorities. Costs are shown as percentages of total estimated start-up and recurring costs respectively.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the compliance of measures in the Data Protection Bill [Lords] with the requirement for a definition of consent set out in Article 2(h) of Directive 95/46/EC; and if he will make a statement. [29041]

Mr. George Howarth: The Directive does not require us to amplify the terms it uses. We consider that the Bill gives proper effect to the requirements of Community law.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those cases, with respect to the lawful processing of sensitive personal data under Schedule 3 to the Data Protection Bill [Lords], where the Secretary of State has used Article 8(4) of Directive 95/46/EC to specify additional exemptions; if he will list the reason for each exemption; and if he will indicate the nature of the suitable safeguards which are intended to protect the data subject. [29115]

Mr. George Howarth: Article 8(4) of the Directive, relating to reasons of substantial public interest, is reflected in paragraph 7 of Schedule 3 to the Bill. The latter provides an exemption for processing which is necessary for the administration of justice, the exercise of functions conferred by any enactment or the exercise of any function of the Crown, Minister of the Crown or Government Department.

The exemption is necessary to enable the conduct of legitimate functions as authorised by Parliament. The safeguards are the legal constraints on the discharge of the functions in question and more specific provisions included in some of the relevant statutes.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the protection afforded to the media in the Data Protection Bill [Lords]. [29044]

Mr. George Howarth: Clause 31 of the Bill exempts processing for special purposes (journalistic, literary or artistic purposes) from some provisions of the Data Protection Bill. The processing must take place with a view to publication and the data controller must reasonably believe both that publication, having particular regard to the special importance of freedom of expression, is in the public interest and that complying with the data protection rules is incompatible with the special purposes.

Clause 42 allows the Data Protection Commissioner to serve a special information notice on the data controller for the purpose of ascertaining whether the processing is being undertaken only for the special purposes and with a view to publication. Clause 44 restricts the ability of the Commissioner to serve an enforcement notice on a data controller in respect of processing for the special purposes unless it does not meet the necessary criteria and the court has granted leave for the notice to be served.

Challenges may be made after publication; but the exemption still applies if the conditions are satisfied.

In line with Article 9 of the European Communities Data Protection Directive (95/46/EC), these provisions are intended to reconcile the privacy protections in the main data protection regime with the needs of freedom of expression.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to (a) Recital 10 of Directive 95/46/EC and (b) the exemptions in the Data Protection Act 1984 relating to crime and taxation, if he will make a statement on Clause 28(4) of the Data Protection Bill [Lords] in respect of (a) the UK's obligations towards Article 8 of the Human Rights Convention and (b) the lessening of protection afforded to data subjects. [29043]

Mr. George Howarth: Clause 28(4) provides a power for the Secretary of State, by order subject to affirmative resolution, to exempt from the first data protection principle, subject access rights and non-disclosure provisions any processing relating to the prevention or detection of crime, the apprehension or prosecution of offenders or the assessment or collection of taxes.

No decision has been taken on the precise use of this power. Before taking such a decision, we would have full regard to the European Convention on Human Rights and the 1995 European Communities Directive on Data Protection.

Standard List Offences

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how frequently, after what delays, and with what precision, he publishes information on the number of people convicted for the first time of a standard list offence. [29672]

Mr. Michael: Information is published annually on people convicted of a standard list offence for the first time. The most recent figures are for 1995 and were published in November 1997. They appeared in Chapter 9 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1996" (Cm. 3764). Information is based on a sample of those convicted of a standard list offence in three sample weeks and is presented as a percentage of the total sample.

In 1995, the sample size was 18,000 (out of an annual total of 353,000). In 1995, the estimated percentage of offenders with a first conviction was 35 per cent. The chance that the annual rate differs from this by more than one percentage point is about 1 in 200.

Correspondence

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions during the past six months his Department has been unable to reply to letters from hon. Members within one month of receiving them; what assessment he has made of the adequacy of his departmental performance in replying to inquiries by hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [29595]

Mr. Straw: Between 1 September 1997 and 13 February 1998, 5,681 of the 9,948 letters received from hon. Members were either replied to more than 30 days after receipt, or still await a reply after more than 30 days. I am not satisfied with my Department's performance in dealing with replies to hon. Members and I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for South Dorset (Mr. Bruce) on 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 587.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his Department's policy always to answer either by way of an acknowledgement or a substantive reply every letter received from the general public; and on how many occasions during the past six months his Department has found it necessary to reply to members of the general public that it has been unable to trace original letters about which follow-up inquiries are being made. [29552]

Mr. Straw: It is my Department's policy to acknowledge or reply to all correspondence received from the general public. I am not able to state how many times over the past six months a reply has been given that an original letter cannot be traced, since at present there are no systems in place to monitor the progress of general correspondence. However, a monitoring system is shortly to be installed as part of a project to improve the handling of correspondence.

Racial Incidents

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 January 1998, Official Report, columns 38–40, if he will list the number of racial incidents in 1996–97, by police force per head of population. [29489]

Mr. Michael: The number of racial incidents in 1996–97, by police force, per thousand population[1] is given in the table.

Penal Lexicon Web Site

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the benefits to the Prison Service of access to the web site, Penal Lexicon; and if he will make a statement. [29415]

Ms Quin: No assessment has been made of the benefits to the Prison Service of the Penal Lexicon or any other subscription service available on the Internet.

Young Remand Prisoners

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 15 and 16-year-olds remanded to adult prison accommodation on a subsequent court appearance were (a) found not guilty of all charges and (b) sentenced to a non-custodial sentence in the most recent years for which figures are available. [29258]

Mr. Michael: Information on the sentencing of juveniles held on remand in adult prison accommodation is not collected centrally. Information is available on the sentencing of juveniles remanded in custody by the court, although the place of remand is not collected.

Juveniles who are refused bail are usually remanded to local authority accommodation. Exceptionally, 15 or 16-year-old boys meeting certain conditions may be remanded to a remand centre or prison. These conditions are:

that the defendant is charged with a violent or sexual offence or one punishable in the case of an adult with imprisonment for a term of 14 years or more; or

that the defendant has a history of absconding while remanded in local authority accommodation and is charged with or has been convicted of an imprisonable offence alleged or found to have been committed while he was so remanded.

and in either case, that the court considers that only a remand to a remand centre or prison would be adequate to protect the public from serious harm from him.

In 1996, the most recent year for which information is available, some 840 male defendants aged 15 or 16 appeared in court having been remanded in custody and charged with a violent or sexual offence or one punishable in the case of an adult with imprisonment for a term of 14 years or more. Of these, 220 were acquitted, found not guilty, had the charge withdrawn or were not proceeded against; 280 were sentenced to immediate custody and a further 340 were sentenced to a non-custodial sentence. No information is available on either previous propensity to abscond or court deliberations.

Child Protection

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will allow those voluntary sector organisations which work with children but have no statutory obligation to obtain police vetting of potential employees and volunteers access to such vetting. [29804]

Mr. Michael: Part V of the Police Act 1997 contains provisions which will enable all organisations which work with children to obtain access to criminal record checks on their employees and volunteers. We are currently considering how to phase in implementation of Part V in the light of a review which took account of experience gained in implementing the Sex Offenders Act 1997 and proposals in the Crime and Disorder Bill.

Flunitrazepam

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consult the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs on a proposal to reschedule flunitrazepam as a class B drug. [29524]

Mr. George Howarth: The class (A, B or C) under which a controlled drug is listed under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 determines the maximum penalty for offences (essentially unlawful productions, supply or possession) involving that drug. The broad principle governing the classification of a drug is its harmfulness. The greater it is the higher the classification. The benzodiazepines, of which flunitrazepam is one, are used as hypnotic and anxiolytic medicines and are all in class C.

It is the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985 which determine the degree of regulation over a controlled drug and, following a decision by the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs, we plan to lay before Parliament shortly amendments which will, subject to Parliamentary approval, impose tighter controls on flunitrazepam with effect from 1 May 1998 by moving it from Schedule 4 to Schedule 3 of the Regulations. The change was agreed by the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs. As a result of the re-scheduling, it will become an offence to possess the drug without lawful authority; imports and exports will become controlled; and safe custody requirements will apply. We have no plans to consult the Council further at this stage.

Mr. Ricky Reel

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure a full investigation into circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Ricky Reel. [29494]

Mr. Michael: This investigation, which is an operational matter for the Commissioner, is continuing. An investigation into the Metropolitan Police's handling of this case is being undertaken by Mr. Peter Fahy, an Assistant Chief Constable from Surrey Police, overseen by the independent Police Complaints Authority. My right hon. Friend has discussed the case with the Commissioner.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the death of Mr. Ricky Reel. [29492]

Mr. Michael: We have received a number of representations from the family's Member of Parliament, my hon. Friend the Member for Hayes and Harlington (Mr. McDonnell).

Prison Population

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the latest Prison Service prison population projections; and what financial plans have been made to meet those projections. [28847]

Ms Quin: The latest projection of long-term trends in the prison population was published on 29 January 1998. It estimates that the prison population will increase from the current level of around 64,000 to an average of 69,600 in 1999 and 72,200 in the year 2000. If trends in court sentencing practice continue as in recent years the population is expected to reach 82,800 by 2005. Alternative scenarios in the projection give a population for 2005 of between 64,400 and 92,600.

The projection does not take account of Home Detention Curfew which is expected to result in a fall of around 3,000 prisoners by the end of 1999. Nor does it take account of the measures in the Crime and Disorder Bill or possible changes in trends in community sentences.

To accommodate the rising population, my right hon. Friend has made an adjustment to the additional resources made available to the Prison Service last July. I refer the right hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer) on 13 February 1998, Official Report, columns 402–03.

The additions to capacity together with the implementation of Home Detention Curfew should contain the projected prison population below planned capacity until 2001. The building of new prison capacity beyond 2001 is under discussion as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Prison Service Funding

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the annual expenditure on the Prison Service, in real terms, in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what is the planned annual expenditure for the next two years; and what is the marginal change in each year in real terms. [28844]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service annual net expenditure for the last five years and planned net expenditure for the next two years is:

	Real terms £ million	Percentage change (real terms)
1993–94	1,617.3	—
1994–95	1,687.3	4.3
1995–96	1,713.1	1.5
1996–97	1,608.6	–6.1
1997–98	1,709.7	6.3
1998–99	1,719.6	0.6
1999–00	—[1]	—

[1] Subject to Government comprehensive spending review

Note:

All figures are outturn, except 1997–98 which is forecast outturn and 1998–99 which is provisional.

Young Offender Units

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources per head were allocated to young offender units for the education of 16 to 21 year-olds in (a) London and (b) the Home Counties in each of the last three years. [28785]

Ms Quin: Prison Service budgets are not allocated, nor can spend be meaningfully calculated, per head for education. Every prison governor is given a budget to manage their establishment. It is for the governor to decide, within the framework of guidance from the area manager and advice from in-service educational specialists, how to allocate resources between the various regime and other operational needs.

Governors buy educational provision, through a standard call-off contract according to need and available resources, from providers contracted to their own establishments.

Total education expenditure for discrete young offender establishments in London and the home counties (defined as counties which border on London boroughs) are given in the table. The current population of each of the establishments is also listed.

HEALTH

Ambulance Services

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those health authorities which purchase ambulance services below the Orcon response standards for (a) 999 calls and (b) urgent calls. [28838]

Mr. Milburn: Information on ambulance service performance is published in the National Health Service Performance National Guide 1997–98 and Department of Health KA34. Copies are available in the Library.

Eye Tests

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce free eye tests; and to what timescale. [28823]

Mr. Milburn: Free National Health Service sight tests are currently available to children, people on low incomes and people predisposed to, or suffering from, selected eye diseases. The criteria for these sight tests are covered by the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review, which should be completed by the summer.

Dental and Eye Checks

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the extent to which (a) NHS dental checks and (b) eye tests are available for all seeking them. [28824]

Mr. Milburn: The Department has received no representations that people find it difficult to get their sight tested. We are aware that, although National Health Service dentistry is accessible for much of the population, there are areas where there are problems of access. We have introduced the Investing in Dentistry Scheme, for which we have made available £9 million this year and £10 million in 1998–99, to tackle these localised problems.

Hospital Services (South-west London)

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the long-term capacity of Kingston Hospital. [29055]

Mr. Milburn: Kingston Hospital National Health Service Trust will be working up a detailed business case for capital investment for the longer term. This will include a thorough assessment of longer term patient flows and will take account of the range of hospital services available to the population of south west London. The two Thames NHS Executive Regional Offices will be overseeing this process.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that long-term fully-financed plans are in place for Queen Mary's Hospital, Roehampton before approving further reconfiguration of hospital services in South West London. [29058]

Mr. Milburn: Consultation has now closed on the proposed changes in South West London and Kingston and Richmond Health Authority and Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth Health Authority are considering all the comments and proposals put forward during the consultation process.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the short-term capacity of (a) St. George's Hospital, Tooting and (b) Kingston Hospital, to take on extra in-patient work from Queen Mary's Hospital, Roehampton. [29054]

Mr. Milburn: Kingston and Richmond Health Authority, Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth Health Authority and local trusts have been working together to ensure that, subject to comments and proposals put forward during the consultation period, there will be sufficient capacity in neighbouring hospitals to take on work flowing from Queen Mary's Hospital, Roehampton.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that no services are transferred from Queen Mary's Hospital, Roehampton until (a) alternatives have been put in place at neighbouring hospitals and (b) the necessary transitional finance is available. [29057]

Mr. Milburn: Public consultation on the future of Queen Mary's Hospital, Roehampton was completed only recently. Health authorities are yet to reach a decision following consultation. No services will be transferred from Queen Mary's Hospital Roehampton until adequate facilities are available in neighbouring hospitals.

North Essex Health Authority

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many days the Chair and each of the non-executive members of North Essex Health Authority spent on health authority business during (a) the financial year 1996–97 and (b) the present financial year to date; [29125]

(2) who was responsible for nominating the Chair and each of the non-executive members currently serving on the Board of the North Essex Health Authority; [29124]

(3) if he will list the interests of the Chair and non-executive members of the North Essex Health Authority; [29123]

(4) if he will list the expenses incurred by the Chair and each of the non-executive members of the North Essex Health Authority during the financial year 1996–97; [29126]

(5) if he will list the amounts earned by the Chair and each of the non-executive members of North Essex Health Authority during the financial year 1996–97 for their duties on behalf of the Authority. [29122]

Mr. Milburn: The current Chairman and non-executive members were all appointed in 1996, after a recruitment exercise including local and national advertisements. The additional practice of seeking nominations for appointments to National Health Service Boards from hon. Members and local authorities was introduced in 1997. Information is not held centrally on the expenses incurred by board members, the interests they have declared or the days they have spent on board business. In 1996–97, the annual remuneration payable to the Chairman of the North Essex Health Authority was £19,285 and the non-executive board members were entitled to £5,000 each.

Consultants (Merit Payments)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will investigate the system of consultants' merit payments within the NHS to ensure that it is fair. [29165]

Mr. Milburn: We are deeply concerned about the possibility of unfairness in the distinction awards scheme and we are considering what further action might be taken.

NHS White Paper

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the budgetary structure of the primary care groups proposed in his recent White Paper on the NHS. [29063]

Mr. Milburn: The new financial arrangements will promote access to high quality care right across the country by fair distribution of resources through health authorities to inclusive Primary Care Groups. New unified budgets for Primary Care Groups will be established covering hospital and community services, general practitioner prescribing and the general practice infrastructure. This will allow clinicians to better influence the use of resources by aligning clinical and financial responsibilities.

NHS Employees (Remuneration)

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS employees are currently remunerated below (a) £4.26 per hour, (b) £4.00 per hour and (c) £3.75 per hour. [29011]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the right hon. Gentleman the Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 13 January 1998, Official Report, column 153.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to be able to calculate the costs to the NHS of any given level of a minimum wage. [29052]

Mr. Milburn: Information about the earnings of National Health Service employees is currently being collected by the Department.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement regarding the proposed statutory obligations of NHS trusts to work in partnership with other trusts. [29050]

Mr. Milburn: The New NHS White Paper sets out our plans to improve co-operation and partnership between National Health Service trusts. These include a new statutory duty on local NHS bodies to work together for the common good. Legislation will be brought forward as Parliamentary time allows.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what forecast his Department has made of the numbers of patients waiting more than 12 months for treatment by July 1999. [29010]

Mr. Milburn: None.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to change the current methodology for calculating NHS waiting lists; [29015]

(2) if he will make a statement on current methodology used in calculating health service waiting lists. [29012]

Mr. Milburn: We have no plans currently to change the methodology for calculating national health service waiting lists which shows the numbers of patients awaiting admission to hospital, on a trust and resident basis, at the end of each quarter.

General Practitioner Budgets

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of patients are currently served by general practitioner practices holding their own budgets. [29007]

Mr. Milburn: Fifty-seven per cent. of the registered population of England is currently served by a general practitioner fundholding practice.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many submissions he has received from doctors since 2 May requesting an end to general practitioner practice level budgets. [29006]

Mr. Milburn: Since 2 May 1997, we have consulted widely in the National Health Service and discussed with representatives of the professions proposals to abolish the internal market in the NHS. This culminated in the publication of the White Paper, The New NHS, containing our proposals for setting up Primary Care Groups. We have received a wide measure of support for these proposals.

Southampton Community NHS Trust

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on Southampton Community NHS Trust's arrangements for the disposal of three sites, currently occupied by the Lymington Hospital, to a preferred bidder and PFI partner. [29360]

Mr. Milburn: The value of surplus or redundant estate owned by National Health Service trusts can form part of the negotiations between the trust and its preferred private sector partner in a Private Finance Initiative deal, but any such assets must be sold or disposed of at open market value. In the case of Southampton Community NHS Trust, the valuations for the three redundant sites owned by the trust will be independently assessed by the District Valuer and the full business case setting out the final arrangements for the PFI scheme will have to be approved by the NHS Executive and Her Majesty's Treasury.

Passive Smoking

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to protect asthma sufferers from the effects of passive smoking (a) at work and (b) in public places. [29260]

Ms Jowell: The Department of Health is working closely with other Government Departments and agencies, including the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and the Health and Safety Executive, on what measures might be included in the Tobacco Control White Paper, to be published later this year, to protect the public, including asthma sufferers, from the effects of passive smoking.

The White Paper will also take into account the conclusions of the Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health (to be published shortly) on the scientific evidence on the health effects of exposure to environmental tobacco smoke.

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statutory provisions govern the responsibility of health authorities for decisions on water fluoridation. [29399]

Mr. Milburn: The final decision on implementing fluoridation schemes rests with the water undertaker. The Water (Fluoridation) Act 1985 was consolidated in the Water Industry Act (1991) and Section 87 (i) of this states that

"Where a Health Authority have applied in writing to a water undertaker for the water supplied within an area specified in the application to be fluoridated, that undertaker may, while the application remains in force, increase the fluoride content of the water supplied by the undertaker within that area."

Hepatitis C

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of needle exchanges in the community on the incidence of hepatitis C in each of the past three years; and if he will make a statement. [29845]

Ms Jowell: We have not made any such assessment. Acquisition of hepatitis C is most often asymptomatic and new infections are usually not identified.

HIV may also be transmitted among drug misusers through the sharing of blood contaminated injecting equipment. Needle exchange schemes have contributed to the decline in the prevalence of HIV in this group.

The Department is currently seeking ways of improving the surveillance of hepatitis C prevalence among injecting drug misusers.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the incidence of hepatitis C in each of the past 10 years (a) in prison and (b) nationally; and if he will make a statement. [29842]

Ms Jowell: The number of new infections nationally is not known. Hepatitis C infection rarely produces an acute symptomatic illness with jaundice and hence very few incident infections are identified.

Tests for antibodies to the virus will identify individuals who have been previously infected by the virus but do not distinguish between resolved infection and established chronic infection.

Laboratory reports of the presence of antibodies to hepatitis C in the general population received by the Public Health Laboratory Service's Communicable Diseases Surveillance Centre for England from 1991, the earliest year for which figures are available, to 1996 are shown in the table. The rise in laboratory reports is consistent with increased testing and reporting during that period:

Laboratory reports of hepatitis C infections, England 1991–1996

Year	Number
1991	26
1992	228
1993	410
1994	726
1995	1,291
1996	1,912

Prisoners in England are not routinely tested for hepatitis C. We understand from Her Majesty's Prison Service that information on the numbers of prisoners infected with hepatitis C is based on voluntary disclosure or testing. This information has been collected only since 1995. In the financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97, there were 543 and 760 reports of prisoners infected with hepatitis C respectively.

Radiotherapy Damage

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will award ex gratia payments to women suffering permanent, progressive, disabling injuries after radiotherapy treatment for breast cancer; and if he will make a statement. [29867]

Mr. Boateng: We are aware of the often severe problems experienced by women who have been injured following radiotherapy treatment for breast cancer. Unfortunately, there are risks associated with most medical interventions and radiotherapy treatment for breast cancer is not the only area where patients may suffer health and other problems as a result of treatment they have received.

Following careful consideration of the issues we have no plans to introduce a general scheme of ex gratia payments for specific groups such as those who have suffered injury as a result of radiotherapy treatment for breast cancer.

National Health Service bodies already have the authority exceptionally to make ex gratia payments in individual cases. Decisions to do so for those suffering adverse side effects from medical treatment are a matter for the individual NHS trust, after careful appraisal of the facts.

Public Works Directive

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what rules or arrangements exist to prevent collusion or the development of cartels amongst candidates expressing an interest and admitted to negotiate under Article 22 (3) of the Public Works Directive 93/37. [24686]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 26 January 1998]: The National Health Service Estates Agency, an agency of the Department of Health, has issued policy and guidance on works procurement in Concode. When contracts are negotiated value for money must be demonstrated as with any open competition. Negotiations are also subject to European Community Regulations. It is also normal practice to include an anti-collusion clause in contracts.

Random Breath Tests

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the (a) direct and (b) indirect effects of random breath testing on death and injury from drink driving. [28822]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

It would not be possible to make such estimates since the effect of random breath testing would depend on the precise nature of the testing regime and the extent of enforcement.

The potential for improving enforcement to reduce deaths and injuries from drink driving is discussed in the consultation document Combating Drink Driving: Next Steps issued by my Department on 2 February.

WALES

Forestry Commission Land

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the locations and size of Forestry Commission land sold in Wales since 1 May 1997. [29231]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its Chief Executive, Dr. Bob McIntosh, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Bob McIntosh to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Wales has asked me to reply to your Question about Forestry Commission land sold in Wales.

I enclose a list of those areas of Forest Land that have been sold since 1 May 1997. These sales were all agreed before that date.

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28059]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 10 February 1998]: Letters received in Welsh are replied to in Welsh. Letters received in other languages, including Scottish Gaelic, Urdu, Hindi and Chinese, are replied to in the language of the original wherever practicable.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what advice his Department gives to farmers on the disposal of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dip. [29734]

Mr. Win Griffiths [holding answer 16 February 1998]: Advice on the disposal of sheep dips is given on the label of every product and in the leaflet, Sheep Dipping, published jointly by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Health and Safety Executive and the former Department of the Environment. A new edition of the leaflet is in preparation and, as before, it will be sent to all known sheep farmers in Great Britain. Advice is also contained in the Code of Good Agricultural Practice for the Protection of Water published by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Welsh Office.

The National Proficiency Tests Council organises a test leading to the issue of a Certificate of Competence which includes the disposal of all types of sheep dip. A Certificate is currently required for the purchase of organophosphate (OP) dips but the government has accepted the advice of the Veterinary Products Committee that the requirement should be extended to cover the purchase of non-OP dips, including those containing synthetic pyrethroids. We are currently consulting on a change in legislation which would take effect on 1 August 1998.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what monitoring of the impact of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips on (a) the aquatic environment, (b) the soil environment and (c) fisheries (i) has been carried out and (ii) is planned by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29735]

Mr. Win Griffiths [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The Environment Agency, which is responsible for monitoring the aquatic environment in Wales, has initiated monitoring programmes to assess the impact of sheep dip compounds, including synthetic pyrethroids, on the chemical quality of the aquatic environment, including any effects on fish populations. The monitoring has been targeted on the most intensive sheep rearing areas, including Wales. A full report of the findings is being prepared by the Agency. There is no specific monitoring of soil.

Last month, the Government published draft groundwater regulations relating to England, Wales and Scotland which specify additional monitoring requirements for groundwater, including of synthetic pyrethroids.

DEFENCE

Courts Martial

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has made to allow senior non-commissioned officers to serve on courts martial. [30414]

Dr. Reid: The issue of membership of courts-martial was considered by the Select Committee on the Armed Forces Bill in 1996 although no firm proposals for change were made. I am pleased to announce that, following an extensive internal review initiated by the previous Administration, we have accepted the recommendation that membership of courts-martial be extended to Warrant Officers. This enhancement will make available to courts-martial the additional experience and judgment of Warrant Officers.

I welcome this recommendation as further evidence of the Services' willingness to embrace change while safeguarding the system of military justice which is essential to their effectiveness.

This change will require primary legislation and it is envisaged that the relevant amendments will be included in the 2001 Armed Forces Act. A decision in principle now will allow any necessary preparation and training to be set in hand by the Services.

Low Flying

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to reassess the situation in respect of low flying aircraft in Wales following the recent accident in Italy. [29592]

Mr. Spellar: Low flying continues to be an effective means of penetrating hostile air defence systems. It require rigorous training and continuous practice in a realistic environment, subject to stringent regulation to ensure that it is carried out safely while minimising disturbance to those on the ground. The whole of the United Kingdom excluding built up areas is, in principle, open to low flying and Wales will continue to see a proportion of this activity.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the Government's targets for reducing low flying by aircraft over Wales in the current year; and if his Department achieved its target for 1997. [29594]

Mr. Spellar: The amount of low flying training undertaken throughout the United Kingdom is limited to that strictly necessary for aircrews to achieve and maintain operational effectiveness. It is kept under continuous review and specific in-year targets are not set. Since 1988, low flying in Wales has reduced by about a half.

MOD Police

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those facilities in the (a) public and (b) private sector that have a current full-time requirement for MoD Police; and if he will list the current annual cost at each facility. [29179]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 12 February 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence Police. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Michael Smallwood to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 17 February 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the Ministry of Defence Police, on behalf of the Chief Constable/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence (MDP) Agency, as this falls into his area of responsibility. The Chief Constable/Chief Executive is away from the office at present.

The MDP are based at 109 locations, where there is a requirement for their services, costing a total of £149,256 million per annum. I am withholding the list of locations in accordance with exemption 1, 'information whose disclosure would harm national security or defence', of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. I am also withholding details of the annual cost of the MDP at each location under both exemptions 1 and 13, 'information including commercial confidences, trade secrets whose unwarranted disclosure would harm the competitive position of a third party', of the Code of Practice.

The budget and costs of the MDP are however included within the Annual Report of the Chief Constable. I attach a copy of the relevant pages from the 1996–97 report. A complete copy of the Annual Report is held in the Library of the House of Commons.

Land Rovers

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1997, Official Report, column 280, on Land Rovers, if he will list the planned changes in EU Regulations concerning exhaust emissions with which it would be difficult for the 110 series Army Landrover to comply; and what representations the Government have made to the EU about such exhaust emission regulations. [27195]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 February 1998]: EU Directives to reduce vehicle emissions apply at the date of vehicle manufacture and are not retrospective. All Land Rover Defender 110 Series vehicles in service with the MOD complied with the emission regulations in force at their date of manufacture, and the Trucks Utility Medium (High Specification) vehicles now being delivered comply fully with current EU regulations. Future EU Directives will require the motor industry to comply with more stringent emission limits. As such, EU Directive 96/69/EC will set tighter limits for mass carbon monoxide, combined hydrocarbons and oxides of nitrogen, and particulates for this class of vehicle manufactured after 1 October 1998. Beyond that date, future legislation has not been fully defined. It is not MOD policy to seek exemption from EU Directives on emissions levels relating to these vehicles.

The Government are committed to reducing pollution by cutting emission levels. We are, therefore, exploring ways in which the emissions of all the in-service Land Rover vehicles, including the 110 Series vehicles, could be reduced.

Defence Expenditure

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the defence expenditure of NATO countries in 1996 (a) as a percentage of gross domestic product (market price), (b) as total national defence spending, (US $m) and (c) per capita defence expenditure, (US $). [29449]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The information requested for calendar year 1996 is as follows:

Defence expenditure as a percentage of GDP

	Percentage
Greece	4.5
Turkey	4.1
United States	3.7
France	3.0
United Kingdom	3.0
Portugal	2.5
Norway	2.4
Netherlands	2.0
Italy	1.9
Denmark	1.8
Germany	1.7
Belgium	1.6
Spain	1.5
Canada	1.5
Luxembourg	0.8

Defence expenditure in US$ million

United States	271,802
France	46,402
Germany	38,990
United Kingdom	34,526
Italy	23,458
Spain	8,616
Canada	8,616
Netherlands	7,850
Turkey	7,424
Greece	5,582
Belgium	4,240
Norway	3,672
Denmark	3,086
Portugal	2,601
Luxembourg	141

Defence expenditure per capita (US$)

	US$
United States	1,023
Norway	838
France	794
Denmark	589
United Kingdom	587
Greece	531
Netherlands	504

Belgium	417
Italy	409
Luxembourg	338
Canada	287
Portugal	262
Spain	219
Turkey	118

The figures are our latest estimates and are based on information drawn from NATO sources. They update the provisional figures published in October 1997 in the MOD Performance Report 1996/97 (CM 3781).

The figures have been calculated using 1996 average market exchange rates, which do not necessarily reflect the relative purchasing power of individual currencies. They are therefore only a guide to comparative defence effort.

For the UK, the defence budget in the financial year 1996–97 amounted to 3.0 per cent. of GDP; and in 1997–98 and 1998–99 is estimated to amount to 2.7 per cent. of GDP in both years.

Nuclear Deterrence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had regarding the maintenance of the United Kingdom's nuclear deterrence capacity beyond the lifetime of the Trident programme; and if he will make a statement. [29463]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 23 June 1997, Official Report, column 357, to my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn).

Service Personnel (Cyprus)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel stationed in Cyprus have been charged with disorderly conduct while off duty in (a) a civilian court or (b) a court martial, in each of the last three years. [18585]

Dr. Reid: Figures broken down as requested are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Total figures for the number of offences of disorderly conduct committed by the members of the Resident Infantry Battalions and other permanent units in Cyprus in the last 3 years is set out in the table:

Offence	1995	1996	1997
Assault (or similar offences)	20	16	[1]17
Drunkenness	6	5	5
Criminal Damage	2	1	8
Total	[2]28	22	30

[1] Includes 10 cases still under investigation or yet to be heard in court.

[2] Includes 18 RGJ "Reported Incidents" which may not have led to charges.

Royal Haslar Hospital

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the timing of the privatisation of the Royal Haslar Hospital Laundry and Sterile Services. [28142]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 10 February 1998]: I have commissioned the Chief Executive of the Defence Secondary Care Agency to carry out a strategic review of the Agency and to report to me in the Spring 1998. The future of the laundry and sterile services at the Royal Hospital, Haslar, will be considered in the context of the outcome of this work.

Britannia

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will refit the former Royal Yacht 'Britannia' as a hospital ship for possible use in the Middle East. [29607]

Dr. Reid: No. Britannia was paid off on 11 December 1997.

Bahrain

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United Kingdom military personnel have (a) visited in an official capacity, (b) been stationed in and (c) been seconded to Bahrain in each of the last five years. [29466]

Dr. Reid: Figures for the number of United Kingdom military personnel who have been stationed in Bahrain or visited in an official capacity over the last five years are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. No United Kingdom military personnel have been seconded to Bahrain in the last five years.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Bahrain service people have (a) visited and (b) attended training courses in Britain in each of the last five years. [29468]

Dr. Reid: Figures for the number of Bahraini Service personnel who have visited the United Kingdom are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

It has been the practice of successive Administrations not to release details of military assistance provided to other countries on the grounds that this information has been considered confidential between Governments, and that disclosure would risk damaging our international relations. However, this practice is being reviewed against the background of the Government's commitment to openness. I will write to my hon. Friend once the review is complete and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent meetings have been held at Ministerial level with ministers in the Bahrain Government; and what was discussed. [29609]

Dr. Reid: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary held separate meetings with the Bahraini Crown Prince and the Minister of Foreign Affairs on 28 January. The main focus of these meetings was the current crisis in the Gulf. My noble Friend the Minister for Defence Procurement visited Bahrain on the 13–14 February and held discussions on Iraq with the Amir, Prime Minister and other ministers.

Trident

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he plans to complete the loading of the first core into the reactor of the fourth Trident submarine; and if he will make a statement; [29461]

(2) what is the cost of the first fuel core for the reactor of the fourth Trident submarine; and if he will make a statement. [29462]

Mr. George Robertson: The loading of Vengeance's fuel core is scheduled to be completed during May 1998. I am withholding details of core costs under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to Government Information relating to defence, security and international relations.

Foreign Policy Baseline

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what documents or speeches constitute the Foreign Policy Baseline against which the Strategic Defence Review can be assessed. [29750]

Mr. George Robertson: I outlined the emerging conclusions of the first phase of the Strategic Defence Review, which looked at the foreign and security policy framework, in my speeches to the House on 27 October 1997, Official Report, columns 609–20, and to the Royal United Services Institute on 18 September 1997. The results of this work will form an important part of the Review White Paper.

Enriched Uranium

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on the enrichment of uranium for the nuclear-powered submarine programme in (a) the United States of America and (b) the United Kingdom in each year since 1982; and if he will make a statement. [29460]

Dr. Reid: I am withholding this information under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to defence, security, and international relations.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to introduce additional sectoral or regional exemptions to the national minimum wage. [28618]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 February 1998]: I have no plans to introduce any sectoral or regional exemptions.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Ministry of Defence first informed her Department that it wished to exempt the armed forces from the national minimum wage. [28584]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 February 1998]: It has never been the policy of this or any other Government to disclose details of internal discussions between Ministers.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on progress in her Cabinet Group to ensure that computer systems are millennium compliant. [27873]

Mrs. Beckett: The Government attach major importance to tackling his problem effectively. However, in accordance with long-standing practice, information about proceedings of the Cabinet and Cabinet Committees is not made public.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what requests she has received from Action 2000 for more staff and an increase in budget; and if she will make a statement. [27875]

Mrs. Roche: I look forward to receiving from Don Cruickshank his proposals for a fully costed programme of collective activities over the next two years which will support businesses in the private sector in their efforts to tackle the problem.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to ensure that disinterested advice is available to the consumer of personal computing products about the changes that need to be made to their computer systems in order for them to be millennium compliant. [25650]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 27 January 1998]: The consumer can get impartial advice from Action 2000, which operates a help line, 0845 601 2000, and a website, www.open.gov.uk/bug2000.htm.

The Chairman of Action 2000 is continuing to work with the Director of the Consumer Association to develop a collaborative approach to helping consumers understand and prepare for the Millennium Bug challenge.

Action 2000 has also appointed Karl Feilder to give it expert advice on the problems with personal computers.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if Action 2000 is being set up as an independent company. [29508]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 13 February 1998]: Yes.

Oil and Gas Industry

Mr. Beggs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how she proposes to protect existing jobs and promote increased long-term investment in the United Kingdom oil and gas industry. [29798]

Mr. Battle: The Government are keen to ensure that the optimum level of exploration and development of the United Kingdom continental shelf is carried out. To that end, the UK's hydrocarbons licensing regime seeks to encourage continuing investment in oil and gas exploration and production in this country and its continental shelf.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the exemptions tabled by the United Kingdom as part of the draft texts of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment and place in the Library copies of the exemptions tabled by other OECD countries. [29926]

Mrs. Roche: The UK's draft list of exceptions has already been placed in the Library. It includes exceptions for broadcasting, fishing, marine and air transport, and financial services. The draft lists from other countries have been tabled in confidence; it would not be appropriate for the UK to make them public.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what safeguards for local authorities and Government departments and agencies she has (a) sought and (b) achieved to date in relation to potential claims of discrimination arising under the Multilateral Agreement on Investment currently being negotiated. [28328]

Mrs. Roche: The UK, like other participants in the MAI negotiations, has submitted a list of exceptions where we are not willing to have the obligations of the Agreement apply. The list contains no exceptions specifically related to local authorities, since discrimination against investors on grounds of nationality is not a factor in their decisions. Any claims under the MAI would be made against the national government.

Coal (Emission Standards)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate she has made of the increased costs of coal-fired power generation as a result of the accelerated imposition of emission standards recently announced. [25482]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 26 January 1998]: The Environment Agency has issued a Consultation Document setting out proposals for new sulphur dioxide targets. My Department is currently considering these.

Arms Sales

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the arms deliveries, and their dates, to Iraq between January 1988 and the imposition of the arms embargo upon Iraq. [27060]

Mrs. Roche: The Department of Trade and Industry does not maintain records of arms deliveries to any destination. A list of Export Licence Applications for Iraq from the period 1984–90 formed Part A of Appendix A to Sir Richard Scott's Report of the Inquiry into the Export of Defence Equipment and Dual-Use Goods to Iraq and Related Prosecutions.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Ennis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to extend the use of gross domestic product per capita as a key qualifying criteria for objective 2 of the EU structural funds. [26789]

Mrs. Roche: The Government, in discussions with the Commission and other Member States, have pushed strongly the idea that GDP per capita, measured at either a national or a local level, should be a factor in determining eligibility for the proposed new Objective 2 of the Structural Funds.

Mr. Watts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will seek to reform the EU structural funds to provide that no member state shall receive more per head of eligible population in the 2000–06 period than in the 1994–99 period. [26757]

Mrs. Roche: The Government believe that all existing Member States should expect cuts in their Structural and Cohesion Fund allocations (when comparing 2006 with 1999) if costs are to be contained in preparation for EU enlargement.

We have suggested that the average per capita Structural Funds allocations of regions retaining eligibility for the same Objective should not increase, particularly if other regions lose eligibility.

Mr. Watts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to ensure that the United Kingdom share of the European structural funds in the 2000 to 2006 period reflects its current position in terms of per capita GDP. [26756]

Mrs. Roche: The Government, in discussions with the Commission and other Member States, have pushed strongly the idea that GDP per capita, measured at either a national or a local level, should be a factor in determining allocations and eligibility under the proposed new Structural Funds.

Market Research

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what expenditure has been incurred by her Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies (a) in 1996–97 and (b) since 1 May 1997 on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; if she will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each; and if she will make a statement. [26592]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The surveys commissioned by the Department of Trade and Industry and the agencies for which DTI is responsible are mainly small surveys for the purpose of programme evaluation or to assess customer satisfaction. There are very few surveys which entirely involve opinion polling or market research as such.

In 1996, those surveys which involved an element of opinion gathering cost a total of £0.8 million (Table 1). In the period from 1 May 1997, this expenditure has increased to £1.9 million (Table 2) due to the commissioning of a Workplace Industrial Relations Survey to assess state of industry at an estimated cost of £1.2 million.

No records are held centrally of surveys commissioned by the Department if out of the scope of Survey Control.

British Geological Survey

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people are employed by the British Geological Survey in Scotland, broken down by job category; what facilities for map making the British Geological Survey maintains in Scotland; and if she will provide a breakdown of British Geological Survey spending in Scotland as a ratio of overall spending in each year since 1990. [28552]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The British Geological Survey currently employs 201 people in Scotland as shown in the table.

Job Categories	Scientists	Scientific Support	Administration	Total
Petroleum Geology, Geophysics and Offshore Surveys	89	—	1	90
Geological and Hydrogeological Survey	47	—	—	47
Minerals, Environment and Geochemical Surveys	5	—	—	5
Corporate Services and Business Development	12	21	5	38
Local Administration, Facilities Management, Computer Support	—	—	21	21
Total	153	21	27	201

Map-making facilities exist locally at BGS in Edinburgh. Of the 19 people involved in these cartographic services, 14 are responsible for producing Scottish geological maps.

BGS spending in Scotland as a percentage of overall BGS spending in each year since 1990 is set out below:

Year	Percentage
1990–91	18
1991–92	17
1992–93	18
1993–94	19

Civil Servants

Mr. Duncan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list by grade the number of officials in her Department at grade 3 or above who have (a) taken early retirement, (b) taken official leave, (c) been dismissed, (d) changed jobs within the Department, (e) moved to another Department and (f) been offered and rejected an alternative position (i) within the Department and (ii) in another Department since 1 May. [27453]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Since 1 May, the Regional Director for the North East has taken early retirement. Most Senior Civil Servants have taken leave during that period, but we do not keep central records. None has been dismissed. There have been ten staff moves within the department involving posts at or above a level equivalent to what was formerly Grade 3. These have all been routine moves for career development or operational reasons (for example because a post has been abolished or a new one created). There have also been two loans and one permanent transfer at that level to other Government Departments; one case was because of Machinery of Government changes; the others involved progression to more senior levels in the Senior Civil Service. Moves at this level are the subject of discussion with individuals and their line managers during which it is normal for a number of options to be considered.

Japan and Taiwan (Spirits Taxes)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has made to the Government of Japan concerning the tax regime for whisky in that country and on the need for adequate regulations on the definition and labelling of whisky. [27902]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The long-standing dispute with Japan over discriminatory taxation of imported spirits, including Scotch Whisky, was resolved during December 1997. An agreement has been negotiated with Japan, building on the interim settlement reached in January 1997. Letters were exchanged between the European Commission and the Japanese Government on 24 December 1997. The new agreement now guarantees a level playing field on taxation for our spirits exports to Japan. In addition to accelerated equalisation of tax rates, exports of whisky and brandy will also benefit from the total elimination of import tariffs by 2002. These significant new tariff concessions will also apply for the very first time to gin, vodka, rum and liqueurs. DTI officials were closely involved in negotiations with the Japanese Government and the final agreement was concluded with the full support and endorsement of the Scotch Whisky Association and the Gin and Vodka Association.

Whisky exports to Japan were worth £129 million in 1996, and have already seen a 33 per cent. rise since 1 October 1997, when the first tranche of tax cuts were introduced. This new agreement presents even greater opportunities for the growth of British spirits exports, which this Government will continue to help the industry to pursue as appropriate. This case also shows the effectiveness of the WTO in dealing with trade disputes and sends an important signal to other countries which continue to tax foreign spirits at a higher rate than those produced domestically.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had with her European counterparts regarding action to ensure Japan and Taiwan introduce non-discriminatory taxation for (i) EU spirits and (ii) Scotch whisky. [27903]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 9 February 1998]: In the case of Japan, I refer the hon. Member to my earlier answer.

In the case of Taiwan, officials in this Department continue to work closely with their colleagues in the European Commission and in fellow EU Member States to press Taiwan to put an end to its discriminatory taxation of imported spirits. The current discrimination particularly affects the UK's Scotch whisky and the Irish whiskey industries, but France has concerns over brandy, as do other Member States on white spirits. As a result of such consensus between the UK and other Member States, the European Commission has maintained a strong line with Taiwan during its bilateral market access negotiations over Taiwan's accession to the World Trade Organisation (WTO).

In November last year, the Head of the British Trade & Cultural Office in Taipei and his French counterpart wrote a joint letter to Taiwanese President Vincent Siew urging immediate equalisation of taxation on all spirits. Disappointingly, this request was rejected. Nevertheless, the UK, other Member States and the Commission are continuing to keep up the pressure.

UK officials both in London and Taipei have conveyed their disappointment to Taiwan over this response and their expectation of a speedy end to the tax discrimination, as has Sir Leon Brittan, Vice-President, European Commission, in a recent letter to the Taiwanese Minister of Finance, Paul Chiu.

The discriminatory taxation on imported spirits, along with other concerns—notably on the lack of Taiwanese legislation on spirits definitions—is one of the key issues holding back an EU-Taiwan market access agreement in relation to Taiwan's accession to the WTO. Officials in this Department will, therefore, remain in close contact with the European Commission to ensure that it continues to reflect the UK's and other Member States' concerns on spirits in negotiations with Taiwan on WTO accession, the next round of which takes place in Taipei from 23–25 February.

Bad Debts (Asia)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what provision ECGD has made for bad debts on its Asian risks. [28587]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Records readily available indicate that the provisions on outstanding Claims Balances of £36.1m on Asian Markets as at 5 February 1998 were £28.3m.

EU Funding

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on European Commission proposals to reduce the maximum coverage of structural funds eligibility to 40 per cent. of European Union population. [27310]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 3 February 1998]: In the Commission's communication "Agenda 2000" published on 16 July 1997, it was suggested that the proportion of EU population covered by the geographically targeted Objectives of the Structural Funds should be reduced from 51 per cent. to between 35 per cent. and 40 per cent. The Government are still considering this proposal. While geographic concentration of some kind may be one way of containing the overall cost of the Funds and thus assist EU enlargement, the Government have suggested that this should not increase the average per capita Structural Funds allocations of regions retaining eligibility for the same Objective, particularly if other regions lose eligibility.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list visits abroad by her Department's Ministers since 18 November 1997. [29526]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 13 February 1998]: Since 18 November 1997, my Ministerial colleagues at the DTI and I have undertaken the following visits abroad.

President of the Board of Trade

17–22 November—India and Australia

10–21 January—China, Hong Kong and Pakistan

3–4 February—Paris

Minister for Trade

15–24 November—Quatar, UAE and Yemen

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made in developing a waste management and disposal strategy for the sodium in the heat exchange systems at the fast reactors at Dounreay; which consultants have been used; and what estimates have been made of the likely final costs. [29281]

Mr. Battle: The UKAEA has developed a strategy for the safe management and disposal of the sodium contained within the Prototype Fast Reactor and the Sodium/Potassium in the Dounreay Fast Reactor. These strategies, and the resultant programmes of work, are agreed with the DTI and the independent Regulators (the Nuclear Installation Inspectorate and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency) and are currently being implemented. The UKAEA have used a large number of external advisers in the formulation and implementation of their strategies and plans for the two reactors. The choice, selection and record of which advisers have been used is an operational matter for the UKAEA. As it is Government policy to ensure good value for money by tendering for the work, the cost estimates for this work and the contract value which will be subject to tender are commercially confidential.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade concerning how many underground shafts in which radioactive materials have been disposed of the Government has been provided with information by the management of the nuclear power development establishment at Dounreay; and when the information was provided. [29297]

Mr. Battle: There is only one nuclear waste shaft at Dounreay, known as the Intermediate Level Waste Shaft. In answer to my hon. Friend's question of 16 December 1997, Official Report, columns 119–20, I have already informed the House that I am considering the UKAEA's recommendations for environmental remediation of the shaft. The waste management issues arising from the use of the shaft as a disposal facility are already in the public domain as part of the process of strict independent regulation. These plans also include the packaging of material in the Wet Silo storage facility ready for its ultimate disposal. The Wet Silo is a fully engineered facility licensed for the storage of radioactive material.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans exist for the decontamination and restoration of the second nuclear waste shaft at Dounreay; and what estimate the Atomic Energy Authority has made of the costs. [29283]

Mr. Battle: There is only one nuclear waste shaft at Dounreay, known as the Intermediate Level Waste Shaft. I have already informed the House that I am considering the UKAEA's recommendations for environmental remediation of the shaft in my answer to my hon. Friend's related question of 16 December 1997, Official Report, columns 119–20.

Packaging Waste Regulations

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made with the review of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations; when she intends to table amendments; and if she will make a statement on the factors she will take into account when doing so. [28661]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Normanton (Mr. O'Brien) by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment on 17 December 1997, Official Report, columns 193–94.

The Advisory Committee has made a good start on its work and held hearings with representatives of small retailers, wholesalers and the waste industry. Representations on the matters to be covered by the review may be made either to the Advisory Committee or to my Department.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Children (Northern Ireland) Order

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are taken to provide professional training and guidance to (i) social workers, (ii) youth workers, (iii) teachers and (iv) others in the requirements of the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. [29028]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 16 February 1998]: In 1995, a multi-disciplinary Children (Northern Ireland) Order training strategy was implemented ranging from basic awareness training for a wide range of staff to advanced level training for staff in specialist roles. The strategy was delivered by Health and Social Services Boards and voluntary organisations in partnership, working closely with education and the courts. The Boards and the voluntary organisations are being funded to continue to deliver training to meet staff needs as services under the Children Order develop.

In 1996, the Department of Health and Social Services issued guidance on the Children Order to Health and Social Services Boards and Trusts.

The Department of Education, Northern Ireland has issued guidance on the implications of the Order for schools and on child protection. Further guidance is planned on parental responsibility and court reporting for the 1998–99 school year.

Additional resources have been made available to provide general awareness training for all education and library boards' staff and more specialists training for officers regularly in contact with children such as Education Welfare Officers, Educational Psychologists and Youth Workers. Each education and library board is engaged in implementing a programme of training for key personnel in schools on child protection and other related Children Order matters and has developed Child Protection Procedures.

In April 1995, the Youth Council for Northern Ireland published a guide to the Children Order for youth workers. The Council has also issued draft Child Protection Procedures for consultation. The Certificate for Part-time Youth Workers/RSA involves consideration of the Children Order.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what resources were made available to each health and social services trust, and each education and library board, for the implementation of the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995, in each year since the Order was enacted. [29029]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 16 February 1998]: Health and Social Services Trusts are not directly funded by the Department of Health and Social Services. However, the allocations of additional resources to the Health and Social Services Boards for the implementation of the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995 in each of the financial years from 1995–96 were as follows:

Year	Eastern Board	Northern Board	Southern Board	Western Board
1995–96	455,000	263,000	199,000	183,000
1996–97	1,058,000	611,000	462,000	424,000
1997–98	2,337,000	1,349,000	1,021,000	936,000

The additional resources to the Education and Library Boards specifically for implementation were as follows:

Year	Belfast ELB	North Eastern ELB	South Eastern ELB	Southern ELB	Western ELB
1996–97	118,000	118,000	118,000	118,000	118,000
1997–98	409,000	401,000	372,000	417,000	419,000

Social Fund

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what assessment she made of the advantages of centralising Social Fund activity in the Southern Region in the Newry Social Security office, (a) exclusively and (b) in conjunction with one or more other offices; [29030]

(2) what are the projected costs for the administration of the Social Fund in the Southern Region, under the plans to centralise on two sites; [29031]

(3) what were the administration costs of the Social Fund in each Social Security Agency office in the Southern Region in the last available year; [29032]

(4) which social security offices in the Southern Region were subjected to a PAFT analysis, as part of the current assessment of delivery of Social Fund services in the region; [29033]

(5) how many applications to the Social Fund were dealt with by each office of the Social Security Agency in the Southern Region in each financial year since the Fund was established; [29035]

(6) how many people are employed by the Social Security Agency on the Social Fund, in each office in the Southern Region. [29036]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 16 February 1998]: Responsibility for the subjects has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under it's Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Thompson, and I have asked him to arrange for a response to be given.

Letter from Chris Thompson to Mr. Seamus Mallon, dated 13 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the administration of the Social Fund in the Social Security Agency's South District.

Ref: 29030

The main advantages of centralising Social Fund include reducing managerial overheads while maximising staffing, training and support, leading to improved efficiency, accuracy and quality of service. This would have applied equally to Newry exclusively and/or in conjunction with one or more other office. Newry Social Security Office was considered as one of the potential central processing sites prior to its destruction in July 1997. The temporary site at Canal Street has insufficient space to accommodate a Social Fund processing unit.

Ref: 29031

The main costs associated with the administration of Social Fund relate to salaries which are projected to be £763,704 a year when Social Fund is centralised on the two sites.

Ref: 29032

Information on the administration costs (salaries) for each office within the District is set out on the attached table.

Ref: 29033

While PAFT considerations were given to all seven Social Security Offices in South District, a full PAFT analysis was carried out in the Armagh and Portadown offices only, as these were the only offices with sufficient accommodation to house centralised units.

Ref: 29035

Statistical returns are destroyed 18 months after the period to which they relate which means that the information you have requested is only available for the 1996/97 and 1997/98 financial years. This is also set out on the attached table.

Ref: 29036

The number of people employed in each office in South District for Social Fund is listed on the attached table.

I hope this information is helpful.

Social Security office	Projected full year salary costs 1997–98 (£)	Number of social fund applications 1996–97	1997–98	Number of social fund staff

SCOTLAND

Farm Incomes

12. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current average income of cereal farmers in Scotland and on the change which this represents from the previous year. [28079]

14. Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current average income of pig farmers and the change which this represents from the previous year. [28081]

Mr. Macdonald: The Scottish Office does not collect any information on the income levels of pig farmers. In the cereal sector, we do not hold figures on the average income of farmers. However, net farm income, which is a measure of the farm business, had declined sharply over this year from last.

25. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the effect on farm incomes in Scotland of parity between the green pound and sterling. [28093]

Mr. Macdonald: It is not possible to isolate the impact of currency fluctuations from other factors that determine farm incomes. However, the freeze in the conversion rates used to calculate the sterling value of most subsidy payments has protected farming from the full effect of sterling appreciation. This is estimated to benefit Scottish farmers by around £60 million over 1997 and 1998.

Agricultural Imports

13. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many inspections of imports of agricultural produce there have been in Scotland in the last year; and how many consignments were refused entry to Scotland. [28080]

Mr. Macdonald: The question covers a wide range of agricultural products and much of the information requested is not held centrally. As regards controls over Specified Risk Materials and imported meat, inspection procedures are now in operation. It has not been necessary to refuse entry to any consignments in Scotland.

Integrated Transport Policy

15. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in the development of an integrated transport policy in Scotland. [28082]

Mr. McLeish: My right hon. Friend will publish a White Paper later this year. This paper will set out measures to achieve the Government's aims for an integrated transport system that is appropriate to the needs of the people, economy and environment of Scotland.

Health Inequalities

16. Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the green paper on tackling the inequalities in health in Scotland. [28083]

Mr. Galbraith: The Green Paper "Working Together For a Healthier Scotland" was published on 5 February 1998. It sets out our proposals for improving health in Scotland and for tackling inequalities. Comments on the Paper have been invited by 30 April 1998. None have yet been received.

Lockerbie

17. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he has taken to follow up the visit to Scotland by the United Nations team to study the Scottish legal system in respect of the Lockerbie bombing. [28084]

Mr. McLeish: The report of the United Nations legal experts was circulated as an official document of the Security Council. The report concluded that the two Libyan accused would receive a fair trial under the Scottish judicial system. The text of the conclusions of the report was transmitted by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to Diplomatic Missions around the world in order that they might bring these conclusions to the attention of their host governments.

Further and Higher Education

18. Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives from Scotland's (a) universities and (b) further education colleges to discuss funding arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [28085]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend and I meet the Principals of Scottish universities, Colleges and further education colleges regularly. Our discussions are always constructive and invariably touch on funding.

Students (Tuition Fees)

19. Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the administrative arrangements for the introduction of tuition fees for students. [28086]

Mr. Wilson: The Students Award Agency for Scotland will be responsible for assessing applications from Scottish domiciled students for the payment of tuition fees. It will also continue to deal with applications from existing students.

Dairy Farmers

20. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current average incomes of dairy farmers and the change which this represents from the previous year. [28088]

Mr. Macdonald: Forecasts based on the Annual Survey of Farm Accounts in Scotland indicate that the Net Farm Income of dairy farms is expected to fall from an average of £30,000 per farm in 1996–97 to £14,400 per farm in 1997–98.

National Health Service Trusts

21. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made towards achieving greater co-operation between NHS trusts. [28089]

Mr. Galbraith: Substantial progress is being made. The White Paper, "Designed To Care" set out our plans to abolish the internal market, replacing competition with an efficient system of co-operation and collaboration within the Health Service in Scotland.

Abortion

22. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received on changing the abortion law in Scotland. [28090]

Mr. Galbraith: Since the Government took office in May 1997, we have received six letters seeking changes in the law on abortion.

Road Traffic

23. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of road traffic growth in Scotland in 1998. [28091]

Mr. McLeish: Forecasts of road traffic growth for Scotland are not produced separately from the National Road Traffic Forecasts for Great Britain published by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. The latest forecasts, published in October 1997, take no account of our developing transport policies. On the central estimate, the forecast shows an increase in road traffic of 38 per cent. between 1996 and 2016 and 60 per cent. from 1996 to 2031.

Live Animal Transport

24. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet representatives from the NFU in the Western Isles to discuss the transportation of livestock to the mainland. [28092]

Mr. Macdonald: The Minister responsible for agriculture at the Scottish Office my noble Friend Lord Sewel, would be pleased to meet representatives of the Scottish NFU at a mutually convenient date should they consider this necessary to discuss transport of livestock.

Crown Office

26. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the budget of the Crown Office in the last year. [28094]

Mr. Dewar: The budget for the Crown Office and Lord Advocate's Department is provided by Parliament under separate vote arrangements: Class VIII, Vote 7, 1997–98. The current authorised cash limit for that year is £45,337,000. Details were published in the Supply Estimates, a copy of which is in the House Library.

Local Government Services

27. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future administration of local government services. [28095]

Mr. Macdonald: Local authorities are best placed to decide how to administer their services. Best Value gives councils a chance to create a climate of continuous improvement in service quality and costs. It will require a radical rethink of the way council activities are organised and delivered.

Social Exclusion

28. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he plans to take to ensure that there is a strategic approach within the Scottish Office to tackling social exclusion. [28096]

Mr. Macdonald: On 8 December, my right hon. Friend announced that he was setting up a Social Exclusion Network to co-ordinate Government action on social exclusion in Scotland. The Network consists of senior officials from Scottish Office Departments, the Employment Service and the Benefits Agency. Its work will be steered by my noble Friend the Minister with responsibility for agriculture, the environment and fisheries, who will report regularly and directly to my right hon. Friend on progress.

On 2 February we issued a consultation paper, "Social Exclusion in Scotland", the responses to which will inform our approach to tackling exclusion.

Tourism Grants

29. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the impact of section 4 tourism grants in Scotland. [28097]

Mr. Wilson: The section 4 scheme was suspended in Scotland in 1993. From that date, support for business development in the tourism sector has been provided by Scottish Enterprise, Highlands and Islands Enterprise and their networks of Local Enterprise Companies. While the section 4 scheme was successful in raising standards throughout the tourism industry, I believe that the present arrangements for assistance to the industry are simpler and more relevant to its present day needs. These give the industry access to the agencies responsible for delivering a wider range of support including business advice and training as well as direct assistance for capital projects.

Cromarty Firth Port

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to protect the residents of Invergordon from environmental pollution by operators at the Cromarty Firth Port; and if he will make a statement. [29225]

Mr. Macdonald: Primary responsibility for pollution issues within the confines of the port lies with the Cromarty Firth Port Authority. Highland Council have the power and responsibility to address problems in so far as there may be any effect on health or damage to property. The Scottish Environment Protection Agency have nevertheless had discussion with the Council in an effort to help them identify ways of resolving the situation.

Scottish Parliament Building

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment has been made of the likely cost of (a) clearing the site and (b) clearing asbestos from the site at Holyrood before construction can commence on the new Parliament building. [29499]

Mr. Dewar: Clearing the site at Holyrood is estimated to cost in the region of £500,000. The only known asbestos which presents a hazard is to be removed by Scottish and Newcastle plc before vacating the site. Any unforeseen asbestos hazard which is subsequently encountered will be dealt with through a general contingency provision in the missives under which the company will bear a substantial share of the cost of removal.

Forestry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets he has set for lowland forestry; and to what extent these targets are being met. [29253]

Mr. Dewar: We are committed to increasing the area of woodland in Britain, both in the lowlands and in the uplands, but we have not set any specific targets.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what monitoring of the impact of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips on (a) the aquatic environment, (b) the soil environment and (c) fisheries (i) has been carried out and (ii) is planned by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29733]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The Scottish Environment Protection Agency, which is responsible for monitoring the aquatic environment in Scotland, carry out targeted monitoring to assess the impact of sheep-dip compounds, including synthetic pyrethroids on the chemical quality of the aquatic environment. No monitoring is carried out in respect of the soil environment. The effect on fisheries is covered by the monitoring of the aquatic environment.

The draft Groundwater regulations, published for consultation in liaison with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions on 12 January 1998 specify additional monitoring requirements for groundwater.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice his Department gives to farmers on the disposal of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips. [29731]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 16 February 1998]: Advice on the handling of sheep dips, including their safe disposal, must be given on the label of every product. Comprehensive advice is also provided in the Government leaflet, "Sheep dipping". A new edition of the leaflet is in preparation and will be sent to all known sheep farmers. Advice is also contained in the Department's Code of Good Practice for the Prevention of Environmental Pollution from Agricultural Activity.

In addition, a Certificate of Competence is required by all purchasers of OP dips. This is organised by the National Proficiency Tests Council and includes confirmation of competence in disposal. While currently required only for the purchase of OP dips, the Government have accepted the advice of the Veterinary Products Committee that certification should be extended to cover the purchase of non-OP dips including those containing synthetic pyrethroids. We are currently consulting on the change in legislation necessary to achieve this.

Student Awards Agency

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to (a) increase the number of staff employed by, and (b) improve staff training in the Student Awards Agency for Scotland. [29715]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The Review of the Student Awards Agency for Scotland which I have ordered will consider the lessons to be learned from the unacceptable delays experienced by many students in the processing of their awards in 1997 including the possible need for more staff. Training of staff is an important component in improving the Agency's efficiency and this will be taken account of in the Review.

Beef on the Bone

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) of 11 February 1998, Official Report, column 271, if he will list by district the number of butchers who have been (a) cautioned and (b) prosecuted for selling beef on the bone; how many cases have been referred to procurators fiscal in each district; what advice he has issued to procurators fiscal concerning the public interest in pursuing prosecution for selling beef on the bone; and if he will make a statement. [30051]

Mr. McLeish: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate is responsible for the prosecution of crime in Scotland. Although the Beef Bones Regulations 1997 have been brought to the attention of Procurators Fiscal,

I understand from the Lord Advocate that no specific guidance has been issued. Although no central record is kept of prosecutions under these regulations, I am aware that criminal proceedings have been initiated in one such case, which is due to call at Selkirk Sheriff Court on 10 March 1998.

Procurators Fiscal exercise discretion as to whether proceedings should be taken in the public interest, making use of the range of prosecution options and alternatives to prosecution, including the issue of written or personal warnings.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27753]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Since 1 May 1997, my Department has lost a pager valued at £179, an answering machine valued at £30 and foreign currency worth approximately £347.

Millennium Commission

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when Commissioner Patricia Scotland first met representatives of (a) the Asha Project, (b) the Swamanarayan Hindu Mission Project and (c) the Belgrave Bhaeno Project; [29800]

(2) if he will list the Millennium Commission projects which Commissioner Patricia Scotland has visited which were led by the Asian communities and the date of each visit. [29799]

Mr. Chris Smith: These are matters for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to my hon. Friend in my capacity as Chairman of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will ask the Millennium Commission to increase the resources allocated to the 21st Century Halls for England Project. [30036]

Mr. Chris Smith: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chairman of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii)1997–98 to date. [27752]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]:

The available information is given in the table:

£000

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–1998 to date
Department for Culture, Media and Sport	[1]0	0	656
Historic Royal Palaces Agency	[2]4,523	[1]2,688	15,160
Royal Parks Agency	0	0	0
Non-Departmental Public Bodies	333,972	144,949	15,160

[1] Figures shown take account of amounts recovered.
[2] Updated from information given in the annual fraud return to Treasury to take account of additional information about the value of losses.
Data on non-departmental public bodies is not include in the annual fraud return to the Treasury.

Digital Television

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to ensure people living in Wales will be able to receive digital terrestrial television. [29683]

Mr. Fisher: Digital terrestrial television will be able to deliver digital services to the majority of the population. The Independent Television Commission estimates that 74 per cent. of the Welsh population will be in the reception area of digital terrestrial services once the launch phase comprising 81 transmitters across the UK is complete. The coverage of digital services beyond the 81 sites is one of the issues looked at in the Government's consultation paper "Television: the Digital Future" published on 12 February. We are seeking views on the extension of digital transmissions beyond the initial planned 81 sites, and examining the possibility of extending access to digital services by using other broadcasting technologies.

Film Industry

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what has been the total revenue earned by the film industry from exports in each of the last 10 years. [29410]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The revenue received from overseas film companies in the UK in respect of film production and performance in cinemas or on television for 1987 to 1996 is as follows. These are the latest 10 years for which figures are available from the Office for National Statistics:

Receipts from overseas by UK film companies in respect of film production and performance in cinemas or on television

Year	£ million (current prices)
1987	264
1988	230
1989	263
1990	334
1991	290
1992	282
1993	336

Receipts from overseas by UK film companies in respect of film production and performance in cinemas or on television

Year	£ million (current prices)
1994	425
1995	495
1996	522

Source:
Office for National Statistics, News Release, Overseas transactions of the film and television industry 1996, 10 October 1997.

These figures understate the total revenue received from overseas. There are earnings from other kinds of transactions measured only in aggregate, so that the film industry component is not separately identifiable. For example, profits due to UK parent companies from subsidiaries and branches overseas are included under investment income in the Balance of Payments. The figures shown above also exclude receipts by film companies for items such as management fees, merchandising and agency fees. ONS estimates are available for 1991 onwards for these "other overseas service transactions" but only for the total of such earnings by film and television companies. These figures are as follows:

Receipts by UK film and television companies for "other overseas service transactions"

Year	£ million (current prices)
1991	108
1992	126
1993	162
1994	143
1995	168
1996	192

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many films have been filmed in the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years; [29354]

(2) how many films have been produced in the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years; [29424]

(3) how many films have been financed in the United Kingdom in each of the past 10 years. [29426]

Mr. Tom Clarke: There are no aggregate figures on the financing of films. The aggregate figures for films produced or made in the United Kingdom in each of the past 10 years are as follows:

Year	Films produced in UK
1988	48
1989	30
1990	60
1991	59
1992	47
1993	67
1994	84
1995	78
1996	128
1997	115

A breakdown of figures for the whole 10-year period is not available. However, in 1997, the breakdown was as follows:

British productions shot mainly or wholly in the UK: 60

British productions shot partly in the UK and partly abroad: 6

British productions shot mainly or wholly abroad: 8

Majority UK international co-productions shot partly in the UK and partly abroad: 4

Majority UK international co-productions shot mainly or wholly in the UK: 6

Majority UK international co-productions shot mainly or wholly abroad: 10

Minority UK international co-production shot mainly or wholly in the UK: 1

Minority UK international co-production shot mainly or wholly abroad: 8

Foreign films shot partly or wholly in the UK: 12.

NESTA Board

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the scientific organisations which have been consulted about the composition of the NESTA Board. [29048]

Mr. Chris Smith: The National Lottery Bill would require me, before appointing NESTA's Trustees, to consult representatives of bodies active in science, technology and the arts. In preparation for the establishment of NESTA, my Department is seeking the views of a wide range of bodies and individuals, many of which are active in more than one of these fields. It is not, therefore, possible accurately to identify scientific organisations alone. The complete list of bodies being consulted is given. In addition, all those who responded to the proposals for NESTA in our consultation paper "The People's Lottery" have been informed of the process for identifying candidates for these posts and their views are welcomed. The posts of Chair and Trustees of NESTA are also being advertised in the national press.

Women's Sport

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what initiatives he has undertaken to encourage more female participation in sport; and what meetings he has had with (a) women's groups and (b) the Minister for Women in this respect. [29556]

Mr. Tom Clarke: We are determined to improve opportunities for women of all ages and at all levels in sport. That goes for participants, competitors, coaches and administrators.

The UK and Home Country Sports Councils actively encourage women to get involved in all sports. They are underlining the significant achievement of women in sport and helping improve levels of participation. The National Lottery is having a big impact in this area. Organisations must demonstrate ways in which they are helping to increase the participation of women in order to secure funding. This is proving very successful in encouraging more women into sport, including those sports traditionally regarded as male-dominated. We shall continue to work with the Sports Councils to examine further ways to help women in sport.

I met Ms Kamlesh Bhal, Chairperson of the Equal Opportunities Commission, on 29 July 1997 to discuss a number of issues, including women in sport. Although my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport has not met any women's group in particular, he has met a number of women who are involved in women's sport and will continue to do so.

My hon. Friend hopes to meet the Minister for Women to discuss women's sport in due course.

Mr. Peter Davis

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what restrictions on public statements on his resignation were agreed to by Mr. Peter Davis as part of his resignation settlement. [28600]

Mr. Chris Smith: I issued a statement agreed with the Director-General, Peter Davis, on Tuesday 3 February. No further statement will be issued which is inconsistent with this without Mr. Davis' prior written consent.

Under the terms of his letter of appointment, Mr. Davis is required to seek the approval of the Head of the Home Civil Service to the proposed text of any memoirs relating to his responsibilities as Director-General.

Appointments

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what vacancies currently exist for appointments to be made by the Secretary of State to non-departmental public bodies; [28850]

(2) how many (a) notified vacancies and (b) vacancies arising through appointments expiring, currently exist for appointments to be made by him. [28882]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 1998]: Vacancies exist or current terms of appointment come to an end during 1998 on the bodies listed below. It is not possible to state how many expiring appointments will result in vacancies since some board members may be invited to serve a further term. This list does not include those bodies where appointments are for Her Majesty the Queen or my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and where my role is to advise.

Advisory Committee on the Government Art Collection
Advisory Committee on Historic Wreck Sites
Advisory Committee on the Public Lending Right
Advisory Council on Libraries
Arts Council of England
British Film Institute
British Library
British Tourist Authority
Broadcasting Standards Commission
Crafts Council
English Heritage

Independent Television Commission
Imperial War Museum
Library and Information Commission
Museum of Science and Industry in Manchester
National Film and Television School
National Lottery Charities Board
Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art
Royal Armouries
S4C.

It is also my expectation to make appointments to three new public bodies—the New Opportunities Fund; the National Endowment for Science, Technology and Arts; and the Historic Royal Palaces Trust.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what consultation takes place between the Secretary of State and the current trustees of non-departmental public bodies prior to the announcement of appointments by the Secretary of State. [28831]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 1998]: Chairmen are invited to make their own suggestions on appointments and are consulted before appointments are announced.

South Bank Centre

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to make a decision on the South Bank Centre redevelopment project referred to him by the Arts Council of England. [28832]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The South Bank Centre has applied to the Arts Council of England for Lottery funding for its proposed redevelopment scheme. Decisions on the award of Lottery funds are a matter for the Arts Council, as an independent lottery distributing body.

Arts Council

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to publish the results of the current review of the Arts Council structure. [28870]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 1998]: My Department, in common with all others, is currently undertaking a fundamental review of expenditure involving a re-evaluation of all the activities in the sectors covered by the department and its sponsored bodies. I expect to publish the outcome of the review in the summer.

Devolution

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Scottish Office on the impact of the Government's devolution proposals on his Department's responsibilities. [27983]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 16 February 1998]: I have not yet had any bilateral discussions. However, they will take place as necessary in due course. I am a member of the DSWR Cabinet Committee which discusses devolution issues, and there is close liaison at official level on all relevant subjects.

Physical Education

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the impact on sport development of the removal of physical education from the core curriculum. [29408]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Physical education has not been removed from the curriculum, it must still be taught by schools. The Government have suspended some detailed requirements as part of our initiative to raise levels of numeracy and literacy in particular, but good PE and sport still has a vital part to play in developing the skills of our young people.

Victoria and Albert Museum

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to make a decision on the Victoria and Albert Museum extension. [28869]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The Victoria and Albert Museum submitted a revised economic appraisal for its British Galleries project in January. This involves the refurbishment of the fifteen galleries documenting the evolution of art and design in the UK from 1500 to 1900. The appraisal will be scrutinised by my Department and the Treasury before approval can be granted. I understand that an application for funding has been made to the Heritage Lottery Fund.

The Museum also has plans to build the "Boilerhouse" extension in Exhibition Road, South Kensington as designed by the architect Daniel Libeskind. However, an application to the Millennium Commission has been refused and we understand that the Museum has applied to the Arts Council for funds for a feasibility study. No decision is required from my Department at this stage.

National Lottery Licence

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he proposes to request bids to run the National Lottery; and what meetings he has held with prospective National Lottery licencees other than Camelot. [29835]

Mr. Chris Smith: The current operating licence expires in September 2001. The Director-General of the National Lottery will announce in good time before then when bids should be sent to him. I have had no meetings with any prospective bidders on the subject of the next licence.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the criteria by which he will assess proposals to run the National Lottery when the current licence expires. [29834]

Mr. Chris Smith: Under the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 responsibility for considering applications to run the National Lottery lies with the Director-General of the National Lottery. The key criteria on which the Director-General will assess proposals are set out in the relevant legislation; that the Lottery is run with propriety, that the interests of participants are protected and, subject to these, that the good cause proceeds are maximised. The National Lottery Bill currently before Parliament contains provision for a panel to advise the Director-General on the selection of the operator.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

35. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what discussions he has had with the insurance industry about the introduction of contingency fee arrangements. [28103]

Mr. Hoon: I have set out these details in previous answers to questions from the hon. and learned Member for Harborough (Mr. Garnier) on the 15 of December 1997, Official Report, columns 43–44, and 30 of January 1998, Official Report, column 393. Since then, the working group looking at conditional fees insurance has met on the 6 of February. At this, the second meeting, my officials, representatives of the Association of British Insurers, and the insurance industry, were joined by representatives of the British Banking Association, clearing, and other banks.

41. Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress he is making with the introduction of his legal aid reforms. [28109]

Mr. Hoon: A consultation paper will be published in the next few weeks setting out the Government's proposals for the extension of the conditional fee scheme and changes to the scope of civil legal aid. Decisions will not be made about the reforms to be introduced until the responses to the consultation paper have been considered.

44. Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress he is making with the introduction of his legal aid reforms. [28112]

Mr. Hoon: A consultation paper will be published in the next few weeks setting out the Government's proposals for the extension of the conditional fee scheme and changes to the scope of civil legal aid. Decisions will not be made about the reforms to be introduced until the responses to the consultation paper have been considered.

Civil Aid Certificates

40. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he plans to announce the results of the consultation process on the proposed changes to the issue of civil aid certificates in certain types of action; and if he will make a statement. [28108]

Mr. Hoon: The consultation paper setting out the proposals for the extension of the conditional fee scheme and removal of most claims for monetary recompense from the scope of civil legal aid will be published in the next few weeks, inviting responses during a specified consultation period. Decisions will be announced after the responses have been considered.

Magistrates Courts

42. Mr. Greenway: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement about the North Yorkshire magistrates courts committee's proposals for the future of the magistrates courts service in the county. [28110]

Mr. Hoon: Decisions concerning the future of the magistrates' courts service in a given area are for the relevant magistrates' courts committee (MCC) to determine. Each MCC has a statutory responsibility to provide an efficient and effective service to court users. This would, of course, include deciding, in consultation with its local providing authority, whether its existing resources meet the MCC's needs both current and future.

However, should proposals for change be made by the MCC, certain applications will arise that require the Lord Chancellor's attention. My Department currently holds two such applications for North Yorkshire, (i) for the reorganisation of petty sessional divisions and (ii) an appeal against the proposed closure of Ripon Magistrates' Court later this year.

It would, of course, be inappropriate for me to comment on either of those matters as they have yet to be considered by the Lord Chancellor.

Immigration Adjudicators

43. Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to increase the training given to immigration adjudicators. [28111]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 10 November 1997, Official Report, column 572. Training is a matter for the Chief Adjudicator. All adjudicators receive appropriate training. In particular, all adjudicators will receive training on the Human Rights Bill before it is implemented.

Legal Profession (Tax Treatment)

31. Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations his Department has made to Her Majesty's Treasury concerning its proposals to change the tax treatment of the legal profession. [28099]

Mr. Hoon: It would not be appropriate for me to comment on any discussions that may have taken place within Government.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many times the wives of Ministers in his Department have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits; and in each case what was the cost of their travel and other expenses. [25143]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 23 January 1998]: As I indicated in my answer to the hon. Member for Spelthorne (Mr. Wilshire) of 15 January 1998, Official Report, column 278, my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor was accompanied by Lady Irvine at the 14th Conference of Commonwealth Speakers and Presiding Officers, held in Trinidad and Tobago on 4–11 January 1998. It has since come to light that the total cost of the trip from public funds for the Lord Chancellor, Lady Irvine and an official was, in fact, approximately £9,200, as I explained to the hon. Member for Spelthorne in my letter of 21 January, a copy of which was placed in the Library.

Fixed Costs Regime

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish the results of research by the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies into the fixed costs regime. [29995]

Mr. Hoon: I anticipate publishing the research in conjunction with a consultation paper on costs in the fast track after Easter.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the cost of media presentations and press conferences which he has given, other than those held at his Department. [25157]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 23 January 1998]: Since 2 May 1997, direct expense has been incurred in mounting media presentations and press conferences involving Ministers held outside my Department or its Agencies as follows:

Funding (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what additional funds have been allocated to Shrewsbury and Atcham and Shropshire since 1 May out of his Department's budgets. [27106]

Mr. Raynsford: The following tables provide details for those programmes where additional funds have been allocated to Shrewsbury and Atcham District Council and Shropshire County Council in 1997–98 since May 1997.

Ashley Heath

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what additional cost has been incurred compared with budget forecasts as a result of errors made in the calculation of noise predictions in respect of the A31 road improvement at Ashley Heath; [28479]

(2) what were the noise predictions made before construction started on the A31 Ashley Heath improvement in respect of the impact upon properties in St. Ives Wood; and what were the noise levels recorded after construction was complete; [28524]

(3) how many claims for purchase or compensation have been made by householders in respect of the impact of the A31 Ashley Heath improvement; and how many have so far been settled, and at what cost; [28525]

(4) what forecast was made prior to construction of the cost of claims for purchase or compensation for landholders affected by the A31 Ashley Heath improvements. [28526]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive, of the Highways Agency, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David York to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 17 February 1998:

The Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson, has asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the A31 Ashley Heath junction improvement. In his absence I am writing on his behalf.

Estimates provided by the District Valuer before construction began for the cost of acquisition of property and compensation arising from construction of the scheme amounted to £130,000. This did not cover the cost of buying under discretionary purchase rules property which was considered to be seriously affected by traffic using the new scheme.

To date 9 interests in property needed for construction have been acquired at a cost of approx £125,000 and 95 claims for compensation for loss in value of property have been received which could cost £150,000. Property to the value of £2.6m has been acquired because it was considered to be seriously affected but will be resold and it is expected that a large part of that sum will be recouped.

Revisiting calculations of predicted noise levels from traffic using the junction improvement led to applications for purchase of property which had previously been refused being accepted. Additional costs of about £100,000 resulted.

In accordance with the Noise Insulation Regulations, predictions of future noise levels in the vicinity of the junction were published in 1991. I will arrange for a copy of this report to be placed in the House of Commons library. No comprehensive measurement of noise levels has been made since the junction improvement has been completed although the local authority has taken several spot readings.

Tachograph Interference

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on the penalties for tachograph interference; and how many incidences of such interference have been recorded in each of the last three years; [28955]

(2) what Government publicity has been issued on the subject of tachograph interference; and if he will make a statement. [28956]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The maximum penalties for producing a false tachograph chart by tampering with the device are, on summary conviction, a fine of £5,000 and, on conviction on indictment, two years imprisonment. Convictions are also taken into account by the local Traffic Commissioner when reviewing an operator's compliance with the conditions of his licence. Offenders can be called to a public inquiry, and their licences can be curtailed, suspended or revoked.

The Vehicle Inspectorate's Annual Effectiveness Report[1] includes statistics on tachograph and other drivers' hours offences that are reported for prosecution by the Inspectorate. For 1995–96, it is not possible to differentiate tachograph interference offences from other tachograph and drivers' hours offences. The best available figures for the subsequent two years for offences concerning interference with the tachograph and its records are:

1996–97: 681 (England and Wales only)

1997–98 (April to December): 775 (England, Wales and Scotland only).

The figures do not include offences detected by the police.

It would not be appropriate to publish information abut the nature of tachograph interference because of the risk that methods might be imitated.

[1] Vehicle Inspectorate: Traffic Safety and a cleaner environment: A Report on the Vehicle Inspectorate's Effectiveness as an Enforcement Agency 1996/97.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many civil servants in (a) his Department and (b) other Government departments have been trained in environmental appraisal techniques since 1 May. [29021]

Mr. Meacher: Environmental appraisal, whether for policies, projects or programmes, covers a range of skills which are acquired by staff across Government through various routes, including formal training, learning on-the-job and reading guidance documents. Figures are not collected centrally for the numbers of staff, in the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions or in other Government departments, trained in these various ways. I understand, however, that the Civil Service College gives formal training on environmental appraisal in courses on Option Appraisal for economists and on "Spending Public Money Wisely" for fast-stream administrators; both of these normally run twice annually with an attendance of about a dozen each time, and each has run once since 1 May 1997.

Children (Road Accidents)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many children were (a) killed and (b) injured in road accidents (i) during school hours and (ii) while travelling to and from school in the latest period for which figures are available. [29164]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In 1996, there were 35 children killed while travelling to and from school and 8,941 injured, of which 1,377 were injured seriously. These figures include some pupils who are aged 16 years old. In 1996 there were 270 children (aged 0–15) killed and (in the same age group) 44,835 children were injured, of which 6,519 were seriously injured. However, because of differing school hours and days, it is not possible to determine how many occurred during school hours.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many children were killed in road traffic accidents (a) in total, (b) by drivers while speeding and (c) by drivers under the influence of (i) alcohol and (ii) drugs in the latest period for which figures are available. [29163]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In 1996, there were 270 children (aged 0–15) killed in road accidents in Great Britain. In 1995, the most recent year in which sufficiently detailed data is available to analyse drink drive casualties by age, it is estimated that 15 children were killed in accidents involving a driver with an illegal level of blood alcohol. No figures are available for children killed in accidents involving a speeding driver or a driver under the influence of drugs although research suggests that around one third of all accidents involve excessive speed. Recent research is also beginning to indicate a greater presence of drugs in drivers killed in road accidents, although we have no evidence as to the causative effect of drugs in such accidents and no information is available regarding child casualties in such accidents.

English Nature

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to carry out a review of the work of English Nature. [29409]

Angela Eagle: The work of English Nature is under regular scrutiny. The annual Corporate Planning round provides an opportunity to assess performance, identify priorities and assist the allocation of resources.

English Nature was brought into existence in 1991 as a result of the re-organisation of the former Nature Conservancy Council. Its work was reviewed in 1994 when a study was carried out into the possibility of merging English Nature with the Countryside Commission. The Joint Nature Conservation Committee, through which English Nature in conjunction with Scottish Natural Heritage and the Countryside Council for Wales, carries out some of its functions assigned to it by the Environmental Protection Act 1990, has also recently undergone a strategic review. In common with Government Departments and the other Countryside Agencies, the role of English Nature is being examined as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

An important aspect of English Nature's work is the notification and management of the network of Sites of Special Scientific Interest. The Department is preparing a consultation paper seeking views on how these sites can be better managed. We expected to be able to issue the paper to the public in the late Spring.

Dog Registration

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to make provisions for the establishment of a dog registration scheme by local authorities. [29247]

Angela Eagle: My Department is considering the issues surrounding the establishment of a dog registration scheme. A decision on the appropriate way forward will be taken in due course.

Gas Storage

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of safety risks of gas bullets stored near Gloucester Road in Cheltenham; [29396]

(2) if he will make a statement on the safety record of the range gas storage methods; [29397]

(3) what measures he expects to take to remove gas bullets from residential areas; and if he will make a statement. [29398]

Angela Eagle: I have no proposals to remove gas bullets from residential areas. Gas bullets are used to store gas at high pressure and currently there are twelve such notifiable hazardous installations in Great Britain. All are subject to health and safety legislation requiring operators to submit a safety report which sets out the measures taken to ensure safety at the installation to the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). Assessment of these reports takes into account predictive, technical and operational elements, and consideration of the causes and consequences of major accidents on the site. An assessment of on-site and off-site risks and details of control measures on the site are also made.

HSE also sets a "consultation distance" around these installations. The Local Planning Authority (LPA) is required to consult HSE on planning applications within the consultation distance, to give HSE the opportunity to provide advice on safety issues affecting the proposed development. However, the ultimate responsibility for deciding on planning permission rests with the LPA.

HSE's advice is based on residual risks posed by an installation of this type, after the overall risks have been reduced to a level which is as low as reasonably practicable. The basis for the advice and the criteria used by HSE in formulating such advice are set out in "Risk criteria for land-use planning in the vicinity of major industrial hazards", published in 1989 by HMSO.

HSE has set a consultation distance around the notifiable hazardous installation operated by BG Transco, Gloucester Road, Cheltenham. In 1997 HSE was asked to advise the LPA in Cheltenham on two planning applications within the consultation distance of the Gloucester Road site. Both cases were passed to HSE's Major Hazards Assessment Unit (MHAU).

The first case involved the conversion of land adjacent to the BG Transco site into a play area for Gloucester Road Primary School. MHAU's assessment led HSE to advise against granting planning permission. The assessment was based on developed policy which is to advise against developments involving vulnerable populations (such as school children) in the consultation zone.

The second case also involved the provision of a play area for the same school; it required the demolition of a house and social club and conversion of a small area of land adjacent to the school. This was further away from the BG Transco site than the first case, but still within the consultation zone. MHAU's assessment took account of the overall reduction in the population at risk and the small increase in area of the school. It was felt that this development would not put children at greater risk and in this case HSE did not advise against granting planning permission.

Formal assessments of the safety risks at the Gloucester Road site were undertaken during 1992 and 1995. A further safety report is due shortly.

Natural gas in Great Britain is normally stored in the following ways:

(a) in low pressure gas holders;

(b) in high pressure storage bullets;

(c) as liquefied natural gas;

(d) in underground caverns.

These storage methods have a good safety record and in recent years there have been few incidents and no injuries.

Repossessions

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of repossession orders which have been made in the last six months because of arrears caused by the difference between the standard mortgage interest rate and the actual interest rate levied by building societies. [29723]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department does not make estimates relating to possession orders. The Lord Chancellor's Department publishes quarterly figures for mortgage possession orders in the county courts. These give no information on the reasons for the action.

Peat Working Group

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 22 December 1997, Official Report, columns 433–34 on the Peat Working Group, for what reasons no non-governmental conservation organisation is a member of the group. [29670]

Mr. Raynsford: The purpose of the Peat Working Group has been to collate factual information and to advise my Department on the relevant issues. Its membership comprised organisations with a statutory responsibility for either conservation or planning control over peatlands together with the peat industry, who have property and working rights on a number of the bogs. Nature conservation interests were covered by the statutory countryside conservation agencies. The conservation non-governmental organisations (NGOs) together with other interested parties were invited to provide the Group with factual information. Meetings were held between these and officials from my Department on a number of occasions. These organisations were also consulted on the contents of the draft Mineral Planning Guidance Note No. 13 issued in 1995. However, at a recent meeting between officials and representatives of the conservation NGOs, an invitation was extended to them to be represented on the Group when it next meets. I understand that the invitation has been accepted.

Bathing Water Standards

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he proposes to make beaches cleaner. [29544]

Angela Eagle: Following the answer my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) on 4 December 1997, Official Report, columns 289–91, the Environment Agency is preparing a report on the prospects for compliance with EU bathing water quality standards and the action needed on bathing waters which persistently fail. The report will take into account improvements resulting from completion of the remaining schemes in the bathing water improvement programme, implementation of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive and the Agency's new policy on consents for discharges close to bathing waters. As part of the current review of water company prices, options for more investment to improve bathing water standards are being addressed and initial decisions will be taken this summer.

Diesel Hotline

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many calls the Vehicle Inspectorate dirty diesel telephone hotline received between (a) November 1996 and January 1997 and (b) November 1997 and January 1998 [29774]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the vehicle Inspectorate, Mr. Ron Oliver, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mr. Tom Brake, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of calls received by the Vehicle Inspectorate's smoky vehicle telephone hotline between (a) November 1996 and January 1997 and (b) November 1997 and January 1998.

Details for the two periods are as follows:

November 1996-January 1997 1,954 calls

November 1997-January 1998 2,294 calls.

There was a noticeable increase in the number of calls received in January 1998 and this has been attributed to the publicity campaign promoting the service launched by the Royal Automobile Club (RAC) on 23 December 1997.

Bonn Convention

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps the Government have taken to fulfil their obligations under the Bonn Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals; what areas are outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [28156]

Angela Eagle: The United Kingdom's obligations to conserve migratory species in accordance with this important Convention are reflected in existing national legislation, especially the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, and the programmes of my Department and the statutory conservation agencies.

The most recent summary of progress was published in March last year, entitled Report of the United Kingdom Government to the Fifth Meeting of the Conference of the Parties, Geneva 10–16 April 1997. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

The report details conservation activities relating to the species listed in the Appendices to the Convention and other migratory species, and gives information on research projects. It also provides information on the implementation of the Convention in the United Kingdom's Dependent Territories. The report also covers the United Kingdom's implementation of two regional agreements concluded under the Convention, the Agreement on the Conservation of Small Cetaceans of the Baltic and North Seas (ASCOBANS) and the Agreement on the Conservation of Bats in Europe. Both Agreements have been ratified by the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom has also signed, subject to ratification, the African-Eurasian Migratory Waterbird Agreement (AEWA).

Bern Convention

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps the Government have taken to fulfil their obligations under the Bern Convention on the Conservation of European Wildlife and Natural Habitats; what areas are outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [28157]

Angela Eagle: The Government's obligations under the Bern Convention have been fulfilled by the enactment of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, as amended, and the Conservation (Natural Habitats, etc.) Regulations 1994 (SI 1994/2716).

Ramsar Convention

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps the Government have taken to fulfil their obligations under the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands of International Importance; what areas remain outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [28158]

Angela Eagle: The Government are making excellent progress in designating Ramsar sites. Since the UK acceded to the Convention in 1976, we have listed 120 sites covering 491,646 hectares, including two in the Dependent Territories.

On 2 February, at an event to mark the 27th Anniversary of the Convention, the Government launched the UK Targets for the Ramsar Strategic Plan. The strategy sets targets for the UK to achieve further progress, towards the wise use of wetlands, and identifies specific goals, for the period to 2002. I have arranged for a copy to be deposited in the Library of the House.

European Union Habitats Directive

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps the Government have taken to fulfil their obligations under the European Union Habitats Directive; what areas remain outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [28159]

Angela Eagle: The European Union Habitats Directive was transposed into UK law through The Conservation (Natural Habitats, &c.) Regulations 1994 and The Conservation (Natural Habitats, etc.) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995. We have submitted 262 areas covering 1,526,817.62 hectares to the European Commission as part of our obligation to put forward a list of candidate Special Areas of Conservation. We have recently consulted on further areas and will be submitting additional sites in the coming weeks.

Drugs (Driving)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the number of prescriptions issued for medicinal drugs whose side-effects include performance impairment comparable to that of 80mg of alcohol per 100ml of blood. [29843]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what drugs can be detected by the (a) Cozart and (b) Drugwipe tests; and how many and what percentage of the total of medicinal drugs which if taken in accordance with directions can reduce drivers' performance to a level comparable to that of 80mg of alcohol per 100 ml of blood can be detected. [29839]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Cozart test can separately identify five drug groups; cannabis, amphetamines (including ecstasy), cocaine, opiates and benzodiazepines. The Drugwipe test also detects drugs from the first four of these groups i.e. cannabis, amphetamines (including ecstasy), cocaine and opiates, but does not detect benzodiazepines. The information sought for medicinal drugs is not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he made of simulator and epidemiological studies on links between illegal drugs and driving ability undertaken in (a) America, (b) Australia, (c) Canada and (d) Holland in reaching his decision on drug driving tests; and if he will make a statement. [29847]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department considered in detail the evidence available from both simulator and epidemiological studies, worldwide, before undertaking its own epidemiological study of drugs in road fatalities and announcing its plans to assess the roadside practicability of two drug screening devices.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his estimate of the percentage of the population who take cannabis at least once every 30 days; and what was the percentage of road fatalities who were found to have traces of cannabis in their bodies in his Department's recent test. [29841]

Ms Glenda Jackson: According to the British Crime Survey 1996, cannabis had been taken by 12 per cent. of the 16–29 year age group in the previous month; figures for other age groups are not available. The percentage of road fatalities who were found to have traces of cannabis in their bodies was also 12 per cent.

Driving Licence Design

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what criteria were used in deciding on the design of the new United Kingdom driving licence. [29826]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The content and format of the photocard follow the requirements laid down in the relevant EU legislation, which was aimed at ensuring that licences are easily recognisable throughout the EU.

Poll Tax

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's latest estimate of outstanding poll tax payments to each local authority in England and Wales. [29832]

Mr. Raynsford: Information on uncollected community charge and council tax for each local authority is not available centrally. However, the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy regularly publish estimates for individual authorities: figures for 31 March 1996 are available in their Revenue Collection Statistics 1995–96 publications, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Housing (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people are on the housing waiting list of East Hampshire District Council; and what were the equivalent figures at the same time in each of the last five years. [27566]

Mr. Raynsford [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1998, c.125]: Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their housing register/waiting list (excluding existing tenants awaiting a transfer) at 1 April each year in their annual Housing Investment Programme (HIP1) returns. The data reported by East Hampshire District Council for 1997 and the previous five years are as follows:

1992: 1,607

1993: 1,528

1994: 2,045

1995: 1,555

1996: 1,206

1997: 1,683.

Local authorities have different practices for compiling and managing their housing register/waiting lists which mean that simple comparisons between authorities can be misleading. Authorities practices may change which can also affect comparisons over time.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Values

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the average value of farm buildings and land in England and Wales; and what evaluation he has made of the correlation between the value of land and the level of farm subsidies over the past 20 years. [29458]

Mr. Morley: The average price of all agricultural property sales notified to the Inland Revenue in the three months ended June 1997 (the latest period available) was £4,515 per hectare in England and £4,303 per hectare in Wales. These averages will be affected by the prevailing market conditions and the location and quality of the land sold in the period.

There is evidence to suggest that support for agriculture has, to some degree, been capitalised into the value of land.

Quota Hopping

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consult (a) representatives of the fishing industry and (b) Spanish officials to co-ordinate informal repurchase of quota-hopping fishing vessels or their licences. [29823]

Mr. Morley: There have been opportunities over successive years for vessel owners to withdraw from the UK fleet under the decommissioning schemes which have been operated by the Fisheries Departments. There has also been an active market in vessels and vessel licences. So far as I am aware, these arrangements have been operated to the satisfaction of the parties to the transactions without the need for co-ordination by Government. However, if I received a request from those in the industry to promote co-ordination, I would be ready to consider it.

BSE (Compensation)

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of total BSE compensation payments has gone directly to producers. [29229]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 16 February 1998]: More than 90 per cent. of the BSE-related compensation paid during 1996–97 and 1997–98 has gone to producers. About 20 per cent. has been paid directly to them; the rest has reached them via livestock markets, slaughterhouses and abattoirs.

Meat Imports

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that imported meat has been slaughtered under the same hygiene standards as those in the United Kingdom. [29237]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The slaughter of animals in all EU Member States must comply with Community rules governing the protection of animals at the time of slaughter and killing (Directive 93/119/EC). It is a requirement of these rules that meat imported from Third Countries must be from animals slaughtered or killed in accordance with conditions equivalent to those applying in the Community. Common rules on meat hygiene standards, applicable in all Member States, are similarly laid down in Directive 64/433/EEC for fresh meat and Directive 71/118/EEC for poultry meat. For imports from third countries, Directive 72/462/EEC requires compliance with equivalent conditions to those in Directive 64/433/EEC for the hygienic production of fresh meat, and Directive 71/118/EEC for poultry meat. It is for the European Commission to ensure that Member States and third countries are complying with their legal obligations.

Dietary Supplements

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons he intends to restrict the availability of vitamin B6. [29383]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 13 February 1998]: The Government's decision to limit the level of vitamin B6 in dietary supplements sold under food law was taken in the light of advice from the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment and from the Food Advisory Committee, that prolonged intake of high doses of vitamin B6 may be harmful.

Cow's Milk

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance he offers to farmers on altering the butterfat content of cow's milk by adjusting the feed content. [29738]

Mr. Rooker: The butterfat content of milk is largely determined by the breed and genetic merit of the cow, but it can also be affected by the composition of the cow's diet. Individual milk producers can obtain advice on feeding through their normal farming advisers. The results of the Department's and other sponsors' research in this area are disseminated through their respective technology transfer programmes.

Integrated Administration and Control System

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the proportion of IACS forms received by his Department which contain initial errors and inaccuracies requiring further contact by his Department's officials. [29197]

Mr. Rooker: This information is not available.

Moorland Scheme

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms, having how many sheep, are eligible to participate in the Moorland Scheme; and how many farms having how many sheep have joined the Moorland Scheme. [29155]

Mr. Rooker: The Moorland Scheme applies within the Less Favoured Areas, but excludes land in Environmentally Sensitive Areas. The total area in which the Scheme may apply is about 400,000 hectares. It is not possible to state how many farms are eligible to join the Scheme as this depends on meeting the specific eligibility rules. The Scheme is based on payment for the removal of ewes from eligible heather moorland to meet stocking limits. To date, scheme agreements are in place on 23 farms, involving a reduction of 6,361 sheep from moorland grazing units totalling some 9,300 hectares.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms, having how many sheep, in (a) the Lake District, (b) the Pennine Dales, (c) the North Peak, (d) the South West Peak, (e) the Shropshire Hills and (f) Dartmoor are eligible for ESA payments; and how many farms in each locality, having how many sheep, have joined the ESA schemes. [29156]

Mr. Morley: The information requested on numbers of holdings and numbers of sheep is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The following table shows the current number of ESA management agreements and the percentage of eligible land under agreement:

ESA	Number of ESA agreements[1]	Percentage of land eligible for the scheme which is under agreement
Lake District	1,129	55
Pennine Dales	862	70
North Peak	98	80
South West Peak	582	80
Shropshire Hills	318	25
Dartmoor	547	40

Note:
[1] Some agreements are joint agreements covering more than one holding.

Varroa

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the potential evolution of a drug-resistant form of varroa; and if he will make a statement. [28969]

Mr. Rooker: There is evidence of a strain of varroa on the Continent which is resistant to the drug Bayvarol but we are not aware of any incidence of it in the United Kingdom. The position is kept under close review.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the extent of the varroa outbreak among bees in the UK; what steps he has taken to combat its spread; and if he will make a statement. [28967]

Mr. Rooker: The Statutory Infected Area (SIA) for varroa now includes the whole of England and Wales and affected areas in Dumfries and Galloway. The most northerly occurrence to date has been in Golspie, Scotland.

Control measures are based on varroa being statutorily notifiable disease. Upon first finding evidence of varroa infestation in Devon in 1992, a SIA was declared with movements across the boundary being strictly controlled. Information on the geographical distribution of the mite was collected via a number of sources, including searches. Now that the SIA covers the whole of England and Wales, the need for formal searches there has been removed. In Scotland and Northern Ireland, random Spring and Autumn searches continue to be carried out. Where isolated incidents have occurred in Scotland these have been dealt with by destruction of hives and bees.

British Meat

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions (a) he, (b) his Ministers and (c) his Department have had with the Ministry of Defence about the supply of British (i) beef and (ii) lamb to HM Forces; and if he will make a statement. [28260]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 6 February 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food spoke to the Secretary of State for Defence late last year about the purchases of British beef by the armed forces. This conversation has been followed up in correspondence and in discussions between my noble Friend Lord Donoughue and the Under-Secretary of State for Defence, my learned Friend the Member for Warley (Mr. Spellar). Since this Government took office, there have been no discussions between the two Departments at official level on this issue. Since the primary requirement of the Ministry of Defence is for frozen beef and we have significant stocks in UK intervention stores, discussion has focused on the supply of intervention beef rather than that of beef from the open market. As yet we have not discussed the purchase of lamb.

We all have to recognise, however, that Public Bodies are generally required to look for best value for money in making their procurement decisions. Furthermore, we are required to note that it would contravene the Treaty of Rome to operate a "Buy British" policy. Nevertheless we shall continue to explore ways in which the volume of British beef purchased might be increased.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the full details of the United Kingdom presidency's work programme which were discussed at the EU Agriculture Council on 20 January. [25250]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 26 January 1998]: A copy of the text of my statement to the 20 January Agriculture Council has been placed in the Library of the House.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Montserrat

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which firm is managing the provision of prefabricated units for Montserrat. [29992]

Clare Short: Brown and Root Ltd. are currently managing provision of prefabricated units, on Montserrat.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment on the ability of developing countries to pursue policies to (a) diversify their economy and (b) promote domestic industries. [29954]

Clare Short: Foreign investment can make a substantial contribution to development and the elimination of poverty. Many developing countries, particularly the least developed, are currently marginalised from global investment flows. The Government believe that a better international framework for investment has an important part to play in helping to meet the objective of eliminating poverty. My Department is commissioning a study of the development implications of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) which will be ready in good time to present to our negotiating partners before the agreement is concluded.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the benefits for non-OECD countries of the proposals in the current draft text of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [29917]

Clare Short: The Government support the aim of providing a better international framework for investment, increased investment in developing countries, we believe has an important part to play in helping to meet the objective of eliminating poverty. My Department is commissioning a study to look at any implications the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) may have for developing countries, which we will share with our negotiating partners. The UK is also pressing for "special and differential treatment" in the accession process, which would allow some flexibility for the needs of developing countries to be taken into account, if they seek to accede to the MAI.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department will take to include the views of government and non-governmental organisation experts from developing countries in its assessment of the impact of the MAI on developing countries. [29933]

Clare Short: Officials from my Department have already taken part in consultations organised by the Organisation for Economic Cooperation Development (OECD) with governments and NGOs of developing countries on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI). My Department has also consulted NGOs on the study we are undertaking of the development implications of the MAI which will also consider discussions on international investment rules in the World Trade Organisation and UNCTAD.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28931]

Dr. David Clark: Details of the engagements I have undertaken in the United Kingdom during January 1998, and the mode of transport used, are set out in the following table.

Date	Destination of journey	Mode of transport
Tuesday 6 January	Visit to Wansbeck Business Park (Northumberland)	Car
Thursday 8 January	Cabinet Meeting (London) Visit by EU Commissioners to mark the start of the UK Presidency (London)	Train and Car
Monday 12 January	'Better Government' speech to Association of British Insurers Trade Executives Group (London)	Car
Tuesday 13 January	'Better Government' speech at Coopers & Lybrand Event (London)	Car
	Interview: 'Westminster Live' (London)	Car
Wednesday 14 January	Millennium Commissioners Meeting (London)	Car
Monday 19 January	Speech to Local Business Partnership Seminar (Newcastle)	Car
Tuesday 20 January	Launch of the 'Citizens First' Initiative in the UK with Commissioner Monti & Lord Simon (London)	Car
Monday 26 January	Meeting with Austrian Ambassador (London)	Car
Tuesday 27 January	Speech to the British Retail Consortium (London)	Car

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Standard Assessment Tests

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to reduce the cost of Key Stage 1 and Key Stage 2 SATs. [29981]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Key Stage 1 and Key Stage 2 National Curriculum tests provide valid and reliable assessments of pupils' progress, and contribute towards the raising of school standards and effectiveness. The cost of these tests, and associated administrative arrangements, are kept under constant review by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority to ensure that they are conducted as efficiently and economically as possible, while maintaining the quality of information they provide.

Hotel and Catering Training

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the percentage drop-out rate by students on full and part-time courses in (a) NVQ level 2 and 3 Food Preparation and Cooking, (b) BTEC National Diploma in Hotel, Catering and Institutional Operations and (c) advanced GNVQ Hospitality and Catering. [27090]

Dr. Howells: The drop out rates from National Vocational Qualifications are not measurable because these qualifications are not timebound; the position is the same for the BTEC National Diploma in Hotel, Catering and Institutional Operations.

The latest figure on drop out rates for the Advanced GNVQ in Hospitality and Training (1995/96), for full time students, is 14 per cent.

School Partnerships

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the letter from the Minister for School Standards of 23 December, when he expects to receive the first recommendations of the Committee under the Chairmanship of Chris Parker on co-operation between various sectors of education; and if he will make a statement. [27969]

Mr. Byers: The Advisory Group on Independent/State School Partnerships is due to present to me its initial findings by the end of March 1998 and its final recommendations by the end of July 1998.

Class Sizes

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the information about which local authorities had received financial support for reducing infant class sizes was made available to any hon. Members before the public announcement on 12 February. [29829]

Mr. Byers: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I signed letters on 11 February containing this information to hon. Members whose constituencies lie within the areas of the successful local authorities.

New Deal (Allowances)

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what description is used by his Department to identify the allowance to those aged under-25 years who participate in an education, an environment task force or a voluntary sector option of the New Deal; and what statutory basis governs this allowance. [30042]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Young people participating in the Full-Time Education and Training option of the New Deal for 18–24 year olds will receive a training allowance; those in the Voluntary Sector or Environment Task Force option may receive either a training allowance or a wage paid by the organisation for which they are working. Training Allowances are payable under Section 2 of the Employment and Training Act 1973.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the source of funding for the allowance for the under-26 year olds participating in an education, an environment task force or a voluntary sector option of the New Deal. [30044]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The New Deal for 18–24 year olds will be financed from the Windfall Levy on the excess profits of the private utilities.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if those who are disabled who take part in the Welfare to Work scheme will be guaranteed the national minimum wage. [30050]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government have set out in their evidence to the Low Pay Commission the argument that disabled people should not be treated any differently from non-disabled people. The Commission will be making recommendations on the initial level and application of the National Minimum Wage to the Government by the end of May.

New Deal

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the companies which have announced their support for the New Deal. [29693]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Over 1,000 companies have signed Employer Agreements to date including the 34 large employers listed below.

Allied Domeq
Allied Leisure
Anglian Water
Arriva PLC
British Aerospace PLC
British Airports Authority PLC
British Airways
British Steel plc

W. H. Smith Group.

School Software

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to publish the details of the agreement announced by the Prime Minister last year between the Government and Microsoft Inc. for the provision of software to schools. [29488]

Dr. Howells: Microsoft is one of a number of companies preparing educational material and services as a potential contribution to the National Grid for Learning and the strategy outlined in the consultation document "Connecting the Learning Society". However, no formal agreement with the company to supply software to schools is in place.

New Deal (Employer Agreements)

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many work places will be provided in 1998–99 under the employer agreements signed to date under the New Deal arrangements. [29692]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Signing an Employer Agreement expresses an employer's commitment to New Deal and enables them to offer jobs under the programme. It does not commit them to providing a specific number of jobs.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what policy reviews are currently underway within his Department. [29530]

Mr. Blunkett: My Department continuously reviews its policies. The following reviews are currently being undertaken:

Departmental Spending Review. As part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review my department is currently undertaking a review of all its programmes and its running costs expenditure. I will be reporting its conclusions to the Ministerial Committee on Public Expenditure in the late Spring.

Review of the threshold exempting employers with fewer than 20 employees from the Employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. A review of the effects of the threshold exempting small employers from the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act. The review includes a consultation exercise ending on 2 March. Launch date was 3 December 1997. The intended date of report will be in late Spring 1998.

Review of Qualifications Appeals Systems. Announced on 16 December 1997. Preliminary conclusions are expected in May 1998.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average value of a weekly family credit payment; and what is the average estimated value of weekly family credit payments to which people are entitled but which they do not claim. [30038]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The latest available information on the take-up of Family Credit is for 1995–96. The average estimated value of weekly Family Credit payments to which people were entitled but did not claim was £24.30[1]. At that time, the average award of Family Credit was £54.82[2].

The most recent estimate of the average weekly award of Family Credit of £59.01[3] was for August 1997.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people claimed family credit; how many people are estimated to be entitled to family credit but have not claimed it; what was the total amount of family credit payments paid; and what was the estimated value of unclaimed family credit in the last year for which reliable data are available. [30037]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The latest available information on the take-up of Family Credit is for 1995–96. It is estimated that 240,000[1] families were entitled to Family Credit but did not claim it. At that time, there were 676,000[2] families receiving Family Credit. Expenditure was £1,740[3] million and the estimated value of unclaimed Family Credit was £300[4] million.

The most recent estimate of caseload is for August 1997 when 757,000[5] families were receiving Family Credit.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many men receive family credit payments; and if he will express this figure as a proportion of all family credit payments. [30039]

Mr. Keith Bradley: 757,000[1] families receive Family Credit of which 351,000[1] are lone parents. 336,400 of those lone parents are female and 14,300 (4 per cent.) are male. Information on the gender of the claimant in couple families is not available.

However, the vast majority of couple families have a female recipient as there is a requirement for the female member of a couple to be the claimant. There are occasional exceptions to this rule, for example, to cover mental incapacity.

[1] All figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many payment accounts at the Child Support Agency collection service were (a) pre-CSA arrangements, and (b) CSA assessments, at the end of each month since April 1994. [30041]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Number of accounts from April 1995

Month	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98

March	207,465	239,284	—

Note:

The Child Support Agency's collection service holds accounts for cases where there is a child support assessment, there are no accounts for pre-CSA arrangements.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what proportion of cases where a parent with care is on income support a benefit saving arises due to (a) a pre-CSA child maintenance agreement, and (b) a CSA assessment. [30040]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is that 80,000 people in receipt of Income Support[1] also receive maintenance from liable relatives.

[1] This figure does not include those parents with care who have arrangements whereby their maintenance is retained by the Secretary of State and they receive full Income Support.

Appeals System

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the current arrangements for the suspension of benefits during the period in which a government agency is appealing against a decision to award benefit to a claimant; how many claimants currently have their benefits suspended pending an appeal; how many claimants have had their benefits (a) upheld and (b) rejected following appeal by a government agency in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [29464]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Provision for suspending payment of benefit pending resolution of a factual or legal doubt as to entitlement has existed since 1946. We are committed to the principle that benefit should go only to those entitled to it. It would be irresponsible to allow irrecoverable overpayments to accumulate during periods when entitlement is in doubt. This principle is safeguarded by the power to suspend payment in certain circumstances—a power which is being carried forward in the Social Security Bill currently before Parliament.

Regular statistics are not kept on the numbers of suspensions imposed. However, a scan of the Income Support computer system in July 1997, found that, of all those entitled to Income Support at any one time, less than 0.5 per cent. had payment of benefit suspended or withheld. Estimated numbers are significantly less for most other benefits.

TV Advertising

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the amount spent on television advertising in 1998 for (a) benefits which require a claim to be registered, (b) the automatic winter fuel payment to pensioners and (c) other automatic benefits; how many television slots for advertisements for each of the above categories of benefits were purchased for broadcast in the periods (i) 9.00 a.m. to 5.00 p.m., (ii) 5.00 p.m., to 11.00 p.m., and (iii) 11.00 p.m. to 9.00 a.m.; for what reasons benefits were advertised which claimants receive automatically; and if she will make a statement. [30158]

Mr. Denham: The Winter Payments scheme will help all pensioner households with fuel bills to pay, and give the most help to the poorest. It is an unprecedented initiative, which dwarfs any action taken by any previous Government to tackle winter cold.

It is important that pensioners know as soon as possible how much they will receive, as well as how and when the payment will be paid so that they can plan with confidence and turn up their heating if there is a spell of cold weather. The simplest and most cost-effective way to let them know that a payment will be made is through publicity. Therefore, a multi-media campaign, including television advertising was launched in conjunction with Help the Aged, Age Concern and the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux.

Approximately £850,000 is being spent on television advertising, in 1998, to inform pensioners about Winter Fuel Payments.

Television slots are purchased regionally according to the audience profile of programmes. On average, approximately 82 per cent. of the slots fall between 9am-5pm and 18 per cent. between 5pm and 11pm. No slots have been purchased between 11pm and 9am.

The television campaign, which is still running, has been designed to reach over 70 per cent. of the target audience with at least five opportunities to see the advertisement.

There has been no expenditure, in 1998, on television advertising on other benefits.

Social Security Expenditure

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will list the growth rate in expenditure by her Department in real terms and the underlying growth rate for each year since 1979; [30157]

(2) if she will list the total expenditure by her Department on (a) benefits and (b) administration as a proportion of general government expenditure and as a proportion of gross domestic product for each year since 1979. [30156]

Mr. Field: The information is set out in the table.

1. Average real growth pa (growth rate) 3.6%.
2. The "Grand Total Expenditure" expenditure figure includes additional local authority expenditure on Housing and Council Tax Benefits.
3. The figures for GDP are consistent with those published in Pre Budget Report. They include adjustments to remove distortion caused by the abolition of domestic rates.
4. The figures for GGE(X) are consistent with those published July 1997 FSBR and earlier equivalents. They exclude privatisation proceeds, expenditure out of the proceeds of the National Lottery, and receipts of interests and dividends from public corporations and the private sector are netted off.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimates her Department has made of (a) future social security expenditure and (b) future underlying rates of growth; [30052]

(2) what estimates her Department has made of future social security expenditure on benefit payments to the (a) elderly, (b) sick and disabled, (c) family, (d) lone parents, (e) unemployed, and (f) widows and others. [30053]

Mr. Field: The information is set out in the table.

Working Mothers

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 21 January 1998, Official Report, columns 565–66, what are the latest estimates she is collating for labour market participation by lone parents in the United Kingdom; and if she will list the prevailing unemployment rates in each of the counties listed in the years referred to in the answer. [26947]

Mr. Field: The information is not available in the format requested.

The latest estimate from the Spring 1997 Labour Force Survey suggests that the labour market participation rate of lone parents in Great Britain is around 44 per cent.

The prevailing unemployment rates in each of the countries listed in the years referred to in the written answer, 21 January 1998, Official Report, columns 565–66 are given in the table.

Lone Parent Benefits (Newcastle)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of (a) lone parent benefit and (b) lone parent premium there have been in the Newcastle Benefits Agency district since 1992. [26941]

Mr. Field: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave him on 21 January 1998, Official Report, columns 672–73.

Civil Servants

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many civil servants in her Department at each grade for grade 3 or above have (a) resigned, (b) retired before pensionable age and (c) moved to different responsibilities within the department since 1 May 1997; if she will indicate the Minister to whom each was responsible; and if she will make a statement. [26927]

Mr. Field: From 1 April 1996, the Department moved away from grades for staff previously at grade 5 and above, to a system based on nine overlapping pay bands. Posts were scored in a range of 7 to 22, using Job Evaluation of Senior posts (JESP) methodology. Posts with a JESP score of 13 or above are considered to be equivalent to grade 3 or above.

Since 1 May 1997, no civil servants have resigned; no civil servants have retired before pensionable age and one civil servant in a post with a JESP score of 16 has moved to different responsibilities within the Department. The officer was responsible to the Secretary of State.

In addition three such civil servants have transferred to other Government Departments on either a temporary or permanent basis.

Pensioners (Income Support)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner claimants of income support there are broken down by (a) sex, (b) marital status and (c) socio-economic group; and what estimate he has made of future trends in these figures and on what assumptions. [27318]

Mr. Denham: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

Numbers of pensioners receiving Income Support as at May 1997

	All cases	Single claimants	Couples
All cases	1,720,000	1,454,000	266,000
Male	542,000	300,000	242,000
Female	1,178,000	1,154,000	24,000

Notes:

1. Figures are not collected by socio-economic group.
2. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand. Due to rounding, totals may not tally.
3. Pensioners are defined where the claimant or partner is aged 60 or over.
4. Sample size 5 per cent.
5. Numbers exclude claimants who transferred to Income-based Jobseeker's Allowance with effect from October 1996.

Forecast numbers of pensioner benefit units that will receive Income Support in the future

	Number of pensioner benefit units on Income Support
1998–1999	1,805,000
1999–2000	1,808,000

Notes:

1. Figures in the table are average caseloads which underlie the expenditure forecasts given in the 1997 DSS Departmental Report.
2. The forecasts are based on assumptions about the future numbers of pensioners in the population, the proportion of such pensioners that would receive Income Support, and the numbers of such pensioners that would be in residential care or nursing home accommodation. Forecasts of this type are not split by sex, marital status or socio-economic group.

Benefits (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much (a) attendance allowance remained unclaimed by disabled people, (b) income support remained unclaimed by pensioners and (c) social security payments remained unclaimed in Wales in the last year for which figures are available. [27146]

Mr. Denham: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows:

An estimate of take-up of Attendance Allowance for Great Britain, based on the disability follow-up to the 1996–97 Family Resources Survey, should be published later in the year. It may be possible to estimate take-up separately for Wales if sample sizes allow.

It is estimated that, in 1995–96, the amount of Income Support unclaimed by pensioners in Wales was between £60 million and £90 million. In the same year, the total amount of Income Support, Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit and Family Credit unclaimed in Wales is estimated to be between £170 million and £260 million.

Notes:

1. All take-up estimates exclude the self-employed as their entitlement to income-related benefits cannot readily be established from survey data.
2. Estimates for Wales should be regarded as indicative only, as they are based on modest sample sizes.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he will take to increase the level of take up of social security benefits in Wales. [27145]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We would encourage anyone who thinks that they may be entitled to a benefit to make a claim, wherever they live in Britain. We are particularly concerned about the million pensioners not claiming Income Support. We have commissioned research to find out why they do not make a claim, and from April we will be spending £15 million on a number of pilot projects to find the best way of encouraging them to claim. We will take into account any factors which may effect their reluctance to make a claim, including the type of area in which they live.

Drug Addicts

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to ensure access to disability benefit for sufferers of benzodiazipene drug addiction. [26536]

Mr. Denham: Normal entitlement rules apply to people with benzodiazipene drug addiction claiming a disability benefit.

Benefit Increases

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the cost of increasing the basic pension, widows' benefits and long-term incapacity benefit in April 1998 in line with prices; and what would be the additional cost of increasing them in line with average earnings. [26467]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table. The estimated gross additional cost for uprating basic pension and all linked benefits by earnings would be £200 million, rounded to the nearest £10 million.

Cost of the April 1998 RPI uprating

Staff Travel

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total real terms value of (a) staff car mileage claims paid and (b) staff rail fares paid by his Department; for what amount of staff car mileage reimbursement was made; and what was the percentage change on the previous year for each year since 1989–90. [25797]

Mr. Field: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

The amounts shown are composite figures covering motor mileage, rail and air travel and cannot be broken down into specific totals.

Year	Amount of UK travel (£)	Percentage adjustment
1989–90	20,220,472	—
1990–91	24,716,711	+22.2

1995–96	24,158,110	−1.4
1996–97	21,147,786	−14.2

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many staff were employed by her Department; and what percentage of these were eligible to claim a car mileage allowance on 31 March in each year since 1990. [25794]

Mr. Field: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Number of staff employed by the department since 1989

1 April	Staff
1989	83,426
1990	80,890

1994	89,960
1995	89,248
1996	92,114
1997	93,465

Notes:

1. The numbers of staff are expressed as full time equivalents.

2. The information requested on the percentage of staff eligible to claim a car mileage allowance is not available. Detailed records of staff mileage claims are kept and controlled locally across the Department.

Disability Living Allowance

Audrey Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently receiving any element of disability living allowance; and how many are receiving (a) the care component and mobility component at any level, (b) the care component only and (c) the mobility component only. [26405]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average duration of claims for disability living allowance broken down by mobility component and care component. [26160]

Mr. Denham: The average duration for Disability Living Allowance awards of care component is 157 weeks and the average duration for awards of mobility component is 163 weeks.

Notes:

1. The source for these figures is a five per cent. sample of claimant cases and the figures relate to claimants with entitlement to the benefit at 30 November 1997.

2. Disability Living Allowance (DLA) was introduced in April 1992.

3. These figures do not include those in receipt of Attendance Allowance or Mobility Allowance in April 1992 and who were transferred to DLA at that date.

4. No allowance has been made for suspensions in the payment of either DLA component, because data on these is incomplete.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people receiving incapacity benefit also receive disability living allowance, broken down by care and mobility component. [26161]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the tables.

It is not possible to allow for any consequential effects on income related benefit entitlement. Information on net incomes excluding Disability Living Allowance (DLA) is shown in the tables, for income measures as used in Households Below Average Income statistics. These take the income of the households to which DLA recipients belong and adjusts for household size and composition; this gives "equivalised" incomes.

Estimated average value in equivalent £ per week of household income going to DLA claimants with and without DLA, income after housing costs (AHC)

	Average value in £ per week of income with benefit	Average value in £ per week of income without benefit
Average equivalised value	218	172
Corresponding cash values for
Single person	120	95
Couple no children	218	172
Couple 2 children aged 3 and 6	303	239

Notes:

1. By way of comparison average equivalised incomes for the whole population were £289 per week BHC and £250 per week AHC.

2. Figures are rounded to the nearest pound and are in June 1997 prices. The measure of DLA used is combined measure of both the care and mobility elements.

3. Average figures given show equivalent £ per week where income has been adjusted for household size and composition. The table also show the money values this average represents for different household types.

4. This answer draws on the departments Households Below Average Income series based on the Family Resources Survey (FRS) for the 1995–96 financial year and covering Great Britain, and as such the following points should be noted:

(i) Recipients in institutions are not covered by the Family Resources Survey.

(ii) The FRS is a sample survey and all estimates must be treated as approximate.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the change in the number of children claiming disability living allowance since 1983. [27099]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Disability Living Allowance was introduced in 1992. Any child in receipt of Attendance Allowance or Mobility Allowance on this date were transferred to this benefit.

Children claiming Attendance Allowance, Mobility Allowance or Disability Living Allowance

	1983	1997
Children claiming benefit for care needs	[1,3]53,000	[2,4]189,000
Children claiming benefit for mobility needs	[5,6]17,000	[3,7]107,100

[1] Analytical Services Division. Figures estimated from a 100 per cent. count of statistical records adjusted to reflect the extent to which they overstate the number of live cases. Figures rounded to nearest 100.

[2] Analytical Services Division: 5 per cent. data.

[3] Figures relate to people claiming attendance allowance at 31 March 1983.

[4] Figures relate to people claiming disability living allowance care component at 30 November 1997.

[5] All figures relate to children 15 and under except for children claiming benefit for mobility needs where figures are based on 100 per cent. data relate to children aged 14 or under and exclude those with awards under the Vehicle Scheme Regulations of 1977.

[6] Figures relate to people claiming mobility allowance at 31 December 1983.

[7] Figures relate to people claiming disability living allowance mobility component at 30 November 1997.

Figures do not sum as the same child may receive benefit for care and mobility needs.

Mortgage Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost to the Exchequer of introducing a mortgage benefit scheme which treated low income homebuyers not on income support in the same way as low income renters are treated under the housing benefit system. [28018]

Mr. Field: A mortgage benefit for low income homebuyers not on Income Support or income based Jobseeker's Allowance would cost in the region of £750 million in 1997–98, if it was fully taken-up.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost in 1998–99 of paying the full mortgage interest costs of income support recipients from the first day of a claim. [28017]

Mr. Field: The cost of extending help with mortgage interest to all Income Support recipients from the first day of a claim is estimated to be £35 million in 1998–99.

The estimated cost would be £70 million if income based Jobseeker's Allowance recipients were included.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the saving in public expenditure in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2000–01 if income support assistance with mortgage interest costs were not available until (i) 12 months and (ii) 18 months, into an income support claim. [28016]

Mr. Field: The information requested is set out in the table.

Estimated savings in public expenditure from making income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance assistance with mortgage costs unavailable to any borrower until 12 or 18 months into a claim

£ million

Cash prices	12 months	18 months
1998–99	40	40
1999–00	100	155
2000–01	100	170

Notes:

1. The measures apply to all claimants, including those exempt from the current nine month waiting period.
2. There is no knock-on impact on Housing Benefit expenditure (for example as a result of increase re-possessions).
3. All cases where the claim is received before April 1998 are treated under current rules.
4. All figures rounded to the nearest five million.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by her Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28383]

Mr. Field: This Department does not specify any mahogany or any other tropical hardwood in furniture specifications, and has not knowingly acquired any during 1996 and 1997.

People With Brain Injuries

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations she has received from individuals and organisations concerning disability benefits for people suffering from brain injuries. [27951]

Mr. Denham: Several letters, which have been sent by individuals to their Members of Parliament, have been passed to Ministers. These have expressed concern over possible changes to benefits and taxation. They ask us to consider the particular problems of those with brain injuries and to consult fully with organisations representing disabled people.

We have met, and will continue to meet, with people who are sick or disabled and their representatives. These meetings have been very useful in helping us in our considerations during our comprehensive review of spending.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to reduce the waiting times for attendance allowance appeals before the Disability Appeals Service; and if she will make a statement. [27380]

Mr. Field: The operation of the appeals system is a matter for the Independent Tribunal Service.

However, we are determined to reduce the current delays and complexity in the appeals system. The Social Security Bill, which paves the way for modernising the delivery of Social Security, including the handling of appeals, had its second reading in the House of Lords on 15 January. The Secretary of State will assume responsibility for the administration of the appeals system. She will set and publish demanding targets for the administration of appeals, including attendance allowance appeals, and will report on the results.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time an attendance allowance appeal is on the waiting list before being heard by the disability appeals service; what percentage of such appeals succeed; and what estimate she has made of (a) the regional variations in appeal waiting time and (b) the regional variations in appeal success rates. [27379]

Mr. Field: The operation of the appeals system is a matter for the Independent Tribunal Service who report that the information requested is not available in the format requested.

Attendance Allowance appeals are heard by Disability Appeal Tribunals and, in July 1997, the average time from date of appeal to date of decision-issue in an appeal heard by a Disability Appeal Tribunal was 30 weeks. This is based on information provided by the Independent Tribunal Service.

Industrial Injury Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people received industrial injury benefit; and what was the average amount received by each person (a) in Great Britain and (b) on the most disaggregated, regional level in the last year for which figures are available. [27375]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Industrial injuries disablement benefit awards current at 5 April 1997 by Government office region

	Number	Average weekly £ paid
All regions	262,283	29.32

North West	7,242	27.70
Wales	20,829	31.75
Scotland	25,725	30.03
Overseas	3,909	32.96

Note:

Figures are based on a 10 per cent. sample of cases in payment as at 5 April 1997.

Young Unemployed

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people aged 18 to 24 years are estimated to be neither in work, nor in education and training, nor in receipt of Job Seeker's Allowance; and how many of these receive other benefits. [27713]

Mr. Field: The information requested is not available.

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list each major new computer system that (a) her Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under her responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27845]

Mr. Field: This information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department makes extensive use of a range of computer systems to support the administration of Social Security and has been involved in a continuous programme over the past five years of developing and upgrading its major systems. These systems have been either developed "in house" or procured through contracts with the Private Sector. The Department is looking at opportunities to use new computer systems in support of its Modern Service Programme but no commitments have been made for the next financial year.

Lone Parents

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many lone parents will be eligible for assistance under the New Deal in Exeter. [27656]

Mr. Field: The New Deal for Lone Parents is currently available in eight areas around the UK (not including Exeter).

From April 1998, lone parents in Exeter who make a new claim for Income Support will be offered the opportunity to participate in the New Deal for Lone Parents, and from October, the service will be available to all lone parents who are in receipt of Income Support.

Figures of how many lone parents in Exeter are expected to be eligible for the New Deal for Lone Parents are not available. However, the most recent figures available (November 1995) suggests that there were 2,000[1] lone parents in receipt of Income Support within the Exeter Local Authority District, whom 1,000[1] had a youngest child of school age. The New Deal for Lone Parents is primarily aimed at lone parents whose youngest child is at school. However, the service is also available for lone parents with pre-school children.

Benefits Review

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what definition of needy is being used in the current benefits review. [27663]

Mr. Field: The Welfare State exists to prevent poverty where possible and relieve poverty where necessary. Many people need support because they are old or unable to work, and many need extra help because of a disability. We are committed to providing this support.

We also believe that work is the best form of welfare for people of working age. That is why we are committed to reforming the welfare system around the work ethic, to provide new opportunities to those whose greatest need is help and encouragement in returning to and staying in work.

Maternity Pay

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 23 January 1998, Official Report, column 737, if she will list the number of women receiving statutory maternity pay in the most convenient available bands showing the amount of maternity pay per week for the latest 12 months for which figures are available. [26268]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Number of recipients of Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP), total amounts of SMP and average amounts of SMP by amount of the weekly earnings related portion of SMP for GB, 1995–96

Weekly amount of SMP (earnings related portion)	Number in receipt of SMP (000s)[1]	Total amount of SMP millions[2]	Average amount of SMP[3]

[3] Rounded to the nearest hundred.

Note:
The figures are based on an estimate of those whose whole period of SMP is within the 1995–96 tax year and excludes those whose claim straddles two tax years. The total number in receipt of SMP in that year was around 321,000.

Source:
The Lifetime Labour Market Database (LLMDB) a 1 per cent. sample of the National Insurance Recording System taken at February 1997.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what reduction in expenditure would have resulted from limiting the earnings-related element of statutory maternity pay to the weekly earnings level implied by the upper earnings limit for national insurance in the financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97; and how many claimants of statutory maternity pay would have had their payment limited in each year. [25001]

Mr. Denham: The latest available information is for the 1995–96 tax year. 11,000 recipients of Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP) (in Great Britain) would have had their earnings related element of SMP reduced if there was a limit on the amount of SMP paid equivalent to the weekly upper earnings limit on which National Insurance contributions are payable. The estimated savings made by reducing their amount of SMP to the weekly upper earnings limit would have been £9.6 million in 1995–96.

Industrial Disablement Benefit

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will specify by region (a) the number of claimants of industrial disablement benefit and (b) the annual amount claimed by way of industrial disablement benefit. [26259]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will assess the advantages of allowing invalid care allowance to be paid in addition to a state-funded pension. [23351]

Mr. Denham: It remains a basic principle of the Social Security system that only one benefit at a time can be paid to a person for income maintenance. Invalid Care Allowance (ICA) is designed to provide a measure of income maintenance during periods in which the claimant cannot work because of caring commitments. To pay in full in addition to another income maintenance benefit such as Retirement Pension, would be duplicating provision for the same need.

When a person is eligible for more than one benefit at the same time however, there are safeguards to ensure that she does not lose financially. In practice, Retirement Pension (RP) is paid in full taking precedence because it is the contributory benefit. If RP is higher then ICA, as frequently happens, no ICA is payable. However, if ICA is higher, then the "extra" is used to top-up the RP to the ICA rate.

Council Tax Benefit

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list for each local authority the number of households in receipt of (a) any amount of council tax benefit and (b) council tax benefit covering 100 per cent. of council tax; and if she will give the figure in each case expressed as a proportion of the total number of households in each local authority. [24520]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 23 January 1998]: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table "Numbers of Council Tax Benefit Recipients in England, Wales and Scotland". Copies of the table have been placed in the Library.

Most Council Tax Benefit recipients who are also in receipt of Income Support or income based Jobseeker's Allowance will, unless there are deductions for non dependants, be receiving Council Tax Benefit covering 100 per cent. of their council tax.

Mortgage Payments

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the impact on those who have taken out mortgage indemnity insurance and subsequently become unemployed of the recent court judgment that these mortgage payments constitute income which is to be set against benefits; and if she will amend the regulations to ensure that home owners are not discouraged from insuring their mortgage payments. [25412]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Payments from mortgage payment protection policies are treated differently from payments from other creditor insurance on which subject Departmental officials and representatives of the insurance industry have recently held a number of meetings. Mortgage payment protection insurance used to pay the normal liabilities associated with a mortgage, such as capital, endowments and PEPs is generally ignored in the calculation of benefit. If payment is made direct to the lender, the full amount is ignored. If paid direct to the borrower, the amount of income taken into account in Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance is the excess after payments for housing costs and other related insurance liabilities are deducted. Where benefit includes an amount for mortgage interest (ISMI), the insurance income is taken into account up to the amount of ISMI payable. In Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefits, payments for building insurance and mortgage payment protection premiums are taken into account.

All Social Security regulations are kept under review and the treatment of income from mortgage protection insurance is currently being considered as part of the Department of Environment Transport and Regions led Housing Review.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage and number of (a) single pensioners and (b) pensioner couples have (i) an income not including the state pension and (ii) an income not including any state benefits of at least (1) £125 per week and (2) £150 per week. [25301]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Income of pensioner units not including the state pension

		£125 and over	£150 and over
Singles	Number	750,000	550,000
	Percentage of singles	17	12

	Percentage of singles	13	11
Couples	Number	1,050,000	900,000
	Percentage of couples	38	33

Notes:

1. The information is based on gross unequivalised weekly income before housing costs at July 1995 prices. Reported incomes from the State pension and all benefits were subtracted to give the income distribution shown. The results are based on survey respondents' identification of different elements of benefit income, and therefore are subject to mis-reporting. It is not possible to distinguish between the different elements of the State pension on the Family Expenditure Survey. Therefore, the estimate of State pension income will include basic, SERPS and the graduated pension. As the estimates are based on survey respondents' identification of different elements of benefit income the estimates are subject to mis-reporting.
2. The Pensioners' Income Series gives estimates for pensioner units. A pensioner unit is defined as a single person over State Pension Age (SPA) or a couple where the man, defined as the head, is over SPA.
3. Numbers of pensioners units are rounded to the nearest 50,000 percentages to the nearest 1 per cent.

Interest Rate Calculation

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the effects of a change in the way the standard interest rate is calculated by including mortgage lenders which have converted to banks on (a) the level of the standard interest rate and (b) the cost to the Government. [24400]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The standard rate for mortgage interest payments for people on benefits would currently be 8.17 per cent. if mortgage rates of the largest banks, including building societies which have recently converted to banks, had been included equally with the main building society rates. This estimate is based on current averages of the largest building societies and banks basic mortgage rates. However, historically the gap between the mortgage rates of the two has been significantly smaller than at present and the rates might converge once again in the future. How the interest rates of banks and building societies move relative to each other in the future is, however, impossible to tell.

Incapacity Benefit

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of incapacity benefit would qualify for means-tested benefits if incapacity benefit were withdrawn. [27665]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Estimate of the additional number of people who would become entitled to the various income related benefits if incapacity benefit were withdrawn

Benefit	Numbers
Income Support	400,000
Housing Benefit	50,000
Council Tax Benefit	240,000
Family Credit	20,000

Notes:

1. Numbers based on caseload figures as at 31 August 1997 rounded to nearest 10,000.
2. It is assumed that Incapacity Benefit recipients over State pension age would claim Retirement Pension. Some may incur a loss as Retirement Pension is taxable where in prescribed circumstances Incapacity Benefit is not. It is not, however, possible to estimate the proportion of this group which might claim income related benefits with any accuracy.
3. Figures in the right hand column cannot be summed as one claimant may be entitled to a number of different benefits.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 26 January 1998, Official Report, column 107, on disability benefits, if she will list the benefits which (a) have been reviewed and (b) are still subject to review. [27281]

Mr. Denham: Our Comprehensive Spending Review covers all Social Security benefits paid on account of incapacity for work, disability and caring. The review is on-going.

Pensions Statistics

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many United Kingdom citizens (a) own personal pensions and (b) are members of occupational pension schemes, broken down according to (i) sex, (ii) age groups 21 to 30, 31 to 40, 41 to 50 and 51 to 60 years, (iii) marital status, (iv) employment in the categories (1) working full-time, (2) part-time, (3) housewife, (4) unemployed, (v) number of dependent children aged 0 to 4, 5 to 10 and 11 to 16 years and (6) socio-economic group; and what estimates she has made of how these figures will change in the future. Notes:

1. All figures have been rounded to the nearest 0.1 million.
2. The figures are based on information from the 1995 General Household Survey (GHS). The 1995 survey is the latest for which data is available.
3. All figures refer to Great Britain.
4. The figures refer to people who belong to their present employer's occupational pension scheme, or who currently have a personal pension.
5. Proportions estimated from the 1995 GHS have been applied to Office of National Statistics (ONS) total population estimates for mid-year in 1995 in order to give an indication of the likely number of people in each category. In doing this, it is assumed that the respondents are representative of the overall population of Great Britain. The figures may not be representative in all aspects and so should be treated with caution.
6. The General Household Survey does not include citizens currently living in institutions such as prisons, hospitals and university halls of residence.
7. Data is only available for both male and female homemakers combined rather than just housewives.
8. The data for full-time and part-time workers who have accrued personal pension benefit entitlements excludes self-employed people.
9. Data giving the number of dependent children in the 0 to 4, 5 to 10 and 11 to 16 age groups that respondents had was not available. Figures are shown by whether the respondents had at least one child aged between 0 and 4 or all their children aged between 5 and 15.
10. No estimates have been made of how these figures will change in the future.

IT Equipment

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much in total has been spent by (a) her Department's agencies and (b) centrally on (i) the Smartcard payment system, (ii) on-line data and information systems in standard and cash prices in the financial years (1) 1994–95, (2) 1995–96 and (3) 1996–97; and how much is proposed to be spent in the current and two succeeding financial years. [26943]

Mr. Denham: The Department does not have a Smartcard payments system. The Benefits Agency is involved with Post Office Counters Ltd in a project to introduce a magnetic stripe Payment Card which will eventually replace order books and girocheques. This is being taken forward as a Private Finance Initiative and the cost of developing and managing the new Payment Card Service is borne by the supplier.

The cost to the Benefits Agency of administrating the project is set out in table 1. These prices could change if current planning assumptions for the introduction of the Payment Card are varied. The cost of developing the Benefits Agency systems to support the new payment method is included in the total Departmental spend on its data and information systems set out in table 2.

The total amount spent by the Department and its Agencies on its data and information systems in the years 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 is set out in the table in cash terms and adjusted to 1997–98 prices. An estimate for 1997–98 expenditure is included but plans for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 are yet to be finalised.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will ensure that statistics relating to the Benefit Integrity Project distinguish between (a) reviews of life awards and (b) renewal claims of disability living allowance. [29691]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Benefits should go to those who are properly entitled to benefit. This is why we have continued with Benefit Integrity Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Rendel, dated 16 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question, concerning if she will ensure that statistics relating to the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) distinguish between (a) reviews of life awards and (b) renewal claims of Disability Living Allowance (DLA).

The BIP is looking again at designated DLA beneficiaries' current care and mobility needs. Information is collected through a programme of visits and postal enquiries. Selection of customers who will receive either a visit or a postal enquiry will be done monthly, on a random basis, by computer scan. The customers involved will be those with awards of the higher rate of the mobility component combined with either the highest or the middle rate of the care component. During the period covered by BIP, some restricted awards in the above categories will expire and fall due for renewal.

Statistics are available for renewal, postal and visit enquiries. We do not distinguish between life awards and restricted awards and there are no current plans to do so.

Information about the BIP is placed in the House of Commons Library each month.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls have been received on the benefit fraud hot line in each month since it was established. [29719]

Mr. Denham: Tackling fraud and abuse is a top priority for the Government.

Questions on Benefit Agency operational matters are the responsibility of the Chief Executive, Peter Mathison. He will write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Peter Lilley, dated 16 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many calls have been received on the benefit fraud hot line in each month since it was established.

Since its launch on 5 August 1996 to the end of January 1998, the National Benefit Fraud Hotline has received 359,684 calls. The monthly breakdown from August 1996 to January 1998 inclusive is shown in the attached annex.

Future opportunity for publicity is currently under consideration.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

National benefit fraud hotline monthly breakdown of calls received

Month/Year	Period of calls (weeks)	Number of calls received
August 1996	4	41,826
September 1996	5	32,633
October 1996	4	22,360
November 1996	4	21,805
December 1996	4	14,139
January 1997	4	15,831
February 1997	4	27,075
March 1997	5	31,185
April 1997	4	18,680
May 1997	4	15,072
June 1997	4	16,272
July 1997	5	18,808
August 1997	4	14,755
September 1997	4	12,362
October 1997	5	17,076
November 1997	4	11,770
December 1997	4	8,970
January 1998	5	19,065
Total		359,684

Note:

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the number of people who are (a) claiming benefits fraudulently and (b) not claiming benefits to which they are entitled in (i) Great Britain and (ii) Scotland. [26091]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 3 February 1998]: The estimate of the number of people claiming fraudulently is informed by an extrapolation from the results of a series of benefit reviews. The Benefit Review programme which commenced in 1994 is looking at the extent of fraud and incorrectness in all major benefits. The benefit reviews were conducted under the previous administration and the definition of fraud used to produce results is currently being evaluated. All the figures presented are consistent with the results of the benefit reviews. The results should not be added together as some people will be committing fraud on several benefits and the reviews all refer to different periods. All the figures refer to Great Britain, separate estimates for Scotland are not available.

Benefit	% of confirmed fraud or strong suspicion of fraud found within the cases examined	Year of Benefit Review	Numbers claiming benefit at a point in that year (thousands)	Estimated number of people committing fraud at the date of review. Based on random sample of claims (thousands)
Income Support	11.1	1996–97	5,553	620
Housing Benefit	6.3	1995–96	4,784	300
Disability Living Allowance	12.2	1995–96	1,688	210
Invalid Care Allowance	6.5	1995–96	325	21
Retirement Pension	less than 0.013	1995–96	10,304	less than 13
Unemployment Benefit	7.8	1994–95	470	37

An additional indicator is the number of successful investigations. These are cases where, following a fraud investigation, one or a combination of the following conclusions occurs: benefit is reduced or stopped, an overpayment is calculated or a prosecution instigated. During 1996–97, 524,966 successful fraud investigations into claims administered by the Benefits Agency were carried out in Great Britain, of which 58,891 refer to investigations within Scotland.

Not all successful investigations result in a prosecution. The Benefits Agency prosecutes only the more serious cases of benefit fraud to act as a deterrent. Local authorities are responsible for the administration of Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit. The total number of Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit cases where fraud was established and a weekly benefit saving claimed for the year 1996–97 in Great Britain was 190,000, of these, 12,000 were in Scotland.

Successful investigations cannot be added to the results of the reviews to inform a total figure. The reviews are a snapshot of the level of fraud at the time the review was carried out, and these estimates can change.

The total number of people not claiming Income Related Benefits in 1995–96, were estimated to be between 2.9 and 4.5 million in Great Britain, and between 250,000 and 400,000 in Scotland. Estimates for other benefits are not available.

Notes:

1. Income Related Benefits refer to Income Support, Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit and Family Credit. All estimates exclude the self-employed as their entitlement to income-related benefits cannot be readily established from survey data.

2. The estimate for Scotland should be regarded as indicative only, as it is based on modest sample sizes.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many overseas visits have been made by his Department's political advisers at public expense since 1 May. [25159]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 23 January 1998]: Special Advisors have accompanied Ministers on 15 occasions, in accordance with the guidelines set out in paragraph 84 of the Ministerial Code of Conduct and Guidance on Procedures published in July 1977. These guidelines are the same as those operated by the previous Government.

Ministerial Address

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a video copy of his address to a joint meeting of the staff of the Department of the Environment and the Department of Transport in Central Hall, Westminster. [28910]

Angela Eagle: No. The Deputy Prime Minister's address to staff of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions in Central Hall, Westminster was an internal departmental matter.

Road Accidents

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) cyclists and (b) pedestrians have been (i) killed and (ii) seriously injured by motor vehicles in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [29377]

Cyclist and pedestrian casualties in accidents involving motor vehicles: GB 1996

			Casualties
Road user	Fatal	Serious	All
Pedestrian	995	10,514	46,018
Pedal cyclist	186	3,260	23,340

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many pedestrians have been (a) killed and (b) seriously injured by cyclists in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [29376]

Number of pedestrian casualties in accidents involving a cycle: GB 1996

	Casualties
Severity	Number
Fatal	2
Serious	90
All	364

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the projected increase against current levels in freight use of the Channel Tunnel once the high-speed rail link is opened. [29495]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Channel Tunnel Rail Link will have the potential to be used by high speed freight services, but its main contribution to increased rail freight will come through the capacity that its use by Eurostar services will release on the existing network. The take-up of the available capacity will depend on demand.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) passenger and (b) freight trains per day are projected to use the high-speed rail link. [29498]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The extra capacity provided by the Channel Tunnel Rail Link (CTRL) under the Development Agreement with London and Continental Railways, will enable the number of international Eurostar services in peak periods to be more than doubled to eight an hour in each direction. For domestic passengers, the Development Agreement reserves capacity of up to eight trains an hour for new Kent commuter services during the morning and evening peak periods. The CTRL is also required to have the potential for use by high speed freight services.

Radioactive Waste

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year since 1995 those sites specified in authorisations issued under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 to receive low level radioactive waste, indicating the annual volume and isotopic content of wastes received at each site and the origin of such wastes; and if he will make a statement. [29418]

Angela Eagle: I have been advised by the Environment Agency in respect of England and Wales, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency and by the Environment and Heritage Service in Northern Ireland that the information requested is not held centrally.

The BNFL site at Drigg in Cumbria receives the largest volume and activity of low level radioactive waste in the United Kingdom. The majority of waste sent to Drigg for disposal arises from the nuclear industry. Data relating to disposals of low level radioactive waste at BNFL Drigg for 1995 and 1996 are as follows:

Radionuclide	Radioactivity disposed (TBq) 1995	1996	Authorised Limit (TBq)
Tritium	0.34	0.41	10
Carbon-14	0.010	0.005	0.05
Cobalt-60[1]	0.36	0.25	2
Iodine-129	0.0018	0.00017	0.05
Others[2]	6.0	3.6	15
Radium-226 and Thorium-232	0.005	0.005	0.03
Uranium	0.024	0.10	0.3
Other alpha[3]	0.09	0.10	0.3
Volume (m^3)	13,200	10,500

[1] The cobalt-60 figure is included in the 'other' as well as shown separately.

[2] Defined in the current authorisation as:

i. iron 55 and beta emitting radionuclides with half lives greater than three months (excluding carbon-14, iodine-129 and tritium)

ii. not more than 2 TBq may be Cobalt-60.

[3] Alpha emitting radionuclides with half-lives greater than three months excluding uranium, radium-226 and thorium-232.

The site in Scotland at which the largest volume and activity of low level radioactive waste is disposed is at Dounreay, Caithness. Virtually all of the waste disposed of at Dounreay arises from the nuclear industry. Data relating to disposals of solid radioactive waste at Dounreay for 1995 and 1996 are as follows:

Year	Volume (m^3)	α (Gbq)	βγ (GBq)
1995	446	39	223
1996	153	15	367

Only one site in Northern Ireland, at Dargan Road near Belfast, has been used for the disposal of low level radioactive waste since 1995. The volume of radioactive waste disposed of each year at this site is approximately 50 cubic metres. Details of the activity are in the table.

Radionuclide	Radioactivity Disposed (MBq) 1995	1996
Tritium	92.807	31.295
Carbon-14	6.03	736.276
Other isotopes with a half life less than 1 year	2199.67	884.4
Other isotopes with a half life greater than 1 year	9.5	0
Waste Technetium-99 columns[1]	50	0

[1] The level of radioactivity associated with each column is of the order of 0.01 MBq.

There are in addition 12 landfill sites in England and Wales, 12 in Scotland and three in Northern Ireland where disposal of low level radioactive waste is authorised. I refer the hon. member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 19 November 1997, Official Report, columns 202–03, where these are listed. Around 35 incinerators are also authorised in the United Kingdom for the disposal of low level radioactive waste.

The nature of the waste disposed of at landfill sites varies from industrial residues containing naturally occurring radioactive material to small quantities of radioactive wastes from universities and hospitals. The type of wastes which are incinerated are predominately hospital patient care wastes and research wastes which contain small amounts of radioisotopes such as Iodine-131, Tritium and Carbon-14.

Aircraft Noise

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the advantages of imposing an annual noise limit on aircraft movements at each of the main United Kingdom airports. [29752]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are at present no provisions to impose limits of this kind centrally, though they may be applicable under planning conditions at particular airports. We are currently reviewing policy on aircraft noise near airports in the light of responses to the consultation on integrated transport policy.

Night Flights

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many flights at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Stansted arrived or departed within the night quota period but were not counted against this quota in the last three years; and for what reasons. [29705]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The following information on aircraft not counted against the movements limits and noise quotas is taken from the regular monitoring returns provided by the three airport companies. The night restrictions are set on a seasonal basis. The seasons change with the clocks.

Exempt Types: Jet aircraft with a maximum certificated weight not exceeding 11,600 kg and propeller aircraft are exempt from the movements limits and noise quotas restrictions if their noise data are classified at less than 87 EPNdB.
Note 1: Early: Scheduled to land after 0630, but lands before 0600—flight counts against the movements limit but not the noise quota.
Note 2: Dispensations granted from both movements limit and noise quota for delays likely to lead to serious congestion and delays resulting from widespread disruption of Air Traffic.
Note 3: Exemptions from counting against the movements limit and noise quota granted by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions (VIP Passengers, Emergency Relief).
Note 4: Exemptions from counting against the movements limit and noise quota for emergency take-offs and landings.

Investment Agreement

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment on the powers of regional development agencies. [29663]

Mr. Caborn: The Multilateral Agreement on Investment is currently being negotiated at the OECD. Parties to the Agreement will be required not to discriminate against foreign investors. Since Regional Development Agencies will not discriminate in this way, there is no reason why the Agreement should have an impact on them.

Housing Spending Review

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when he expects to announce the outcome of the housing spending review; [29668]

(2) if he will make a statement on the procedures for consultations on proposals arising from the housing spending review. [29669]

Mr. Raynsford: The Housing Comprehensive Spending Review has received detailed submissions from all the major housing bodies and from other groups with an interest in housing policy. Their views have been taken into account throughout the Review. Discussions have been held with many of the bodies concerned and there will be further meetings as the review is carried forward. The findings of the Review will emerge in Summer as part of the Government's future spending plans. We will consult as necessary on the implementation of proposals.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his assessment of the timetable for the revision of Council Directive 90/220/EEC; and if he will make a statement. [29713]

Mr. Meacher: The European Commission presented a proposal for revision of directive 90/220 at the last Environment Council, and is expected to publish the formal proposal in the next few weeks. The UK intends to hold a preliminary discussion at the June Council.

Following normal procedures, we would expect it to take several years before agreement on the directive could be reached across the Community.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what investigations of Novartis genetically-modified maize he has commissioned; and if he will make a statement. [29714]

Mr. Meacher: Competent Authorities from Member States have considered two applications for approval to market genetically modified maize under the provisions of Directive 90/220/EEC from companies which are now part of the Norvatis group. In the UK, the dossiers of information including an assessment of the risks to human health and the environment have been considered by officials and expert advice was sought from the relevant Advisory Committees. In addition in both cases the applications have been considered by the Commission's expert committees. My Department sees no need to commission any further investigation into Norvatis genetically modified maize.

An application (C/F/4/11–3) was submitted by Ciba-Geigy to the French Competent Authority for unrestricted marketing of maize resistant to corn borers. After due consideration by the French Authorities, other Member States and the appropriate commission scientific committees it was granted an approval by the French Authorities on 5 February 1997.

An application (C/GB/96/M4/1) was submitted by Northrup King Company to the Great Britain Competent Authority to market maize resistant to corn borers to be imported, stored and processed to non-viable products and to be used for animal feeds. After due consideration the dossier has been forwarded to the European Commission with a favourable opinion. A decision from other Member States is awaited following consideration by the Commission's scientific committee.

A summary of these dossiers is on the public register at the Department and a copy of the dossiers is available on request.

Sea Empress

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total cost of the clean up operation following the 'Sea Empress' disaster; and what estimate he has made of the cost of the disaster to (a) the fishing industry in the area and (b) the local tourist industry. [29685]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government recently presented the following information, which gives our official estimates of the costs arising from the Sea

Empress grounding, at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund.

£ millions

	Low	High
Clean-up operations	22	23
Fishing Industry	8	11
Tourist Industry	2	3
Total	32	37

Household Projections

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the methodology and (b) the mathematical processes used to calculate the 1992-based household projections. [29801]

Mr. Raynsford: Descriptions of the methodology and main statistical assumptions underlying the 1992-based household projections are set out in the annexes of "Projections of Households in England to 2016", published by the Stationary Office in March 1995. A copy of this publication is in the Library of the House.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what advice his Department has given to other Government Departments about the use of environmental appraisals in respect of new policy. [29807]

Angela Eagle: The importance of environmental appraisal was discussed at the first meeting of Green Ministers following the Election, on 31 July 1997. At that meeting Green Ministers committed themselves to ensure that environmental issues were considered in the development of all Government policies.

Details of current and proposed guidance by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions to Government Departments on environmental appraisal are set out in the answer which my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment gave to the hon. Member for Truro and St. Austell (Mr. Taylor) on 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 460.

Air Pollution

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to combat air pollution with particular reference to ground level ozone. [29815]

Angela Eagle: Ground level ozone is a problem which requires action at the international level. Several initiatives will help to combat ground level ozone. The Government hope to achieve common position under the UK Presidency on a Solvents directive reducing the emissions of ozone pre-cursors. The Government are negotiating under the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe a Protocol on Nitrogen Oxides and related substances which will deal, amongst other issues, with ground level ozone. The UK is participating in the technical work that will contribute to the European Commission's proposed Ozone Strategy. The Commission is also preparing a directive on ground level ozone which will set environmental quality objectives. The Government intend to produce a consultation paper later in the year on a scheme, known as "Stage II", to reduce petrol vapour emissions from petrol filling stations.

Drugs (Drivers)

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to test drivers suspected of being under the influence of illegal drugs. [30155]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under existing legislation the police have powers to arrest a driver whom they suspect of being impaired through drugs, and to require the provision of a specimen for testing. We have at present no plans to extend those powers.

We announced on 11 February a forthcoming roadside trial of drug screening devices by the police. Its purpose is to establish whether the devices are sufficiently robust and practical for conditions likely to be encountered at the roadside, and not to test for the presence of drugs or to assess the accuracy of the devices. Drivers will be asked to volunteer to participate in the trial but those who are obviously impaired through alcohol or drugs will not be asked to volunteer, and will be dealt with by the police using their existing powers.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the extent to which illegal drug use is a contributory factor to road accidents. [30154]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department is currently conducting a study into the incidence of drugs in road accident fatalities. While this is a useful step towards understanding the nature and scale of the problem the findings do not indicate whether drugs were a contributory factor in the accidents concerned. It is very difficult to obtain precise data. A number of institutions world wide are considering the problem and the Department is carefully monitoring evidence in this area.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which medicinal drugs were detected in the Government's recent study of drug driving; and what percentage of medicinal drugs which can impair drivers' reactions could not be traced by the test used. [29844]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 February 1998]: The Department's recent study tested for three of the major groups of medicinal drugs known to impair drivers' reactions: benzodiazepines, tricyclic antidepressants and opiates.

The only significant group of medicinal drugs not traced in the tests, but which can impair drivers' reactions, were antihistamines. In a similar study carried out in 1985–87, antihistamines were present in only 0.9 per cent. of cases. The incidence of those medicinal drugs tested for has not changed significantly since the last study and we have no reason to assume that there would be significant changes in the incidence of antihistamines either.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what percentage of the bodies of road fatalities in which traces of cannabis was detected in his recent test alcohol was also found. [29840]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 February 1998]: Alcohol at some level above 10mg per 100 ml of blood was present in about one-third of the fatalities in which traces of illegal drugs—including cannabis—were detected.

Nuclear Sites (Emergency Plans)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 3 December 1997, Official Report, column 222, on nuclear emergency plans, what payment W. S. Atkins received from the HSE for carrying out the review; for how many hours work; and if he will make a statement. [29821]

Angela Eagle: The payment made by the Health and Safety Executive for the professional services rendered by W. S. Atkins Science and Technology for the review of extendibility of local authority plans for responding to nuclear emergencies was £6,700. The time spent by W. S. Atkins in researching and writing the report was approximately 100 staff hours.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many contracts of a value greater than £10,000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30138]

Angela Eagle: It is not possible to provide details of contracts with companies in each area as this information is not centrally held.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30137]

Angela Eagle: The information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Funding

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the public funding given to (a) London Underground and (b) the London Docklands Development Corporation in each of the last 15 years. [30140]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Government funding is provided to London Transport, rather than its constituent businesses. The distribution of grant by LT between London Underground Limited and its other businesses is a matter for LT, subject to some grant being ringfenced by the Government for certain purposes. Total public funding in 1997–98 prices provided to London Transport and the London Docklands Development Corporation in each of the last 15 years is shown in the table.

1997–98[5]	759	92

[1] These figures are different from those previously announced because cash figures have been converted to constant prices using the latest HM Treasury GDP deflators, published in November 1997.

[2] LDDC acquired Docklands Light Railway on 1 April 1992. Figures include grant-in-aid for the Docklands Light Railway from 1992–93 onwards.

[3] London Transport figure refers to calendar year 1983.

[4] In addition to grant, LT benefitted in 1994–95 from £144 million (1997–98 prices) proceeds from the sale of London Buses Limited subsidiaries.

[5] London Transport figure is a forecast out-turn which does not take account of possible carry-forward of grant to 1998–99 of up to £129.5m.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what financial assistance his Department has given to date to the Jubilee Line extension; and what estimate he has made of his Department's expenditure on this project for each of the next five years. [30142]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department provides ringfenced grant to London Transport towards the cost of the Jubilee Line Extension (JLE) Total ringfenced grant up to 1996–97 was £1,574 million. The remaining £341 million ringfenced grant will be paid over this financial year and next financial year: £295 million in 1997–98 and £46 million in 1998–99.

The Department also provides London Transport with non-ringfenced grant for its various businesses. London Transport allocates some of this to the JLE (£48 million up to 1996–97). LT's most recent forecast of future allocation of non-ringfenced grant to the JLE is £216 million in 1997–98, £165 million in 1998–99, £117 million in 1999–2000 and nothing thereafter.

These figures exclude investment in the core network being carried out as part of the JLE project.

The private sector has also contributed over £100 million to the cost of the project and will provide further contributions totalling over £300 million in instalments over a 25-year period.

Financial Assistance

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the total value of financial assistance packages, including tax and rates relief, offered to companies in enterprise zones in (a) the City of London, (b) Docklands, (c) London, (d) the South East of England, (e) England and (f) total in the last year for which figures are available. [30169]

Angela Eagle: The only Enterprise Zone in London was the Isle of Dogs Enterprise Zone designated 26 April 1982 and de-designated on 25 April 1992. The only Enterprise Zone in South-East England was North West Kent designated 31 October 1983 and de-designated on 30 October 1993 with an extended area designated on 10 October 1986 and de-designated on 9 October 1996. The total value of financial assistance packages, including tax and rates relief, offered to companies in Enterprise Zones in 1991–92 (the last full year of the Isle of Dogs Enterprise Zone) was as follows:

Type of financial assistance	Docklands (Isle of Dogs EZ)	SE England (NW Kent EZ)	England EZs (21)	All EZs (28)
Rate revenue foregone	28,100	3,900	62,405	69,796

Note:
The estimated net cost to Exchequer of capital allowances in EZs in Great Britain November 1991-November 1992 was £15 million. A breakdown of this figure between individual EZs is not available.

The total value of financial assistance packages, including tax and rates relief, offered to companies in Enterprise Zones in 1996–97 (the last year for which figures are available) was as follows:

£,000

Type of financial assistance	SE England (NW Kent EZ)	England EZs (6)	All EZs (8)
Rate revenue foregone	1,423	5,175	8,094
Exchequer cost of capital allowances	0	9,321	11,215
Total	1,423	14,496	19,309

Transport Projects

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the total financial support his Department has given to transport projects in (a) London, (b) the South East of England and (c) England for each of the last 10 years. [30141]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Expenditure by central Government on transport projects is not in all cases broken down by country or region, and there are therefore practical difficulties in providing an accurate and consistent breakdown in this way. The following table provides estimates of how General Government Expenditure for transport programmes benefits the relevant populations of England and South East England. The figures include the Department's direct financial support for transport (including the support the Department gives to local authorities for transport-related expenditure), local authorities self financed transport expenditure and Government support for nationalised industries and public corporations.

As a proportion of this expenditure may also have been incurred for the benefit of the South East, expenditure figures for England cannot readily be compared with those for the South East.

Note:
[1,2] and [3] Care should be taken in drawing comparisons between different years due to differences in the amount of expenditure which could be disaggregated between countries or regions at the time of data collection.

Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses.

The figures for London in the following table are not directly comparable with those for England and South East England as they are derived from a different source and include different elements of expenditure. Figures include grant for London Transport, support for local authority expenditure via Transport Policies and Programmes and some Government Office programme expenditure. However, figures exclude expenditure on trunk roads in London and local authorities self financed expenditure.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30135]

Angela Eagle: We do not hold a central record of the staff costs by region for the centre, the 9 Executive Agencies and staff employed in the Government Offices. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Marine Rescue

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many incidents were handled by each of the marine rescue co-ordination centres and marine rescue sub-centres of Her Majesty's Coastguard in (a) 1996 and (b) 1997; and how many of these were (i) false alarms and (ii) hoax calls. [30001]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is detailed in the tables.

Estates Renewal Challenge Fund

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce the allocations for the 1998–99 round of the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund. [30676]

Ms Armstrong: I shall be announcing allocations for the 1998–99 round of the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund tomorrow and shall place copies of the press notice detailing the successful authorities in the Libraries of both Houses.

National Bus Pension Fund

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if his Department has replied to a request from NBC Pension Trustees Ltd for funds to commence a legal action on the National Bus Pension Fund following a decision by the Pensions Ombudsman. [30678]

Mr. Prescott: After fully considering the legal advice and the relevant background, I have authorised my Department to reply to NBC Pension Trustees Ltd. offering to meet the trustees' costs with respect to a legal action on the National Bus Pension Fund.

This offer is consistent with my hope that all outstanding legal matters concerning the former National Bus Company pension funds are satisfactorily resolved as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 18 February. [29276]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. Later today, in addition to my duties in the House, I will attend a dinner in the City with Chancellor Kohl.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Action 2000

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new information and advice will be offered under the planned expansion of Action 2000's telephone helpline service. [29746]

Mrs. Roche: I understand from Action 2000 that they plan to expand their telephone hotline service to offer a wider range of advice and good practice material, routes to training and employment opportunities and further case study material.

Investment Agreement

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she has proposed exemptions for United Kingdom local authorities under the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [29667]

Mrs. Roche: The key principle of MAI is non-discrimination against foreign investors. The UK has submitted national exceptions as part of the MAI process to cover those areas where our policy towards investors may discriminate on the basis of nationality. The MAI will not stand in the way of non-discriminatory regulation and, as discrimination against investors on the grounds of nationality is not a factor in UK local authority decisions, such exceptions are unnecessary.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade to what extent the responsibilities of transnational corporations will be defined and clarified in the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [29664]

Mrs. Roche: Companies are always subject to the national laws of the countries in which they operate. We are, in addition, pressing for the MAI to have closely associated with it the 1976 OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises which encourage good corporate behaviour.

Research and Development

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 162, on research and development, what research her Department is assisting in Lancashire; and if she will list the assisted projects in Chorley. [28453]

Mr. Battle: We are assisting several projects in Lancashire through SPUR (Support for products under research) and SMART—feasibility projects for companies with up to 50 employees. SPUR ended in April 1997 and became incorporated in the new SMART scheme. Grants for the last year are listed. No projects have been funded in the constituency of Chorley.

The Office of Science and Technology also provides funding through its LINK programme. Support is also provided for basic and strategic research undertaken in Higher Education Institutes. Information on expenditure by County is not held centrally.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons Her Majesty's Government have agreed to exempt military plutonium in the United Kingdom from safeguards applied by the International Atomic Energy Agency's guidelines for the management of plutonium. [28470]

Mrs. Roche: The guidelines for the management of plutonium were agreed among an informal group of nine countries, including the United Kingdom, to improve transparency and public confidence in the management of national holdings of civil plutonium. (I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry gave on 2 December 1997, Official Report, column 164. The guidelines apply to the management of all plutonium in all peaceful nuclear activities, and to other plutonium after it has been designated by the Government concerned as no longer required for defence purposes.

All nuclear material, including plutonium, which is required by the United Kingdom for national security reasons is specifically excluded from IAEA safeguards under Article 1(a) of the UK/Euratom/IAEA safeguards agreement (INFCIRC/263) of October 1978. Although the plutonium guidelines themselves do not deal with safeguards, in its Note Verbal associated with the guidelines, the United Kingdom reaffirms it commitment to submit to safeguards by the IAEA on a voluntary basis under its safeguards agreement with the IAEA and Euratom, or by the Commission of the European Community under the Euratom Treaty, all plutonium in peaceful nuclear activities, including any plutonium transferred from military activities to peaceful nuclear activities.

Arms Sales

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 662, on payments due on arms sales to far eastern countries, if she will list (a) the countries involved, (b) the currencies involved and (c) the amounts involved, where payments may be due in a currency other than sterling or US dollars. [28531]

Mrs. Roche: Only on some long standing defence equipment cash contracts on Malaysia has ECGD a contingent liability in a currency other than sterling or US dollars. This is in Malaysian ringitts and is currently estimated at £21 million.

Nabarro Nathanson Solicitors

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total sum paid to Nabarro Nathanson solicitors for legal services in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [28268]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 9 February 1998]: Payments by the DTI amounted to £48,495 in 1995–96. There were no payments in 1996–97.

Electricity Companies

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a request to the European Commission under the terms of the European Merger Regulation to ensure UK jurisdiction over the regulatory aspects of any takeover bid made for a UK regional electricity company. [28337]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 9 February 1998]: I understand from Directorate General IV of the European Commission that currently no bids for UK regional electricity companies have been notified to them under the European Community Merger Regulation. Were such a bid to be so notified my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade would consider the handling of the case on its merits at the time.

Gas Suppliers

Helen Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to regulate door to door selling by gas suppliers. [29602]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 16 February 1998]: During meetings with the Director General of Gas Supply, I expressed my concerns over the misleading marketing techniques adopted by some gas suppliers. At the end of January the Office of Gas Supply introduced a new licence condition to regulate such activities. My Department will consult in the near future on possible modifications to strengthen the Consumer Protection (Cancellation of Contracts Concluded away from Business Premises) Regulations 1987. Both of these initiatives should enhance consumer protection with regard to doorstep selling.

Textiles

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received regarding the dumping of textile products onto the world market, with particular reference to thread from Thailand; and what action she is taking on this matter. [26223]

Mrs. Roche: When dumping is alleged to be taking place in the European Commission that has the power to investigate complaints by the EU industries concerned and to propose anti-dumping measures, as necessary. In recent months, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has received a considerable number of representations about Commission investigations into unbleached cotton fabric and bedlinen originating in a number of countries, but not about the dumping of thread from Thailand.

Enterprise Bodies

Mr. Swinney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the assistance she has provided to enterprise bodies in (i) the Docklands area, (ii) London, (iii) the South East of England and (iv) England in the last year for which figures are available. [30165]

Mrs. Roche: My Department provides assistance to enterprise bodies primarily in the form of a contribution towards the development of services provided by Business Link partnerships. Funding is available for both setting up Business Links (pump-priming grants) and as a continuing contribution to the cost of services. The table sets out such expenditure in 1996–97, the last full year for which expenditure is available.

DEFENCE

Military Exercises

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list military exercises in Europe in 1997 to show (a) British participation in major NATO exercises, (b) British national exercises involving forces from other nations, (c) exercises conducted in Europe with participation of British forces and (d) British participation in NATO/PfP exercises, in each case indicating the nations involved. [29447]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Deployment

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each country where British armed forces are deployed by (a) service and (b) ship, unit or aircraft excluding loan service personnel, minor short-term training deployments and personnel in administrative and command posts overseas. [29451]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the projected maximum offensive payload and range of the Eurofighter; [28022]

(2) what is maximum offensive payload and range of the Tornado GR7, the Tornado F3 and the Jaguar GR4. [28023]

Mr. Spellar: The table provides details of the maximum offensive payload for each of the aircraft types listed. The actual payload configuration will, of course, reflect the particular needs of an operation which, in turn, would determine the range of an aircraft operating without air to air refuelling. The range figures quoted therefore represent a typical radius of operation.

Aircraft type	Maximum offensive payload (Kg)	Combat radius of operation (nm)
Tornado F3	1,500	600
Tornado GR1/1A/4	4,500	550
Harrier GR7	3,000	500
Jaguar GR1A/3	2,900	400
Eurofighter	[1]6,500	[1]750

[1] Representative figures quoted by Eurofighter GmbH, the prime contractor responsible for development and production of the aircraft.

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28049]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The MOD complies with the Welsh Language Act 1993 which established the principle of equality between the English and Welsh languages in all public business. Letters written in Welsh therefore receive a signed reply in Welsh. Under our current policy letters written in Scottish Gaelic, Urdu, Hindi and Chinese receive a signed reply in English only.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28930]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 10 February 1998]: During January 1998 I undertook the following engagements in the course of my duties:

Date	Event	Accessed by
15 January	Address at Joint Service Command and Staff College, Bracknell	Car
15 January	Dinner with Defence Secondary Care Agency, London	Car
19 January	Hosted lunch for the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Hungary	Car
20 January	Seminar with Council of Territorial Auxiliary Volunteer Reserve Associations, London	Foot
23 January	Dinner at HM Naval Base, Faslane	Car
26 January	Bilateral meeting with Dutch Defence Minister, Salisbury	Aeroplane, car and helicopter
29 January	Lunch with Charterhouse Bank London	Car
29 January	Visit to Northern Ireland	Aeroplane, car and helicopter

Dockyard Workers

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) past and (b) present Rosyth Dockyard employees have (i) made a claim for compensation and (ii) been awarded compensation under the Government's compensation scheme. [29438]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 16 February 1998]: Former MOD employees and those currently employed by Babcock Rosyth Defence Limited (BRDL) at Rosyth Dockyard are entitled to compensation under the nuclear industry's no fault Compensation Scheme for Radiation Linked Diseases. My Department joined the scheme in August 1994 and BRDL joined in 1997. Since August 1994, seven compensation claims have been submitted in respect of civilians who have at some time worked at Rosyth, including those now employed by BRDL. No-one has yet been awarded compensation but five of the claims are currently under investigation.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to publicise the health and compensation schemes available to Rosyth Dockyard workers. [29441]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 16 February 1998]: MOD joined the nuclear industry's Compensation Scheme for Radiation Linked Diseases in 1994. Since then the Department has publicised the Scheme to current MOD employees through Defence Council Instructions and is currently considering a number of options for advertising the Scheme more widely to former MOD employees and their families.

MOD civilian workers at Rosyth Royal Dockyard became employees of Babcock Rosyth Defence Limited (BRDL) on 1 April 1987. Ownership of the Dockyard passed to BRDL on January 1997, the same year in which the company became a member of the nuclear industry's Compensation Scheme for Radiation Linked Diseases. BRDL publicised the scheme in its weekly newsletter of 23 January 1998, a copy of which was issued to all employees.

The Ionising Radiation Regulations 1985 require the Appointed Doctor, a recognised physician appointed by the Health and Safety Executive's Employment Medical Advisory Service, to undertake an annual health review of classified radiation workers. Rosyth Royal Dockyard workers are made aware of the annual health reviews through the company's radiation safety training.

In addition, BRDL issued a Company Notice to all industrial employees on 4 June 1997, publicising the MOD's scheme for the counselling of radiation workers and giving details of the company's own scheme.

Enriched Uranium

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements are in place for the enrichment of uranium for defence purposes. [29459]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 February 1998]: The United Kingdom has sufficient enriched uranium for current defence purposes and enrichment will not again be required for some time.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30072]

Dr. Reid: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list expenditure on (a) defence procurement, (b) research and development, (c) running costs and (d) service wages and costs for (i) London, (ii) the South East of England, (iii) England, (iv) Scotland, (v) Wales and (vi) Northern Ireland in the last year for which figures are available. [30131]

Dr. Reid: My Department collects only a limited amount of information about spending in the various regions of the UK. Table 1.9 of Defence Statistics 1997, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, provides a breakdown, by region, of total expenditure by the MOD on defence equipment. No similar breakdown of expenditure on running costs or service pay is available.

Regimental Sites

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the current location in the United Kingdom of each Army regiment, the number of service and support personnel at each site, and the total wage bill for each site in the last year for which figures are available. [30128]

Dr. Reid: Much of the information requested is not held centrally but I am investigating what may be gathered. I will write to the hon. Member once my inquiries are complete and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Shore Stations

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number and running costs of (a) Royal Naval shore stations and (b) Army core headquarters in (i) the South East of England, (ii) England, (iii) Scotland, (iv) Wales and (v) Northern Ireland. [30127]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces (Nationality Criteria)

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the review of the nationality criteria for entry into the armed forces will be completed; and if he will make a statement. [30545]

Dr. Reid: A comprehensive review of all nationality issues for employment in the Armed Forces has just been completed. It has now been agreed that, with effect from 1 April 1998, the rules relating to nationality extraction, that is the nationality of an applicant's parents, should be relaxed in line with the changes made for Civil Servants. In the majority of cases parents of applicants will no longer need to be British or Commonwealth citizens, or Republic of Ireland nationals. In certain circumstances, where security is of paramount importance, applicants will be looked at on a case by case basis.

It has also been agreed that the residency rules should be changed. The 5 year UK residency requirement for most applicants is to be relaxed to allow those who have spent less than 5 years in the UK entry into the Armed Forces.

I believe that these rule changes will ensure that the Armed Forces become more open for potential recruits, particularly amongst the ethnic minorities.

We have concluded that the existing rules relating to an applicant's own nationality should remain extant, namely that an applicant should be a British, British Dependent Territories or Commonwealth citizen or a Republic of Ireland national.

WALES

Farming

10. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings he has had with the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to discuss the future of Welsh farming. [28408]

Mr. Ron Davies: I meet my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food frequently to discuss the issues of common interest including the future of Welsh agriculture. The last formal occasion was on Wednesday 11 February.

19. Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last held talks with Welsh farming representatives; and what matters were discussed. [28417]

Mr. Ron Davies: I met representatives of the Welsh agriculture industry on 4, 5 and 9 February. We discussed the problems currently facing the industry at the first two meetings and the long term future of Welsh agriculture at the third meeting. I also addressed the Welsh Forum of the National Farmers' Union's Annual Conference on 3 February.

Cold Weather Payments

11. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what meetings he has had with pensioners' groups in Wales to discuss cold weather payments. [28409]

Mr. Win Griffiths: None.

Welsh Assembly

12. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress in setting up the Welsh assembly. [28410]

Mr. Ron Davies: Excellent progress is being made.

13. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which locations in Wales have applied to house the Welsh assembly. [28411]

28. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from organisations based in Wales regarding the siting of the Welsh assembly. [28426]

Mr. Ron Davies: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley).

18. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to broaden the background of candidates for the Welsh assembly. [28416]

Mr. Ron Davies: The selection of candidates for the elections to the National Assembly for Wales is a matter for the political parties. I would expect the parties to ensure through their selection processes that people of ability and from the widest possible range of interests are chosen to stand in the elections.

22. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the venue and estimated cost of the Welsh assembly. [28420]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have not yet come to a decision on the venue of the National Assembly for Wales. Any decision needs to provide good value for money and be affordable within the resources available.

25. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from hon. Members regarding the siting of the Welsh assembly. [28423]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have received representations both in response to my consultation paper and prior to its issue. They were both in the form of correspondence and questions in the House and came from:

Llanelli: The right hon. Denzil Davies
Swansea West: The right hon. Alan Williams
Delyn: David Hanson
Swansea East: Donald Anderson
Clwyd West: Gareth Thomas
Cardiff North: Julie Morgan
Gower: Martin Caton
Wrexham: Dr. John Marek
Vale of Clwyd: Chris Ruane
Alyn and Deeside: Barry Jones
Cardiff West: Rhodri Morgan
Caernarfon: Dafydd Wigley
Ribble Valley: Nigel Evans
Lichfield: Michael Fabricant
Worthing East and Shoreham: Tim Loughton
Shropshire North: Owen Paterson
Ashford: Damian Green
Ruislip Northwood: John Wilkinson
New Forest East: Julian Lewis
Chipping Barnet: Sir Sydney Chapman
Cambridgeshire South: Andrew Lansley
Guildford: Nick St Aubyn
Beckenham: Jaqui Lait.

Historic Chapels

14. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has held about the creation of a historic chapels trust for Wales since the publication of the Government's response to the second report of the Welsh Affairs Committee of Session 1992–93 on the preservation of historic buildings and ancient monuments. [28412]

Mr. Ron Davies: Discussions have taken place between Cadw and the Redundant Historic Chapels Working Group, the Historic Buildings Council and the Wales Council for Voluntary Action. As a result my Department has agreed to provide a grant of £92,000 over two years to the Wales Council for Voluntary Action to fund the establishment of a Chapels Conservation Trust.

Public Bodies (Women)

15. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase the representation of women on public bodies in Wales. [28413]

Mr. Ron Davies: I am very anxious to increase the representation of women on public bodies in Wales.

My Department is developing a programme with representative organisations to increase the pool of good candidates from a variety of backgrounds, making the public appointments process more accessible; making criteria more explicit and laying them open to comment; making sure that independent assessors also reflect diversity; and giving applicants more feedback and constructive suggestions about routes into public life.

As part of this programme, the Department has at my request developed proposals for two exciting and innovative pilot projects which will be put into action in consultation with Welsh women MPs, local MPs and other interested organisations. I will announce further details of these projects shortly.

NHS Trusts

16. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the NHS trust re-configuration exercise. [28414]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer I gave today to my hon. Friend the Member for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands) and my right hon. Friend the Member for Llanelli (Mr. Davies).

Partnership Council

17. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what he expects will be the cost of setting up and running the partnership council in Wales. [28415]

Mr. Win Griffiths: It will be for the National Assembly and local government in Wales to decide on the size and work of the Partnership Council and, therefore, its costs. However, there is no reason why the overall costs of running the Council should be significantly different from those associated with the Central Local Partnership Wales.

Millennium Dome

20. Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has held with the Minister without Portfolio about the representation of Wales in the millennium dome, Greenwich. [28418]

Mr. Ron Davies: I am assured by my hon. Friend the Minister without Portfolio that following the Prime Minister's five commitments made in June last year, the Millennium Experience will involve the whole UK. Its content will appeal to and be relevant to people of all ages and interests wherever they may live. The overarching theme, "Time to Make a Difference", and the way that this will be presented at Greenwich, will engage, inspire and educate all who visit the Experience.

School Standards

21. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his priorities in respect of school standards in Wales. [28419]

Mr. Hain: The Government's priority is to work with teachers to raise the standards of education achieved by all our young people. We have placed a particular emphasis on the need to improve literacy and numeracy skills in primary schools within the context of a broad and balanced curriculum.

Agricultural Sector

23. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the (a) short-term and (b) long-term prospects of the agricultural sector in Wales. [28421]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I do not underestimate the serious nature of the difficulties that the agricultural sector in Wales is currently facing. For the longer term, general commodity markets are likely to be increasingly competitive. The way for Welsh agriculture to compete is to develop well-branded products, which can command premium prices, with a greater degree of value being added in the food supply chain in Wales. In this context, I want to see Wales developing a strong reputation for extensive, farm-assured production, including organic food.

Road and Canal Transport

24. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his policy concerning road and canal transport. [28422]

Mr. Hain: The role that all transport modes should play in improving transport links is being considered as part of our plans to develop an integrated transport policy. The consultation exercise launched last August will lead to a UK-wide White Paper on transport later this year. At around the same time, a Welsh Transport Policy Statement will be published drawing out those issues of particular relevance and importance to Wales.

Optec DD

26. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the closure of the Optec DD factory at Buckley, Flintshire. [28424]

Mr. Hain: We were very disappointed to hear of this closure and greatly regret the job losses involved. But such decisions must remain a commercial matter for the company. The Welsh Office and its agencies nevertheless stand ready to assist wherever they can.

Health Clinics

27. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for the expansion of health clinics in Wales. [28425]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The delivery of health care is a matter for local consideration, and it is for Health Authorities to make detailed arrangements in response to local needs. This may include the provision of health clinics by general practitioners.

In July 1997, I announced a package of £2.5 million to support the development of primary and community health care in Wales. The Package, which is intended to help provide more local flexibility, included an Equity Fund of £500,000 to address inequalities in the provision of primary care services.

Road Traffic

29. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made for road traffic growth in Wales in 1998. [28427]

Mr. Hain: The National Road Forecast (Great Britain) 1997 publication predicts that road traffic will grow between 0.65 per cent. and 2.79 per cent. during 1998. The average growth on trunk roads in Wales over recent years has tended to follow the higher prediction and I expect this to continue this year.

Buildings Refurbishment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will make a statement. [26616]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Such costs are included within my Department's general administrative expenditure which is published every year in the Annual Report.

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26615]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 5 February 1998]: My Department purchases a range of publications. Approximate expenditure is as follows:

(a) £80,000, (b) £87,500, (c) £50,000, (d) £65,000.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the rates of absenteeism in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 to date; and if he will make a statement. [26613]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The average number of working days sickness absence per member of staff for the Welsh Office, including the Cadw Agency, during the 1995 and 1996 calendar years was 10 and 9.03 days respectively. Statistics for the 1997 calendar year are not yet available. Separate statistics are not available for Cadw.

Details of absenteeism in non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my department are not held centrally.

Market Research

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what expenditure has been incurred by his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies (a) in 1996–97 and (b) since 1 May 1997 on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; if he will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each; and if he will make a statement. [26611]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The following expenses have been incurred by my agencies and non-departmental public bodies:

Energy and Environment Office (EEO): Business and Environment Campaign

Period: January to September 1997

Cost: £1,0259 (+ VAT)

Purpose: Telemarketing research exercise to 250 decision makers within Welsh SMEs to gauge their awareness of the Department's Business and Environment Campaign.

Wales Environment Centre Mori Survey

Period: February to April 1997

Cost: £20,000 (Environment Agency contribution = £15,000)

Purpose: To determine Managing Director and Finance Director (within Welsh companies) views of environmental issues.

Welsh Development Agency

Period: 1996–97

Environmental Goods and Services Market Research

Cost: £10,000

Purpose: To identify the size of this sector in Wales in order for the WDA to develop appropriate support measures.

Inward Investment Evaluation Survey

Cost: £33,056 excluding VAT

Purpose: To undertake a formal evaluation of the Agency's inward investment.

Welsh Omnibus Survey

Cost: £1,530

Purpose: The inclusion of additional questions to the Evaluation survey to assess resident expectations of Welsh economic prospects.

Information Society benchmarking study

Cost: £12,760 excluding VAT

Purpose: To identify the use of information and communication technologies by Welsh firms.

Cadw

Tracking survey

Period: August/September 1996

Cost: £11,750

Purpose: To gain market profile data about visitors to the monuments in the care of the Secretary of State for Wales.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Period: 1996–97

Inner Harbour Study

Cost: £2,400

Purpose: To survey the attitudes of visitors and to establish whether the attractions and facilities in the Inner Harbour are meeting the needs of these visitors.

Visitor/Leisure Monitor

Cost: £3,085

Purpose: To assess trends in leisure visiting, to gauge levels of visiting and to assess satisfaction amongst visitors to Cardiff Bay as a leisure destination.

Corporate, Commercial and Regional Monitors

Cost: £5,645

Purpose: Opinion survey to provide the basis on which sound decisions can be taken and to highlight problems and opportunities as they arise and develop.

Technology Marketing Study

Cost: £5,000

Purpose: To establish the competitive position of Cardiff Bay relative to other competing locations in the UK and to identify sectors that the Bay could attract on the basis of the infrastructure and service provision.

Digital Development Research

Cost: £20,000

Purpose: To measure the impact of the introduction and development of Digital Technology on the media sector in Wales.

Multi-media Centre Consultancy

Cost: £2,500

Purpose: To put together a European Regional Development Fund bid for a multi-media centre to be based in Cardiff Bay.

Telecoms Sectoral Analysis

Cost: £13,375

Purpose: An analysis of sectors and firms which may be interested in the telecommunications technology available in Cardiff Bay.

Period: 1997–98

Inner Harbour Study

Cost: £1,296

Purpose: To survey the attitudes of visitors and to establish whether the attractions and facilities in the Inner Harbour are meeting the needs of these visitors.

Cultural Quarter Feasibility Study

Cost: £9,990

Purpose: To determine appropriate marketing and development strategies and initiatives to promote the Mount Stuart Cultural Quarter concept.

Wales Tourist Board

Research Programme

Period: 1996–97

Cost: £333,000

Period: 1997–98

Cost: £317,000

(It is not possible to isolate funding specifically for focus groups because most research studies involve a range of different qualitative/quantitative research techniques. An approximate estimate for expenditure incurred specifically on focus group research would be £30,000 in 1996/97 and £50,000 in 1997/98).

Development Board for Rural Wales

Customer Satisfaction Survey

Cost: £31,502

Purpose: To determine the current strengths and weaknesses of the customer services offered by the Board, and identify opportunities to improve customer service delivery operations. The survey forms an integral part of the Board's continuous improvement strategy, building on the achievement of ISO 9001.

Ministerial Functions

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what functions he exercises in England. [29023]

Mr. Ron Davies: In addition to the functions which I exercise collectively for the whole of the UK as a member of the Cabinet, there are certain specific functions I exercise which extend beyond Wales.

I have functions with respect to the water industry, flood defence, internal drainage and the aquatic environment which extend to parts of England.

For instance, the boundaries of water companies are dictated by the course of natural watersheds and so do not follow the boundary between Wales and England. Under the Water Industry Act 1991, I exercise various functions with respect to Dwr Cymru and Chester Waterworks Company whose areas extend into England, while my right. hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister exercises functions with respect to Severn Trent Water Ltd. whose area includes Montgomeryshire.

I have a range of functions which Acts of Parliament require me and other Ministerial colleagues to exercise jointly. Some of these functions relate to Wales and England; others to Great Britain and others to the United Kingdom. The majority of these joint functions are to be found in legislation on agriculture. The practical effect of the legislation is that I have functions with respect to areas outside Wales, although I cannot exercise them on my own because they have to be exercised jointly.

Under section 487 of the Education Act 1996, regulations make provision for me to pay local education authorities and other persons grants for education in Welsh. Although it is not the case at present, I could exercise my functions so as to pay grants in England for this purpose.

My functions under the Welsh Language Act 1993 potentially affect any public body providing services to people in Wales, regardless of where the body may be located. In that sense, my functions under the 1993 Act extend beyond Wales.

Play Groups

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of progress in introducing playgroups in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [29431]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 4 February 1998, Official Report, columns 677–78.

Jet Skis

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he is taking to reduce the number of jet ski-related accidents in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [29378]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The issues raised by the use of jet skis are currently being considered as part of an interdepartmental review of by law powers for the coast. A discussion paper was issued for consultation in Wales in February 1997 in parallel was a similar exercise in England. The responses to these exercises are being taken into account by an Interdepartmental Working Party which will provide advice to Ministers. The Coastguard Agency is leading further work specifically to analyse the problems and identify solutions for dealing with personal watercraft, involving the Marine Safety Agency and relevant Departments.

Health Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to improve local health services in Wales. [29379]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government published its White Paper, "NHS Wales—Putting Patients First" (CM. No.3841) on 15 January. Together with the proposed reconfiguration of NHS trusts in Wales, the changes outlined in the White Paper will improve services, make NHS Wales more responsive, efficient and accountable and release £50 million over the lifetime of the current Parliament for reinvestment in direct patient care. The new arrangements will give GPs and others the opportunity to ensure that local services are tailored to the needs of local people.

Rail Freight

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to encourage more freight to be transported by rail in Wales. [29865]

Mr. Hain: Financial assistance under the Freight Facilities Grant scheme continues to be available towards the cost of the provision of rail freight facilities. One of the main issues raised for debate during the recent consultation exercise on our plans to develop an integrated transport policy was the practical measures needed to bring about increased use of less environmentally damaging forms of freight transport. The consultation exercise will lead to a UK wide White Paper on transport later this year. At around the same time a Welsh Transport Policy Statement will be published drawing out those issues and themes of particular relevance and importance to Wales.

Regeneration and Development

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about current proposals for regeneration and development in Merthyr Tydfil. [30677]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have been considering very carefully a number of issues which have been raised in connection with, and related to, the disposal by the WDA of the Waterglade and Thorn sites to Merthyr Tydfil Borough Council. My Department has also examined these issues at a meeting on 13 February 1998 with the District Auditor and Merthyr under section 30 of the Local Government Finance Act 1982.

These matters, which relate to the actions of Merthyr in relation to contracts for the disposal and development of the Waterglade and Thorn sites, are of serious concern to me. I have not formed a concluded view as to whether Merthyr's behaviour over this period amounts to unlawful conduct or not. The concerns, which continue to be subject to inquiry by the District Auditor, nevertheless dictate that it is not in the public interest to complete the contract until the matter has been fully considered and resolved.

Accordingly, I have today used my power under section 1(9) of the Welsh Development Agency Act 1975 to issue a Direction to the Agency to the effect that the Agency shall not presently complete the contract of 9 February 1996 between the Agency and Methyr Tydfil Borough Council for the sale of these sites unless compelled to do so by an Order of the Court. I shall lay a copy of the Direction before Parliament as soon as possible. The interim Direction is, of course, subject to any view the Court may have.

My Department will offer whatever assistance it can to the District Auditor in pursuing her inquiry. I have also drawn my decision to the attention of the Police and my Department will give full co-operation to any Police investigation.

Council Tax Discounts

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of council tax discounts in Wales. [28402]

Mr. Win Griffiths: On 16 December 1997, I announced new rules on council tax for second homes in Wales. From 1 April 1998 local authorities will have discretion to charge up to the full council tax on unoccupied and furnished second homes, without a six month delay and whether or not they used to be someone's sole or main residence. The new rules were made following wide consultation and replace rules which were inequitable and difficult to operate.

Looking ahead, the Department will consult over the next few months on the operation of council tax in Wales as part of the review of local government. We will consider whether improvements can be made in the light of the responses to consultation.

Planning

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to issue a version of the policy statement, "Modernising Planning", in Wales. [28397]

Mr. Win Griffiths: None. However, I shall be considering the extent to which the proposals covered by my right hon. Friend's statement should be carried forward in Wales. I will consult, as appropriate, on the detail of any such proposals.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Manpower (London)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the manpower level at each police station within each London borough; and what were the figures three years ago. [29708]

Mr. Michael: A list of manpower by Metropolitan Police Division is shown below. As the Metropolitan Police District does not equate to the London boroughs, a breakdown by borough is not available.

Immigration Interviews

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to commission research into the use of (a) tape recording and (b) video cameras for the purpose of recording interviews carried out by immigration officers. [29666]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There are no plans to record interviews with passengers seeking entry at the primary port controls. I have, however, commissioned a feasibility study into the potential use of tape recording for asylum interviews, whether at ports or in country. A working group is due to report back to me later this year.

Closed Circuit Television (Airports)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will install closed circuit television cameras at the arrival gates and passport control areas of British airports. [29665]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A trial involving the use of strategically placed closed circuit cameras has been carried out at Heathrow under a joint initiative between the British Airports Authority, Her Majesty's Customs, the police and the Immigration Service. The results of this trial are being analysed. Final decisions will be taken by Ministers, but the indications are that closed circuit television cameras can perform a valuable security role in some areas at British airports.

Internet Pornography

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to draw the attention of parents to the ease with which children can obtain access to pornographic material on the Internet; and if he will make a statement. [29744]

Mr. Michael: The Government are aware that, while the Internet contains many websites which carry material aimed at the educational need of children, it can also be used for the distribution of pornographic and other potentially illegal material. In response to concerns about the availability of such material, the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) was established in September 1996, following discussion between service providers, the Metropolitan Police and officials from the Home Office and Department of Trade and Industry. This is a self-regulatory organisation which is financed by voluntary contributions from the United Kingdom Internet industry and its aims are to determine whether particular newsgroups carry potentially illegal material, to trace the originator and to ask the Internet Service Providers to remove it from their servers. Details of child pornography are also sent to the police and the Foundation has established a "hotline" to enable users to report the presence of potentially illegal material in a newsgroup or website. The Government support the actions taken by the IWF in this respect.

Filtering software packages, such as Net Nanny, are available which enable parents to deny access to material containing sexually explicit words. Building on this, a working group of representatives from the IWF and Internet Service Providers has been devising a common ratings system suitable for United Kingdom Internet users on which there is growing international co-operation. This system is expected to address legal, but potentially offensive, material without curtailing freedom of expression. The Foundation aims to work on this system over the next 18 months and, once it is available, expects it to extend to newsgroups as well as websites. The IWF is also working with Internet Service Providers to develop better advice to Internet users about how to use the network safely and further details about this will be given in a publicity event due early next month.

In addition, the Department for Education and Employment commissioned the National Council for Educational Technology (now known as the British Educational and Communications Technology Agency) to prepare separate guidance for parents and teachers on access to computers. This is available free of charge and features advice on computer pornography within the wider context of the use of the computer within the home and the school. The guidance was drawn up in consultation with a number of interested parties, including the police. As well as addressing the problem of computer misuse, the guidence recognises the scope for the good use of computers and draws attention to the role of information technology in the National Curriculum, and the need to develop pupils' capabilities in the new technologies in preparation for working life.

Race Relations Forum

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have applied to become members of the Race Relations Forum. [29565]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There has not been a formal application procedure for membership of the Race Relations Forum. A total of 194 nominations and self-nominations have been received. These have come from community organisations, the Commission for Racial Equality, Government Departments and individuals.

We hope to be able to make an announcement about the membership of the Forum shortly.

Commission for Racial Equality

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to appoint the new commissioners to the Commission for Racial Equality; and how many persons applied to be commissioners in the latest round. [29566]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A total of 1,029 persons applied for these posts. The new Commissioners will be appointed in due course to replace the current postholders who complete their terms of appointment on 31 March.

Special Constables

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average amount of money spent per special constable in the last year for which figures are available; what is the average length of service of each special constable; what percentage of special constables were subsequently recruited as police officers in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [29813]

Mr. Michael: Not all this information is available and it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In general, the costs of special constables have been absorbed into the operational costs of the police forces and borne by the police fund without being shown separately. The 1995–96 Working Group which reviewed the Special Constabulary concluded that chief officers, police authorities and the general public should be able to know the costs involved and recommended that these costs should be identified under separate item headings in force financial plans, statements and annual reports. We have commended this practice to chief officers.

Details of the length of service of special constables are not collected centrally. However, a straw poll of 20 forces two years ago indicated that the average length of service was about four years. A significant number of specials leave to join the regular police force. During visits to meet officers in a number of police forces in "Specials Week" recently, I was struck by the number of long serving specials and the positive spirit of teamwork with their regular colleagues.

The percentage of special constables who joined the regular force in the last five years was as follows:

1992: 2.9 per cent.

1993: 2.4 per cent.

1994–95: 2.9 per cent.

1995–96: 3.2 per cent.

1996–97: 3.4 per cent.

Special constables are used to support the work of regular officers, not to replace them. They represent an additional resource for police forces. Specials are not paid and, although there are costs in recruiting, equipping and training them, those costs are minimal compared to the costs of regular officers. The turnover of specials at 20 per cent. per annum compares favourably with other areas of volunteering where the wastage figure can exceed 70 per cent. The resources invested in the specials who subsequently join the regular force are not wasted to the service. Special constables make an excellent, cost effective contribution to policing local communities.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special police constables there were for each police force, by sex and age group, in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29812]

Mr. Michael: The number of special constables in post in each force in England and Wales over the last five years, by sex, is shown in the table. Details of their age groups are not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The percentage of women in the Special Constabulary is 35 per cent. compared with 15 per cent. in the regular force.

Care needs to be taken in interpreting the figures, as a number of forces have been at pains to trim their list to "active" Specials who meet a high level of commitment on a regular basis while high demands are placed on Specials in terms of recruitment and training.

Child Curfews

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend his proposals for local child curfews as set out in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords]. [29787]

Mr. Michael: One of the main thrusts of the youth justice reform programme is to seek earlier, more effective intervention to prevent young children from turning to crime in the first place. In the past, too little has been done to prevent children and young people taking the first steps into criminal behaviour. That is why, as part of our proposals to reduce offending by young children, we are introducing in the Crime and Disorder Bill the local child curfew schemes.

The Crime and Disorder Bill is currently being considered in Another Place prior to consideration in the House of Commons. At this stage, we have no plans to expand the proposals for local child curfews.

Schengen Information System

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what input his Department has in the restructuring of the Schengen Information System. [29824]

Ms Quin [holding answer 17 February 1998]: The United Kingdom is not a member of Schengen and therefore has not been involved in any restructuring of the Schengen Information System, which is a matter for the Schengen states.

The incorporation of Schengen into the European Union Treaties, agreed in the Treaty of Amsterdam, requires an appropriate Treaty base to be established for the Articles in the Schengen Convention which provide for the Schengen Information System; work on this is continuing.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many contracts of a value greater than £5,000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30077]

Mr. Straw: Information in the form requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30074]

Mr. Straw: There are some 49,500 monthly and 700 weekly payees in the Home Office and its agencies. The total wage bill for the 1996–97 financial year was £1,188,742,143. Information is not available on a regional basis, nor are the costs of payments for working in London separately identified.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of his Department's buildings. [30075]

Mr. Straw: Responsibility for property management in the Home Office is delegated to a number of Local Property Centres. Information covering the Home Office Non-Prisons Estate provided by the Local Property Centres for the running costs for the financial year 1996/97 is given in the table.

The Prison Estate consists of 135 prison establishments. Each of these comprises a number of buildings and many also have external buildings such as staff quarters, farms or stores. Running costs for individual buildings are not available centrally but the Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts for 1996/97 gives an analysis of the costs per establishment. The report was published on 12 November 1997 and a copy placed in the Library—reference HC 247.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30076]

Mr. Straw: The last financial year for which figures are available is 1996–97.

The total expenditure by the Home Office (including its agencies) on hospitality, travel and stationery in 1996–97 is as follows:

Hospitality	58,346
Stationery	8,027,572
Travel[1]	12,620,709

[1] Includes £276,464 of subsistence and travel costs relating to the Fire Service College, where systems do not enable these items to be separately identified.

No regional breakdown of the figures is available.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the total cost to public funds of the Metropolitan Police in 1998–99. [30674]

Mr. Straw: As Police Authority for the Metropolitan Police District, I have approved estimates which provide for net revenue expenditure of £1,825 million in 1998/99.

The Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District is issuing, with my approval, a precept of £70.73 per property in Band D of the council tax valuation band for Metropolitan Police purposes.

I have discussed the estimates for the Metropolitan Police expenditure in 1998–99 with representatives of the London local authority associations.

Video Recordings

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for the authority responsible for making arrangements for the classification of video works under the Video Recordings Act 1984. [30675]

Mr. Straw: Following the proposal for designation which I laid before Parliament on 18 December, I have today designated Mr. Andreas Whittam Smith under section 4(4) of the Video Recordings Act 1984. Mr. Whittam Smith was appointed as President of the British Board of Film Classification on 1 January 1998, and I am designating him, in that capacity, to replace the Earl of Harewood and Lord Birkett of Ulverston.

I have placed in the Library a copy of my Notice of Designation and the text of a letter I am sending to Mr. Whittam Smith confirming the designation.

Cannabis

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of young people in the Metropolitan Police area who were suspected of an offence connected to cannabis were (a) charged, (b) cautioned, (c) convicted and (d) imprisoned in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [29956]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not available since data are not routinely collected on whether individuals are suspected of drug offences. In addition, information is not collected centrally on whether or not suspected individuals are charged with such offences. However, information on those who were cautioned, prosecuted, found guilty and imprisoned for cannabis offences is given in the table.

TREASURY

Inheritance Tax (Works of Art)

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue he estimates would be raised in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000 from the abolition of the conditional exemption from inheritance tax for works of art. [26194]

Dawn Primarolo: The amount of conditional relief granted for works of art, and other chattels, fluctuates significantly from year to year.

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26575]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Expenditure by the Treasury on periodicals is estimated to be:

£000

Year	Expenditure
1995–96	615
1996–97	556
1997–98 to end January 1998	445
1997–98 forecast outturn	625

These figures are on a cash basis and include newspapers, magazines, and other publications which appear on a regular basis. The lower costs in 1996–97 as against 1995–96 and 1997–98 result in large part from the lower level of parliamentary activity at the end of the last Parliament. This resulted for example, in the price of Hansard being reduced. A complete listing of the titles currently purchased on a regular basis could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the Treasury purchases copies of most of the mainstream newspapers and current affairs journals.

Officials (Entry Warrants)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue and Customs officials are authorised to enter premises without a warrant. [29047]

Dawn Primarolo: No officer of the Inland Revenue may enter premises without the consent of the owner, unless that officer is acting under the authority of warrant granted by the appropriate judicial authority.

All commissioned officers within HM Customs and Excise are entitled, in the course of their official duties, to enter registered premises that are being used in relation to matters for which Customs have statutory responsibilities.

Family Credit

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he has commissioned on the likely psychological impact of paying family credit through the pay packet as a working family tax credit; and if he will publish it. [28976]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 February 1998]: The Chancellor has gathered a wide range of evidence in his consideration of a working family tax credit; from this evidence he has concluded that it would have a number of attractions.

Environmental Policies

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what management procedures have been introduced in his Department to ensure that the new environmental policies being developed by the Treasury are communicated (a) internally to all branches of his Department involved in policy formulation and resource accounting, (b) to Ministers and officials of other Government Departments and (c) to chief executives of non-departmental public bodies and nationalised industries. [29272]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury's principal aim is to raise the long-term rate of sustainable growth. This aim is communicated to all parts of the Department through management objectives. The Treasury reports on progress against its aims in its Departmental Annual Report.

The Treasury has revised its guidance on policy appraisal (Appraisal and Evaluation in Central Government, 1997) to make clear that environmental effects need to be considered alongside others in appraising and evaluating policies. This is the central guidance which all those carrying out appraisals in Government are expected to follow. Copies of the new version, which is available to the public, have been circulated widely within Treasury and other Government Departments. Treasury officials are working closely with Departments to ensure that they are following the new procedures.

Forthcoming revisions to Government Accounting will also make clear that good appraisal and evaluation, taking account of environmental impacts, are an essential part of achieving value for money. Government Accounting is the rulebook for Government finance. All staff in the Treasury and other Departments and Non-Departmental Public Bodies who are involved in finance and accounting will receive copies of the revised chapter and will be expected to follow it. The National Audit Office monitors compliance with the rules of Government Accounting in Departments.

Revenue Departments preparing submissions for the Budget are required to comment on the environmental implications of main proposals. The Treasury is encouraging other Departments to do the same with their Budget submissions.

The Treasury has a strategy for improving the environmental impact of its own domestic operations. This is available to all staff and the general public on the Internet.

Offshore Accounts

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the amount of potential annual revenue forgone as a result of overseas employers paying tax-free bonuses to United Kingdom-based employees' offshore accounts. [29551]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to estimate the amount of potential annual revenue forgone in the circumstances described because the arrangements will be known only to the employers and employees concerned.

Euro

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if provision will be made for the continued circulation of Scottish banknotes on the accession of the United Kingdom to the single currency. [29763]

Mrs. Liddell: Article 105a(1) of the Treaty gives the ECB within participating member states. However, Article 16 of the ESCB Statute requires the ECB to respect as far as possible existing practices regarding the issue and design of banknotes. If the UK were to join EMU, Scottish banks would need authorisation from the ECB to continue circulating Scottish banknotes.

"the exclusive right to authorise the issue of banknotes"

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement on the policy of repatriation of (a) Euro coins and (b) Euro notes to the nation of origin upon United Kingdom accession to the Single Currency; what volume of currency he estimates would be repatriated in each year; and at what cost; [29771]

(2) what assessment he has made of the technical difficulties involved in repatriating bank notes and coinage not printed or minted in the United Kingdom on accession to the Single Currency. [29770]

Mrs. Liddell: All euro banknotes and coins will be legal tender in all participating member states. There will be no necessary repatriation to the country of origin, but there may be bulk redistribution of euro banknotes and coins (irrespective of their origin) around the euro area to where they are needed.

North Sea Fiscal Regime

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the review of the North Sea Fiscal Regime; and if he will publish the outcome of the review. [29816]

Dawn Primarolo: Over the period since the review was announced we have received comments and views from a range of sources; including companies involved in exploration for and production of oil and gas in the North Sea, representative bodies of the oil industry and associated supply industries and other interested parties. The outcome of the review will form part of the Chancellor's spring Budget announcements.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of his Department's buildings. [30094]

Mrs. Liddell: In 1996–97, the Treasury met the running costs of three properties. All are in London. Their costs, including rent and rates, security, maintenance, gas and electricity, cleaning, health and safety, and porterage are tabulated below.

	£000
Government Offices, Great George Street	7,410
19 Allington Street	3,162
11 Downing Street	313

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30093]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury has no offices outside central London. During 1996–97, the average number of staff (excluding Ministers and casual staff) in post in the Treasury was 904. The salary bill for these staff for 1996–97, amounted to around £30 million including overhead costs such as superannuation and employers National Insurance contributions. London Weighting allowances for all Treasury staff below the Senior Civil Service were consolidated into basic pay from April 1996. Separate London Weighting and London Allowances are retained by some Treasury members of the Senior Civil Service. For 1996–1997, the total cost of these allowances was around £157,000.

Duty Free Sales

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the value of duty free sales in each United Kingdom country in each of the last five years. [30162]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no official estimates for the value of duty free sales made in the UK either before or after the start of the Single Market.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many contracts of a value greater than £10,000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30096]

Mrs. Liddell: The table contains the details required for the Treasury's contracts of over £10,000.

Area	Contracts	Value
London	19	3,812,000
South East England	14	766,000
England (in total)	55	6,103,000

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Attorney-General how many contracts of a value greater than £1000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30092]

The Attorney-General: The Departments and other bodies for which I am responsible, namely the Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Fraud Office, the Treasury Solicitor's Department, the Government Property Lawyers and the Legal Secretariat to the Law

Officers, do not keep the information requested in the form requested and I am advised that the cost of providing the answer would be disproportionate.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of his Department's buildings. [30090]

The Attorney-General: The information requested is as follows:

The Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers

My own office is in Buckingham Gate, London SW1. The running costs for the building in the financial year 1996–97 were £422,000.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department occupy offices in Broadway, London SW1. The running costs for the building in the financial year 1996–97 were £2.65m.

The Government Property Lawyers

The Government Property Lawyers are based in Taunton. The running costs of their office in the financial year 1996–97 was £0.66m.

The Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office occupy offices in London WC1. Their running costs in 1996–97 were £2.612m. The SFO also has storage accommodation in London at a cost of £103,000 for the same period.

The Crown Prosecution Service

Accommodation costs in the Crown Prosecution Service amount to £36.803m. The running costs of buildings in London, including headquarters, amounts to £14.936m. The running costs for buildings in the regions are £21.867m.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30089]

The Attorney-General: The information requested is as follows:

Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers

In my office there are 28 staff, all based in London. The wage bill in 1996–97 was £827,000 which included £47,500 in respect of London allowances and weightings.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department employed 382 staff in 1996–97, the last year for which figures are available. All were employed in Central London at the beginning of the year but in the course of the year five were relocated to the South West

The wage bill in total amounted to £13.886 million. Of this £13,609 million was paid to employees in London, including £685,000 in respect of London allowances and weightings. £277,000 was paid to staff who were relocated to Bristol during the year, including £2,300 in respect of London weightings and allowances.

The Government Property Lawyers

The Government Property Lawyers employed 118.5 staff in Taunton in 1996–97. The wage bill was £3.160 million.

The Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office employed 175 staff in London in the year 1996–97. The wage bill was £5.245 million of which £381,406 was paid in respect of London allowances and weightings.

The Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service employed a total of 5,862.5 staff as at 31 March 1997. The Department's total wage bill for 1996–97, the last full year for which figures are available, was £155,205,870. The Department's personnel and accounting systems do not record data by UK region. A breakdown of London allowances and weightings from total salary costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The following table lists staff numbers and salary costs for each of the Department's 13 geographical Areas, its Central Casework Area and its National Headquarters.

Coal Miners (Compensation)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Attorney-General what proposals he has, consequent on the High Court ruling that British Coal is liable for compensation payments to coal miners from 1947, to amend the Limitation Acts to enable such settlements to be pursued. [28994]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

The Law Commission is carrying out a comprehensive review of the law of limitation, with a view to simplification and rationalisation of the law. The Commission published a Consultation Paper in January this year, outlining the present law and setting out provisional proposals for reform. The consultation will be followed by the publication of a Report containing the Law Commission's final recommendations, which we will then consider. The Government do not plan to modify the law relating to limitation of actions before then.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many requests for meetings he has received since 1 May 1997 from (a) foreign ambassadors and high commissioners and (b) British ambassadors and high commissioners; how many of these respectively he has turned down; and if he will name the countries affected in each case. [26856]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 2 February 1998]: No central record is kept of requests for these meetings, whether granted or refused. Since 2 May, I have met the following Ambassadors and High Commissioners:

May

The Ambassadors of the United States, Russia, Ireland and Japan.

June

The Ambassadors of Spain, Luxembourg, Italy, Portugal, Germany, Denmark, Greece, Finland, Belgium and Oman.

The High Commissioners of Australia and Cyprus.

The Ambassadors of Japan, Indonesia, Korea, the Philippines, Thailand, Vietnam, China, Japan, Lebanon, Algeria, Bahrain, Egypt, Jordan, Kuwait, Morocco, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, Yemen, Georgia, Uzbekistan, Switzerland and Sweden.

The High Commissioners of Malaysia, Singapore and Brunei.

December

The Ambassadors of Austria, Germany, Finland, Portugal, France, Sweden, Spain, Denmark, Greece, Italy, Ireland, the Netherlands, the United States and Albania.

January

The Ambassadors of China and Bahrain.

The High Commissioner of Australia.

February

The Ambassadors of Norway and Germany.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will make a statement. [26665]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The following are the costs (£) of building refurbishment carried out by the Department:

Year	Home estate	Overseas estate	Total
1995–96	[1]18,273,605	22,267,500	40,541,105
1996–97	[2]19,919,116	15,888,400	35,807,516
1997–98	1,891,526	6,145,000	8,036,526
1997–98 (Full year)	2,400,525	[3]10,517,000	12,917,525

[1,2] Includes expenditure for the completion in February 1997 of the refurbishment of the Old Public Offices which started in 1980.
[3] Some planned refurbishment and preventive maintenance expenditure deferred to future years; resources reallocated to fund immediate requirement for new millennium-compliant IT.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of his Department's buildings. [30104]

Mr. Fatchett: The following is the information:

The remainder of the information requested, in respect of the Overseas Estate which comprises of some 3,900 properties in 144 countries is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Minister without Portfolio

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what, and how many, files (a) were held in May 1997 and (b) are currently held by the Secret Intelligence Service and GCHQ concerning the Minister without Portfolio; and if they are planned to be destroyed. [28593]

Mr. Robin Cook: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to disclose information about the operations of the intelligence and security services, including about whether the services hold or have held files on any individual.

Arms Exports

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the country of origin of the advanced missile guidance parts intercepted by Jordan in late 1995 on the way to Iraq; and through which other countries they had passed prior to reaching Jordan. [29286]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: It is not our practice to comment in detail on information given to us in confidence by UNSCOM.

Iraq

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the alternative civilian uses of the four plants in Iraq which have been used to produce chemical warfare munitions; what characteristics of these plants make them suitable for chemical weapons; and if these are necessary for the civilian uses. [29287]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: There are a number of sites involved in Iraq's chemical warfare programme, or with the capability to become involved, which also have legitimate civilian uses. In the case of Iraq these have included the production of pesticides, fertilisers and chemicals for water purification. Because of the dual-use nature of the equipment and materials involved, many such plants are capable of being used to produce chemical weapons.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the basis for his Department's statement that (a) 4000 tonnes of chemical weapons and (b) 600 tonnes of VX precursors are not accounted for in Iraq; and what assessment he has made of where the precursors were obtained from. [29973]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Of the balance of chemical weapons and precursors declared by Iraq, the UN Special Commission (UNSCOM) has been unable to verify the disposal or destruction of the quantities referred to. Full details can be found in the latest report by the Executive Chairman of the UN Special Commission, a copy of which is held in the Library of the House. We have not made an assessment as to the source of supply, as UNSCOM's policy is not to disclose details of countries or suppliers and most chemical weapons precursors have widespread legitimate industrial applications eg in the manufacture of fire retardants, pesticides, insecticides and detergents.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the basis for his Department's statement that 31,000 chemical weapons munitions are not accounted for in Iraq. [29974]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The quantity of chemical weapons munitions that remain unaccounted for are derived from the discrepancy between Iraq's declared munitions material balance and the quantity that UNSCOM has been able to verify as destroyed or otherwise accounted for. Full details can be obtained from the latest report by the Executive Chairman of the UN Special Commission, a copy of which is held in the Library of the House.

Mr. Limbert Spencer

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applicants were interviewed prior to Mr. Limbert Spencer's appointment as an adviser on minority issues to his Department; and how many were of Asian origin. [29662]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Mr. Spencer was the only one of the candidates for this appointment to be interviewed. Mr. Spencer was appointed for a part-time fixed-term appointment under the terms of paragraph 2.7 of the Civil Service Commissioners Recruitment Code.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date, at what salary, and with what job description, Mr. Limbert Spencer was appointed as an adviser on minority issues to his Department. [29661]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Mr. Spencer was appointed on 1 December 1997 on a fixed-term appointment in the Senior Management Structure to last until 30 November 1998. The salary range for a job at this level is £43,050-£69,050 and he is paid on a part-time pro rata basis. His responsibilities are:

to identify any barriers to minority ethnic staff and potential staff, at any point in the employment process, including recruitment, posting appraisal and promotion; to make recommendations to senior managers for action to address barriers; and to work with minority ethnic organisations in the UK to increase the profile and promote the image of the FCO as an organisation which offers career opportunities for people from minority ethnic communities.

Paul Loseby and James Miles

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action has been taken by the British Ambassador to Venezuela concerning the cases of Paul Loseby and James Miles. [29568]

Mr. Fatchett: Our Ambassador and his staff have raised the conditions of the detention for Mr. Miles and Mr. Loseby with the Venezeulan authorities on a number of occasions. Most recently the Ambassador wrote to the Fiscal General of Venezuela on 27 January and called on the Governor of Caracas on 30 January (accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Miles) seeking their help in getting Mr. Miles and Mr. Loseby to see a doctor and dentist.

Venezuelan Prisoners

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent action he has taken with regard to the transfer of convicted persons between Britain and Venezuela; and what requests have been made by the Venezuelan government for the return of convicted Venezuelan prisoners held in Britain. [29569]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to his question on 5 February 1998, Official Report, column 752.

We have received no requests from the Venezuelan government for the transfer to Venezuela of Venezuelan citizens imprisoned in the United Kingdom.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 660, on ministerial travel, for what reason he returned to London on 21 July by helicopter; where his ministerial car was on that day; and what was the cost of the flight. [29608]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 17 February 1998]: I returned to London by helicopter because my engagement at Highgrove finished at 1500 and my first appointment in London was at 1700 with the Defence Secretary: the journey by car could not have been completed in less than three hours.

My Ministerial car took me to Highgrove that morning and collected me from Battersea Heliport on my return from Highgrove. The cost of the flight was £1,209.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many contracts of a value greater than £10,000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30106]

Mr. Fatchett: The information sought is not readily available and could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30103]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: On 1 January 1998, the FCO employed 5,620 UK-based staff in London and the South East, and at posts overseas.

Total paybill expenditure (including the cost of Salaries, National Insurance, Superannuation, Shift Disturbance Allowance, Overtime and Recruitment and Retention Allowance) for the financial year 1996–97 was £170.3m.

Expenditure in 1996–97 on London allowances and weightings, which form part of Recruitment and Retention Allowance, was £7.7m.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30105]

Mr. Fatchett: The regional breakdown of expenditure by the FCO on hospitality, stationery and travel in the last Financial Year (1996–97) was as follows:

£000

	England
Hospitality	[1]1,796
Stationery	2,345
Travel	1,333

[1] This figure includes the expenditure by the Government Hospitality Fund which provides for State Visits, Guests of Government and functions for all Government Departments.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Overseas Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many overseas visits have been made by his Department's political advisers at public expense since 1 May. [25138]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 23 January 1998]: My special adviser has accompanied me, along with other departmental officials, on four overseas visits since 1 May.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many times the spouses of Ministers in his Department have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits; and what was the cost of their travel and other expenses. [25173]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 23 January 1998]: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary and I have been accompanied solely by departmental officials on the overseas visits which we have undertaken.

Official Cars

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many official cars are available for use by

Ministers in his Department; and how many new cars have been acquired for the use of Ministers in his Department since 1 May. [25174]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 23 January 1998]: For this answer my Department includes the Prime Minister's Office, the Government Whips' Offices in the House of Lords and the House of Commons, and the Minister without Portfolio's Office.

My Department has six official cars allocated for use by Ministers. There has been no change in the number of allocated cars since 1 May 1997.

Since 1 May 1997 the Government Car Service has purchased 19 new vehicles for ministerial use across Government. Of these, 17 were to replace cars that were already being used by Ministers and had come to the end of their working life, and two were added to cover new ministerial posts.

Political Advisers (Support Staff)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many secretarial and support staff work full-time in support of his political advisers in his Department. [25191]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 23 January 1998]: There is one Personal Secretary who works full-time in support of the Special Advisers in my Department.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the cost of media presentations and press conferences which he has given, other than those held at his Department. [25172]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 23 January 1998]: I have incurred no costs for media presentations or press conferences other than those held at my Department.

London Weighting

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost of London salary weightings to the Civil Service for each of the last five years. [30054]

Dr. David Clark: My answer assumes that the hon. Gentleman's question refers to the payment of London Weighting allowance.

Since 1 April 1996 departments and agencies have had delegated authority to determine the pay and the allowances for those staff outside of the Senior Civil Service. I am, therefore, unable to provide costs for the last two years (1996 and 1997), as records of actual costs are no longer held centrally.

The London Weighting allowance was abolished on 1 October 1994, but most Civil Servants in receipt of this allowance retained it as a reserved right. There were three levels of London Weighting allowance paid to non-industrial staff:

inner London £1,776 per person per annum;

intermediate zone £1,015; and outer London £736.

The approximate cost of the London allowance (excluding employer's superannuation and National Insurance contributions) for the three years prior to delegation is as follows:

1993: £158 million

1994: £151 million

1995: £147 million.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what plans he has to consult the Showmen's Guild on the Millennium Dome project. [29863]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has been in correspondence with the London and Home Counties section of the Showmen's Guild of Great Britain about their interest in short-stay events at the Millennium Experience. The NMEC have agreed to contact the Guild again if appropriate opportunities arise in planning events and activities in the environs of the Dome.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will ensure (a) that his announcement about the (i) specific contents and (ii) sponsorship of the Millennium Dome project is made to Parliament in the first instance and (b) that all future announcements are made to Parliament in the first instance where they concern substantial amounts of public and National Lottery money. [29870]

Mr. Mandelson: All Government Ministers are guided by the relevant section of the Ministerial Code, which states (paragraph 27) that

"Ministers will want to bear in mind the desire of Parliament that the most important announcements of Government policy should be made, in the first instance, in Parliament."

I shall ensure that Parliament has appropriate information on all major policy developments in respect of the Millennium Experience.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Buildings Refurbishment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his estimate of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will make a statement. [26630]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by my Department is set out in the table.

	Cost
1995–96	136,507
1996–97	8,133
1997–98 (to date)	47,995
1997–98 (full year)	218,208

The figures for 1996–97 onwards do not include VAT or professional fees.

My Department moved into new premises in 1993 and, therefore, little or no refurbishment has been necessary since. The expenditure in 1995–96 was due to the Department acquiring an extra floor in another building. Expenditure in 1997–98 has arisen because of the need to clean and refit ceiling tiles at a cost of approx £170,000 and for works to Ministers' offices to accommodate a fourth Minister.

Ministerial Transport

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his estimate of the cost of (a) Ministerial cars and drivers and (b) the Department's bill for taxis in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year. [27751]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The available information is given in the table:

Year	Ministerial cars and drivers	Taxis
1995–96	[1]236,115	11,208
1996–97	176,031	16,681
1997–98 (spend to date)	192,657	13,976
1997–98 (estimate)	225,000	n/a

[1] Expenditure on Government Car Service, includes non-ministerial expenditure, eg. Permanent Secretary's Car.

Piers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much National Lottery funding has been provided for the preservation of pleasure piers. [29559]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The National Lottery has provided £4.3 million to date for the preservation of pleasure piers. All awards have been made by the Heritage Lottery Fund.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many pleasure piers have received public funding in each of the last 25 years. [29560]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The majority of Government funding for the built heritage is channelled through English Heritage. Since its inception in 1984, English Heritage has offered conservation grants to the following pleasure piers:

Grant offer (£000)

Year	Brighton West Pier	Southend Pier	Ramsgate East Pier	Clevedon Pier	Scarborough West Pier
1983–84	50.0	—	—	19.4	—
1984–85	—	100.0	—	637.0	—
1985–86	184.8	—	—	—	—

1996–97	77.5	—	—	—
Total	315.3	100.0	7.2	656.4	20.6

The National Heritage Memorial Fund (NHMF), also funded by my Department, has provided funding for the rescue of the following piers since its establishment in 1980:

Grant Award (£)

Year	Bangor Pier	Clevedon Pier	Brighton Pier
1982–83	10,000	—	—
1983–84	65,000	—	—

1986–87	45,474	71,535	71,999
1987–88	50,000	33,257	43,222
1988–89	—	146,901	39,296
1989–90	—	32,608	36,014
Total	325,000	662,000	190,531

In addition, the Heritage Lottery Fund, distributed by the NHMF, has made the following awards to piers:

Grant Award (£)

Year	Clevedon Pier	Swanage Pier	Bowness Harbour Pier	Penarth Pier	Southport Pier	Brighton West Pier
1995–96	1,195,045	—	—	—	—	—
1996–97	—	700,000	250,000	1,101,000	34,000	968,000

Total	1,195,045	700,000	250,000	1,101,000	34,000	1,025,500

There are no readily accessible central records of funding for restoration of specific building types to enable me to provide an answer for the years prior to 1983–84. Similarly, it is not possible to provide information in respect of local authority funding for pleasure piers.

English Heritage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much English Heritage has spent on maintenance of its historic (a) sites and (b) properties in each of the past five years. [29742]

Mr. Tom Clarke: It is not possible to provide a breakdown of expenditure between English Heritage's historic sites and properties. However, in each of the last five years, overall expenditure on the maintenance and restoration of its historic sites and properties is as follows:

Year	£ million
1992–93	7.2
1993–94	5.8
1994–95	5.5
1995–96	6.1
1996–97	7.0

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much English Heritage has spent on the restoration of historic (a) sites and (b) properties in each of the past five years. [29741]

Mr. Tom Clarke: In each of the last five years, English Heritage's expenditure on each of its grant repair schemes is as follows:

Grant spend (£ million)

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Historic Buildings and Monuments	12.3	11.7	12.1	12.8	11.6

Total	33.0	34.3	33.8	34.4	35.3

In addition, overall expenditure on the restoration and maintenance of English Heritage's own historic sites and properties is as follows:

Year	£ million
1992–93	7.2
1993–94	5.8
1994–95	5.5
1995–96	6.1

SCOTLAND

Dental Services

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate by health authority the number of patients who will be de-registered from their dentists as a result of the new regulations in (a) numerical and (b) percentage terms. [29160]

Mr. Galbraith: From 1 September 1996, the registration period for both adult continuing care and child capitation payments was harmonised to provide patients with a period of continuing dental care for 15 months following each course of treatment. At that time it was estimated that registration numbers might fall by about 15 per cent. as a result of this change.

At December 1997 (the latest date for which figures are available) there were 2,944,047 patients registered with a dentist in Scotland compared with 2,664,988 at the end of 1996–97. According to the earlier estimate about 442,000 patients might lapse from registration. No estimates for individual Health Boards have been made.

Regular attenders will be unaffected by the change as their registration period will roll forward when they attend their dentist.

Dentists are free to re-register any patients whose registrations have lapsed. It is for dentists to decide whether they wish to accept any patient onto their list.

Rural Watch

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total financial support from his Department to farm watch and rural watch schemes in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29244]

Mr. McLeish: The Scottish Office has provided no financial support to farm watch or other rural watch schemes in any of the last five years. Individual police forces support farm watch and other rural watch schemes.

Fire Service

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of (a) retained and (b) all fire officers per force, by sex and age group, in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [29256]

Mr. McLeish: Data on the age of fire service officers are not held centrally. The information available is as follows:

Police

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of special police constables, per police force, by sex and age group, in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29242]

Mr. McLeish: The information requested is set out in the table and has been taken from returns supplied by forces since 1992.

Information by age group not available.
From 1995–96 figures relate to financial year rather than calendar year and are taken as at 31 March.

The Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland have set up a Working Group to review the role of special constables.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) police houses and (b) police stations there were in each police force area, in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what proportion of police stations were operating on a part-time basis in each year, in each force. [29245]

Mr. McLeish: The information available is set out in the tables and has been taken from annual statistical returns supplied by forces since 1989.

Residential Care

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the treatment of war disablement pension made by each local authority in Scotland in calculating residential care assessments. [29285]

Mr. Galbraith: All local authorities in Scotland must apply the National Assistance (Assessment of Resources) Regulations 1992, as amended, when charging for residential and nursing home care. The Regulations require that the payment of any war disablement pension to a resident is subject to a £10 weekly disregard.

A90 (Accidents)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of fatalities and serious injuries arising from accidents on the Perth-Dundee section of the A90 in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [29554]

Mr. McLeish: The table lists the number of fatal and serious casualties on the A90 between Perth (north of Friarton Bridge) and Dundee (Swallow Roundabout) from 1988 to 1997 inclusive.

Small Claims

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of small claims cases in 1996–97 involved legal representation. [30147]

Mr. McLeish: Figures on these matters are not held centrally.

Road Accidents

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many alcohol-related road accidents occurred in each of the last five years in Scotland; what percentage of total accidents they represent; and how many deaths resulted. [29949]

Mr. McLeish: Road Accidents statistical returns collect information only about accidents which involve personal injury and do not include road accidents where only damage to vehicles occurs. Estimates of the numbers of injury road accidents involving motor vehicle drivers or riders with illegal alcohol levels (ie above the current drink-drive limit of 80mg per 100ml of blood), and the numbers of casualties in such accidents, are based on the statistical returns and on separate information from Procurators Fiscal. The table provides information for the latest five years for which estimates are available for Scotland. Because of the uncertainty involved, each estimate is rounded to the nearest ten.

Year	Estimated number of injury road accidents in Scotland which involved motor vehicle drivers or riders with illegal alcohol levels	Percentage of all injury road accidents in Scotland	Estimated number of deaths arising from road accidents in Scotland which involved motor vehicle drivers or riders with illegal alcohol levels
1991	990	5.2	80
1992	860	4.8	60
1993	840	5.0	60
1994	790	4.7	80
1995	790	4.8	50

Higher Education

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to encourage young people to enter higher education. [28805]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 16 February 1998]: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe) on 17 February 1998, Official Report, column 884.

Fife Health Board

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the overall cost of relocation of Fife Health Board from Glenrothes to Cupar; and what were the costs of relocation broken down into those of (i) removal, (ii) redecoration, (iii) office equipment and furniture, carpets, curtains and other furnishings and telephone and computer systems and (iv) relocation of staff; [29143]

(2) what has been the cost of maintaining Fife Health Board's Glenrothes site since 1993; [29144]

(3) if he will estimate the costs of returning Fife Health Board's offices to Glenrothes. [29145]

Mr. Galbraith: Fife Health Board has indicated that the overall cost of relocating Fife Health Board from Glenrothes to Cupar was £901,000 comprising:

	£000
Building/Structural costs	655
IT Network costs	70
Removal costs	37
Staff excess travel	139
Total	901

Redecoration and office equipment are included within the total building/structural costs. The telephone system was transferred from Glenrothes House.

The Health Board has indicated that the cost of maintaining Glenrothes House over the three financial years 1994–95 to 1996–97 was £870,000. This is the net cost after recharges to the sub-tenants. This building has been used during this period for a number of Fife Health Board activities.

I understand that the Health Board is currently considering its future requirements for Headquarters' office accommodation and has set up a working group under the Chairmanship of one of the non-executive Directors to further consider this issue. While the Health Board had previously given some consideration to a possible relocation back to Glenrothes House, no final decision has been made. The Health Board estimates the costs of relocation to Glenrothes House at around £860,000.

Maternity Facilities (Fife)

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) transferring the maternity facilities currently located at Forth Park Hospital to Victoria Hospital and (b) adapting and equipping the Victoria Hospital to take the maternity wards from Forth Park. [29146]

Mr. Galbraith: Fife Health Board's draft Integrated Health Care Strategy identifies options for the future provision of maternity services. This is based on advice from clinicians that split site obstetric and paediatric services are no longer acceptable and that these services should be integrated into the main Victoria Hospital site for best clinical quality. The proposals will be subject to public consultation. The capital and other implications of this proposal are currently being considered by Fife Health Board and the Trust.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost of building and equipping the maternity ward at Queen Margaret Hospital, Dunfermline. [29147]

Mr. Galbraith: Queen Margaret Hospital NHS Trust has indicated that, based on the total building cost of Queen Margaret Hospital, the cost of the maternity ward and delivery suite component was approximately £1,000,000. These facilities are now being used by the Trust for other purposes.

Victoria Hospital

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the annual cost of work related to the structure of Victoria Hospital; what was the date of the last full structural survey of the Victoria Hospital; and when it was published. [29148]

Mr. Galbraith: Estate related expenditure on the Victoria Hospital for the years 1994/95 to 1997/98 is provided. The figures were provided by the Kirkcaldy Acute Hospitals NHS Trust.

£000

Year	Capital	Revenue
1994–95	2,066	489
1995–96	4,339	582
1996–97	3,161	552
1997–98	1,532 (est)	—

The last structural survey of Victoria Hospital was carried out in the spring of 1992 and the result was presented at a Strategic Workshop held on 19 and 20 May 1992.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost of relocating the paediatric and gynaecological services from the Queen Margaret Hospital to the Victoria Hospital. [29149]

Mr. Galbraith: Paediatric surgery and gynaecology services have not transferred from Queen Margaret Hospital to Victoria Hospital. Services are currently provided at both hospitals.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the costs of dealing with recent flooding at the Victoria Hospital; and what assessment he has made of the likelihood and frequency of future flooding. [29150]

Mr. Galbraith: The programme of repairs and replacements carried out at Victoria Hospital, Kirkcaldy since the flooding on 13/14 August 1997 cost £50,000. Prior to this incident, Kirkcaldy Acute Hospitals NHS Trust and the East of Scotland Water Board had commissioned a programme of work to improve drainage from the hospital site. This was part of a bigger project in the surrounding area which included alterations and improvements to the local sewers. Further design work is presently being undertaken by the Trust and the Water Board to provide storm overflow drains. I understand that the Water Board has indicated that once these further measures are implemented the possibility of future flooding is highly unlikely.

HEALTH

Smoking

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the absolute changes in the incidence of (a) smoking and (b) smoking-related diseases by socio-economic classification in the past 20 years. [28816]

Ms Jowell: Information about the prevalence of smoking by socio-economic group between 1976 and 1996 is given in reports on the General Household Survey (GHS)[1]. Information for 1996 is given in the table.

Data on the incidence of all smoking-related diseases by socio-economic group are either not available centrally or could be provided only at disproportionate cost, however information on the incidence of lung cancer, one smoking-related disease, by social class between 1976 and 1989 has been published in "Population Tends 90"[2].

Data on "deaths" from some smoking-related diseases (for example, lung cancer and ischaemic heart disease) by social class have been published in "Health Inequalities"[3].

NHS White Paper

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps health authorities will take to involve the public in (a) the proposed health improvement plans, (b) the proposed primary care groups and (c) NHS trusts following the introduction of proposals set out in his White Paper on the NHS. [29061]

Mr. Milburn: Rebuilding confidence in the National Health Service as a public service, accountable to patients, open to the public and shaped by their views, is one of the essential tasks left to us by the previous Administration. The White Paper, "The New NHS", sets clear requirements for public accountability, which will be met locally in a variety of ways as implementation of the White Paper proceeds. Nationally, we recently added NHS trusts to the list of bodies whose meetings must be open to the public.

NHS Trust Mergers

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement regarding his Department's policy on mergers of NHS trusts. [29009]

Mr. Milburn: We welcome proposals for closer joint working between National Health Service trusts, leading in some cases to proposals for merger, as demonstrations of the new approach to partnership in the NHS. Each merger arises from a local decision and is considered on its merits. The key criterion for mergers is that they should offer the best means of delivering benefits to patients. All mergers will be expected to demonstrate administrative savings. There is no national target for numbers of mergers.

NHS Appeals Procedure

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement changes to the National Health Service appeals procedure. [29257]

Mr. Milburn: We will be commissioning a formal evaluation of the National Health Service Complaints Procedures later this year. Officials are currently preparing to put the project out to tender.

NHS Real Estate Sales

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to public funds of disposing of NHS real estate by a system of preferred bidders as against sale on the open market. [29359]

Mr. Milburn: Surplus or redundant assets must be disposed of at full open market value to ensure that the National Health Service obtains best value for money.

Physical Education

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) the fitness of the nation's schoolchildren and (b) the effects of the proposed removal of physical education from the core curriculum. [29404]

Ms Jowell: On the Department of Health's behalf, the Health Education Authority is currently completing a review ("Young and Active") of the physical activity and fitness levels among children and young people aged between 5 and 18. I expect to receive their assessment of the current situation and recommendations for future action shortly. In addition, the 1997 Health Survey also included questions about children's physical activity levels. The results will be available towards the end of 1998.

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, with whom I work closely on health matters related to schoolchildren, will be responding with regard to the place of physical education in the curriculum.

Pharmaceuticals

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the proportion of total NHS spending taken by pharmaceutical products in each of the last five years; and what was the figure in cash terms for each year. [29854]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is given in the table.

Year	Total spend on drugs by the National Health Service in £ million	Total National Health Service spend on drugs as a percentage of total NHS expenditure
1992–93	3,284	11.2
1993–94	3,661	12.0
1994–95	3,994	12.5
1995–96	4,372	13.1
1996–97	4,735	13.6

Health Authorities and Trusts (Mergers)

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health authorities and NHS trusts which have merged or changed their names since April 1997. [30212]

Mr. Milburn: There have been no mergers of health authorities since April 1997. However, since 1 April 1997 the following National Health Service trusts have merged:

Isle of Wight Community Healthcare and St. Mary's Hospital Trust (£103.3m) to form Isle of Wight Healthcare NHS Trust;

Weald of Kent Community NHS Trust and Maidstone Priority Care to form Invicta Community Care NHS Trust;

Wirral Community Health Care NHS Trust and West Cheshire NHS Trust to form Wirral and West Cheshire Community NHS Trust;

Pontefract NHS Trust and Pinderfields NHS Trusts to form Pinderfields and Pontefract Hospitals NHS Trust.

Additionally, nine NHS trust mergers have been agreed for April 1998 with another 13 at consultation stage before final Ministerial decision.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) under the arrangements contained in the NHS White Paper, which body will commission local hospital and community mental health services; and what scope there will be for local determination; [30210]

(2) for what reasons mental health services in England are not commissioned by primary care trusts. [30211]

Mr. Boateng: As envisaged in the White Paper "The New NHS", the new Primary Care Groups will commission the majority of local mental health services in England. Health authorities will commission specialist mental health services. Health Improvement Programmes will allow consideration of local health needs and how these can best be met, as well as how national targets can be delivered.

Child Deaths (Medical Error)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the procedure for investigating the deaths of children as a result of medical error; and what plans he has to improve the accountability of the medical profession. [30208]

Mr. Boateng: Each National Health Service is responsible for investigating untoward incidents whether or not they have led to patient injury or death. Guidelines have been issued to the NHS on the reporting and investigation of incidents under the title "Risk Management in the NHS".

The White Paper "The New NHS" sets out plans to introduce a process of "clinical governance" in every NHS trust to help ensure that proper processes are in place for assuring and improving clinical quality.

Coloured Spectacle Lenses

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of evidence on the beneficial effects for dyslexic children of plano coloured spectacle lenses; and if he will amend the regulations to allow the inclusion of such lenses for clinical purposes within the optical voucher scheme. [30207]

Mr. Milburn: Officials from the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Employment will shortly be discussing this evidence with members of the Institute of Optometry. Before consideration is given to any changes to the regulations, it must be clear that any benefits to children with reading difficulties are derived specifically from the use of coloured lenses.

Lexie McConnell

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish an independent public inquiry into the death of Lexie McConnell. [30209]

Mr. Milburn: The death of Lexie McConnell was a tragic incident, and I fully sympathise with Mr. and Mrs. McConnell's great loss.

An independent inquiry was offered in 1994 by Anglia and Oxford Regional Health Authority which would have covered the issue of steroid prescriptions for children, using Lexie's case as a base-line for the inquiry. Mr. and Mrs. McConnell did not however agree with the proposed format of the inquiry and chose not to participate. Consequently the inquiry did not take place.

More recently the McConnells have been pursuing a legal claim against Oxfordshire Health Authority on the ground of post traumatic stress caused by their daughter's death. The case has not yet been heard by the Courts. It is therefore not appropriate for an independent public inquiry to take place whilst a separate private legal claim is being brought against Oxfordshire Health Authority by the McConnells.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts of a value greater than £5,000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30081]

Ms Jowell: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30078]

Ms Jowell: Annual paybill information is not collected in the format requested. The table gives the January 1998 pay information multiplied to give an annual figure.

Total	5,021	119,942,076	2,980,030	122,922,106

Notes:
1. Figures extracted from January 1998 pay bill
2. Basic pay includes national pay plus allowances other than London allowances
3. In August 1996 all London allowances for new staff were abolished in this Department and a general additional pay allowance was introduced which covers payments for geographical location and special skills. Staff in receipt of London weighting prior to August 1996 have a reserved right to retain this allowance. Therefore not all payments for an element of London weighting are separately identifiable.
4. All figures exclude overtime, bonuses and other non-recurring costs
5. Pay details have been adjusted for part-time working
6. London weighting shown against non-London areas relates to mark-time pay

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of his Department's buildings. [30079]

Ms Jowell: A schedule of buildings occupied by the Department showing the location and running costs for 1996–97 is set out in the table. Running costs include rent (or opportunity cost rent in respect of freehold buildings), contribution in lieu of rates, service charges, maintenance, utilities, security and cleaning.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30080]

Ms Jowell: The Department of Health does not collect information on expenditure in the above areas on a government designated regional basis. It is therefore not possible to provide data in the form requested without incurring disproportionate costs.

The figures for the whole of the Department and its agencies for the year 1996–97 are as follows:

	Hospitality	Stationery	Travel
Department	105,192	1,551,744	5,722,961
Agencies	23,589	[1]130,602	[1]794,516
Totals	128,781	1,682,346	6,517,477

[1] Due to variations in the accounting systems used by the agencies these figures are based upon a small degree of estimation and apportionment.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26589]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The Department purchases a range of newspapers, magazines and other publications. Expenditure by the Department's Libraries on newspapers and magazines for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year are as follows:

Year	Serials	Newspapers
1995–96	224,000	[1]n/a
1996–97	158,237	26,786
1997–98 to date (Dec)	138,979	11,739
1997–98 full year	171,000	14,744

[1] Figure not available except at disproportionate cost.

Farmers Markets

Mr. Soames: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage farmers' markets. [28487]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 9 February 1998]: The Department supports the principle of farmers markets as they can offer consumers in inner cities and other urban areas the opportunity to buy fresh local produce direct from farmers and other small food producers.

The actual development of more of these markets is dependent on local authorities and local initiatives. Local authorities in particular need to use the market franchise rights sensibly with regard to the needs of local business to help this concept flourish.

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy for responding to letters received in the (a) Scottish Gaelic, (b) Welsh, (c) Urdu, (d) Hindi and (e) Chinese language. [28065]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The Department's responsibilities are, in many cases, restricted to England only. However, in-so-far as its responsibilities cover Wales, the Department is drawing up a Welsh Language scheme in accordance with the Welsh Language Act 1993, in discussion with the Welsh Language Board.

The Department does not have policies regarding correspondence received in Scottish Gaelic, Urdu, Hindi or Chinese languages.

Varroa

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's policy regarding the use of Apistan in eradicating varroa; what other treatment for varroa his Department has assessed; and if he will make a statement. [28970]

Mr. Rooker: The details of any individual application for a market authorisation for a veterinary medicine, including Apistan, must remain confidential to the applicant and the VMD. Apistan, however, is not authorised in this country and the administration of imported Apistan is prohibited by the Animals and Animal Products (Examination for Residues and Maximum Residue Limits) Regulations 1997 (Statutory Instrument 1997/1729) which came into force on 11 August 1997.

The question of any applications for authorisations of new veterinary drugs is one for the pharmaceutical and beekeeping industries. Any such application would be assessed against the statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. It is open to anyone holding a marketing authorisation to use the mutual recognition procedures if they wish to market a veterinary medicinal product in more than one Member State. Details of this procedure can be obtained from the Veterinary Medicines Directorate.

We are aware that beekeepers have in the past relied on certain non-medicinal curative substances to allow them to carry out a duty of care to their bees and to fulfil welfare requirements. The above SI would prohibit the administration of these non-medicinal curative substances only where, if transmitted to honey, they would be likely to be harmful to human health. If the substance is not harmful the Residues Regulations would not prevent it from being administered.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals his Department has for the use of set-aside land. [29252]

Mr. Rooker: Set-aside is a requirement of the EU's support arrangements for certain arable crops and is intended to limit production of such crops. The uses to which set-aside land can be put are strictly prescribed by EU regulations and include the production of certain crops for industrial use. The Government aim to encourage farmers to manage set-aside land in environmentally beneficial ways.

The Government do not consider compulsory set-aside an appropriate method of managing the EU cereals market and will be seeking its abolition in forthcoming discussion on CAP reform. The EU Commission has proposed that farmers should be able to continue to set-aside land on a voluntary basis after CAP reform and the Government could support this on environmental grounds and to facilitate the production of industrial and energy crops.

BSE Compensation

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the amount of public funding awarded to each sector of farming under BSE compensation. [29251]

Mr. Rooker: The Government have paid over £1.3 billion in compensation to the beef sector for BSE in 1996/97 and 1997/98.

Meat Prices

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce measures to ensure that reductions in the prices received by farmers for their livestock are reflected in the prices charged in supermarkets. [29261]

Mr. Rooker: The levels of retail prices for meat are set by competition, which is strong in the food retailing sector. The Director General of Fair Trading keeps the market under review to ensure that it continues to remain competitive. I have no plans at present for further measures.

Quarantine

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes to the quarantine requirements for animals coming into the United Kingdom would require (a) primary and (b) secondary legislation. [29721]

Mr. Rooker: Changes to the quarantine rules could be made under secondary legislation. However, although there is currently no European Union legislation on the movement of pet animals, there could be in the future—and UK legislation would then have to take account of this.

Calshot Oyster Fisheries

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 166, on Calshot Oyster Fisheries, what factors contributed to the length of time taken to complete the procedures necessary for the preparation of the draft order. [29817]

Mr. Morley: The application by Calshot Oyster Fishermen Ltd. for a variation Order was received on 11 September 1996. The technical aspects of the application were then assessed, and once it was agreed that it was appropriate for it to proceed the Ministry's Legal Department were asked to draft the necessary Order; when this was available a map of the change being sought in the area of the Several fishery was prepared. The draft Order and map were sent to the applicants on 18 April 1997.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 16 and 17 February. [30544]

Dr. John Cunningham: I chaired the second meeting under the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union Council of Agriculture Ministers on 16–17 February in Brussels. My noble Friend the Lord Donoughue, Parliamentary Secretary responsible for the farming and food industry, represented the United Kingdom at that meeting.

The Council had a presentation by the Agriculture Commissioner of the Commission's proposals for prices fixed under the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) for the 1998–1999 year. These proposals were described by the Commissioner as broadly a standstill in present CAP support arrangements, pending the forthcoming negotiations on further reform of the CAP in the context of Agenda 2000. Ministerial colleagues in the Council commented on their key priorities within this set of proposals. I agreed to take them forward as quickly as possible; that work will begin immediately.

The Council also held a first debate on the Commission's proposals for reform of the tobacco regime, which also form an element of the Agenda 2000 strategy. On behalf of the United Kingdom, and with support from Sweden and Denmark, my noble Friend the Lord Donoughue expressed concern at the relatively modest nature of these reform proposals and urged more radical steps to reduce support for tobacco production in the Community, bearing in mind the inconsistency with EU efforts to limit tobacco consumption for health reasons. Detailed work on this proposal will now begin.

The Council held a second full debate on proposed amendments to the EU banana regime in response to the recent findings of the WTO Appellate Body. I concluded in the light of the debate that further detailed work should continue, and that the Council should resolve this issue quickly, both in order to meet WTO obligations and to give reassurance to EU and ACP banana growers about their futures.

There was a further discussion in the Council of the Commission's proposals in respect of the Community's beef promotion scheme. Final agreement did not prove possible in view of the requirement to achieve unanimity on this proposal. I undertook as Council President to consider the options for taking this proposal forward.

The Commissioner gave the Council a full report on the exchanges he had had with the United States on the negotiation of an EU/US veterinary and phytosanitary equivalence agreement. The Council noted that there had been positive developments in recent contacts between the two sides, and expressed the hope that the terms of an agreement would be ready for endorsement by the Council at its March meeting.

My noble Friend the Lord Donoughue expressed the concerns of the United Kingdom at the recent interruption to supplies of fish from Russian freezer vessels into the UK, in particular Scotland, and the risk this created to jobs in fish processing. The Commissioner undertook to carry out an urgent examination of the problem.

Finally, the Council discussed the forthcoming OECD Agriculture Ministerial meeting in Paris in March, where consideration would be given to progress on agricultural reform over the last decade. Ministers in the Council debated the line which the European Union would take at this meeting. I concluded that there should be co-ordination of the EU line in a High Level Group which will convene in Brussels next week for this purpose.

Research Projects

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total value of research projects he has commissioned with bodies in (a) London, (b) South-East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales, (f) Northern Ireland and (g) the UK. [30101]

Mr. Rooker: I regret that the information sought is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Decisions on the placing of research contracts are based on the scientific quality and value for money of research proposals and not on the geographical location of contractors. The Department does not keep a detailed record of the location of each project within the research programme because of the complexity of the contractual arrangements, which can involve sub-contractors and consortia, and because of the size and constantly changing nature of the research programme and the number of contractors involved. In the current year alone, the Department's R&D expenditure is likely to exceed £127 million, involving over 100 different contractors in around 2,000 individual projects.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of his Department's buildings. [30098]

Mr. Morley: The Department is currently responsible for 240 properties comprising large and small offices, laboratories, research farms and redundant buildings awaiting disposal. The properties are both freehold and leasehold, and are mainly situated in England with some in Wales and a few in Scotland. Details of the running costs of each building are not held centrally and disproportionate costs would be incurred to collect this information. However in 1997–98, the Department's expenditure on rents to landlords, opportunity cost rents to the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate (an executive agency of the Cabinet Office) and contributions in lieu of rates are expected to be £34,445,000. Further, in 1997–98, the Department's expenditure on the day to day running of the buildings, maintenance, repair, refurbishment and decommissioning redundant sites is expected to be £25,053,000.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30099]

Mr. Morley: The information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Beef

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the average payment made from the £85 million compensation package, announced on 22 December per (a) head of cattle and (b) beef farmer. [29828]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 February 1998]: Of the £85 million agrimonetary compensation package to be paid to UK livestock farmers, £72.5 million will be distributed to suckler cow producers who were paid under the 1996 Suckler Cow Premium Scheme with the remaining £12.5 million to be paid to sheep producers. The payment rate will be £44.20 for each suckler cow on which 1996 premium was paid in full, lower if penalties were applied to the 1996 premium claim. Based on the average claim size for the UK as a whole, the average payment per suckler producer will be in the region of £1,300.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Audit Commission

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will introduce a statutory code of practice in respect of the provisions in the Audit Commission Bill [Lords] which permit the Commission to datamatch personal data in the name of economy, effectiveness and efficiency; and if he will make a statement. [29114]

Mr. Hoon: The Audit Commission Bill is a Consolidation Bill, which does no more than restate the existing law in clearer form. It is not possible to amend the Bill by adding a provision for a code of practice.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30107]

Mr. Hoon: This answer covers the Headquarters of the Lord Chancellor's Department (with Associated Offices), the Court Service and the Public Trust Office. Paybill information for HQ and the Public Trust Office is for 1997–98. The figures for the Court Service represent pay levels as at 31 March 1997; the financial year 1996–97 is the last full year for which meaningful figures for the Court Service are available, as elements of their 1997–98 pay award are not due to be paid until April 1998; staff numbers have, however, been updated to 30 November 1997.

Information on staff numbers for each part of the Lord Chancellor's Department includes staff up to and including the Senior Civil Service and includes casuals. It does not, however, include fee-paid ushers, who are paid locally and for whom central records are not kept. The judiciary are not included. The paybills for the Court Service are shown by circuit. The great majority of staff in LCD HQ and all staff in the Public Trust Office are based in London. London Weighting and equivalent payments paid to staff in HQ and Associated Offices and in PTO have been consolidated with basic salary and are therefore included in the total paybill figures. In each case, figures are also shown for the cost of Local and Special Pay Additions currently payable.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many contracts of a value greater than £1000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each such area. [30110]

Mr. Hoon: The information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in how many child support commissioner cases appeal has been sought to the Court of Appeal; which party sought leave; and which cases were granted leave to appeal. [30060]

Mr. Hoon: Since 1995, leave to appeal has been sought on 16 child support cases in England and Wales and leave has been granted in seven. The Secretary of State, on behalf of the Child Support Officer, has sought leave in seven cases, of which two were granted; the appellant has sought leave in seven cases, of which four were granted; and the respondent has sought leave in two cases, of which one was granted.

Research Projects

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the total value of research projects he has commissioned with bodies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales, (f) Northern Ireland and (g) the UK. [30161]

A total of £926,961.00 was also spent on maintenance, £15,434 on fuel (other than gas and electricity) and £3,336,614.72 on contributions in lieu of rates for the above buildings during the period 1996–97.

In addition to the Departmental Headquarters buildings, the Court Service occupied 417 buildings during the same period and spent a total of £22.1 million on building maintenance, fuel and utility costs and £99.9 million on rent (including £49.2m which represents payments within Government in respect of buildings on the Civil Estate) service charges and contributions in lieu of rates. Not all items of expenditure for the Court Service are recorded by location and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Hotel and Catering (Training)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the shortfall in trained personnel in the hotel and catering industry in the next three years. [27092]

Dr. Howells: The Hospitality Training Foundation's Report Employment Forecasts to 2004, published in 1996, provides the most recent data on this subject.

Industry's employment needs and college output 1994–99

000

	Managers	Craft and semi-skilled	Operatives and others	Total
Average annual replacement needs	23	86	256	356
Average annual output from colleges	5	14	3	22
Average annual shortfall of qualified staff	18	72	253	343
Proportion of newly qualified to replacement needs	22%	16%	1%	6%

The opportunities provided by NVQs/SVQs enable those working to obtain qualification. This goes some way towards making up for the shortfall in college provision. It also means that the industry can increase its skill level.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to address skill shortages in the catering and hotel industries. [27091]

Dr. Howells: In July 1997 the Hospitality Training Foundation (HtF) was recognised by the Secretary of State as a National Training Organisation (NTO), one of a growing number of National Training Organisations currently being established. NTOs have the key responsibility for developing education and training arrangements in their sectors.

HtF as NTO for the hospitality industry (hotel and catering) has a three year Business Plan which outlines its future direction and sets out a programme of work designed to address, directly and indirectly, the industry's skills shortages.

HtF in its former role as Industry Lead Body for hotel and catering was responsible for monitoring future skill requirements and training needs.

Computer Systems

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list each major new computer system that (a) his Department, (b) non-departmental bodies and (c) agencies under his responsibility have purchased in the last five years; what was the initial purchase cost and what was the final cost; what was each system's (i) planned and (ii) actual date of commissioning; what major computer systems will be purchased by bodies in categories (a), (b) and (c) in the next financial year; and what is their estimated cost. [27852]

Dr. Howells: The list of major computer systems purchased by the department, associated non-departmental bodies and agencies over the past five years is given in the following Table 1. Table 2 is a list of planned purchases for the next financial year.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the (a) amount and (b) proportion of overall budget spent by each training and enterprise council on administration, in (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96 and (iii) 1996–97. [28498]

Dr. Howells: I have provided figures showing spend on administration costs and the proportion ofthe overall income of each of the English Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs) as stated in their consolidated annual statutory audited accounts, a copy of which is in the Library. It is not possible to identify separately administrative expenditure attributable to DfEE budgets.

Any direct comparison of administration costs between TECs could be misleading, both because there is no statutory definition of administration costs and also because of the range of training and enterprise activities TECs undertake.

[1] These TECs/CCTEs have adopted a statutory accounting format which does not disclose administrative expenditure separately. The Companies Acts do not require disclosure, or a common definition of administration costs in the statutory accounts of limited companies. Therefore, it is not possible to make meaningful comparisons between TECs/CCTEs in respect of these costs.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the extent of overpayment from public funds to training and enterprise councils in 1996–97 and each of the three previous years. [29925]

Dr. Howells: The Department keeps records of overpayments arising in training and enterprise councils in England. For 1996–97 these amounted to £5,089,122.51.

Figures for the three previous years were:

1995–96: £2,320,846.51

1994–95: £4,977,004.13

1993–94: £4,616,440.57.

Teachers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of teachers in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools are male. [29361]

Mr. Byers: The latest available figures show that 16 per cent. of teachers in maintained primary schools and 45 per cent. of teachers in maintained secondary schools in England in January 1997 were male.

Schools (Toilets)

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the health implications of schools' dependence on outside toilets; and what priority he attaches to their removal. [29405]

Mr. Byers: The Education (School Premises) Regulations 1996 impose a duty upon local education authorities and the governing bodies of grant-maintained schools to ensure that the health, safety and welfare of the occupants is reasonably assured in every part of a school building. They must undertake those assessments which they deem necessary in order to fulfil this duty.

The New Deal for Schools should lead to an additional £2 billion being spent on repairing, renewing and improving school buildings, including toilets, during this Parliament.

School Governors

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many representations he has received in support of the removal of local council representation on the boards of school governors; and if he will make a statement. [29380]

Mr. Byers: There will continue to be minor authority representation on all primary school governing bodies, where a governing body wants it. Regulations made under the School Standards and Framework Bill will make clear that governing bodies of all primary schools should consider co-opting a minor authority nominee. We will also, through guidance, strongly encourage LEAs to appoint minor authority nominees as LEA governors where a primary school serves a minor authority area and where the school has not already made provision for minor authority representation. We will consult fully with all the interested parties as we develop both the regulations and the guidance.

The proposals to achieve minor authority representation through co-option was made in the Technical Consultation Paper on the Framework for the Organisation for Schools, which the Department issued last August. Forty five respondents supported our proposals on co-option.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals involving school governors he has to improve school standards. [29356]

Mr. Byers: As we said in our White Paper "Excellence in Schools" the purpose of governing bodies is to help provide the best possible education for their pupils. Accordingly, Clause 37 of the School Standards and Framework Bill places a new requirement on governing bodies to "conduct the school with a view to promoting high standards of educational achievement at the school".

We are supporting governors in this role by ensuring that they have access to the information they need and by providing ring fenced funding for governor training under the 1998–99 School Standards Fund. The fund includes specific funding for training in target setting, as well as training for governors alongside professional staff as part of our National Literacy Strategy.

Further Education

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the numbers of student governors in colleges of further education; and if he will make a statement. [29532]

Dr. Howells: No record of this kind is kept centrally.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many further education colleges were in deficit for the financial year 1996–97; what percentage of colleges this represented; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the four previous financial years. [29420]

Dr. Howells: Out of 424 colleges which provided information to the Further Education Funding Council it is estimated that 234 (55 per cent.) were operating a deficit in the 1996–97 academic year. Information is not available for the 1992–93 academic year. The figures for 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 are 204 (44 per cent.), 263 (58 per cent.) and 264 (58 per cent.) respectively.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many further education colleges there are in England; and how many teaching staff are employed in these colleges (a) full-time, (b) on short-term contracts and (c) as agency teaching staff. [29427]

Dr. Howells: In September 1997 there were 444 colleges in the further education sector. The most recently available data for staff numbers are at July 1996. These indicate that there were 52,800 full time staff and 58,900 staff on fixed-term contracts whose primary role was teaching. Information on the numbers of agency staff is not collected.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with the Further Education Funding Council about the future role of the Association of Colleges. [29301]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not had such a discussion with the Further Education Funding Council which deals with matters such as that concerning the further role of the Association of Colleges.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the total number of further education colleges running a budget deficit for the current financial year; and if he will list the current estimated deficit of each of these colleges for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [29421]

Dr. Howells: On the basis of returns from 424 colleges the Further Education Funding Council estimate that 211 of these colleges will be running a budget deficit in the 1997–98 academic year and 205 will be running a deficit in 1998–99. Forecast information provided by colleges to the Council is commercially sensitive and it is not the Council's practice to release forecast figures relating to individual colleges.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase the total number of students within further education colleges during the financial year 1998–99; how the increase will be allocated between different regions; what methods will be used to ensure that targets are achieved; what additional funding will be available to colleges for students; and what the impact will be on the average level of funding per student throughout the sector. [29382]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State anticipates growth in further education colleges of some 20,000 students, in full-time equivalent terms, between the 1997/98 and 1998/99 academic years. We have announced an additional £100 million over the plans of the previous Government. The average level of funding per student will remain the same in cash terms, with the college sector as a whole absorbing only the costs of inflation. Allocations of funding to sector colleges are the responsibility of the Further Education Funding Council which will make them in the Spring. The Council's funding arrangements are designed to help ensure that college agreements are met.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice he has given to the Further Education Funding Council concerning the individual and collective responsibilities of the members of college corporations. [29302]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to announce his proposals for governing bodies of further education colleges following the publication of the consultation paper on Lifelong Learning.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many redundancies of (a) teaching staff, (b) support staff and (c) management posts were notified by further education colleges in England in each of the last four years; and what estimate he has made of the likely reduction in each of these three categories during 1998–99. [29300]

Dr. Howells: This information is not held centrally. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made no estimate of likely reduction.

National Grid for Learning

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to ensure that the content of the National Grid for Learning is accessible and relevant to teachers in (a) further, higher and adult education and (b) workplace-based learning. [29298]

Dr. Howells: The Government's proposals for developing the National Grid for Learning in all these areas of learning were set out in the consultation paper 'Connecting the Learning Society' published last October. We are considering carefully the responses to this consultation, including responses from those concerned with further, higher and adult education, and work-based training.

New Deal

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people claiming unemployment benefit are not eligible for inclusion in the New Deal. [29293]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The New Deal for young people covers those aged 18–24 who have been claiming JSA for more than six months. In January 1998 there were 375,000 18–24 year olds claiming JSA, of which about 120,000 had been unemployed for more than six months. The New Deal for people aged over 25 covers those who have been unemployed for more than two years. In January 1998 there were 1.1 million people aged over 25 who were claiming JSA, of which 216,000 had been unemployed for more than two years.

The New Deals will continue throughout this Parliament, so they will help more than just the current stocks in the relevant durations. All 18–24 year olds who have been on JSA for less than six months and those aged over 25 who have been on JSA for less than two years will be eligible for the New Deal if they remain on JSA and flow through the relevant threshold. Currently between 15,000 and 20,000 18–24-year-olds pass the six months threshold each month and 5,000 to 10,000 people aged over 25 pass the two year threshold. Over the whole of the Parliament the New Deals will help several times the number in the current stock.

There will also be New Deals for lone parents and for those on long-term sickness and disability benefits. These aim to provide help to individuals currently on non-labour market benefits who want to return to work.

Careers Service

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what financial formula is being used to allocate the budget of the Careers Service (a) within London and (b) between the regions. [29209]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The Department for Education and Employment allocated its 1998–99 Careers Service budget to the English regions on a formula in which:

72% of the value is represented by each region's proportion of 11 to 16-year-olds in full time education and 28% is represented by proportions of those eligible or taking part in the Work based Training programme for Young People.

The results of this formula were adjusted to give a weighting for higher costs in London and to ensure every region will have an increase on its 1997–98 budget.

The Government Office for London calculated initial 1998–99 contract values for its careers service companies using a formula in which:

72% of the value is represented by each service's proportion of 11 to 16 year olds in full time education and 28% by their proportions of 18 to 24 year olds who have been registered unemployed for more than 6 months.

The Government Office adjusted the results to ensure every careers service in London will have a cash increase on its 1998–99 budget.

Physical Education

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of (a) the fitness of the nation's schoolchildren, (b) measures within schools to improve fitness and (c) the effects of the proposed removal of physical education from the core curriculum. [29407]

Ms Estelle Morris: Assessments of national fitness are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. Physical Education is to remain a National Curriculum subject and will continue to be taught in all schools.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he proposes to take to ensure that primary schools set aside time for physical education following recent changes in the core curriculum. [29555]

Ms Estelle Morris: Physical Education is to remain a National Curriculum subject and will continue to be taught in all schools. The allocation of time for teaching individual subjects is for schools to decide for themselves.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from the National Coaching Foundation following the changes to the core curriculum relating to physical education. [29558]

Ms Estelle Morris: None.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will abolish the 16-hour rule for the Jobseeker's allowance; and if he will make a statement. [29531]

Mr. Alan Howarth: We have taken action on the Jobseeker's Allowance rules on education and training. We have extended the JSA Workskill pilots so that there are now pilots in eight areas allowing people unemployed for six months or more to undertake employment-related courses of education and training, full or part-time, for up to a year while on JSA. The pilots aim to test whether and how different benefit arrangements help unemployed people obtain and retain employment.

We are also introducing more flexible arrangements in our New Deals for the unemployed. The New Deal for 18 to 24-year-olds includes an option of full-time education and training for up to a year. People on this option will receive a training allowance in place of JSA. Those aged 25 years and over, unemployed for two years or more, will be allowed from June 1998 to undertake full-time employment-related education and training for up to a year while receiving JSA. Learning for Work full-time education and training is also an option in all five prototype Employment Zones.

We will further review the JSA rules on education and training in the light of the Workskill pilots and our welfare-to-work programme.

Lifelong Learning

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors underlay his decision not to produce a White Paper on lifelong learning; and if he will make a statement. [29525]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has always intended to consult widely on our proposals for lifelong learning. As he plans to publish separate documents responding to the reports from the Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education and the Further Education Funding Council's Widening Participation Committee, my right hon. Friend intends to publish, on 25 February, the Government's proposals on lifelong learning in the form of a consultation document.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) which grant maintained schools have received extra funding from the FAS for urgent repairs since 1 May 1997; and in each case how much; [29267]

(2) what total sum the FAS has distributed to grant maintained schools since 1 May 1997; [29269]

(3) how many grant maintained schools have received extra funding since 1 May 1997; [29270]

(4) how much extra funding has been provided per pupil to (a) grant maintained schools and (b) maintained schools in the (i) primary and (ii) secondary sectors, since 1 May 1997. [29271]

Mr. Byers: Recurrent costs at Local Education Authority (LEA) maintained schools are being funded by local authorities for the whole of 1997–98 on the basis of Local Management of Schools (LMS) schemes, determined before the beginning of the financial year. Recurrent grant for grant-maintained (GM) schools has been calculated by the Funding Agency For Schools (FAS) in accordance with The Education (Grant-maintained and Grant-maintained Special Schools) (Finance) Regulations 1997.

For capital expenditure in 1997–98, LEA maintained schools are being funded. For GM schools, capital provision of £144.9 million was made available to the FAS for the current financial year and the administration of this is the responsibility of the Agency subject to direction given by the Secretary of State.

I have written to Sir Anthony Tippet, Chairman of the FAS, to ask him to provide the recurrent and capital expenditure figures for GM schools requested.

Secondary School Places (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans he has to discuss with Portsmouth City Council the provision of secondary school places to meet parental preferences; [29157]

(2) what recent representations he has received from Portsmouth City Council concerning the provision of secondary school places in the city to meet parental preferences. [29159]

Mr. Byers: My right hon. Friend is aware of concerns in Portsmouth about the provision of secondary school places; officials met with Portsmouth's Education Committee earlier this month. He has recently approved the provision of 148 new secondary school places in Portsmouth. In addition, on 10 February my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Housing announced 23 more local authority PFI projects in line for revenue support, including a project to build a 1,000-place secondary school in Portsmouth using a Public Private Partnership.

Oxford and Cambridge Universities

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take steps to end the prohibition on prospective students from applying to both Oxford and Cambridge universities in the same year. [29167]

Dr. Howells: The Universities of Oxford and Cambridge are, like all higher education institutions, responsible for their own admissions procedures and Ministers are prevented by law from intervening in such matters.

Standard Spending Assessments (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will state in respect of Buckinghamshire County Council (a) the education SSA for 1998–99 and (b) what would be the education SSA for 1998–99, calculated on the weighting and composition of the SSA formula for 1997–98 (i) in cash terms, (ii) per head of population in Buckinghamshire and (iii) per child in full-time schooling in Buckinghamshire. [28736]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 11 February 1998]: The following table sets out the information requested. Buckinghamshire's education SSA for 1998–99 represents an actual increase of £7.8 million or 4.4 per cent. overs its education SSA for 1997–98.

Education SSA	£ funding per head of population	£ funding per pupil
(a) £183.782 million	387	2,585
(b) £186.029 million	392	2,617

Notes:

1. The figure at (b) has been calculated on the basis of the 1997–98 education SSAs, but using the 1998–99 SSA national control totals.
2. The per head of population figures are based on the Registrar General's estimates as at June 1996.
3. The per pupil figures are based on the sum of pupils aged 4, 5 to 10, 11 to 15 and post-16, as defined in the Local Government Finance Report (England) 1998–99.

Lipreading

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effect of the insistence of the FEFC on accreditation of courses funded by them on the quantity of lipreading classes, and the number of students attending them. [29166]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not made any assessment of this kind. The FEFC has a duty to secure adequacy and sufficiency of further education provision for which it is responsible, and in doing this to have regard to the needs of students with learning difficulties and/or disabilities.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many local education authorities provide lipreading classes which are free of charge to users; and how many charge for the service; [29154]

(2) if he will list the number of lipreading classes in operation in each of the last five years and the approximate number of students attending such classes. [29169]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not centrally available.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Martin Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if proposals that (a) there should be quotas or targets for the number of statements issued by LEAs, (b) in some circumstances statements could be less detailed with regard to the specification of the provision required to meet a child's needs, (c) statements could be discontinued when specified outcomes had been achieved and (d) tribunals should have regard to LEAs' policies as well as children's needs, in the Green Paper on Special Educational Needs, were included in the draft prepared by his Department's officials and presented to the Special Needs Advisory Group on 2 September 1997. [29046]

Ms Estelle Morris: The draft Green Paper considered by the National Advisory Group on Special Educational Needs (SEN) on 2 September 1997 included proposals related to three of the four subjects mentioned. A proposal related to the fourth subject was incorporated following the Group's discussion.

The precise wording of the proposals in the Green Paper differs from that used in the question. In particular, the Green Paper proposes that there should be a national expectation of the proportion of children who might benefit from statements. It specifically states that these would not operate as strict quotas.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many primary schools have nurture groups for children showing early signs of emotional and behavioural difficulties with support from their local education authorities; and if he will list these local education authorities and the amount of funding they provide for such groups. [29707]

Ms Estelle Morris: The term"nurture group" may apply to a variety of forms of structured intervention with group activity in support of children with emotional and behavioural difficulties in the primary years. It is not possible to provide the information requested without disproportionate cost.

Voluntary Youth Organisations

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those voluntary youth organisations in the New Deal pathfinder areas which are (a) providing opportunities to unemployed young people under the full-time employee options, (b) providing opportunities to unemployed young people under the voluntary sector options, (c) providing opportunities to unemployed young people under the Environmental Task Force option and (d) helping to support unemployed young people under the Gateway period of the New Deal. [29198]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information requested is not held centrally. Many voluntary organisations are offering assistance to young people through the New Deal either as part of the additional help that can be offered to those in the Gateway; through the jobs option; or by offering placement on the Voluntary Sector option. These range from small locally based organisations to ones operating across the country such as the National Trust, Age Concern and British Trust for Conservation Volunteers. Some, such as the Councils for Voluntary Services, have been involved with the planning and development of New Deal in their area as partners and are now acting as an umbrella by bringing together and co-ordinating local voluntary organisations to deliver a full range of provision.

It is worth remembering that New Deal offers young people help to increase their employability based on their individual need and as such specific assistance will be determined to meet an agreed Action Plan drawn up by the young person and their Personal Adviser. Involvement, then, of particular organisations will vary depending upon the needs of individual young person.

Pupil Selection

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to abolish partial selection in maintained schools. [29984]

Mr. Byers: Our plans are clearly set out in Clauses 90–94 of the School Standards and Framework Bill. New partial selection by ability, other than for the purposes of fair banding to ensure a fully comprehensive intake, will be ruled out. The adjudicator will be able to end existing partial selection by ability where another admission authority in the area objects to its retention. Schools with a specialism will continue to be able to give priority, in filling up to 10 per cent. of their places, to children who demonstrate the relevant aptitude. The adjudicator will be able to resolve disputes between admission authorities over existing or proposed specialist places.

Literacy Initiative

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the division of funding between local and central government for the Literacy Initiative. [29487]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 February 1998]: For 1998–99 the Government have allocated £59 million on expenditure through the Standards Fund for the raising of literacy standards. The Government and LEAs will share equally the responsibility for funding that expenditure, providing 50 per cent. each. In addition central government has recently provided £22 million to schools, via local education authorities, to purchase reading books, for expenditure in 1997–98.

Qualifications

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans he has to reform the 14 to 19 qualifications structure; and if he will make a statement; [29982]

(2) what assessment he has made of the advantages of introducing a baccalaureate structure into post-16 education. [29983]

Dr. Howells: The consultation paper, "Qualifying for Success", published in October 1997, set out our proposals to take forward our manifesto commitments to broaden A levels and upgrade vocational qualifications, underpinning them with key skills. It also sought views on whether and how to move towards providing a high quality overarching certificate at advanced level, which retains achievement in existing qualifications and encourages greater breadth of learning. The consultation paper built on the recommendations in Sir. Ron Dearing's "Review of Qualifications for 16–19 Year Olds".

We expect to announce decisions next month, in the light of responses to the consultation and advice from the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority.

Higher Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of the recently announced access package for higher education is designed to benefit part-time students; and how this will be implemented. [29980]

Dr. Howells: The extra £165 million for higher education in 1998–99 announced on 23 September 1997 included an access package of £36 million. Within this package £2 million will enable universities and colleges to remit tuition fees for part-time students who lose their jobs after their course has started. Access funds will be doubled at a cost of £16 million in the present financial year and eligibility extended to part-time students.

It will be for higher education institutions, which administer the Access Funds, to make the decisions on individual payments to students whether full-time or part-time. We are currently considering how fee remission arrangements will be implemented.

Director of Information

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which firm of headhunters are presently helping with recruitment for the vacant post of Director of Information in his Department. [29582]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 February 1998]: Korn Ferry International handled the initial recruitment of the Director of Communications post. The recruitment exercise ended in December 1997 when no appointment was made. Following the reorganisation of responsibilities within the Department the post of Director of Strategy and Communications has been advertised across Whitehall. The Department is handling the recruitment for this post. AT Kearney Limited are currently handling the recruitment of the newly created Head of News post.

Training

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the future availability of training and retraining for people in employment aged over 18 years. [29989]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will set out his proposals on training for employed people in his consultation paper on lifelong learning. This is to be published on 25 February, together with our responses to the reports from the Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education and the Further Education Funding Council's Widening Participation Committee.

Teacher Training

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applicants for primary initial teacher training there were at each higher education institution for each of the last five years. [29985]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not available.

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applied for teacher training courses in each National Curriculum subject in the current academic year; what the target figures were; and what these figures were in the last academic year. [29240]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table shows the applications, actual intake and target intake to initial teacher training courses, including National Curriculum subjects, for courses starting in 1996–97 and 1997–98.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of his Department's buildings. [30112]

Dr. Howells: The Department (including the Employment Service) has 1,294 properties nationally. Information on the cost of each of the individual properties could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Astra Pensions

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 1 December 1997, Official Report, column 10, on Astra pensioners, what further steps he has taken to press the liquidators and pension fund trustees to resolve the outstanding issues. [29848]

Dr. Howells: Following a thorough review of the issues surrounding Astra pensions, the Department has now obtained special approval for HM Treasury to offer ex-gratia payments to a small number of former members of the Department who transferred their accrued Civil Service pensions values into the Astra pension fund.

The Government Actuary's Department is engaged in calculating the individual entitlements and until these are resolved, and until the offers and payments are made, detailed figures cannot be provided to the Astra liquidators or their pension fund trustees to take into account in resolving their outstanding work.

The Department continues to work towards the earliest possible resolution to the ex-Astra issues and is also taking a number of other—non-financial—steps aimed at assisting the former Astra employees.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many contracts of a value greater than £5000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30114]

Dr. Howells: This information is not available without incurring disproportionate cost.

Teacher Supply

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the current situation with regard to the supply of teachers. [29238]

Ms Estelle Morris: The supply of an adequate number of well-trained and well-motivated teachers is central to achieving the Government's plans to raise school standards. The Government's response to the first report of the Education Select Committee on teacher recruitment, which was published on 29 January, sets out the action we are taking on this issue.

Teacher Shortages

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate what shortages of teachers there are in each National Curriculum subject at (a) primary and (b) secondary level. [29239]

Mr. Byers: The following table gives the number of vacancies and the vacancy rates for classroom teachers in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England, at 16 January 1997. Subject information for nursery/primary teacher vacancies is not collected because all primary teachers are trained to deliver the full range of national curriculum subjects. Vacancies for headteacher and deputy headteacher posts are not included.

Disabled People

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take further steps to outlaw discrimination against disabled people. [29583]

Mr. Alan Howarth: On 1 October the Government announced their strategy to secure comprehensive, enforceable civil rights for disabled people. The Disability Rights Task Force, which I chair, was established in December 1997; its first task is to make recommendations on the role and functions of a Disability Rights Commission by the end of March 1998. It will make further recommendations on how best to secure civil rights for disabled people within the context of our wider society by July 1999.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30113]

Dr. Howells: Information in the form requested could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30111]

Dr. Howells: This question can be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Pupil : Staff Ratios

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will list the characteristics which distinguish reception classes for four year olds from nursery classes for four year olds; [29697]

(2) what is the maximum pupil to staff ratio permitted by the regulations covering (a) nursery classes for four year olds, (b) reception classes for four year olds and (c) pre-school play groups for four year olds. [29698]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department of Education Circular 2/73 on nursery education in maintained schools recommends an adult : child ratio of 2 : 26 for nursery classes attached to primary schools where one adult is a qualified teacher and the other a qualified nursery assistant. It also suggests reception classes should make provision for 4-year-olds comparable to that found in nursery classes.

Pre-school settings registered with social services departments under the Children Act 1989 may apply the same adult:child ratio if the same qualified staff are present, if not the recommended ratio for 3–5-year-olds is 1 : 8.

In reception classes, some children will be of compulsory school age; this is not the case in nursery classes.

The Department and the Department of Health will be consulting shortly on the regulation of early education and day care with the aim of creating a more uniform regime.

Mines and Quarries

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many prohibition notices have been issued against employers relating to the control of dust at work for each of the geographical areas of the Mines and Quarries Inspectorate in each of the last 20 years. [28638]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive's inspectors responsible for Mines and Quarries have not issued any Prohibition Notices against employers relating to the control of dust at work in any of the geographical areas. Prohibition Notices can only be issued by inspectors when there is a risk of serious personal injury. Problems of control of dust at work are normally dealt with by Improvement Notices which require remedy within the period of the Notice. For Mines, the Coal Mines (Respirable Dust) Regulations 1975 apply and these require the owner of a coal mine to notify HM Inspectorate of Mines when the levels of dust exceeds the permitted amount. The information in respect of notifications to HSE for each year, over the last 20 ears, for each geographical area, could be obtained only at disproportionate costs. However, during the last five years the following notifications have been received:

	Scotland and eastern England	Wales and western England

1995	24	13
1996	16	7

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Fraud

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her Department's Appropriation Accounts 1996–97, what steps she proposes to reduce the amount of benefit fraud with particular reference to fraud on income support. [25733]

Mr. Denham: Tackling fraud and abuse is a top priority for the Government. However, questions on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of the Chief Executive, Peter Mathison. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Gisela Stuart, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the steps she proposes to reduce benefit fraud.

The Benefit Agency's aim is to create a secure benefit regime administered by staff committed to providing secure and accurate services for customers who in turn recognise their rights and responsibilities. Underpinning this aim is the Security and Control Programme (SCP) which is funded on an invest to save basis. Forty-five individual projects and initiatives are currently being funded by the SCP to tackle the problem of benefit fraud in all benefits, including Income Support. The long term aim is to shift the emphasis from fraud detection to prevention and deterrence whilst maintaining a comprehensive investigative capability.

These initiatives include, increased visits and reviews on new and existing claims to benefit; increased vigilance and checks on personal details at the outset of processing claims; risk analysis to identify client groups which pose the potential to commit fraud; a programme of datamatching to identify duplicate and bogus claims; and a free and confidential telephone hotline service for general public to report suspected benefit fraud.

The department is currently re-examining its strategic counter-fraud objectives, and work is going forward aimed at supporting the Government's objectives for welfare reform, with a greater emphasis placed on risk management, use of information, effective measurement and behavioural changes. These principles apply throughout the social security system and are the means by which we aim to achieve real and permanent reductions in the level of fraud.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the administrative costs of the additional fuel payments to pensioners in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [26468]

Mr. Denham: Winter Fuel Payments are one of a number of initiatives the Government have taken to help vulnerable people, especially the elderly, keep warm in the winter. This is the first time any Government have made a payment to all pensioners towards their heating costs.

This is a enormous and unprecedented exercise, involving the making of around ten million payments to over seven million pensioner households at a total cost of around £200 million. Legislation has only been made for this winter's payments. We expect the scheme to be broadly similar for next winter but want to learn any lesson from the delivery of this winter's payments, before making amending legislation.

The administration of Social Security Benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding what estimate has been made of the administrative costs of the additional fuel payments to pensioners in (a) 1997/98 and (b) 1998/99.

The information is not yet available in the detail requested. It is estimated that almost ten million payments will be made with a total value of around £200 million.

The current planning assumptions have estimated that the total administration cost of the 1997/98 exercise will be in the region of £20 million. This compares well with similar exercises.

Planning assumptions for the 1998–99 exercise are still being developed. The process of making payments to eligible pensioners may differ from the methods used for 1997–98. Estimates of administration costs are therefore not currently available.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful at this stage.

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how much additional money pensioners in Exeter have received as a result of winter fuel payments; [27658]

(2) how many pensioner households in Exeter will receive (a) £50 and (b) £20 in winter fuel payments. [27659]

Mr. Denham: Winter Fuel Payments are one of a number of initiatives the Government have taken to help vulnerable people, especially the elderly, keep warm in the winter. This is the first time any Government have made a payment to all pensioners towards their heating costs.

This is a enormous and unprecedented exercise, involving the making of around ten million payments to over seven million pensioner households at a total cost of around £200 million.

The administration of Social Security Benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ben Bradshaw, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how much additional money pensioners in Exeter have received as a result of Winter Fuel Payments and; how many pensioner households in Exeter will receive (a) £50 and (b) £20 in winter fuel payments.

Priority has been given to issuing payments to the poorest pensioners, those who are receiving Income Support. All those payments of £50 have now been issued.

The number of £50 Winter Fuel Payments made for the area covered by the Benefits Agency office of Exeter was 6,902. This equates to a total of £345,100 paid.

Winter Fuel Payments of £20 and £10 to other eligible pensioners will start being issued in March 1998. Nationally it is estimated that over 3 million payments will be issued for £20 and almost 5 million for £10 but we are unable to report on how many are expected to be made in Exeter.

Thank you for the opportunity to explain the position.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the percentage of cases in which errors have been made by the Child Support Agency; and if she will make a statement. [26473]

Mr. Field: We are looking to ensure that the Child Support Agency provides a consistent, fair and efficient service to all its clients.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 17 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security concerning errors made by the Child Support Agency.

The Agency records information on the case value accuracy of assessments, in order to measure performance against the Secretary of State target on accuracy, which for 1997/98 requires "The cash value of all assessments checked in the year to be correct in at least 85% of cases". As at 31st December 1997, the latest date for which information is available, the Agency's performance for the year stood at 85%, exactly matching the target.

The 1997/98 target differs from those of the previous two years, in that an aggregate (ie full year) figure of 85% cash value accuracy must be achieved throughout the year, rather than continuing in-month improvements culminating in achievement of the target in the final month.

Accuracy rates for the Secretary of State target are measured by quality teams within each Agency Business Unit, and the results are validated separately by an independent team overseen by the Agency's Head of Internal Audit. Whilst the Agency's reported measure of accuracy is concerned solely with the cash value of assessments performed in the period, the investigations of the National Audit Office into accuracy have encompassed other aspects of the Agency's procedures, and examined assessments made in earlier years, thereby producing results which differ from those of the Agency. The different methods of measuring accuracy are a concern for the Agency and we are currently looking at ways to address the discrepancies.

The current accuracy rate represents a considerable improvement on performance in the early years. The Agency recognises nevertheless that further improvement is necessary, and a number of initiatives are intended to achieve this. These include additional training for staff, particularly in difficult aspects of the formula, and the further development of the complete action service team technique, which brings together staff members with expertise in the different areas of casework to deal with individual cases as a team. Specific forms have been developed to assist Child Support officers to record systematically all evidence, decisions and calculations in processing an application. Also, the system of checks is to be modified, to introduce checks at various points in the assessment process, rather than at the end of the process, and the role of quality assurance teams is being extended. In addition, many of the other changes being implemented in the Agency, such as increased use of the telephone to gather information, should have a positive impact on the accuracy of the work.

I hope this is helpful.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls to the Child Support Agency's helpline over the past 12 months have been attributable to delays in dealing with claims; and what has been the cost of dealing with such calls. [27497]

Mr. Field: We are looking for substantial and sustained operational improvements from the Agency, in particular on getting more maintenance paid, reducing the backlog and improving customer service.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Helen Jones, dated 17 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about calls to the child Support Agency's helpline over the last twelve months.

Telephone enquiries relating to individual case are dealt with by the Agency's Client Help Line. The number of calls received by the Client Help Line over the twelve months period to 26 December 1997 was 2,579,980.

Calls to the Client Help Line service are charged to the public at local rate tariffs; the cost borne by the Agency for the calls over the twelve month period to 26 December 1997 was £943,017.85.

Whenever possible Client Help Line operators will provide an immediate response to an enquiry. Where this is not possible, operators offer a call-back service. This service helps us give our clients accurate information, whilst keeping their telephone charges to a minimum. Calls to the service can cover any aspect of an individual case, and it is not possible to say how many calls were specifically attributable to delays in dealing with claims.

To be more responsive to our customers' needs, the Agency has begun employing staff to work a wider more flexible range of working patterns over six days of the week to improve the telephone service offered. This will provide more opportunities for customers to contact the Agency and vice versa, and will enable the Agency to deliver a better standard of customer service through greater use of the telephone and faster throughput of cases.

Also, the Agency has initiated a Positive Customer Contact project which will mean that staff will increasingly be making contact with customers at a much earlier stage in our dealings with them. The aim is that much more of our business will be conducted over the 'phone rather than by correspondence, this will allow us to gather the vast quantities of information needed more quickly, and help us speed up the assessment process. Our early contact with customers will give them the opportunity to raise issues or concerns and will help to reduce the need for them to contact the Agency about their case.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time taken by the Child Support Agency to process repeat claims. [27499]

Mr. Field: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide a consistent, fair and efficient service to all its clients.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Helen Jones, dated 17 February 1998:

I am replying to our Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security concerning the average length of time taken by the Child Support Agency to process repeat claims.

The Agency defines a repeat claim as a re-application to the Agency for a maintenance assessment at any stage after the original maintenance assessment has been closed.

The child maintenance formula requires the Agency to enquire, look at and consider over 100 pieces of information before an assessment can be made. On a repeat application, some new facts will need to be established, while others will already be available, and in general we would expect a repeat application to be processed more quickly than a new application. The Agency does not, however, collect information on the average processing time of new and repeat applications.

A key element of the Secretary of State target for maintenance assessment clearance time is to clear 60% of applications within 26 weeks; this has been in place for the last three years. In 1995/96, the Agency cleared 48% of applications within 26 weeks. In 1996/97 the performance achieved was 54%. In the current year, to the end of December 1997, the clearance rate stood at 72%.

I hope this is helpful.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many complaints about the operation of the Child Support Agency have been received from people in the Warrington, North constituency over the past 12 months. [27498]

Mr. Field: Children are entitled to the financial and emotional support of both parents wherever they live. We are looking closely at all aspects of the child support scheme to see where improvements can be made. We aim to bring forward proposals by the Summer.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Helen Jones, dated 17 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security concerning complaints about the operation of the Child Support Agency.

Statistics are collated on the numbers of complaints received by each of the Agency's 6 Business Units. Warrington North falls within the remit of Midlands Business Unit. In 1997, a total of 2,795 complaints were received by the Midlands Business Unit. A breakdown is not available on the number of complaints which were from people in the Warrington North constituency.

It is important to consider the level of dissatisfaction within the context of the Agency's overall business. Since inception, the Midlands Business Unit has taken on almost 360,000 cases. A relatively small proportion of the workload, therefore, results in complaints.

I am very conscious that there are still far too many justified complaints about the standards of basic customer contact and the service we provide, and we recognise that doing things right first time is the key to preventing complaints. It is an Agency Priority to improve the way in which complaints are handled; we have revised our training for all staff who deal with complaints and have introduced a new Complaints Guide, which sets out our policy and procedures for swift, effective complaints handling. We are aware that as we further tackle our backlog of cases from the Agency's first two years, there is potential for the volume of complaints to rise in the short term.

From April 1997 the Office of the Independent Case Examiner has provided an independent investigation service for those customers who consider the Agency's internal review process has not satisfactorily resolved their complaint.

In the coming years, I am committed to responding to the needs of our customers by bringing high quality levels of performance to every part of our operation as a matter of routine, thereby reducing the number of complaints received and enhancing the public perception of the Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the CSA collection service figures for the amount of uncollected maintenance owing for each month since April 1994 indicating the amount attributable to (a) type A interim and (b) other assessments. [30043]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Mrs. Faith Boardman, the Chief Executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Iain Duncan Smith, dated 17 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about uncollected maintenance assessed by the Child Support Agency.

The Agency's Financial Management System was enhanced from April 1997 to provide monthly information on category A interim maintenance assessments and other assessments, and this is shown in the table attached. Prior to April 1997 this breakdown is not available.

A large proportion of the maintenance outstanding attributable to Category A interim maintenance assessments relates to the first two years of the Agency when interim maintenance assessments were more frequently imposed. The Agency is developing the way it contacts absent parents, and the emphasis is now to get in touch with absent parents as early in the assessment process as possible to reach agreement. This avoids the need to impose an interim maintenance assessment and prevents arrears of maintenance building up.

Wherever it is possible to do so, the Agency converts interim assessments to full maintenance assessments. In the last year, the Agency has also started to clear the backlog of cases that had built up during the Agency's first years, again with the emphasis being on completing full maintenance assessments without the need for interim maintenance assessments. The Agency's increased performance in this area is well illustrated by the number of full maintenance assessments completed so far this year; up to 31 January 1998, 132,724 full maintenance assessments had been completed compared to 97,542 at the same time last year. When embarking on the conversion of interim maintenance assessments and clearing the backlog we realised that this would mean that the amount of maintenance outstanding would rise. However, our overriding aim is to ensure that the flow of maintenance increases and that absent parents who can afford to do so support their children.

Of the £652,870,713 which is attributable to other assessments, approximately £309 million is the subject of agreements for repayment by instalments, which are closely monitored by the Agency. This leaves approximately £344 million of full maintenance assessment debt to be pursued.

Another exercise will be carried out in March 1998 and the results will be published in the Agency Annual Report for 1997/8.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the value of setting up a Child Support Agency Board as part of the review of the CSA. [30167]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We are looking closely at all aspects of the Child Support scheme to see where improvements can be made. We aim to bring forward a consultation paper on our proposals by the Summer.

War Pensions

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for a war pension were made from 1 January 1996 to 7 April 1997; how many sought backdating of the pension beyond the date of latest application; how many applications for backdating (i) have been granted, (ii) have been refused and (iii) are awaiting determination; and how much money has been awarded in respect of backdated war pensions to the successful applicants. [26760]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is that delivery of service should be simpler and more efficient.

Queries on operational matters concerning the War pensions Agency are for its Acting Chief Executive, Mr. Steve Johnson. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Steve Johnson to Mr. Paul Stinchcombe, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the backdating of War Disablement Pensions.

Between 1 January 1996 and 7 April 1997 there were 87,076 claims received by the War Pensions Agency and 61,473 claims were awarded.

Information on how many War Pensioners sought backdating of their awards, the numbers granted/refused or awaiting determination and the value of the awards made is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Despite the limited information available, I hope you find my reply helpful.

Benefit Integrity Unit

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what criteria the Benefit Integrity Unit uses when deciding which claimants will be re-assessed. [27257]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Benefits should go to those who are properly entitled to benefit. This is why we have continued with Benefits Integrity Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mrs. Jackie Ballard, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to respond to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding what criteria the Benefit Integrity Unit uses when deciding which claimants will be re-assessed.

The Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) is looking again at existing DLA awards of the higher rate of mobility component combined with either the middle or highest rate of care component. Such periodic review is usual in other benefits. There are exceptions to the re-assessment criteria, these include people receiving payments under Special Rules, quadriplegics, paraplegics, people who are both deaf and blind, double amputees and those within our definition of severe mental impairment.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what instructions concerning the frequency of visits by benefits officers to recipients of disability living allowance have been issued by her Department since 1 May 1997. [27180]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Benefits should go to those who are properly entitled to benefit. This is why we have continued with Benefits Integrity Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to respond to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what instructions concerning the frequency of visits by benefits officers to recipients of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) have been issued by her Department since 1 May 1997.

No instructions have been issued since 1 May 1997 concerning the frequency of visits to recipients of DLA.

It may be helpful if I explain that visits are currently being made in connection with the Benefits Integrity Project (BIP). Visits are arranged by the Disability Benefits Centre with responsibility for the area in which the customer lives. The customers visited are those in receipt of the highest rate of both the care and mobility components of DLA. During these visits specially trained DLA staff help the customer or their carer complete the BIP questionnaire to establish the care and mobility needs arising from their disability.

Visits are notified well in advance and customers are encouraged to have a friend or carer with them. Visits can be rearranged if inconvenient for the customer or if the customer needs more time to arrange to have someone with them. It would be unusual for more than one visit to be necessary.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of disability living allowance in the Stoke-on-Trent area receive (a) the higher and (b) the lower rate of the mobility component. [27660]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Joan Walley, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many claimants of Disability Living Allowance (DLA), in the Stoke-on-Trent area, receive (a) the higher; and (b) the lower rate of the mobility component.

The number of claimants of DLA who live in the Stoke-on-Trent area and receive the higher rate of mobility component is 10,900. The number who receive the lower rate is 2,000. These figures are based on a 5% sample of cases, where benefit is in payment, carried out on 30 November 1997.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer on 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 80–81 on disability living allowance for disabled people whose predominant disability is deafness, if she will break the figures down to show the claimants for each age group who are claimants of (a) the mobility component, (b) the care component and (c) both components. Benefits Agency

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many callers (a) in person and (b) by telephone, made use of the Benefits Agency offices in (i) Lanark, (ii) Carluke, (iii) Larkhall and (iv) Wishaw over the last 12 months; [27651]

(2) if she will list the criteria used by (a) the Benefits Agency and (b) Ministers to assess the viability of local offices; [27652]

(3) how many local offices the Benefits Agency has closed after approval by the relevant Minister over the last 12 months; [27653]

(4) how many local offices her Department's Ministers have given the Benefits Agency approval to close in the past 12 months; [27654]

(5) how many local offices the Benefits Agency has sought Ministerial approval to close in the past 12 months. [27655]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The administration of the Benefits Agency is a matter for Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Frank Roy, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning the closure of Benefits Agency (BA) local offices and the number of callers in Lanark, Carluke, Larkhall and Wishaw.

The BA were asked by Ministers to assess the viability of local offices under the following criteria:

Wider access to our services for customers

Improved quality, accuracy and security of service

Achieving a fair balance between the needs of staff, policy and operational needs

Increased efficiency and reduced costs.

Over the last twelve months, the BA has sought Ministerial approval to close nine outlets nationally. In March 1997, approval was granted in respect of four outlets which have now been closed and decisions are pending in respect of the other five.

There is no BA office in Carluke, although Agency staff deliver Job Seekers Allowance within Carluke Jobcentre. Details of the average number of callers, in person, to the other three offices are as follows:

Lanark: 295 per week

Larkhall: 476 per week

Wishaw: 418 per week.

All customer telephone calls for the Clyde Valley District, which includes the above offices, are handled by two central telephone sections at Motherwell and Hamilton offices. Figures are not kept for the individual offices.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Blyth Valley

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the estimated level of social security fraud in Blyth Valley benefits agencies in 1996–97. [28212]

Mr. Denham: Tackling fraud and abuse is a top priority for the Government.

Questions on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of the Chief Executive, Peter Mathison. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ronnie Campbell, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the estimated level of social security fraud in Blyth Valley Benefits Agencies in 1996–97.

The estimate of the number of people claiming fraudulently is informed by an extrapolation from the results of a series of Benefit Reviews. The review programme which commenced in 1994 is looking at the extent of fraud and incorrectness in all major benefits. The reviews were conducted under the previous administration and the definition of fraud used to produce results is currently being evaluated in the light of the Benefit Review Programme.

Results from the reviews refer to Great Britain and separate estimates for specific geographical areas are not available. Copies of all the published results of the reviews are available in the Library.

An additional indicator is the number of successful investigations. These are cases where, following a fraud investigation, one or more of the following conclusions occurs: benefit is reduced or stopped, an overpayment is calculated or a prosecution instigated.

During 1996–97, 1,592 successful fraud investigations into claims administered by the Benefits Agency were carried out by Northumberland Sector Fraud, which at that time included the BA offices at Ashington, Berwick, Blyth and Hexham.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many families are on (a) income support and (b) family credit in Blyth Valley; [28207]

(2) how many Social Fund funeral payments were awarded in Blyth Valley in each year since 1990; [28209]

(3) how many Social Fund applications for (a) grants and (b) loans have been turned down by local benefits agencies in Blyth Valley since 1994. [28213]

Mr. Field: The administration of Social Security Benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ronnie Campbell, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many families are on (a) Income Support and (b) Family Credit in Blyth Valley; how many Social Fund funeral payments were awarded in Blyth Valley in each year since 1990; and how many Social Fund applications for (a) grants and (b) loans have been turned down by local Benefits Agencies in Blyth Valley.

The information is not available in the format requested. The Benefits Agency (BA), collates statistics by BA District and these Districts do not correspond to constituency boundaries or specific geographical areas. Such information as is available is in the attached tables.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Income Support (Pensioners)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will provide details of the pilot schemes being launched in April designed to encourage pensioners to claim the income support to which they are entitled. [29605]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 February 1998]: We are particularly concerned about the million pensioners who are not claiming Income Support. We have already commissioned research into the reasons why pensioners do not claim their entitlement. This is due to report in the Autumn.

In addition, we intend to run a series of local take-up pilots designed to test different ways of identifying potential claimants and the most effective and efficient ways of encouraging them to claim, including simplifying the claim process. Following a consultation meeting officials had with Help the Aged, Age Concern and others, we are finalising the design of the pilots. We will announce further details of the pilots shortly.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) of 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 76, relating to the disability living allowance, in what ways the additional evidence will be collected; and if those who have had their benefits removed will be entitled to have their cases reassessed on the basis of the additional evidence. [30046]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Benefits should go to those who are properly entitled to benefit. This is why we have continued with Benefits Integrity Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mrs. Angela Browning, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the pursuant to her Answer to the hon. Member for Tayside North, of 9 February, Official Report, column 76, relating to the Disability Living Allowance (DLA), in what ways the additional evidence will be collected; and if those who have had their benefits removed will be entitled to have their cases reassessed on the basis of the additional evidence.

The Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) is looking again at some awards of DLA, through a programme of visits and postal enquiries to collect up to date information about the care and mobility needs of some disabled people and to make sure that the correct amount of benefit is being paid.

From 9 February, no case likely to result in the reduction or removal of benefit will be passed to an Adjudication Officer (AO) for review without further evidence in addition to that supplied by the customer on the BIP questionnaire. This extra safeguard is to improve confidence in the decisions made by the BIP and to help safeguard the position of severely disabled people.

Further evidence about a customer's care and mobility needs may include factual medical evidence from a General Practitioner or hospital or other health care professional, a full examination by a qualified medical practitioner or information from carers. The source of the additional evidence will be determined by the officer acting on behalf of the Secretary of State in the light of the individual circumstances of the case.

Although there are no plans to re-examine all benefit reductions made to date under the BIP, anyone whose benefit is reduced or disallowed, whether or not this follows receipt of the further evidence now being sought, is entitled to request a review by another AO. The AO will consider afresh the full circumstances of the award, based on all the evidence available.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 75, if she will list the categories of additional evidence which will be taken into account by adjudication officers involved in the Benefit Integrity Project; and if she will make a statement. [30159]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Benefits should go to those who are properly entitled to benefit. This is why we have continued with Benefits Integrity Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Swinney, dated 17 February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if she will list the categories of additional evidence which will be taken into account by Adjudication Officers (AOs) involved in the Benefits Integrity Project (BIP).

From 9 February 1998, if information obtained from a Disability Living Allowance (DLA) beneficiary as part of the BIP indicates that there has been a change of circumstances which may lead to a reduction or removal of entitlement to DLA, additional further evidence will be obtained before the case is passed to an AO for review.

This additional information may be factual medical evidence from a General Practitioner, hospital or other health care professional, a full medical examination by a qualified medical practitioner or information from a carer. The most appropriate source of additional evidence will be used in the light of the individual circumstances of the case.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 8 July 1997, Official Report, column 464, concerning the Benefit Integrity Project, what are the outturn savings figures to date; and what is her current estimate of the total savings in 1997–98. [30222]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not available at present. In the light of my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's recent announcement of additional safeguards and other factors statisticians have been asked to re-examine the estimated savings from the Project and to produce validated figures for the current financial year. I will write to the hon. Member again as soon as this information becomes available.

Child Support

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what proportion of child support appeals one of the parties has requested an oral hearing; how often one or both parties has attended; and in what proportion of cases a full decision has been requested in each of the last three years. [30057]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The operation of the appeals system is a matter for the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS).

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available from the ITS is as follows.

From December 1996 to December 1997 a total of 8,434 Child Support appeals were received and there were 5,949 requests for oral hearings. Current year-to-date figures show that 85 per cent. of Child Support appeals are heard orally and 15 per cent. are heard on papers, although this latter percentage has increased as the year has progressed.

During the period December 1996 to December 1997 a total of 8,569 Child Support appeals went to hearing, and in 818 (10 per cent.) of those cases a full decision was subsequently requested by one or other of the parties.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much child support maintenance estimated in 1996–97 as not offsetting benefits savings was received by (a) family credit claimants and (b) private clients. [30055]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

Regular payments of child maintenance can transform the lives of lone mothers and their children, providing a stable income which can help them off Income Support and into work. In 1996/97, an estimated £110 million was paid to family credit claimants which did not offset their benefit entitlement.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of appeals to child support appeal tribunals are made by (a) absent parents and (b) parents with care; what proportion are referrals by (i) child support officers and (ii) the Secretary of State; and what proportion of appeals to child support commissioners are made by (1) absent parents, (2) persons with care and (3) the child support officer. [30059]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons with care have left income support for employment as a result of receiving a Child Support Agency assessment in each year for which figures are available. [30132]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is that between April and December 1997, 2,897 parents with care made a successful claim for the child maintenance bonus when they left Income Support for work.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research she is undertaking on the effect of a reduced benefit direction on children in the family since the increase in the benefit penalty in October 1996. [30139]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Department is continually monitoring and evaluating reduced benefit directions which apply only where a parent with care has failed to co-operate with the Child Support Agency without good cause. Although the Department has not conducted any research into the effect of the reduced benefit direction since October 1996, following a recommendation of the Social Security Select Committee, the Child Support Agency undertook detailed research on the requirement to co-operate provisions and the results were published in April 1996 in "The Requirement to Co-operate: A Report on the Operation of the "Good Cause" Provisions. Department of Social Security in-house report 14".

We are looking closely at all aspects of the Child Support scheme to see where improvements can be made and we aim to bring forward a consultation document on our proposals by the Summer.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many child support appeal cases the appeals are over the 28 day time limit; and what proportion of these appeals are allowed to proceed. [30058]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The operation of the appeals system is a matter for the Independent Tribunal Service who report that from April 1997 to December 1997 a total of 1,962 Child Support Appeals were received which were over the 28 day time limit. During the same period 320 appeals were not admitted. Figures are not kept on the actual number of appeals allowed to proceed.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many departure applications have been refused by the Child Support Agency on preliminary consideration; what number of applications have been (a) successfully and (b) unsuccessfully made under each of the grounds for departure; and what plans she has to extend the grounds for departure; [30061]

(2) how many applications for departure have been made to the Child Support Agency from absent parents and persons with care with new assessments since December 1996; how many such applications have been made by parents with pre-December 1996 assessments; how many of each of these were successful; and what was the average change in the assessment; [30125]

(3) how long departure applications to the Child Support Agency are taking to process; what proportion of applications have been referred to an appeal tribunal by the CSA; and what proportion or departure decisions have been appealed. [30126]

Mr. Keith Bradley: As at 31 January 1998 13,374 departure direction applications had been refused on preliminary consideration.

Information is not available about the proportions of such cases which were successful.

The average reduction is the level of the maintenance assessment following applications from absent parents is £8.32 per week. The average increase in the level of the maintenance assessment following applications from parents with care is £14.67 per week.

The average processing time for applications which

(i) fail on preliminary consideration stage is 42 days

(ii) are refused following full consideration is 93 days

(iii) succeed is 168 days.

139 applications, (0.5 per cent of all applications) have been referred direct to the appeal tribunal for determination. Around 9 per cent of decisions have been appealed.

There are no current plans to extend the grounds for a departure. However we are looking closely at all aspects of the child support scheme to see where improvements can be made.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the benefits savings made as a result of Child Support Agency activity for the first half of 1997–98, the desired level of benefits savings required before a child maintenance disregard on income support is to be introduced and the estimated loss in benefits savings if the maintenance disregard was set at £5 a week. [30133]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Benefit savings as a result of child support activity in the first half of 1997/98 were estimated to be £223 million. We have not set a specific level of benefit savings which we expect to see before a maintenance disregard could be introduced. The longer term programme cost of a £5 disregard of maintenance in income support is estimated to be £65 million for a full year.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will give a regional breakdown of her Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30117]

Mr. Field: The information is not available in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of her Department's buildings. [30116]

Mr. Field: The information requested is not held centrally in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many contracts of a value greater than £10,000 her Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30118]

Mr. Field: The information is not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the number of her Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30115]

Mr. Field: The information is set out in the table.

Number of staff and salary bill for the UK and economic planning regions

UK and economic planning regions	Number of employees	Salary bill £000	London allowances and weightings £000
UK: Total	107,667	1,538,296	12,355
Scotland	10,794	151,028	—
Northern	17,091	240,976	—
Yorkshire and Humberside	8,622	127,207	—
North West	23,436	324,887	—
East Midlands	4,638	64,292	—
West Midlands	8,125	113,229	—
Wales	4,952	69,728	—
East Anglia	1,889	26,292	—
South East	21,803	337,526	12,355
South West	6,304	82,950	—
N. Ireland	13	181	—

Notes:

1. The number of employees is correct at April 1997. Figures show number of individuals rather than whole unit equivalents.
2. Economic Planning Regions are the only available geographical designation by which this data can be divided.
3. The wage bill and London Allowances/Weightings figures represent an annualised figure as at April 1997.
4. The wages bill covers annual salary, National Insurance and superannuation. London allowances are shown separately.
5. The London Allowances included are London Weighting and London Recruitment and Retention Allowance.

Disabled People (Appeals)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many disabled people are awaiting appeals against reductions in their (a) incapacity benefit and (b) disabled living allowance; what is the average waiting time for their appeals to be heard; and what estimate she has made of the savings to public funds arising from the reductions in benefits during the waiting period. [29585]

Mr. Denham: The operation of the appeals system is a matter for the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS).

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available has been provided by the ITS and is as follows.

Appeals relating to Incapacity Benefit are heard by Social Security Appeal Tribunals (SSATs). Statistics do not differentiate between which appeals are against reduction in benefit and which are against some other aspect of entitlement, such as refusal. There was a total of 109,400 outstanding appeals to SSATs in July 1997, of which 51,624 concerned some aspect of entitlement to Incapacity Benefit.

In the quarter ended 30 September 1997, the average clearance time for SSATs as a whole was 28.9 weeks, whilst for Incapacity Benefit appeals it was 29.3 weeks.

Appeals relating to Disability Living Allowance are heard by Disability Appeal Tribunals (DATs). Again, statistics do not differentiate between appeals against reduction in benefit and those against other aspects of entitlement. Neither do they distinguish between appeals to DATs concerning Disability Living Allowance and those concerning other benefits. In July 1997 there was an overall total of 29,566 outstanding appeals to DATs and an overall average clearance time of 30 weeks.

Where an appeal tribunal determines that entitlement exists for all or part of the period between the date of the decision appealed against and the date of the tribunal hearing, benefit is paid in accordance with that determination.

Benefits Reviews

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list each disability benefit currently subject to review, prior to the publication of a green paper; and if she will make a statement. [29584]

Mr. Denham: Our Comprehensive Spending Review covers all Social Security benefits paid on account of incapacity for work, disability and caring. No decisions have yet been reached.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the disabled people's organisations that have made representations to her in respect of the review of welfare benefits; what has been the nature of their representations; and if she will make a statement. [29586]

Mr. Denham: The Government are committed to reforming the welfare system in consultation with the people. We continue to hear views from sick and disabled people, and the groups who represent and support them, both through meetings and in correspondence, about how we can spend wisely and best direct help to enable disabled people to live with independence and dignity.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 19 February 1998

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Office Costs Allowance

Mr. Oaten: To ask the President of the Council how many hon. Members have used up all of their office costs allowance to date. [30307]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To date, no Members have used up all of their Office Costs Allowance.

Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the President of the Council what data she has collated concerning child care provision in other parliaments. [29849]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: None.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Waste Management

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to publish the revised guidance in WMP4; and if he will make a statement on its impact on rural areas. [29547]

Angela Eagle: Section 51 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 places a duty on waste disposal authorities (eg County Councils) to arrange for places to be provided at which persons resident in their area may deposit their household waste free of charge. The fulfilment of this duty is a matter for each authority.

The previous Government initiated a consultation exercise on a proposal to amend the guidance in Waste Management paper No. 4 (WMP4) as it relates to the waste management licensing of sites provided under section 51 of the 1990 Act. These sites are known as "civic amenity sites". The effect of the proposal would be to give the Environment Agency, in England and Wales, and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency, in Scotland, discretion to license un-manned civic amenity sites in rural and remote areas in certain circumstances. The representations made in response to the consultation exercise are being considered and our conclusions on the proposal to amend WMP4 will be announced as soon as we are in a position to do so.

Container Refuse

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to encourage a reduction in the amount of container refuse distributed by fast food outlets. [29701]

Angela Eagle: Fast food outlets are likely to incur an obligation to contribute to the cost of disposing of the containers which they sell as a consequence of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 which came into force in March last year. The regulations place obligations on producers of packaging, from raw materials manufacturers to sellers, to recover and recycle specified tonnages of packaging waste based on the amount of packaging they handle. The targets set by these Regulations, taken from the EC Directive on packaging and packaging waste, will require the UK rate of packaging waste recovery to almost double to 50% by 2001 (it is currently around 27%).

To be obligated, businesses must have a turnover of more than £5 million and handle more than 50 tonnes of packaging annually. In 2000, the former threshold will go down to £1 million. These Regulations therefore ensure that businesses that place packaging on the market, including fast food outlets, make a substantial contribution to the costs of disposal of these products and this obligation acts as an incentive to minimise the weight of packaging used.

Drink Driving

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many road deaths were attributable to drink driving in the last year; and in how many of those cases the driver was above the 80 milligram limit by a factor of two or more. [29764]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is provisionally estimated that, in 1996, there were 540 deaths in a drink-drive accident, defined as a road accident in which at least one driver failed a breath or blood alcohol test, or refused to provide a test specimen. In drink-drive accidents where the driver was killed and subjected to a blood alcohol test, it is estimated that about half the drivers involved exceeded the 80 milligram limit by a factor of two or more. Information is not available on the extent to which drivers who were involved in fatal accidents but were not themselves killed, and who failed a breath test, exceeded the legal alcohol limit.

Emergency Tugs

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the cost of providing all year round cover with emergency tugs for the Western approaches to the Pembrokeshire coastline. [29686]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A table giving the estimate of costs for the provision of Emergency Towing Vessels is included in the Cost Benefit Analysis (paragraph 9), which was undertaken by the Coastguard Agency. A copy was placed in the House Library on 10 February 1998.

Roads

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of the total land area of the United Kingdom is taken up by roads. [29808]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The land take of roads is estimated to be approximately 1.4 per cent. of the total land area of the United Kingdom.

Oil Spillages

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he is taking to ensure the continuation of monitoring and research into the long-term effects and impact of oil spillages on the British coastline. [29818]

Angela Eagle: The UK Government have recognised the need for a plan to minimise the effects of oil spills since 1967. This National Contingency Plan was developed in consultation with all interested parties and is operated by DETR's Marine Pollution Control Unit.

In the event of a major spill, the Marine Pollution Control Unit establish, in consultation with the various authorities, whether to initiate sampling of sea water, sediments and flora/fauna over an extended period to determine the long-term fate of the oil and its consequences for the environment. They also recommend if resources need to be made available for longer-term ecological studies (including the shoreline) if appropriate.

The Government have been alive to the need to develop a comprehensive view of the environmental impacts of major oil spills. Following the wreck of the Braer in 1993, the Government funded the work of the Ecological Steering Group on the oil spill in Shetland and is continuing to monitor and to research into the environmental effects. Following the grounding of the Sea Empress, we funded the work of the Sea Empress Environmental Evaluation Committee (SEEEC). The SEEEC report was published on 11 February.

The Government are considering SEEEC's recommendation that an Environmental Impact Assessment Group should be established whenever a serious oil spill occurs. We are also considering what further monitoring and research should be set up to establish what the long-term effects of the Sea Empress spill are and what measures may be needed to alleviate any possible consequences.

My Department continues to fund the Continuous Plankton Recorder operated by the Sir Alister Hardy Foundation. This was started in 1931 and provides a unique insight into the effects of all pollutants on these "indicator" species. More recently, the Department has funded a research contract into the biological fate of dispersed oil which assesses the nature, rate and extent of the biodegradation of oil droplets. The final report of this contract is expected shortly. In addition, monitoring of the long-term effects and impact of oil spillages (and other substances) on the British Coastline is carried out under the auspices of the Marine Pollution Monitoring Management Group.

Assaults (Trains)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many prosecutions have been brought and convictions secured for assaults committed on trains in each year since 1990. [29861]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The numbers of prosecutions for assault on railway property, including trains, for the years 1991 to 1997 are provided in the table. I am unable to provide the number of convictions as the British Transport Police do not hold the figures in this form.

Year	Prosecutions
1991	903
1992	1,428
1993	459
1994	599
1995	616
1996	618
1997	543

Airport Planning

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if his Department will review the appropriateness of the predict and provide approach to airport infrastructure planning and provision. [29931]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Integration between the Government's transport policies, including those on aviation, and the Government's environmental policies will be one of the central themes in the Integrated Transport White Paper.

Compulsory Purchase Houses

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many houses his Department owns, by county, which were originally subject to compulsory purchase or otherwise acquired to facilitate road-building schemes which (a) have definitely been cancelled and (b) are subject to the present Trunk Roads Review. [30303]

Ms Glenda Jackson: On 1 February, the Highways Agency owned the following residential properties which have been acquired by compulsory or discretionary purchase to facilitate road building schemes. Properties held for cancelled schemes will generally be sold over a three-year period, to avoid adversely affecting the local housing market and maximise benefits to the taxpayer.

County	(a) for schemes already	(b) for schemes subject to the present trunk roads review
Avon	7	0

British Rail Land (Newhaven)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 462, if he will take steps to ensure that the British Rail land for sale in Newhaven is sold only to a party with railway interests. [30408]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No; that would effectively entail a subsidy by the taxpayer. But British Rail would welcome bids from railway interests.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30011]

Angela Eagle: Child care provision enables staff to combine their work and domestic responsibilities and helps promote and sustain equal opportunities policies. My Department supports child care facilities in accordance with existing central guidance. Parents are required to make a contribution towards the costs but subsidies up to a maximum of 50 per cent. of the cost of places are provided. Child care vouchers are not currently made available to staff. Current support for places at inter-departmental nurseries is as follows:

Location	Number of Places	Contractor	Subsidy per week per place
Westminster	10 (divided between two nurseries)	Westminster Children's Society	£73 or £78 depending on nursery ie 50% subsidy
Bristol	3.5	Acorn	£38 for under twos ie 35% subsidy and £28 for over twos ie 29% subsidy
Hastings	4	Kinderquest	£32 ie 33% subsidy

Inter-departmental holiday play schemes are operated at various locations throughout the country including Westminster, Bristol, Birmingham and Bedford. Apart from the Westminster scheme, full details are not held centrally but subsidies are made available. The Westminster scheme details are as follows:

Location	DETR places	Contractor	DETR subsidy
Westminster	Varies—up to 15 places	Kinderquest	£8.05 per child per day ie 50%

Chief Executives are responsible for the implementation of equal opportunities policies in DETR agencies, including child care provision. Details are not held centrally.

Public Interest Reports

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many district auditors' public interest reports were published last year; and on which local authorities. [30306]

Mr. Raynsford: I understand from the Audit Commission that during 1997 district auditors published a total of twenty public interest reports. The local authorities concerned were:

Allerdale Borough Council
Bassetlaw District Council
Bristol City Council
Bath and North East Somerset Council
Coggeshall Parish Council
Denbighshire County Council
Doncaster MBC
Hemsworth Town Council
Hertfordshire County Council
Lambeth LBC
Middlesborough Borough Council
Newark and Sherwood District Council
Nottinghamshire County Council
Redbridge LBC
St. Neots Town Council
Sheffield City Council
Walsall MBC
Waltham Forest LBC
West Wiltshire District Council
Whitworth Town Council.

Drinking Water

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to release the report commissioned by his Department on the cost benefit analysis of reducing lead in drinking water. [30917]

Mr. Meacher: This report has now been published and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House. This is an interesting study which attempts to cost the health and non-health benefits associated with reducing levels of lead in drinking water to the 25 µg/l and 10 µg/l levels required by the new EC Drinking Water Directive.

The report indicates that in some circumstances it is cost-effective to replace lead water pipes, although if the cost of pipe replacement could be reduced the case for action would be clearer. It also concludes that it is cost-effective to introduce water treatment to reduce exposure even when benefits appear to be low.

The report provides a useful input to the debate about the costs and benefits of reducing lead levels in water. However, this is a difficult area and further work will be necessary on the assumptions and approaches used.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 4 February 1998, Official Report, columns 641–42, if he will make a statement on the ethical and wider public interest considerations which he wishes to be taken into account in the revision of Directive 90/220/EEC on the deliberate release of genetically modified organisms; and if he intends to press for a requirement to show a need for the genetically-modified organism. [29712]

Mr. Meacher: The report of the 1997 National Biotechnology Conference published in September last year highlighted that some aspects of the development of biotechnology raise wider issues, including ethical concerns. These included concerns about the spread of genes into wild populations and the effects of the introduction of genetically modified crops into our natural and agricultural environment. Other concerns include whether social need justifies the risk being taken in developing a GMO and whether the technology employed is appropriate and the safest available. The Government are preparing their response to the report of the conference, which should be published shortly. In responding, we shall be considering both how best to address these concerns and the constraints on action and their relevance to the revision of the directive 90/220.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 4 February 1998, Official Report, columns 641–42, if he will list the Government's concerns about the current procedures relating to the marketing and release of genetically modified organisms as laid down in Council Directive 90/220/EEC. [29711]

Mr. Meacher: My concern has been partly over comitology and the lack of a timetable and transparency of the decision making process, but also about the failure for wider aspects of the public interest to be taken into account.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Montserrat

Russia

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance programmes her Department is currently funding in Russia. [30200]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development's programme of bilateral assistance to Russia is channelled via the Know How Fund. This strategic technical assistance is provided across a variety of sectors. We expect expenditure in the 1997–98 financial year to be approximately £28 million.

The Department also contributes substantially to the support provided to Russia by the multilateral agencies, in financial terms most conspicuously via the European Union's TACIS programme.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what consultation she has held with relevant non-governmental organisations in advance of the signing of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [30229]

Clare Short: I met representatives of non-governmental organisations (NGOs) in July to discuss the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) and will be doing so again shortly, before the negotiations are concluded in April. My officials have been in contact with NGOs throughout the intervening period. My Department has also consulted with NGOs on our study of the development implications of the MAI.

Development Assistance

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of programme bilateral developmental assistance, excluding emergency assistance, will go to (a) upper middle income groups, (b) lower middle income groups and (c) low income groups in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1988–99. [30195]

Clare Short: Expenditure for 1997–98 will be reported by the Department in British Aid Statistics around November 1998. Future allocations are currently being considered in the Department's resource allocation round. An objective is to re-direct more of the available resources to poverty elimination.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what percentage of bilateral programme development assistance will be devoted to (a) non-project technical co-operation, (b) CDC exchequer advances, (c) emergency aid, (d) mixed credits, (e) financial aid, (f) programme aid and (g) technical co-operation excluding mixed credits in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99; [30196]

(2) what percentage of her Department's budgets for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000 will be devoted to (i) bilateral and (ii) multilateral assistance; [30202]

(3) what percentage of programme developmental assistance will go to (a) Africa, (b) the Pacific, (c) America, (d) Europe and (e) Asia in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99; [30197]

(4) what are her Department's cash plans for (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000 in respect of (a) total DFID resources, (b) planning resources, (c) resource allocations for bilateral country programmes broken down by continent, (d) other bilateral allocations, (e) multilateral allocations, (f) aid administration, (g) running costs, (h) RTA and CDC and Crown Agents borrowing and (i) unallocated contingency reserves. [30203]

Clare Short: The Department's estimated outturn in 1997–98 will be published in the Departmental Report in late March. Plans for future years are currently being considered in the Department's resource allocation round.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the engagements she undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of her duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28944]

Clare Short: I had many engagements within my Department which required no transport. Those outside the Department are listed below.

Date	Engagement	Locality	Mode of Transport
12 January	Hilton Park Conference	Sussex	Car
13 January	World Aware Business Awards	London	Car
14 January	BBC Marshall Plan of the Mind	London	Car

Date	Engagement	Locality	Mode of Transport
20 January	NGO's UK Presidency Project	London	Car
22 January	Reception for outgoing President of EBRD	London	Car
28 January	Lunch with African Development Bank	London	Car
29 January	Institute of Civil Engineers	London	Car

Anti-corruption Assistance

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which states her Department has assisted anti-corruption activities during the current financial year; and what are her plans for 1998–99. [30199]

Clare Short: I will write to the right hon. Member.

Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what provision her Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if she will list the organisations used by her Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30007]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development operates holiday play schemes at both its locations in East Kilbride and London.

In East Kilbride, the play scheme is operated by a partnership of DFID, the Inland Revenue and Scottish Nuclear. DFID does not subsidise the scheme, which costs £6.50 per day.

In London the play scheme is operated by Kinderquest. The scheme costs £16.10 per day. Parents pay 50% of the costs.

The Department does not provide nursery places nor does it make child care vouchers.

PRIME MINISTER

Correspondence

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister how long on average it takes his Department to answer letters from hon. Members; what target date his Department sets; what percentage receive replies within the target date; and what assessment he has made of how long it takes to deliver a letter after it has been typed. [27044]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 February 1998]: It is not possible for me to deal personally with all of the letters I receive and I must therefore refer most of them to the Minister and Department with responsibility for the policy or matter in question.

My office aims to acknowledge Members' correspondence within three working days and, where a reply is due from my office, to provide a substantive response within 15 days. My office estimates that 98 per cent. receive acknowledgement within target and 45 per cent. receive substantive reply within target.

We are aiming to improve the performance against the target for a substantive reply. The delays have been caused by the significant increase in the amount of correspondence received by my office. Currently, my office receives an average of some 8,000 letters a week compared with 3,000 before 1 May.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 582, for what reasons a record was not kept of the registered letter sent to him on 17 August 1997, and sent by fax that day at 10.52 am by Mr. Graham Horwood of 66 St. Andrews Road, Shoeburyness; and if he will review the procedures for dealing with mail from the general public. [29005]

The Prime Minister: My office currently receives some 8,000 letters per week. It is not physically possible to track each and every item once it has been sent to a Department for reply. As I said in my previous answer, on receipt of Mr. Horwood's later letter, further action was initiated and a response sent.

Helms-Burton Act

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he had with President Clinton regarding the effects of the Helms-Burton Act on United Kingdom citizens and their families. [29291]

The Prime Minister: I have raised US extraterritorial legislation with President Clinton on a number of occasions. My colleagues and I continue to take every opportunity to make it clear to the US Administration and Congress that we reject such legislation.

Millennium Compliance

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Prime Minister if the year 2000 problem was discussed at the meetings between President Clinton and the Prime Minister; and if he will make a statement. [29504]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 February 1998]: I discussed the problem briefly in a private meeting I had with President Clinton. We agreed on the need to raise awareness of this problem and to co-operate internationally on efforts to solve it.

Social Exclusion Unit

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to publish an annual poverty report to measure the performance of the Social Exclusion Unit. [29822]

The Prime Minister: The Government's annual report will include passages on what has been achieved in tackling poverty, and what more needs to be done. I have asked the Social Exclusion Unit to draw up key indicators of social exclusion and recommend how these can be tracked.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Overseas Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, (1) pursuant to his answer of 21 January 1998, Official Report, column 539, if he will publish the programme of Mrs. Derek Fatchett when she accompanied her husband to Australasia and the Pacific from 12 to 22 September 1997 at public expense; [25817]

(2) if he will publish the programme of Miss Geraldine Daly when she accompanied the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson) to Luxembourg from 25 to 26 October at public expense. [25818]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 27 January 1998]: Mrs. Fatchett undertook a programme which included visits in the fields of healthcare and culture, as well as accompanying Mr. Fatchett to a number of official engagements. Miss Daly took part in the programme organised by the Luxembourg Presidency for partners of Ministers attending, which included cultural and social visits. It is normal practice and a courtesy to the host nation that those accompanying Ministers on visits take part in official programmes organised by the host country or the Embassy. This is in line with the previous Administration's practice.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral answer of the Prime Minister of 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 342, what was the expenditure of his Department on entertaining from (a) 1 May 1997 to 1 February 1998 and (b) the equivalent period in 1996–97. [26854]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 2 February 1998]: The cost of official hospitality given by Foreign and Commonwealth Ministers from 1 May 1997 to 1 February 1998 was £157,850: the cost of such hospitality given from 1 May 1996 to 1 February 1997 was £163,474.

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26664]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 5 February 1998]: This Department purchases a range of newspapers and magazines. Expenditure on these was as follows:

1995–96: £102,109

1996–97: £115,322

1997–98: £95,934: year to 31 December 1997

1997–98: £119,000: full year estimate.

China

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated regarding the Chinese judicial system; [30219]

(2) if he will make it his policy to encourage an independent judicial system in China. [30218]

Mr. Fatchett: My Department regularly monitors developments in the judicial system in China, such as the recent revision of criminal laws. Both we and the EU have training and exchange programmes for Chinese lawyers and judges which aim to assist in the development of the judicial system.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to encourage the Chinese Government to implement legislation to allow non-governmental organisations to operate legally without a permit from governmental departments. [30221]

Mr. Fatchett: We have no such plans. Nonetheless we value and support the work of NGOs in China.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to encourage the Chinese Government to strengthen the powers of the National People's Congress and local government in China. [30220]

Mr. Fatchett: We would welcome closer contact between British parliamentarians and the National People's Congress. The EU has agreed a programme of technical assistance which aims to support and develop China's system of village governance.

Embassies

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that British embassies present an approachable and accessible profile to individuals and businesses seeking to develop better trade links. [30217]

Mr. Fatchett: Providing effective support to British business abroad is one of our key aims. 217 posts provide a global network of commercial services. We issued guidelines in October last year to posts on best practice. These include ideas on how best to provide an accessible service which meets the customer's needs. Our programme of attachments of business people to posts is also helping to create a more business-like culture.

EU/Tibet Co-ordinator

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek to secure during the British Presidency of the EU the appointment of the EU/Tibet co-ordinator proposed in the recent resolution adopted by the European Parliament. [30407]

Mr. Fatchett: A delegation of EU Troika Ambassadors and the European Commission will visit Tibet during the UK Presidency in order to make an assessment of the situation. Neither we nor our EU partners could realistically consider the appointment of a co-ordinator ahead of that visit.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30015]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department currently subsidises nursery places for 23 children (aged three months to five years) of FCO staff as well as places at a holiday play scheme which are available to all staff.

The Department subsidies places by 50 per cent. at two nurseries in London run by the Westminster Children's Society. It subsidises places at an in-house nursery in Hanslope Park by 30 per cent. and subsidises places at the Civil Service Westminster Holiday Play Scheme, run by Kinderquest Ltd, by 50 per cent.

The provision of subsidised child care by this Department is one of a number of family policies designed to promote the retention of staff during their child caring years. The Department does not provide child care vouchers to staff.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Non-career Civil Servants

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many non-career civil servants have been appointed to her Department since 1 May 1997. [25846]

Mr. Paul Murphy: In the Northern Ireland office and the Northern Ireland Departments, the number of people appointed on fixed-term contracts or as casuals since 1 May 1997 is 1,335.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what amount of Brazilian mahogany has been (a) acquired and (b) specified by her Department in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and for what purpose. [28389]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The information for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is as follows:

(i) Nil.

(ii) Two pairs of fire doors and fire extinguisher cover boxes at Hillsborough Castle; sixteen computer workstations finished in mahogany to match existing suites of furniture as part of the Parliament Buildings refurbishment project; the replacement of one mahogany bookcase which was lost in a fire; and a suite of mahogany finished reproduction office furniture.

All materials used were from sustainable sources.

Correspondence

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how long on average it takes her Department to answer letters from hon. Members; what target date her Department sets; what percentage receive replies within the target date; and what assessment she has made of how long it takes to deliver a letter after it has been typed. [27032]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 2 February 1998]: When answering Ministerial Correspondence, a standard 10 day turn around target is set. Of the 2,603 Ministers cases dealt with in 1997, 1,684 were answered within the target time which is an average success rate of 65 per cent. The main reasons for missing the target were the time taken for transmitting papers to and from the Minister/Minister not in NI and difficulties in obtaining information from various sources. No information is available regarding delivery times for letters.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what monitoring of the impact of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips on (a) the aquatic environment, (b) the soil environment and (c) fisheries (i) has been carried out and (ii) is planned by her Department; and if she will make a statement. [29730]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The level of use of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips in Northern Ireland has been low and there are no recorded incidents of environmental pollution from that source.

DOE and DANI officials are aware of the particular risk posed to the environment by inappropriate disposal of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips and are keeping the situation, particularly regarding levels of usage, under review. If appropriate, specific monitoring of the impact of those sheep dips on the environment will be arranged.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what advice her Department gives to farmers on the disposal of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips. [29729]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The Department of Agriculture of Northern Ireland gives advice to farmers on the handling and disposal of sheep dips, including synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips, through booklets, TV and radio programmes, newspaper articles and farm visits. The current advice covers the circumstances in which used dip may be spread on suitable land at low application rates. As regards synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips, emphasis is given to the need for particular care in handling and disposal in view of the risk which that material poses for the environment.

Civil Servants

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants currently on the list of transfer applicants, have indicated Newry as their preferred location for employment. [29034]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 16 February 1998]: 124 non-industrial staff on the Northern Ireland Civil Service Central Transfer List have indicated Newry as their first preference for relocation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fire Service Call-outs

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the percentage of fire service call outs which were due to road traffic accidents in each of the last five years. [29548]

Mr. George Howarth: The readily available information is given in the table.

Road traffic and total incidents attended by local authority fire brigades, 1992–96

United Kingdom

Thousands[1]

Type of incident	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996[4]

[1] Figures are rounded and the components do not necessarily sum to the independently rounded totals.

[2] From 1994 includes "late" call and heat and smoke only incidents.

[3] Special service incidents (for example road traffic accidents and incidents of flooding or spilling of toxic substances) are counted for calendar years up to and including 1992 (England and Wales), 1993 (Scotland) and 1996 (Northern Ireland) and for financial years subsequently.

[4] Provisional.

Emergency Services

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average response time to emergency calls by the police, per police force covering (a) urban and (b) rural areas, in each of the last four years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29776]

Mr. Michael: The latest complete year for which information is available on the performance of all forces in responding to emergency calls from the public is 1996–97. Details of that year's performance for all forces was published in the annual report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary in October 1997 and in the annual publication of the Audit Commission on local authority performance indicators in January 1998.

Clearly, it is of great importance to the public that the police respond as promptly as possible to emergency calls, having established that the call is a genuine emergency. That is why I decided to keep it as a key objective for the police in 1998–99 to respond promptly to emergency calls from the public.

One of the key performance indicators for this objective is the percentage of responses within the local target time to incidents requiring immediate response. Targets are set locally by individual forces to reflect local circumstances, such as traffic conditions. Some forces set separate targets for urban and rural incidents to take account of the different timescales within which it is possible to respond to such incidents.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) fire officers and (b) retained fire officers were in post in each force, by sex and age group, in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29814]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on the number of wholetime and retained firefighters in each fire brigade for England and Wales is published annually in the reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Fire Services, copies of which are held in the Library. The latest report, for 1996–97, Cm 3791, contains on page 12 a table giving the required information as at 1 January 1997. Details in respect of the age groups are not held centrally. Corresponding information for earlier years can be found in the annual reports for 1992 (Cm 2275—page 14), 1993–94 (Cm 2679—page 14), 1994–95 (Cm 2998—page 12) and 1995–96 (Cm 3493—page 14).

Secure Training Centres

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 4 December 1997, Official Report, column 299, if he will make it his policy to publish the average annual payment which will be paid to each private sector contractor for each child detained in a secure training centre when the contracts are confirmed; if he will list the criteria used to ascertain best value; and if he will make a statement. [29811]

Mr. Michael: Consideration will be given to making information available on the contract payments once all of the contracts for secure training centres have been awarded. In assessing best value, bids are evaluated on the basis of the quality, performance and safety of the design and construction and operating proposals; the quality of service relative to price, the adequacy and robustness of financing proposals; the deliverability of the whole project; and the degree of risk transfer.

Police Manpower

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of police officers per head of population in London relative to those in (a) New York and (b) Paris; and if he will make a statement. [29786]

Mr. Michael: I have not seen any generally helpful comparisons of the levels of policing between difference capital cities. There are such wide variations in the volume and type of crime and in the roles of police officers, civilians and other bodies that any comparisons have to be made with great caution.

Money Laundering

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there have been for offences related to money laundering in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29789]

Mr. Michael: Available information is given in the table.

Number of offenders convicted of money laundering offences by type of offence, 1987–1996, England and Wales

[3] Court proceedings data prior to 1993 cannot separately identify offences under S24 Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986 (since consolidated and replaced by S50 Drug Trafficking Act 1994) from other drug offences. For the years 1993, 1994 and 1995, a special exercise was undertaken to identify this specific offence. However as a 100 per cent. response from the courts was not achieved 'estimates' for these three years were made.
[4] Sections 93A to 93D Criminal Justice Act 1988 came into force in February 1994.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for which of the private finance initiative contracts entered into by his Department and its agencies there was a public sector comparator; if he will indicate whether the comparator was calculated before or after private sector bids were received; and if he will make a statement. [29788]

Mr. Straw: My Department and its Agencies have prepared public sector comparators for the following private finance initiative (PFI) contracts:

Contract	Comparator calculated before or after bids received
Coldingley Prison workshop	Before Prisons
Bridgend	After
Fazakerly	After
Lowdham Grange	Before
United Kingdom Passport Agency: dealing with applications and printing passports	After
Immigration and Nationality caseworking project[1]	Before
Secure Training Centre: Cookham Wood[1]	After

[1] In both cases, comparison could only be made in respect of part of the contract content, and constituted a test for value for money, but not a full public sector comparator.

A comparison with the estimated public sector cost of delivering a similar product, taking account of risk transferred in a Private Finance Initiative deal, is made wherever it is realistic to do so. It is used to test whether competitive bids offer value for money.

Alcohol (Smuggling)

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licences have been withdrawn from pubs, hotels, restaurants, cafes and off licences for selling bootlegged or smuggled alcohol in each of the last three years. [30419]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not collected centrally.

Countryside Rally (Policing)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the anticipated cost of policing the Countryside Rally in London on 1 March. [29860]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that the basic policing cost for the Countryside Alliance Protest March on 1 March 1998 is expected to be £187,239. In addition, there may be some overtime and support services costs which cannot be calculated until after the event.

Animal Procedures Committee

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which the Animal Procedures Committee has met groups or individuals opposed to (a) xenotransplantation and (b) vivisection; and if he will make a statement. [30302]

Mr. George Howarth: Since May, the Animal Procedures Committee has formally met with representatives of one such group. In January 1998, members of the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection (BUAV) made a presentation to the Committee.

In addition, there is a range of opinion on the Committee concerning the use of animals in scientific procedures, including xenotransplantation.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30010]

Mr. Straw: Provision is made for spending £380,000 on subsidised child care in the current financial year for Home Office staff (including the Agencies) at various locations. This makes available 164 nursery day care places for children under 5 years of age and around 170 holiday play scheme places for children aged between 5 to 12 years. These arrangements involve a subsidy of up 50% of the contractual running costs depending on local circumstances. Subsidised child care provision is provided only if it can be justified on value for money grounds.

The Department uses the following contractors to provide child care: Beehive Nurseries; Buffer Bean Limited; Jancett Group of Day Nurseries; Kids Unlimited; Kinderquest Limited; Nurseryworks Limited; and the Westminster Children's Society.

The Department does not provide child care vouchers to staff.

Probation Services (Birmingham Prisons)

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the changes in the level of delivery of probation services in Birmingham prisons in the last two years; and what plans he has for further changes. [29871]

Ms Quin: The numbers of probation staff at Birmingham prison in the last two years were:

1996–97: 1 Senior Probation Officer and 6 Probation Officers

1997–98: 1 Senior Probation Officer and 4 Probation Officers (including one funded by the West Midlands Probation Service)

The level for 1998–99 has not yet been set. The Governor recognises the value and importance of the work done by the Probation Service, while nonetheless having to prioritise other important demands within his overall budget.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide additional funding for sex offenders' treatment programme courses. [29872]

Ms Quin: During the financial year 1997–98, an additional £1 million was provided by the Prison Service for accredited offending behaviour programmes, which include the sex offender treatment programme.

My right hon. Friend has now made available a further £112 million for the Prison Service in addition to its existing budget for 1998–99. Part of these funds will be used for the provision of regime activities, including the sex offender treatment programme.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the criteria for selection of sex offenders' treatment programmes for prisoners; [29873]

(2) what account is taken of previous convictions in providing convicted sex offenders with access to sex offenders' treatment programme courses. [29874]

Ms Quin: The basic criteria for the selection of prisoners for the sex offender treatment programme are:

the prisoner is currently serving a sentence for a sexual offence, or has a previous conviction for a sexual offence and has asked for treatment, or is a life sentence prisoner who may not have been convicted of a sexual offence, but whose criminal behaviour involves a sexual element;

the prisoner is willing to participate in the programme; and is serving a sentence long enough in which to complete it.

Life sentence prisoners who have a current or previous conviction for a sexual offence, or whose criminal behaviour involves a sexual element, are required to undertake treatment in order to progress towards release.

A risk assessment is made on all convicted sex offenders entering prison. Those who are considered to be high risk and who satisfy the other criteria will be given priority for a place. Information about previous convictions will inform the risk assessment made of each sex offender.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the reoffending rates for prisoners who have previously completed sex offenders' treatment programme courses. [29875]

Ms Quin: The long-term effects of the sex offender treatment programme are not yet known, but similar programmes in the United States and Canada have reduced the rate of reoffending by about 25%.

Over-lenient Sentences

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the appeals procedure in respect of over-lenient sentences. [28782]

Mr. Michael: We are in discussion with colleagues about the best way to implement our manifesto commitment to extend the Attorney-General's powers to refer cases to the Court of Appeal for review where it appears to him that the sentence is unduly lenient.

Trials (Juries)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he gives to judges on whether a case coming to trial could be heard by a judge without a jury. [28784]

Mr. Michael: No such guidance has been issued, since in England and Wales a judge has no power to conduct a criminal trial without a jury. A consultation paper published on 16 February to which I referred in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer), on 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 475, canvasses four alternatives to traditional jury trial in serious and complex fraud cases, one of which is trial by a judge sitting alone, but we have made it clear that we have a genuinely open mind about which option would be best and about whether such a change should go ahead.

Lotteries (Frequent Draws) Bill

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a list of the submissions received in response to the publication of the draft Lotteries (Frequent Draws) Bill and place in the Library copies of those submissions that are marked as being for publication. [30305]

Mr. George Howarth: When reporting on the outcome of the consultation, we will place in the Library a list of submissions and copies of those submissions whose authors did not object to publication.

Ashford Remand Centre

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the future of the site of the former Ashford (Middlesex) Remand Centre. [30261]

Ms Quin: Prisoner population pressures continue to require the construction of new establishments. The Prison Service owns the site of the former Ashford Remand Centre and has planning consent for the construction of a new prison. Consideration is currently being given as to how this should be taken forward. I will write to the hon. Member when a decision has been made.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Experience

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how the eight year old consultant on the Millennium Dome was appointed; how many other applicants were considered; and what criteria were used for the appointment. [28027]

Mr. Mandelson: I understand that Work, one of the eleven design companies contracted to the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) to develop the content of the Millennium Experience Dome, occasionally ask an eight year old boy to comment on their plans in order to gauge the level of their appeal to young people.

In the next few months, the NMEC have established its own network of Regional Junior Boards (in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the nine English regions) each comprising about twenty 9–16 year olds nominated by local education establishments and agencies. The intention is that one member of each Regional Junior Board, together with representatives from the major national youth organisations and agencies, will form a National Junior Board. These boards will ensure that advice and the views of young people on the Millennium Experience project are directly and regularly considered.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30012]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The child care facilities provided in the department, Agencies and other areas which fall to the Cabinet Office Vote are as follows:

	Facilities	Subsidy	Organisation used
Cabinet Office (OPS)	The Westminster holiday playscheme	50%	Kinderquest Ltd
Civil Service College	Nursery places	Subsidy varies between nil and £35 per week depending upon grade	Edith Rose Day Nursery Ltd
Central Office of Information	The Westminster holiday playscheme	50%	Kinderquest Ltd
Property Advisers to the Civil Estate	Nursery places for staff in Leeds	39%	Peter Bennett Nursery
	The Westminster holiday playscheme	50%	Kinderquest
The Buying Agency	Holiday playscheme	100%	MOD Kidz Club

	Facilities	Subsidy	Organisation used
Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency	None	—	—
Security Facilities Executive	None	—	—
Government Car and Despatch Agency	None	—	—

Child care vouchers are not available to staff.

Public Appointments (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mrs. Ballard) of 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 703, on public appointments, what progress has been made by the public appointments unit towards increasing the proportion of individuals from ethnic minority backgrounds who are appointed to public bodies. [30174]

Dr. David Clark: The Public Appointments Unit is keen to maintain the progress which has already been achieved, with 3.6% of appointments being held by members of the ethnic minorities in 1997 compared with 2% in 1992.

The Unit actively promotes equal opportunities in public appointments through its various programmes of work, which have included a series of regional seminars to encourage more members of the ethnic minorities to participate in public life.

The Unit is currently drawing together individual Departmental plans designed to increase the representation of women and members of the ethnic minorities on public bodies. The plans will cover the period 1998–2001 and will be made publicly available.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what restrictions will be placed on Ministers' powers to withhold information relating to themselves under the terms of the Official Secrets Acts by the forthcoming legislation on freedom of information. [30300]

Dr. David Clark: It is not intended that the proposed Freedom of Information Act should amend the provisions of the Official Secrets Act 1989.

TREASURY

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the minimum requirements concerning public access which have to be satisfied before a landowner can be granted conditional exemption from inheritance tax. [27978]

Dawn Primarolo: The law requires owners of conditionally exempt assets to provide reasonable public access. Each case is considered on its own merits, and the factors taken into account include the extent and nature of any existing access. The Inland Revenue's booklet, "Capital taxation and the national heritage", IR67 (available in the House of Commons Library), provides general guidance on matters relating to public access.

Ministerial Transport

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost of (a) Ministerial cars and drivers and (b) the Department's bill for taxis in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year. [27726]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Over these years, expenditure on Ministerial cars and drivers, and on taxis, is as follows:

£000

	Ministerial cars and drivers	Taxis
1995–96	295	58
1996–97	360	59
1997–98 (year to date)	364	76
1998–99 (full year)	397	83

Income Tax

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are currently paying income tax at (a) the basic rate and (b) higher tax rates in each county of England and Wales. [29480]

Dawn Primarolo: The table shows estimates of the number and percentage of basic and higher rate taxpayers by county in England and unitary authority in Wales 1995–96, the latest year for which there is information.

Technology Companies

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total quantity of agreed (a) trading tax losses and (b) capital losses in (i) technology companies and (ii) biotechnology companies, in the last year for which figures are available. [29411]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: I regret that the tax records held centrally by the Inland Revenue do not categorise companies to the industries requested.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households currently in receipt of family credit would experience a shift in net income to the principal wage earner if family credit were replaced by a working families tax credit payable through the pay packet to the principal earner. [29187]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The current system of Family Credit involves a declaration by the man and the woman in a household. If the Working Family Tax Credit replaced Family Credit, the Government would ensure that the family could elect to whom the tax credit was paid—to the woman or the man in the household.

Abortions

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people each week in the United Kingdom contribute to conceptions that are terminated legally and deliberately in the United Kingdom. [29673]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 19 February 1998:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to reply to your recent question on the number of people in the United Kingdom who contribute to conceptions that are terminated legally and deliberately in the United Kingdom.

Over the period July 1996 to June 1997, the latest 12 months for which information is available, there were an average of 3,460 abortions each week notified as being performed in Great Britain on residents of the United Kingdom.

The Abortion Act 1967 applies to England, Wales and Scotland. The Act does not apply to Northern Ireland, where less than a hundred legal abortions are performed each year on medical grounds in health service hospitals under case law, as was the legal situation in England and Wales before the 1967 Act.

Tax Allowances

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost of revalorising the non-aged personal allowance; and what increase in (a) the non-aged married couple's allowance and (b) the additional personal allowance could be achieved for such a sum. [28986]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 13 February 1998]: Indexing the non-aged personal allowance is estimated to cost £850 million in 1998–99. The same amount could be spent on increasing the non-aged married couple's allowance, the additional personal allowance and the widow's bereavement allowance by £590.

Duty Free Sales

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the employment consequences in the United Kingdom of the ending of the European duty free trade on 1 January 1999. [29922]

Dawn Primarolo: No estimate has been made of the possible consequences of the abolition of intra EU duty free trade. It is due to be abolished on 30 June 1999.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30095]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The Treasury's total expenditure on hospitality, stationery and travel in the UK in 1996–97 was £112,000, £289,000 and £217,000, respectively. A regional breakdown of procurement would mean each invoice would have to be examined. This could be carried out only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30017]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury participates in the Westminster Holiday Play Scheme which provides child care for children between the ages of five and twelve during school holidays. A 61 per cent. subsidy is provided to staff. The current provider is Kinderquest Ltd. Nursery places are not provided nor are child care vouchers offered.

Professionals (Income Tax Changes)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the proposed income tax changes for professionals referred to in an Inland Revenue press statement of 22 December 1997 will result in barristers being liable to pay income tax to the Government on fees due to the barrister by the Legal Aid Board before those sums have been received by the barrister from the Legal Aid Board. [30397]

Dawn Primarolo: The precise effects of the proposal to withdraw the cash basis practices available to professionals will depend on the individual circumstances and the final detail of the proposal. It has been the subject of a consultation process which ended on 14 February 1998. We are now reviewing the proposal in the light of the comments received. The final shape of the proposed legislation will not be announced in advance of my right hon. Friend's Budget.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely acceleration in the income tax and national insurance paid by persons affected by the proposed income tax changes for professionals referred to in an Inland Revenue press statement of 22 December 1997 and of the amount of additional income tax and national insurance which will be so accelerated. [30395]

Dawn Primarolo: The purpose of consultation was to enable those affected to voice their concerns. The consultation process ended on 14 February 1998. We are now reviewing the proposal in the light of the comments received. The final shape of the proposed legislation will not be announced in advance of my right hon. Friend's Budget.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government plan to require one-off payments to be made in respect of the acceleration in the income tax and national insurance paid by persons affected by the proposed income tax changes for professionals referred to in an Inland Revenue press statement of 22 December 1997. [30396]

Dawn Primarolo: The proposal to withdraw the cash basis practices available to professionals has been the subject of a consultation process which ended on 14 February 1998. We are now reviewing the proposal in the light of the comments received. The final shape of the proposed legislation, including the phasing of its implementation, will not be announced in advance of my right hon. Friend's Budget.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have to introduce relief for professionals affected by the proposed changes parallel to the cash accounting scheme for VAT consequent upon proposed income tax changes for professionals referred to in an Inland Revenue press statement of 22 December 1997. [30398]

Dawn Primarolo: The proposal to withdraw the cash basis practices available to professionals is the subject of a consultation process which was started by the issue of an Inland Revenue Press Release on 22 December 1997. Comments were invited by 14 February 1998. Now we are in the process of reviewing the proposal in the light of the comments received. The outcome of that review will not be announced before my right hon. Friend's Budget.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the level of income tax which the Treasury will receive on a professional's profits over the course of a professional's career under the proposed income tax changes for professionals referred to in an Inland Revenue press statement of 22 December 1997 relative to the current procedures. [30401]

Dawn Primarolo: The proposal to withdraw the cash basis practices available to professionals does not affect the total amount of income chargeable to income tax, but changes the timing of when it has to be returned for income tax purposes. Estimates of the effect on Treasury receipts from year to year will depend on the final detail of the proposal. It has been the subject of a consultation process which ended on 14 February 1998. We are now reviewing the proposal in the light of the comments received. The final shape of the proposed legislation will not be announced in advance of my right hon. Friend's Budget.

Customs Information System

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government have designated a competent authority to have direct access to the Customs Information System as referred to in Article 29(2) of EC Regulation 515/97 on mutual administrative assistance. [30915]

Dawn Primarolo: I have designated HM Customs and Excise as the competent authority to have direct access to the Customs Information System.

WALES

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27738]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 5 February 1998]: No items valued at more than £25 have been stolen or lost from the Department since 1 May 1997.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will place in the Library the guidelines and terms of reference issued by his Department to the consultants who assisted with the recruitment of the Chief Executive of the Welsh Development Agency; [28990]

(2) how many applicants there were for the post of Chief Executive to the Welsh Development Agency when the present incumbent was appointed; how many were interviewed; and how many of those interviewed withdrew their application prior to an appointment being made. [28991]

Mr. Hain: The appointment of the present Chief Executive was made by the Board of the Welsh Development Agency with the consent of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. I have asked the Chairman of the Agency to write to the right hon. Member, and will arrange for a copy of his reply to be placed in the Library of the House.

Correspondence

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the normal practice in his Department in relation to consulting the author of a private and confidential letter to his Department about giving copies of it to third parties. [29232]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department's normal practice is to comply with the requirements of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, and the advice given in the Guidance on Interpretation, Second Edition (1997).

Optec DD

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the Optec DD factory at Buckley will close and with how many redundancies; and if he will make a statement. [29435]

Mr. Hain: The company have not yet announced the actual date when the factory will close. However, there will be 76 redundancies.

The Welsh Development Agency is working closely with Flintshire County Council and is exploring a number of options. We are content that everything possible is being done to help the company and its employees.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives (i) he and (ii) the Welsh Development Agency will take to find a new tenant for the current Optec DD factory at Buckley, Flintshire; and if he will make a statement. [29434]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Development Agency, the TEC and Flintshire County Council are aware of the closure and have discussed the matter fully with the company. Following the discussions it has been agreed that the Council, through its Economic Development Department, will take the lead on giving advice to the company and its employees. The Welsh Development Agency is in regular contact with the local authority and is currently considering a number of options.

We are happy that everything possible is being done to help the company and its employees.

Manufacturing Redundancies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of manufacturing redundancies announced in 1998 to date; and if he will make a statement. [29432]

Mr. Hain: No reliable estimates of manufacturing redundancies in Wales are available. Information on redundancies generally is available from the quarterly Labour Force Survey, which estimates the number of people who were made redundant in the three months prior to the survey. However, data for the first quarter of 1998 will not be available until late summer. The Spring 1997 survey estimated that 11,000 people in Wales were made redundant in the three months prior to interview. The Summer 1997 survey gave an estimate below 10,000 (the Labour Force Survey threshold for publication).

Beef and Lamb Prices

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the difference between the carcase price for beef and lamb paid to farmers and the price charged by retailers. [29591]

Mr. Win Griffiths: This issue has been raised in recent discussions between my right hon. Friend and the farming unions. The Welsh Affairs Committee has also taken an interest in this matter and the Welsh Office provided a memorandum to the Committee on 14 January 1998. I subsequently gave evidence to the Committee on 16 February.

National Assembly for Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to be able to announce the locations of regional centres within Wales at which there may be held meetings of the regional committees of the National Assembly and occasional full committee meetings or plenary sessions of the National Assembly; and if these centres will be equipped with video conferencing equipment in time to be fully operational by May 1999. [29596]

Mr. Ron Davies: I will announce in due course the location of the regional offices where the public will be able to gain access to the National Assembly proceedings. Subject to the relevant technology being available and affordable, I would want these offices to have operational video conferencing facilities in May 1999. It will be for the National Assembly members to determine the location of regional centres where they might wish to meet.

Rural Roads

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what evaluation he has made of the dangers of driving on narrow, winding, rural roads and the possibility of reducing speed limits on such roads. [29593]

Mr. Hain: The Department has not undertaken any formal evaluation but, together with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, we have commissioned extensive research on road safety and the particular problems on rural roads. This shows that few drivers exceed the national speed limit in these areas, and that accidents tend to be the result of speed which is inappropriate for road conditions. Local Highway Authorities already have powers to lower speed limits on roads where appropriate.

Class Sizes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money released by the abolition of the assisted places scheme will be used to reduce class sizes in infant schools in the next school year. [29803]

Mr. Hain: All the savings in 1998–99 from the abolition of the Assisted Places Scheme, which are expected to amount to £1.35 million, are to be used for the reduction of infant class sizes.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30021]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department is a partner in a public sector consortium which provides a 60 place nursery for staff. The Consortium covers the cost of rent, rates and utility charges which currently amounts to approximately £700 per place per annum. An Easter and summer play scheme is supported by a financial contribution of some £100 per place per annum. Parents using these child care schemes are required to make a contribution towards the costs which mainly cover the management costs involved in running and staffing the schemes.

The Nursery is managed on behalf of the Consortium by Cardiff City Council under contract. The play scheme is an open scheme run by SPICE for Cardiff City Council and the Department contracts for places on the scheme.

Child care vouchers are not made available to staff.

My Department considers the provision of child care arrangements as important to the promotion of equality of opportunity for all staff.

Further Education

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on (a) the (i) recurrent and (ii) capital funding and (b) target student numbers for further education in Wales set out in (1) December 1996 and (2) December 1997; and if he will make a statement on the efficiency gains per student in real terms over this period. [30269]

Mr. Hain: In December 1996, the further education recurrent provision for the financial year 1997–98 was £162.547 million; capital provision was £14.477 million; and the target full-time equivalent student number was 58,500. In December 1997, recurrent and capital provision for further education was combined giving a total sum available of £172.541 million for the financial year 1998–99, against target full-time equivalent student numbers of 63,000.

The forecast outturn for 1997–98 is £179.475 million, funding 62,400 full-time equivalent students. Against the resources to be made available in 1998–99 and the student target for that year, the projected efficiency gain per student, in real terms, over this period is 7.3 per cent.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to alter the level of funding for further education in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000. [30250]

Mr. Hain: I have already announced an increase in funding for further education of £5.4 million over the plans set out by the previous administration. Decisions on the funding to be made available for the sector in 1999–2000 will be taken in the light of the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many colleges of further education in Wales are categorised as (a) financially unsatisfactory, (b) marginal and (c) satisfactory; and what were the equivalent figures in February 1997. [30249]

Mr. Hain: Currently within the further education sector in Wales, eight colleges are categorised by the FEFCW as financially unsatisfactory, eight as marginal and 13 as satisfactory. The corresponding figures in February 1997 were four, seven and 18 respectively.

Health Service Funding

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has reached a decision concerning the allocation of resources to health authorities in Wales for 1998–99. [30914]

Mr. Ron Davies: I announced on 10 December 1997, Official Report, columns 580–83 that I would be providing an additional £113 million for the NHS in Wales in 1998–99. This will bring total spending to £2,455 million. £1,725 million of this will be used to fund the Hospital, Community and Family Health Services.

Hospital, Community and Family Health Services will receive an additional £77 million in revenue resources—a cash increase of 4.9 per cent. Within this amount, the five health authorities, GPs and GP fundholders will receive revenue funding of £1,585 million—£71 million, or 4.7 per cent., more than in 1997–98 plans. In real terms, this is an overall increase of 1.9 per cent. Within these resources, I have been able to give health authorities an extra £62 million, which represents a 4.3 per cent. cash increase on discretionary purchasing power, and £4 million to cash limited General Medical Services, which is a 7.8 per cent. cash increase.

I am expecting health authorities and trusts to continue to generate efficiency savings and in 1998–99 these should amount to at least 2.4 per cent. This will release some £34 million which, together with the new money, will be available to meet inflationary and other pressures, and to increase investment in patient care.

Health authorities and trusts will also receive £97 million to fund capital development. Included with this is £2.7 million to fund estimated capital costs in the first year of the replacement of the linear accelerators at Velindere NHS Trust, a scheme that will cost £4.4 million over the next three years. In addition, I have made available an extra £3.5 million for Trust minor discretionary capital expenditure to support the maintenance and replacement of equipment and estate. This is an increase of 8.1 per cent. or 5.3 per cent. after taking account of inflation.

The settlement also provides £5 million for new developments, most notably £2.4 million for the support and expansion of cancer services through the Cancer Service Co-ordinating Group, £0.5 million to tackle prescription fraud and £0.8 million to meet the cost of implementing Calman Specialist Registrars.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy regarding the appointment of members to the Board of the enhanced Welsh Development Agency; and if he will make a statement. [30918]

Mr. Ron Davies: I am today announcing that Mr. David Rowe-Beddoe will be Chairman and Mr. Brian Willott the Chief Executive of the new organisation when it is established in the Autumn of this year, subject to the passage of the Government of Wales Bill.

I intend to make further appointments to the Board at a later date. The existing Board of the Welsh Development Agency (WDA), the Development Board for Rural Wales (DBRW) and the Land Authority for Wales (LAW) have made a valuable contribution to economic development in Wales and I applaud their achievements. I am, however, keen that the opportunity to serve on the Board of the new Powerhouse agency is canvassed as widely as possible in line with the guidance from the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. I therefore intend to advertise these appointments so that the composition of the Board following the merger will benefit from a blend of new talent as well as the experience of existing members. The terms of office of existing Board members will be extended until the merger.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Correspondence

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make it his policy that he and his Ministers personally read the letters sent to them by hon. Members on constituency matters. [27667]

Mr. Chris Smith: It is already my policy that my fellow departmental Ministers and I read all correspondence from hon. Members.

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26629]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport spent £20,033 on newspapers and magazines in 1993–94, £34,806 in 1994–95, £22,000 in 1995–96, and £25,863 in 1996–97. To date, the Department has spent £20,269 in 1997–98 and expects to spend £26,770 in the 1997–98 full year. The Department purchases a range of publications.

Market Research

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what expenditure has been incurred by his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies (a) in 1996–97 and (b) since 1 May 1997 on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and

(iii) other forms of market research; if he will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each; and if he will make a statement. [26625]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The totals of expenditure relating to the Department, its agencies and Non Departmental Public Bodies are in the following table.

	Opinion Polling[1]	Focus Groups[2]	Other Forms of Market Research[3]	Total
1996–97
Department	0	0	6,241	6,241

Agencies	0	5,000	69,578	74,578
NDPBs	256,931	524,673	1,383,472	2,165,076

[1] Opinion Polling: This was usually carried out through interviews or surveys carried out by the NDPB or contracted out to an opinion polling organisation.
[2] Focus Groups: This was usually carried out in small groups discussing specific aspects of the NDPB or Agency.
[3] Other Forms of Market Research[4]: Various types of research—questionaires, interviews detailed studies, etc carried out either in-house or through market research organisations.
[4] Some forms of the market research may use opinion polling and/or focus group techniques.

I have placed details of the Department, its agencies and NDPBs information on expenditure on the types of surveys requested for the periods specified in the Libraries of the House.

Public Opinion Research

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many contracts for public opinion research his Department has awarded since 1 May; if he will indicate the (a) purpose, (b) cost, (c) value and (d) duration of each contract; and which companies (i) bid for and (ii) were awarded each contract. [28867]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has let only one contract for public opinion research since 1 May. The details relating to purpose, cost, duration and bidding companies are set out. With regard to the value of the research, its main benefit has been to provide a factual background to address some of the problems of the British Film Industry in the light of the major Film Policy Review.

Grants

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many grants of a value greater than £10,000 were made to bodies in (a) London, (b) the South East of England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland by his Department in the last year; and what was the total value of such grants in each area; [30062]

(2) how many institutions in (a) London, (b) the South East of England and (c) England receive funding from his Department; and what is the total level of funding for institutions in each area. [30063]

Mr. Tom Clarke: [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Details of non-departmental public bodies and other bodies sponsored by my Department are contained in the DNH 1997 Annual Report Cm: 3611.

Non-governmental Agencies

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the financial support he provides to non-government agencies. [30065]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 18 February 1998]: My Department has provided support to the following bodies during the current financial year:

£000

	1997–98
Royal Geographical Society	54
Royal National Institute for the Blind	200
National Manuscripts Conservation Trust	70
Arts and Entertainment Training Council	30
Business in the Arts	25
Theatres Trust	55
Access for Disabled people to Arts Premises Today	43
British Chess Federation	49
Churches Conservation Trust	2,479
British Screen Finance Ltd.	2,000
European Film Co-production	2,000
British Film Commission	850

Note:
Non-Departmental Public Bodies, Executive Agencies, Public Corporations and bodies sponsored on an ad-hoc basis have been excluded.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will give a regional breakdown of his Department's expenditure on (a) hospitality, (b) stationery and (c) travel in the last year for which figures are available. [30084]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 18 February 1998]: My Department is based in London. The available information for the financial year 1996–97 is in the following table:

	£000
Hospitality	41
Stationery	87
Travel and subsistence	242

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the location and running costs in the last year for which figures are available of each of his Department's buildings. [30083]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 18 February 1998]: My Department occupies the four following properties:

2–4 Cockspur Street
London SW1Y 5DH;

Grove House
2–6 Orange Street
London WC2H 7ED;

6th Floor
Haymarket House
London SW1Y 4EE;

Novello House
2 Sheraton Street
London W1V 4BH.

The running costs set out in the table cover all the above properties together as the figures cannot easily be broken down.

Expenditure	1996–97
Rent	1,654,016.06
Rates (CILOR)	1,193,966.80
Service Charges	165,922.01
Fuel and Utilities	37,498.18
Maintenance	224,083.07
Security	234,517.09
Central Services	872,418.70

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30082]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The total paybill and average number of staff in post within the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and agencies in 1996–97 are shown in the table:

	1996–97 paybill £ million	Average number of staff in post in 1996–97
DCMS	10.75	361
Historic Royal Palaces	10.645	518
The Royal Parks	7.324	257

Extracting historic information from the Chessington Payroll Centre on London allowances and weightings can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. DCMS consolidated the Inner London Weighting Allowance of £1,776 into basic pay with effect from 1 November 1996. Local Pay Additions continue to be paid as a separate allowance. The Agencies currently continue to pay separate London weighting and allowances.

The offices of the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and agencies are all London based.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30018]

Mr. Tom Clarke: As part of an overall Equal Opportunities Policy, the provision of child care facilities within my Department is two-fold: (i) one nursery place for a child aged between 6 months and 5 years at the Stepping Stones Nursery, based at Napier Hall, Pimlico. The Department subsidises the cost of this place by 50 per cent.

(ii) DCMS staff can also use places at the Westminster Holiday Playscheme which caters for children between 5 and 12 years old and which operates during all the main school holidays at various locations in Whitehall and Victoria. The Department again meets half the cost of any places taken up on this scheme.

Child care vouchers are currently not available to staff.

HEALTH

NHS White Paper

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his White Paper on the NHS if he will make a statement describing the proposed role of local authorities in the NHS structure. [29062]

Mr. Milburn: Local authorities are indispensable partners to the National Health Service in the tasks of improving health and delivering high quality services. The White Paper "The New NHS" sets out how health authorities and local authorities will be expected to work together.

Cannabis and Ecstasy

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has conducted into the effect on health of long-term use of (a) cannabis and (b) ecstasy. [30153]

Ms Jowell: The Department has commissioned two reviews of research, one on cannabis and one on ecstasy. No primary research has been commissioned.

Brain-damaged Children

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from (a) parents and (b) doctors concerning a possible link between vaccinations, antibiotics and brain damage in children. [29259]

Ms Jowell: We have not received any representations from doctors about a possible link between vaccinations, antibiotics and brain damage and have recently received correspondence from one parent on this subject. The United Kingdom health departments' memorandum

"Immunisation against Infectious Disease" states in paragraph 7.6 that treatment with antibiotics is not a contraindication to immunisation.

We are not aware of any concern among the medical profession about this matter, nor of any scientific evidence about such a link. The incidence of adverse reactions following immunisation have been found to be the same in children with or without the following mild illnesses: upper respiratory tract infection; diarrhoea or otitis media (an ear infection). It seems likely that some of the children in these studies were taking antibiotics around the time of immunisation.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30006]

Ms Jowell: The Department has made provision for subsidised nursery places and an on-site holiday play scheme in London, and an on-site nursery and a holiday play scheme, funded jointly with the Benefits Agency, in Leeds.

The Department provides subsidies as follows:

(a) 50 per cent. of the cost of 25 nursery places in London and £30 per place per week for staff using a 30 place on-site nursery in Leeds;

(b) £10.68 per place per day at a 24 place holiday play scheme in its headquarters building in London;

around £6 per place per day at a 40 place holiday play scheme jointly funded by the Department of Health and the Benefits Agency in Leeds;

£6 per place for National Health Service Pensions Agency staff at a holiday play scheme in Fleetwood.

The following organisations are used by the Department of Health for child care:

Parents at Work'

Kinderquest Ltd.

Nurseryworks Ltd.

Radius Educational Services Ltd.

Childcare Partners Ltd.

Westminster Children's Society

' information service.

Child care vouchers are available to staff in the South and North Thames Regional Offices of the NHS Executive.

Drug Users

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the NHS expenditure on services to drug users in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [30246]

Mr. Milburn: Health authorities purchase drug services from general Hospital and Community Health Service allocations. Funding for drug services is also provided under a special allocation, which is a contribution, not a cash limit. Health authorities can draw on general allocations for further money if they so decide, and will also fund treatment from other budgets. Health authorities are not required to return records of their total expenditure on drug services and a total figure for annual National Health Service expenditure on drug services is not held centrally.

In each of the last five years, the special allocation for drug services was as follows:

Year	£ million
1997–98	37.19
1996–97	33.39
1995–96	26.75
1994–95	25.50
1993–94	24.37

As part of its contribution to the Cross-Departmental Review of Illegal Drugs, the Department is working with the Substance Misuse Advisory Service to commission a survey of health and local authority expenditure on drug services in the financial year 1996–97. The results of the survey will inform the development of the new Anti-Drugs Strategy.

Nursery Education

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department issues concerning the ratio of staff to pupils expected in (a) private and (b) local authority nursery classes for three to five year-olds. [30432]

Mr. Boateng: Early years settings registered with local authority social services departments under the Children Act 1989 to provide day care are expected to comply with the adult to child ratios set out in Guidance and Regulations issued by the Department. These recommend an adult to child ratio of 1:4 for children aged 2–3 years and 1:8 for children aged 3–8 years regardless of whether they are managed by the private sector or the local authority.

Under the Children Act 1989, where half the staff in these settings are qualified teachers (as recognised by department for Education and Employment) and support is provided by nursery assistants with qualifications in child care and education (and the setting is open during the school term to provide nursery education for 3–5 year olds), nurseries may apply a ratio of 2:26. I understand from my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment that the Department of Education Circular 2/73 on nursery education in maintained schools recommends an adult to child ratio of 2:26 for nursery classes attached to primary schools where one adult is a qualified teacher and the other a qualified nursery assistant. It also suggests reception classes should make provision for 4 year olds comparable to that found in nursery classes. There are no recommended adult to child ratios for schools in the independent sector.

DfEE and the Department of Health will shortly issue a joint consultation document which tackles the current diverse arrangements for the regulation of early education and child care, including the issue of adult to child ratios. We intend to introduce a more uniform system of regulation following this consultation.

NHS Trusts (Dismissals)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names of the appointees to NHS trusts who have been dismissed in the last three years and the reasons for their dismissals; and if he will make a statement. [30410]

Mr. Milburn: No National Health Service trust chairmen or non-executives have been removed from office in the last three years.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28935]

Mr. Dobson [holding answer 10 February 1998]: I undertook seven engagements by car (all within London); four engagements by train; there were no other engagements by any other mode of transport. In addition, I made daily trips to and from my office by car.

Buildings Refurbishment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will make a statement. [26603]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Total Departmental expenditure, including agencies, on refurbishment of its buildings, building fabric and building services is £3.63 million (1995–96), £4.73 million (1996–97), £0.93 million (1997–98 to December 1997) and £3.56 million (1997–98 full year estimate). Prior to 1 April 1996, some refurbishment costs were met directly by Property Holdings, Department of Environment. The costs quoted represent the total expenditure on our building services and fabric excluding routine maintenance work and repairs. The expenditure represents many individual projects, some large, some small, spread across the whole Departmental estate rather than a single project in one particular building.

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26602]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Estimates for the Department of Health expenditure on newspapers and magazines for the years requested are given in the table:

Year	£000
(a) 1995–96	354
(b) 1996–97	[1]368
(c) 1997–98 to date (31/1/98)	309
(d) 1997–98 full year	320

[1] Regional Offices became part of the Department of Health in 1996; their expenditure on newspapers and magazines has been included in the Department's costs for 1996–97 and subsequent years.

Copies of a list of newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis by the Department of Health have been placed in the Library.

Nurses

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified nurses are currently registered as unemployed and seeking work (a) in England and (b) North Shropshire. [29970]

Mrs. Liddell: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Owen Paterson, dated 18 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question on how many qualified nurses are registered as unemployed and seeking work.

The information you have requested can only be derived from the monthly claimant count of people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance or National Insurance credits). Essentially, all people who were claiming these benefits on the count day are counted.

The information requested is given in the table:

Number of nurses claiming unemployment benefit by occupation, January 1998

	[1]Sought	[2]Usual
England	1,180	1,308

[1] Sought occupation: a claimant has to specify the occupation in which they are seeking work.

[2] Usual occupation: a claimant does not have to provide details of usual or previous occupation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Radio Communications Agency

Mr. Breed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the promotion criteria within the Radio Communications Agency; what probation term successful candidates have to complete before they are eligible for promotion; what changes in this policy there have been since agency status was established; and what consultations were held with the trade unions on these policies. [29677]

Mrs. Roche: In order to secure promotion, a candidate must satisfy the Selection Panel that he/she has the skills and experience required for the post at the higher range/grade and is the best candidate for the post.

A probation term must be progressing satisfactorily in order that the probationer may be considered for another post. "The Guide" to employment in the DTI provides that a probationer may complete his/her probation period (normally 12 months) in a higher grade where the officer is promoted through normal promotion procedures while on probation.

Since achieving agency status in 1990. the Agency's promotion procedures have changed three times, on which consultations were held with the trade unions. The position of probationers has arisen only in the last few months and has been the subject of discussions with the trade unions. Revised procedures for the filling of vacancies in the Agency are currently being discussed with the trade Unions.

Mr. Breed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many claims for unfair dismissal from the Radio Communications Agency have been taken before industrial tribunals; what were the outcomes; and what compensation has been paid. [29676]

Mrs. Roche: One claim for unfair dismissal was taken before an Industrial Tribunal. The case was dismissed and therefore no compensation was paid.

Export Licences

Mr. Drew: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licences have been granted for the export of military, security or police equipment to Kenya in the last two years. [25133]

Mrs. Roche: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the results are as follows. Between 1 January 1996 and 12 January 1998, 79 standard individual licences and 37 Open Individual Licences were issued for the export to end users or consignees in Kenya of goods controlled by Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of goods (Control) Order (the so-called "Military List"). The entry in the legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating.

Rating	Standard individual export licences	Open individual export licences
ML2	2	0
ML3	13	0
ML4	4	2
ML5	2	3
ML6	8	2
ML9	1	0
ML10	7	12
ML11	8	2
ML13	1	4
ML15	2	0
ML18	0	1
ML22	0	1

Number of individual licences issued for exports to Kenya covering goods on the Military List

Rating	Standard individual export licences	Open individual export licences
PL5001	1	1
PL5002	0	1
PL5017	1	2
PL5021	3	0

Individual export licences often cover a range of goods, controlled under several entries in the legislation. Where this is so the licence is included in the Table in the total shown against each of the relevant ratings.

This information should be considered in light of my answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the countries to which goods covered by Category PL5001 under Export of Goods (Control) orders have been exported since 1 May 1997. [28001]

Mrs. Roche: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated, and the following results were obtained. Between 2 May 1997 and 12 January 1998, individual export licences covering goods controlled under entry PL5001 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order are recorded as having been issued to the following countries: Australia, Canada, Cyprus, France, Germany, Jamaica, Jordan, Malaysia, the Republic of Ireland, Singapore, South Korea, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Arab Emirates and the United States of America.

However, this information should be considered in light of the answer I gave on 30 October 1997 to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint), Official Report, columns 870–71.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received on the cost of the use of mobile telephones. [30190]

Mrs. Roche: I have received very few representations on the cost of the use of mobile telephones; these are normally made to the Director General of Telecommunications. In March 1997, following concerns over prices expressed by consumers, OFTEL published a Consultative Document on the Price of Calls to Mobile Phones. This report sought views on the proposal that the price to consumers of calling mobile phones on the Vodaphone and Cellnet networks was too high. OFTEL is considering the responses it received to the consultation and is expected to announce its conclusions shortly.

Medical Research Council

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when representatives from her Department last met the Chief Executive of the Medical Research Council. [30473]

Mr. Battle: I met Professor Radda, Chief Executive of the Medical Research Council (MRC) at the end of January. The Director General of the Research Councils, Sir John Cadogan, and the Director of the Science and Engineering Base Group attended the February meeting of the MRC Council. Sir John Cadogan also holds regular monthly meetings with the Chief Executives of all seven Research Councils, most recently on 12 February.

Transco

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when officials from her Department last met the General Manager of Transco East Midlands. [30187]

Mr. Battle: My officials have not met the General Manager of Transco East Midlands, but regularly meet national Transco officials as I did recently.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she last met the Chief Executive of Transco. [30186]

Mr. Battle: Ministers meet the Chief Executive of BG plc (of which Transco is part) from time to time (as I did recently).

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the effect of the Monopolies and Mergers' Commission inquiry on the operation of Transco. [30189]

Mr. Battle: Assessment of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report into the Transco price control is a matter for the Director General of Gas Supply to whom the report was submitted.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Burns: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the future of the KONVER programme; and what alternative funding the Government will make available to help those made redundant from defence related industries when the KONVER programme ends. [27539]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The current framework for Structural Fund Community Initiatives is due to expire at the end of 1999. In its communication, "Agenda 2000" published on 16 July 1997, the European Commission outlined its approach to a new regulatory framework for the Structural Funds for the period 2000–06. The Commission has proposed that a new Objective 2 should replace current Community Initiatives that address industrial restructuring, such as KONVER, and it expected to publish the new draft Structural Funds regulations in March or April. In negotiating these regulations, the UK will press for an Objective 2 which allows Member States to target funds effectively at areas of need—such as those which have been subject to industrial restructuring. The Government are currently undertaking regional consultations with interested parties to hear their views on the implications in the UK of Structural Fund reform.

Consultants

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her estimate of the expenditure of her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on external consultants in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year; and if she will also estimate the cost savings resulting from the employment of such consultants for each of the above years. [26593]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The value of contracts let centrally to external consultants for 1995–96 was £4.37 million, for 1996–97 was £1.13 million, and for 1997–98 to date is £1.21 million. The estimated forecast for the full year 1997–98 is £4.54 million.

It is not possible to identify separately any cost savings resulting from the engagement of external consultants, whose work typically contributed to broader consultation exercises.

Information in respect of expenditure by non-departmental public bodies on external consultants is not kept centrally and could not be compiled without disproportionate cost.

The above information excludes external consultancies let independently by the Department's Executive Agencies. I have asked Agency Chief Executives to reply separately.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 February 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the estimated expenditure on external consultants and the estimated cost savings resulting from their employment by the Insolvency Service.

The costs of external consultants engaged by The Service are as follows:

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98 (to date)	Forecast 1997–98 (full year)
Shreeveport Ltd	460,492	—	—	—
Bevan Ashford	35,653	—	—	—
Bond Pearce	6,392	—	—	—
Ernst & Young	7,284	—	—	—
Ibbotson Twigg	84,890	—	—	—
Bowrings	2,937	—	—	—
Impact	122,311	—	—	—
Psychological Services	—	13,512	12,128	16,240
Birmingham Tec	—	—	2,562	5,000
Kathy Beavers	—	—	7,612	10,200
Beamans Management Consultants	—	23,427	7,593	11,353
TQM International	—	—	2,514	7,914

The expenditure in 1995–96 was principally in respect of The Service's contracting out study. Ministers decided that the administrative work of Official Receivers should remain in-house, and in 1996–97 a saving of 8% on the unit cost of case administration, representing some £2 million that year (and subsequently), was achieved.

Expenditure in 1996–97 and in the current year principally relates to The Service's commitment to the achievement of IIP accreditation and to the introduction of a new grading and pay system for Service staff.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 February 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about expenditure on external consultants.

The last consultant employed by this Agency was in 1995/96, at a cost of £3,800. No consultant has been employed by us in the two subsequent years. The 1995/96 consultancy was a rather small exercise and the resultant cost savings cannot readily be estimated.

Letter from Roger Louth to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 February 1998:

1. Margaret Beckett, President of the Board of Trade, has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to your Parliamentary Question about expenditure on external consultants.

2. Agency expenditure is as follows:

Financial year	Expenditure
1995/96	256,000
1996/97	860,831
1997/98 to date	1,478,698
1997/98 full year	2,359,819

3. All the expenditure involves the provision of strategic advice. Savings resulting from decisions taken in response to such advice will not be quantifiable for some time. When engaging external consultants "value for money" is the Agency's prime consideration.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 February 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade on consultancy contracts; the information you require is as follows:

Expenditure on external consultants

£000

Year	Expenditure
1995/96	130
1996/97	1,000
1997/98 to date	900
1997/98 full year estimate	1,200
	(year to date—9 months grossed up)

Consultants have only been employed—principally in the field of IT—where they represented the most cost-effective, and in some cases the only, solution to deliver a defined business benefit in excess of their cost.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 February 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of trade about use of external consultants.

In 1995/6 the Patent Office spent £138,000 on external consultants and in 1996/7 £124,000. So far it has spent £39,000 in 1997/8 and that is likely to be the total spend. There have been reductions in staff and accommodation costs and efficiency gains through streamlined work practices consequent on these consultancy studies. It is difficult to quantify savings in each and every case but reductions in accommodation needs have, for example, led to continuing annual savings of nearly £140,000 from 1995/6.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 February 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of trade to reply, in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS), to your question about expenditure on external consultants.

The ETS did not assume responsibility for letting its own contracts until it gained agency status on 1 April 1997. Expenditure on external consultants in the financial year 1997/98 has so far amounted to £64,250.30. The figures you requested for expenditure in earlier years are covered by replies from the Department for Education and Employment (for the former Employment Department) and the Department of Trade and Industry. Planned expenditure for this financial year in full is estimated at £72,250.30.

Savings resulting from decisions taken in response to consultancy work will not be quantifiable for some time. When engaging external consultants "value for money" is the Agency's first consideration.

I hope that this is helpful.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Serious Fraud Office

34. Mr. Lock: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the steps being taken by the Serious Fraud Office to tackle fraud in the City. [28779]

The Attorney-General: The Serious Fraud Office aims to deter fraud and maintain confidence in UK business and financial institutions through effective investigation and prosecution of serious and complex fraud. Since 5 April 1997, the SFO has prosecuted 36 defendants, of whom 34 have been convicted.

Crown Prosecution Service

35. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Attorney-General what is the present position concerning the review of the Crown Prosecution Service; and if he will make a statement. [28780]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my oral answer today to the hon. Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. Thomas).

36. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Attorney-General what has been the trend in the time it takes the Crown Prosecution Service to bring criminal cases before the courts over the last six months; and what steps he is taking to reduce the time taken. [28781]

The Attorney-General: Data relating only to the Crown Prosecution Service are not available. However, the Lord Chancellor's Department collects data on the time between offence and completion of magistrates courts proceedings.

The latest available figures from offence to completion show that, in June 1997, the average time for defendants in indictable cases (including triable either way cases) was 136 days. This is a rise from 133 days in June 1996 and 132 days in June 1995.

Data collected by the Court Service show that the average time between committal and arraignment or start of the first main hearing in the Crown Court in 1997 was 12 weeks. This is a fall from 13 weeks in 1996 and 16 weeks in 1995.

The Government are determined to tackle delays in the criminal justice system as a whole. It will achieve this through the measures contained in the Crime and Disorder Bill, which will be reinforced by the extension of the statutory time limits regime.

Iraq

37. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Attorney-General what representations from international lawyers he has received as to the legality of a preventive war against Iraq. [28783]

The Attorney-General: I have received no such representations. The Government are aware of the requirements of international law.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Attorney-General what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30023]

The Attorney-General: The provision made by my Departments is as follows:

The Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers

The Treasury Solicitor's Department makes provision, also open to staff in my own office, for the children of its staff to use the Westminster Holiday Playscheme. This scheme is run on behalf of the Cabinet Office. The Department meet half the daily cost of attendance.

No subsidy is provided for nursery places nor are child care vouchers made available.

The Government Property Lawyers

The Government Property Lawyers Agency avails itself of similar arrangements. The children of staff are able to use a holiday play scheme organised and run by Crown Departments in Taunton. Child care vouchers are not made available.

The Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office does not provide child care facilities or subsidies. However, if parents are required to make a temporary change to their normal working routine, for example, if an investigator is required to be away from home overnight or for a more protracted period, the practice is to reimburse them for the additional cost of child care.

The Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service provides no child care facilities or creches at any of its premises. Financial support, through subsidies, is provided to staff who meet certain eligibility criteria towards the cost of:

(a) child care for infants below school age; and

(b) school age children attending after-school clubs and holiday play schemes.

These facilities are provided by numerous organisations throughout the Service's Areas.

The amount of the subsidy, up to a maximum of 50%, is calculated by reference to the individual's salary and the level of costs incurred. Child care vouchers are not currently provided.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef Ban

8. Mr. Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will assess the advantages of withdrawing the ban on T-bone steaks and oxtails. [28752]

Dr. John Cunningham: The scientific evidence is kept under regular review.

Beef Consumption

16. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives he is supporting to promote the consumption of British beef. [28760]

Mr. Rooker: The Government have continued to support various initiatives to help promote consumption and restore consumer confidence in beef. As a result, we have seen significant improvements in the level of beef consumption, indicating the return of consumer confidence.

Unpasteurised Milk

17. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy with regard to the sale and consumption of unpasteurised milk and milk products. [28761]

Mr. Rooker: We are reviewing policy in England, Wales and Northern Ireland in respect of unpasteurised cows' drinking milk. We are also currently undertaking microbiological surveillance of other unpasteurised milk for drinking, and of certain raw milk products, and will consider the policy implications in the light of the results.

Livestock Farming

18. Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the elected President of the National Farmers Union to discuss livestock farming. [28762]

Dr. John Cunningham: I met the newly elected President of the NFU on 10 February and we discussed a number of issues including livestock farming.

Arable Area Payments

19. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was paid in area payments in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and what is the policy objective of making these payments. [28763]

Mr. Morley: Payments in the UK under the 1997 Arable Area Payments Scheme are estimated to be £1,216 million. The European Union introduced the Scheme to compensate arable farmers for the reduction in support prices arising from the 1992 reform of the Common Agricultural Policy.

Pesticides

20. Ms Moran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice his Department gives farmers on the safe use of pesticides. [28764]

Mr. Rooker: The statutory Code of Practice for the Safe Use of Pesticides on Farms and Holdings, known as the "Green Code", provides comprehensive guidance to farmers.

Fisheries

21. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that vessels of applicant countries for membership of the EU are not allowed to fish within 200 nautical miles of the British coast or within the median line with neighbouring states if closer than this following their entry into the EU. [28765]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 686.

Farm Assurance Schemes

22. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the advantages to farmers of farm assurance schemes. [28767]

Mr. Morley: I very much welcome the initiative of the food industry, including farmers, in tackling consumer concerns on food through the creation of farm assurance schemes. To command the confidence of consumers, such schemes must have measurable standards acceptable to all and be subject to independent third party verification to internationally recognised standards. My officials have been advising, and will continue to advise, the industry on these issues.

Food Standards Agency

23. Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the role of the Food Standards Agency in advising the public on nutrition. [28768]

Mr. Rooker: Our proposals on the Food Standards Agency are set out in the White Paper "The Food Standards Agency: A Force for Change" (Cm 3830) which was published for consultation on 14 January.

BSE

24. Judy Mallaber: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will allow officials in his Department to volunteer their own evidence to Lord Justice Philip's inquiry into BSE. [28769]

Mr. Rooker: Certainly. The Permanent Secretary has already informed all members of the Department that they should feel entirely free to make representations directly to the Inquiry.

26. Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his current estimate of the total cost to (a) his Department, (b) the farming industry and (c) the meat processing industry of the BSE crisis. [28771]

Mr. Rooker: The estimated cost to the Department of the BSE crisis is £3.7 billion over the period 1996/97 to 1999/2000. The Department has commissioned an independent study with the aim of providing a comprehensive assessment of the economic impact of BSE across the whole UK economy and within particular regions. It is intended for publication soon.

Common Fisheries Policy

27. Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the Government's priorities with regard to reform of the common fisheries policy. [28772]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood (Mr. Wilkinson) on 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 675.

Cattle Traceability Scheme

28. Mr. Lock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the cattle traceability scheme to be operational. [28773]

Mr. Rooker: During the summer. This will be well in advance of the EU deadline of 31 December 1999.

Beef Export Ban

29. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made towards achieving a lifting of the beef export ban. [28774]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer I gave to the hon. Member for Rochdale (Ms Fitzsimons) earlier today about the Export Certified Herds Scheme.

We have also submitted proposals to the Commission for a Date Based Export Scheme to permit the export of UK beef from cattle born after 1 August 1996. The Scientific Steering Committee has given a positive response to the principle of this scheme. Following further discussion with the Commission, officials formally responded, on 29 January, to the Scientific Steering Committee's opinion. We await the Commission's response.

Countryside Access

Sir David Madel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultation has taken place with the farming community with regard to the Government's proposed countryside access legislation. [28770]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Reigate (Mr. Blunt) on 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 682.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30022]

Mr. Morley: Staff in the Department, including the Agencies, now have access to 130 nursery places at six sites throughout the country and to holiday play schemes at 11 sites. Subsidies for both nurseries and play schemes vary depending upon local circumstances but are generally in the range 25 to 50 per cent. A proportion of the child care places are in inter-departmental nurseries where the Department is not the lead Department and has not therefore awarded the contract. Organisations with which the Department has its own contracts for nursery provision are Childcare Enterprise Ltd. and Kinderquest Ltd. Child care vouchers are not available to staff.

Days-at-Sea Allocations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will institute an appeals system for fishermen dissatisfied with their days at sea allocation. [30428]

Mr. Morley: No, such a system would not be relevant to the present situation. In discussions with the fishing industry, the Government have invited Producer Organisations in the beam trawl and pelagic segments to manage their own fishing effort to meet MAGP IV targets.

Under these arrangements, it will be for Producer Organisations themselves to determine the basis on which this is done. I shall be announcing further details shortly.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will permit beam trawlers operating in Area 7 to fish for non-pressure stocks when their annual days at sea allocation has been exhausted; and if he will make a statement. [30427]

Mr. Morley: No. The effort allocations for the beam trawl segment in 1998, further details of which I shall be announcing shortly, apply to all fishing activity by the vessels concerned.

Beam Trawler Effort Limitation Scheme

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will meet the hon. Member for Totnes and representatives of the Brixham Beam Trawler Fleet to discuss the Beam Trawler Effort Limitation scheme. [30425]

Mr. Morley: I am planning to meet industry representatives, including the Chief Executive of the South Western Fish Producers' Organisation, during my visit to the South West next week. I shall be happy to discuss this or any other matters of current concern with them.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has had from (a) the Dutch Government, (b) the Spanish Government and (c) the French Government regarding the Beam Trawler Effort Limitation scheme. [30426]

Mr. Morley: None. Under Council Decision 97/413/EC, it is for individual Member States to decide, subject to Commission approval, the means by which to achieve their objectives under the fourth Multi-Annual Guidance Programme (MAGP IV).

Meat Imports

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 13 February 1998, Official Report, column 436, on meat imports, if he will provide a breakdown by country of the imports listed as other. [30459]

Mr. Rooker: Overseas Trade Statistics shows that small values of beef, sheep meat, pig meat (including bacon and ham) and poultry meat were dispatched for import into the UK between January and October 1997 from the countries in the table. The values are provisional and subject to amendment. They will be subject to a degree of statistical error. The overall level of errors will be low, but these errors will have a much greater proportional effect on countries with small values of trade. Therefore, great care is needed when interpreting the data in the tables as they will inevitably include a number of errors.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many contracts of a value greater than £10,000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30100]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30097]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The tables set out the numbers of staff in the Department and its Agencies by region. Gross salaries (basic salary plus any pay additions and specialist allowances) have been used for the wage bill.

The Farming and Rural Conservation Agency has not been in existence for a 12 month period so it is not possible to provide salary data on an annual basis. In the month to 31 December 1997, the gross salaries amounted to £1,122,500.

In core-MAFF and its Agencies, London Weighting and the London Allowance no longer exist as separate allowances. On 1 April 1997, both allowances were consolidated into the basic pay of those staff receiving them.

Genetically Modified Soya

Mr. Singh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the percentage of baby food products sold in the United Kingdom in 1997 which contained unlabelled genetically modified soya. [30417]

Mr. Rooker: This information is not recorded. However, the Food Manufacturers Federation, the British Retail Consortium and the Institute of Grocery Distribution announced in November 1997 that their members, which include all the major food manufacturers and retailers, would be labelling products containing genetically modified soya or maize from January this year.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what (a) studies and (b) evaluations have been carried out by his Department into (i) the microbiological standards of the finished product from slaughterhouses and cutting plants and (ii) the scores achieved by those plants under his hygiene assessment system. [30214]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 February 1998]: No studies or evaluations have been carried out by the Ministry with the sole objective of measuring the microbiological standards of the finished product from slaughterhouses and cutting plants, against their hygiene Assessment System (HAS) scores. However, as part of a wider MAFF funded research project, Bristol University has published results (Veterinary Record (1996) 139, 587–589, W. R. Hudson, G. C. Mead, M. H. Hinton) of a study which concluded that HAS scores are a useful tool in predicting the ability of an abattoir to produce carcases to sound microbiological status, especially the categories concerned with slaughter and dressing, and personnel and practices.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what microbiological tests are made during the assessment of slaughterhouses and cutting plants under his hygiene assessment system. [30213]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 February 1998]: Microbiological testing does not form part of the assessment of slaughterhouses and cutting plants under the Hygiene Assessment System (HAS) whose scores are a general guide to long-term hygiene performance at meat plants.

Quarantine

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he plans to implement changes in the quarantine requirements for animals coming into this country before the end of 1998; and if he will make a statement. [29743]

Mr. Rooker: The Advisory Group on Quarantine is expected to report by late Spring, after which we plan to hold a full public consultation. Even if the assessment shows that changes to the current quarantine rules appear justified, it is unlikely that any new arrangements could be in place before the end of 1998. It is also possible that any changes could be introduced by EU, rather than national, legislation.

Beef Exports

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has conducted into the relationship between the incidence of BSE in foreign countries and (a) the export of meat and bonemeal from Britain for use in animal feed and (b) the use of similar procedures in the production of meat and bonemeal for animal feed in those countries. [29722]

Mr. Rooker: The Department is not undertaking any such research as it is up to individual countries to conduct their own research. Alternatively, in the case of BSE in EU Member States, the Commission may carry out research centrally.

In a report of a Commission Mission to France between 17 and 21 March 1997, the French authorities are quoted as attributing at least 18 of their BSE cases to consumption of meat and bonemeal of UK origin.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has assessed of damage to the (a) aquatic and (b) soil environments from synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips; where this damage has occurred; what assessment he has made of its implications for fisheries and wildlife; and if he will make a statement. [29728]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 February 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

The Environment Agency is responsible for monitoring of, and assessing any damage to the environment in England and Wales. The Agency has initiated a monitoring programme to determine whether there is evidence of widespread impact on the aquatic environment from all types of sheep dipping compounds, including synthetic pyrethroids. A full report of the findings will be published by the Agency later this year. There has been no specific assessment of effects on soil.

DEFENCE

Iraq

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what support he has received from Poland in respect of the United Kingdom's stance in relation to the crisis with Iraq. [30559]

Mr. George Robertson: I took the opportunity to exchange views with Dr. Janusz Onyszkiewicz, the Polish Defence Minister, during his visit to the UK, from 10 to 12 February, on the crisis in Iraq which has been caused by Saddam Hussein's failure to comply with Security Council resolutions and to cooperate with UNSCOM.

The Government and Poland are clear that the highest priority must be on a diplomatic solution to the crisis. However, the Polish Government support the UK's position that, in the last resort, it may be necessary to consider military action. In that event, the Polish Government have indicated that they would be prepared to make a military contribution, and would be ready to deploy chemical defence specialists to the region.

Dr. Onyszkiewicz and I issued a joint press statement to this effect on 11 February.

Poland is one of a growing number of countries which has either deployed forces to the Gulf to operate alongside US and UK forces or is planning to do so. The precise details of national contributions are properly a matter for the countries concerned, but we understand that Australia already has tanker aircraft and an advance party of troops in the Gulf; that warships from Canada, the Netherlands and Belgium are en route; that New Zealand is planning to deploy troops and surveillance aircraft; and that Denmark, Argentina, Romania, Poland and Norway have indicated they would make military contributions to the coalition. This list is expected to grow.

In addition, many of the Gulf Cooperation Council States and Turkey, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Hungary and the Czech Republic are either providing basing and support for coalition forces or have offered to do so.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to define the objectives of any possible military action against Iraq. [29578]

Mr. George Robertson: The objectives of any possible military action against Iraq have been carefully defined and are as presented:

Our aim is to prevent Saddam from maintaining or developing a Weapons of Mass Destruction (WMD) capability that would threaten the region and international order.

We seek to achieve this by ensuring Saddam's full compliance with UN Security Council Resolutions, including restoration of a fully effective UNSCOM.

We wish to secure his compliance by diplomatic means if possible; but, if these fail, we should be ready to use armed force.

The aim of any military action would be to diminish significantly Saddam's military capabilities, including his ability to deploy, conceal and recreate his WMD capability or threaten his neighbours.

Military action would significantly set back Saddam's WMD programmes, whether or not UNSCOM was immediately reinstated. This would be a better outcome than a "gutted" UNSCOM.

Saddam would be held at continuing risk of further military action if he attempted again to recreate his WMD capability.

Polish Minister of Defence

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his discussions with Poland's Minister of Defence. [30558]

Mr. George Robertson: I was delighted to be able to welcome my colleague Dr. Janusz Onyszkiewicz to the UK during his visit of 10 to 12 February. I am pleased to say that we enjoyed a frank and open discussion, which touched on a wide range of issues of mutual interest.

Naturally, we took the opportunity to exchange views on the crisis in Iraq. Dr. Onyszkiewicz agreed that, while the highest priority must be to find a diplomatic solution, neither the British nor the Polish Government would shrink from the task should it become necessary in the last resort to consider the military option. In that event, Dr. Onyszkiewicz declared Poland's readiness to make a military contribution and that they would be prepared to deploy a team of chemical defence specialists to the region.

Regarding NATO enlargement, we exchanged views on Poland's preparation's for membership of the Alliance and the future role she might play once she is a member. Britain has been a strong supporter of Poland's NATO candidature and our bilateral defence relationship is excellent. I took the opportunity to reinforce our desire to help Poland integrate into the Alliance as smoothly as possible and to explore new avenues for cooperation between the armed forces of Britain and Poland.

We spoke also of the rapidly evolving trilateral UK/Poland/Ukraine defence relationship, which continues to gain momentum. Following the great success of last year's airborne exercise "Cossack Steppe" in the Ukraine, involving British, Polish and Ukrainian forces, we hope to repeat the exercise this year in the UK during May. During our talks, I suggested to Dr. Onyszkiewicz that he visit me again during May so that we might view the exercise together with our colleague General Olexsandr Kuzmuk, the Ukrainian Defence Minister.

Army Messing Contracts

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where NAAFI files and records are currently located which relate to the publicly funded messing contract. [29288]

Mr. Spellar: My Department's files on this issue are held by the Naval Bases and Supply Agency at Bath. NAAFI files and records are a matter for that company, but I understand that files relating to their former contract with my Department are held in more than one location.

Army Medal Office

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about the performance of the Army Medal Office; what is the average time for dealing with applications concerning campaign medals; if he will make extra staffing resources available to the Army Medal Office; if he will introduce a fast track procedure for the processing of applications which takes account of the age and health of the applicant; and if he will make a statement. [29785]

Mr. Spellar: During the period commemorating the end of the Second World War there was a considerable upsurge in requests to the Army Medal Office (AMO). This led to a backlog and a delay of more than 12 months in processing applications. As a consequence my Department received a number of letters from MPs and the public regarding the delay. I have investigated this with the AMO and major efforts are being made to reduce the waiting time which I am pleased to report now stands at 8½ months. We are working to ensure a further reduction. My Department has considered, but decided against, employing extra staff to reduce the waiting time as it would take six months to train new staff fully and would divert experienced staff from their primary task of assessing medal entitlements. The Army Medal Office already has a policy in place for processing applications from those ex-Servicemen over the age of 90 or those who are terminally ill. These cases are processed immediately and normally completed within three weeks of receipt.

Mr. Bernard Grey

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Special Adviser, Mr. Bernard Grey signed the Official Secrets Act. [30257]

Mr. George Robertson: The most recent occasion on which Mr. Bernard Grey signed a declaration acknowledging the provisions of the Official Secrets Act was 6 November 1997.

Drug Smuggling

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedure has to be followed when a commanding officer of the West Indies guard ship and the United States Coast Guard officers on board wish to obtain permission to board a vessel they suspect of being involved in drug smuggling. [30259]

Dr. Reid: Permission must be sought from UK HQ FLEET and the US Coastguard Authority before the West Indies Guard Ship can stop, and her US Law Enforcement Detachment can board and search, a suspect vessel. It is for the US Coastguard Authority to confirm that the flagged state to which the suspect vessel belongs is content for the operation to be undertaken.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the number of requests to board vessels suspected of being involved in drug smuggling made by the commanding officer, (b) the number of requests agreed to, (c) the number of occasions when evidence of drug smuggling was found and (d) the quantities and types of drugs found in respect of the West Indies guard ship for each of the past three years. [30260]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Collaborative Projects

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list defence equipment collaborative projects involving the United Kingdom at 1 April 1997 by country and by projects (a) in production or in service, (b) in the development phase and (c) in the study phase categorised as (i) naval equipment, (ii) land equipment, (iii) missiles, (iv) air systems and (v) other equipment. [29450]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The information requested is contained in the table, which shows those collaborative projects for which a signed Memorandum of Understanding between the participating nations existed at 1 April 1997. One other co-operative project, which is conducted under the auspices of an MOU, has been omitted under exemption 1 (Defence, security and international relations), of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Collaborative Projects Involving the UK at 1 April 1997

Projects in Production or in Service

Naval Equipment

Sea Gnat Decoy System: Denmark/ USA

NATO Ships Inertial Guidance System: Canada/ Netherlands/ Spain

Barra Sonobouy: Australia

Land Equipment

FH 70 Howitzer: Germany/ Italy

M483A1 Artillery Shell: Netherlands/ Turkey/ USA

Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked): Belgium

Multiple Launch Rocket System Phase I: France/ Germany/ Italy/ USA

Multiple Launch Rocket System Phase II: Germany

M3 Amphibious Bridging System: Germany

Dockyard Workers

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what research he has evaluated into the incidence of cancer in nuclear dockyard workers; [29453]

(2) how many (a) past and (b) present Rosyth Dockyard employees have had a full medical check under the Government's health check scheme; [29439]

(3) what action he has taken to investigate the health of workers involved in nuclear work at Rosyth dockyards. [29452]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 16 February 1998]: My Department takes careful account of national and international epidemiological studies concerning radiation workers and of the professional advice of the National Radiological Protection Board. The Ministry of Defence is a major contributor to the National Registry of Radiation Workers, which provides source data for national epidemiological studies.

The numbers of past and present Rosyth Dockyard employees who have received full medical checks cannot be determined without disproportionate cost. Before 1986, all Classified Radiation Workers at Naval Dockyards were given medical examinations before taking up employment and at least every 14 months thereafter, as the law then required. Since the Ionising Radiation Regulations 1985 came into force, annual health reviews by Appointed Doctors have been mandatory for all Classified Radiation Workers; these annual reviews include medical examinations if the Appointed Doctors consider them necessary. Some former and present Rosyth Dockyard radiation workers have sought and received medical counselling, under the scheme available to all Dockyard radiation workers (both classified and unclassified) since 1990 or under the extended scheme which I announced in June 1997.

Nuclear Dosage Records

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what actions he has taken to speed up the handling of requests for nuclear dosage records held by his Department; [29454]

(2) how many nuclear dosage records in his Department are (a) known to be missing and (b) known to be incomplete. [29455]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 16 February 1998]: The law requires my Department to keep radiation dose records for Classified Radiation workers for 50 years (formerly 30 years). There is no reason to believe that any are incomplete or missing.

The law requires radiation records for non-classified radiation workers, with annual doses limited to 15 mSv, to be kept for two years only. My Department still holds many, but not all, of their records.

Classified Radiation Workers' records are maintained by Approved Dosimetry Services at the Atomic Weapons Establishment (Aldermaston) and at DERA Radiation Protection Services (Alverstoke). Most are held in computer formats which can normally be searched rapidly: some are held on microfiche or microfilm which take a little longer to search.

These Approved Dosimetry Services also hold the records of some non-classified radiation workers. But, many of their records are held locally in paper form. Searching for the local records has been a difficult process up to now. To reduce delays, I have instigated a programme to store digital images of these records and to index them on a computer database. The pilot for this project, involving all the local records for former Chatham Radiation Workers, has been completed. By the end of this financial year, I expect the project to incorporate local records from the other Naval nuclear establishments will be covered as soon as possible thereafter.

If an investigation into an incident finds that an employee has been significantly exposed to radiation, the law requires it to be entered into his record. Investigation reports relating to the overexposure of individuals are required to be kept for 50 years (formerly 30 years). This has always been MOD's practice. However, it is impossible to be certain that every minor incident was recorded.

Research Programme

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current value of the defence corporate research programme; and if he will list its technology groups and their research objectives and related technical areas, defined in terms of equipment and technology capabilities. [29522]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: Expenditure on the MOD's Corporate Research Programme for the current financial year (1997–98) will be about £150 million. The programme is divided into 12 Technology Groups and beneath that into a number of Research Objectives, the majority of which are as listed:

(0) Overarching Strategy Studies
- Management
- Strategic Studies

(1) Acoustics, Magnetics and Hydrodynamics
- Technology Group Management
- Technology Group Plans
- Acoustics
- Magnetics
- Hydrodynamics

(2) Chemical and Biological Defence and Medical

- Synthetic Environment Technology
- Human-Machine Interaction, Speech and Visual Technologies
- CIS and Decision Support Technology

(11) Operational Analysis
- Technology Group Management
- Technology Group Strategy
- Methodology/Technique Development.

There are a large number of detailed technical areas which support these Research Objectives. I am withholding details of these, and of several Research Objectives which do not appear in the above list, under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to defence, security and international relations.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies which through (a) the DERA Pathfinder process and (b) other briefings, have shared in his Department's evaluation of defence technological and research priorities; and if he will list those priorities. [29515]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The companies who attended the Pathfinder 1997 conference are as follows:

As a normal part of Departmental business, there is a wide range of interactions between officials and companies which contribute to the evaluation of defence technological and research priorities. These working level contacts are not recorded centrally.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by (i) subject and (ii) current value the projects supported by his Department's applied research programme in 1997 indicating work (a) let with the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and (b) work carried out by industry through extramural contracts let by DERA. [29518]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: During 1997, applied research to the gross value of about £420 million, of which over 99.5 per cent. by value was placed with DERA, was authorised to support the following Technology areas:

Structural Materials and Structural Effects Analysis
Signature Related Materials and Materials for Smart Structures
Electronic Materials
Photonic/Optical Materials and Devices
Energetic Materials
Chemical and Biological Materials
Computing Technologies
Computer Applications & Information Processing Human Sciences
Operating Environmental Issues
Lethality & Platform Protection
Propulsion & Powerplants
Design Aspects—Platforms and Weapons
Electronic Warfare
Signature Control and Signature Reduction
Sensor Systems
Guidance and Control Systems
Simulators, Trainers and Synthetic Environments
Integration and Other System Issues
Communications and CIS related Technologies
Personnel Protection Measures
Manufacturing Processes/Design Tools/Techniques.

I am withholding the more detailed information requested under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to defence, security and international relations.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the balance and scope of his Department's applied research programme was last received by the Defence Research Council; [29520]

(2) if he will list the members of the Defence Research Council. [29519]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The membership of the Defence Research Committee (DRC) is made up of individuals holding the following posts:

Chief Scientific Adviser: Chairman

Vice Chief Defence Staff

Deputy Chief of Defence Staff (Systems)

Deputy Under Secretary of State (Science and Technology)

Deputy Chief of Defence Staff (Programmes and Personnel)

Deputy Under Secretary of State (Resources Programmes and Finance)

Deputy Chief of Defence Procurement (Operations)

Deputy Chief of Defence Procurement (Support)

Director Intelligence Scientific and Technical.

Representatives from Her Majesty's Treasury, the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and the Chairman of the Defence Scientific Advisory Council are normally also invited to attend each meeting.

The DRC meets twice a year to review the totality of the non-nuclear defence research programme, including the applied research programme. The Committee last met on 5 November 1997.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has established a national programme to bring together industry, both civil and defence, the academic community and the DERA on collaborative research projects of common interest; what percentage of project costs are made from Government sources; and what the programme's current budget is. [29513]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: MOD plays a leading part in the Government's Foresight initiative which seeks, inter alia, to bring industry, academia and Government together for their mutual benefit. Specifically, MOD is heavily involved in the Foresight Defence and Aerospace Panel, DASP.

DASP Technology Working Parties were set up in eight technology areas which MOD, industry and academia jointly regard as high priority. Their task was to consider the best way forward on a national basis in those technologies. Six have reported already and a further two are expected by mid-1998. A common theme to be found in each of the working party reports is the need for some better means of harmonising technology priorities between Government, industry and academia. A proposal has been made that National Advisory Committees be set up to achieve this aim, under DASP oversight. The MOD fully supports this initiative and is working within the DASP to devise a 5 year plan for the appropriate development of these Committees.

MOD sees considerable value in fostering dialogue and networking, where there are areas of common interest, among those communities within Government, industry and academia that formulate the requirements for, and deliver, research programmes. MOD also makes a small, but significant, contribution to Foresight panels other than the DASP and is supporting the Society of British Aerospace Companies' Foresight Action initiative through programme alignment.

These activities will also be appropriately aligned with National Defence Industry Council initiatives.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the individuals, with their qualifications, who currently review the defence corporate research programme to identify areas of potential pullthrough into the applied research programme. [29516]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: Pullthrough from the Corporate Research Programme, CRP, to the Applied Research Programme, ARP, and other programmes is actively encouraged at all levels. Pullthrough takes different forms depending on circumstances. For example, where a CRP project becomes sufficiently applied that it is deemed to be suitable for Applied Research funding, an agreed pullthrough plan will be drawn up between the respective CRP and ARP customers. Continuous dialogue between CRP customers, their stakeholders and Operational Requirements military customers and their supporting scientific staffs identify and agree technology areas and timescales for such pullthrough.

Secondary pullthrough also occurs within the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, where a common research team might typically work on both generic long term CRP projects and shorter term ARP projects. In this instance, technology and knowledge continually feeds directly from the CRP to ARP via the research scientist involved.

Information on the individuals involved in pullthrough activity, both informally and formally, is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for the defence corporate research programme (a) scientists from his Department and academic institutions who are currently involved in peer review and (b) the functions of the customer advisory groups, together with current membership and qualifications. [29517]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: Peer review forms a vital component in the selection of quality and relevant projects forming the Corporate Research Programme. Review occurs at various stages within the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, DERA, where senior scientists select projects from sectors within DERA to form a portfolio of bids. Final peer review typically involves detailed assessment of proposal quality, military relevance, value for money and collaborative opportunities, including wealth creation.

The peer review teams differ between DERA technology groups but would normally include; two or three eminent academics with a long association with MOD research programmes, often from the Defence Science Advisory Council, MOD representatives from the central scientific, operational requirements and procurement areas; other MOD HQ scientific staff; DERA scientists, and, if applicable, representatives from DTI and industry. Individuals are selected on the basis of their track record and particular knowledge and expertise in the specific subject areas. Information on the very large number of individuals involved is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Customer Advisory Groups exist to provide guidance on the longer-term focus of research, to ensure that the products of the research are in line with the requirements expressed by the stakeholders. As such, their composition varies as a function of the specific technology group. Composition would typically comprise staff from central scientific and technical intelligence, operational requirements and procurement areas. Operational Requirements representation would include those with Applied Research Programme customer responsibilities to maximise future pullthrough opportunities.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) national and (b) international collaboration has been achieved under the defence research programme's Beacon fund. [29514]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The Beacon Fund is aimed at encouraging research collaboration between DERA and industry or academia. It was set up in 1996 as a subset of the Corporate Research Programme, with a £2 million annual budget planned for worthwhile proposals. Such has been the demand that this budget was raised to £4 million in 1997.

There are currently 23 active Beacon projects spanning nearly all areas of DERA's work. The total committed cost to MOD of these projects is around £12 million; industry and academia are committed to nearly twice as much. About three-quarters of this is from national initiatives, with the remainder from international initiatives.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30014]

Mr. Spellar: My Department and its agencies currently provide 13 workplace nurseries offering some 500 fulltime places, as well as a number of holiday play schemes. This is in line with Civil Service policy to establish child care support arrangements for staff where there is a business case and value for money justification. This enables us to help many of our staff to combine their working lives with family responsibilities. Child care vouchers are not issued to MOD staff. Parents are required to make a contribution to the running costs of child care facilities. Details of the Department's expenditure on child care support are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Organisations currently providing child care services to the MOD are:

Busy Bees Nurseries Ltd.
Childcare Enterprises Ltd.
Going Solo Ltd.
Kinderquest Ltd.
Little Darling Childcare
Mini Mariner Nursery
Pixieland Daycare Nurseries
Yeovilteenies Nursery.

Defence Technology Strategy

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the activities and costs of his Department's defence technology strategy; and if he will make a statement. [29523]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The Department's technology strategy is carried forward by a programme of research and technology demonstration incorporating, wherever possible, collaborative work with industry, academia or allies.

The programme consists of three principle elements:

1. An Applied Research Programme, ARP, valued at about £420 million. This programme aims to provide technical options at quantified cost and risk for the formulation of operational requirements that best meet the needs of UK armed forces. It applies to equipment planned to enter service over the next 20 years.

2. A Corporate Research Programme, CRP, valued at about £150 million, whose primary purpose is to sustain and develop the defence technology base by building on world-wide science and technology. The research includes technologies needed to underpin the systems-oriented work of the ARP; generic technologies which have wide applications across many environments or users; and innovative research which is speculative in nature aimed at MOD's future capabilities. It also provides the means by which the potential military utility of emerging technologies can be investigated and demonstrated at an early stage.

3. A Technology Demonstration Programme valued at about £50 million which is primarily intended to reduce areas of high technical risk associated with the known requirements for future equipment, through establishing design options. It is largely driven by procurement pull rather than technology push, and is generally in support of identified equipment or systems applications. It is for the most part let competitively with industry.

There are, in addition, some small elements valued at about £17 million in total directed towards collaborative work with academia (joint grants scheme) and Europe (European transonic wind tunnel).

Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts of a value greater than £10,000 his Department has with companies in (a) London, (b) South East England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the total value of such contracts for each area. [30073]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The information requested is not available in precisely the format requested. The number and value of current prime contracts valued in excess of £10,000 in Financial Year 1996–97 in the following locations is listed below:

	Number of contracts	Value of contracts (£)
(a) London	4,122	3,010,656,875
(b) the South East of England	13,337	24,966,057,325
(c) England	44,340	62,777,373,141
(d) Scotland	3,036	3,191,535,617
(e) Wales	1,142	511,535,442
(f) Northern Ireland	342	564,437,755

This information should be regarded as indicative as it relates only to current defence prime contracts valued in excess of £10,000 in Financial Year 1996–97. It does not include defence sub-contracts or contracts placed by Trading Fund Defence Agencies as this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of current research contracts of a value greater than £10,000 sourced at sites in (a) London, (b) the South East of England, (c) England,

(d) Scotland, (e) Wales, and (f) Northern Ireland; and what is the forecast expenditure on such projects in each area. [30129]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The information requested is not available in precisely the format requested. The number of current research contracts valued in excess of £10,000 in Financial Year 1996–97 in the following locations are listed:

	Number of contracts
London	105
The South East of England	330
England	844
Scotland	36
Wales	5
Northern Ireland	2

This information should be regarded as indicative as it relates only to extant defence research prime contracts valued in excess of £10,000 in Financial Year 1996–97. It does not include defence sub-contracts or contracts placed by Trading Fund Defence Agencies, except for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, as this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Information regarding the forecast expenditure on such research projects in each area is not held centrally. However, the latest figures available from the Defence Analytical Services Agency for the breakdown of defence research and development expenditure by region are contained in Section 1.6 of the UK Defence Statistics 1997, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many companies based in (a) London, (b) the South East of England, (c) England, (d) Scotland, (e) Wales and (f) Northern Ireland currently supply his Department with armaments; and what was the value of such supplies in each area in the last year for which figures are available. [30130]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The information requested is not available precisely in the form requested. The number of defence contractors with current prime contracts in the following locations in Financial Year 1996–97 is as in the table:

	No of contractors
(a) London	1,526
(b) The South East of England	3,492
(c) England	10,518
(d) Scotland	1,022
(e) Wales	427
(f) Northern Ireland	105

This information should, however, be regarded as indicative as it relates only to extant prime contracts with defence contractors in Financial Year 1996–97. It does not include defence sub-contracts or contracts placed by Trading Fund Defence Agencies as this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The latest figures available for the value of suppliers in each area are for the Financial Year 1995–96 and are contained in Section 1.9 of the UK Defence Statistics 1997, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of his Department's employees by UK region, indicating the wage bill (a) in total and (b) by region in the last year for which figures are available and separately identifying the costs of London allowances and weightings. [30070]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The following is a breakdown of Ministry of Defence Civilian Personnel by region as at 1 January 1998:

Region	Number of staff
London	10,189
South East	24,760
Eastern	6,736
South West	24,098
West Midlands	8,471
East Midlands	2,819
Yorkshire and Humberside	3,265
Merseyside	969
North West	1,653
North East	600
Wales	5,165
Scotland	10,203
Northern Ireland	3,264
Other locations[1]	7,752
Total	109,944

[1] Including UK-based staff overseas and at sea.

Note:

The figures include full-time, part-time and casual staff.

The Department does not hold the information requested on the wage bill by Regions and this could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Figures for civilian staff are available for London and National areas, for the financial year 1996–97 and are as follows:

	Gross salaries	London element
London	371,586,880	17,735,370
National	1,628,929,789	Nil

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26636]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: There is no central record of expenditure on newspapers and magazines, or of individual titles of commercial publications purchased by the Department and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30009]

Dr. Howells: DfEE is committed to promoting equality of opportunity for its staff and supports child care facilities which help staff to balance family and working life.

The Department currently supports holiday play scheme facilities on all of the Department's four HQ sites. It also provides nursery facilities on its Runcorn and Sheffield sites. Facilities are often shared with other government organisations, in particular with the Employment Service HQ in Sheffield and with the Office of National Statistics in Runcorn.

The Department meets approximately half of the full cost of nursery provision through making premises available and by a contribution to the provider's management fees. The exact level of subsidy varies according to occupancy and has fluctuated between 45–60 per cent. during the current contract. For play scheme provision, the Department normally meets approximately half the cost.

The organisations the Department uses for child care are Early Years plc and Kinderquest Ltd.

The Department does not issue child care vouchers to staff.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what administrative arrangements he plans to implement for the introduction of contributions towards tuition fees for higher education. [30431]

Dr. Howells: From 1998–99, most new entrants to full-time higher education will be eligible for assistance with their contribution to tuition fees if they are from a lower income family. The amount of assistance from public funds will be assessed by the student's local education authority in accordance with regulations which will be laid before Parliament in due course. The assessed amount will be paid direct to the student's institution in due course. Where the applicant is an EU national seeking assistance with fees only, the Department will assist his authority in making the assessment in 1998–99 and from 1999/2000 will be directly responsible for providing assistance in accordance with regulations to be laid in due course.

The student will pay the balance of the contribution to fees, if any, personally to the institution. It will be for institutions themselves to decide on the arrangements for collecting private contributions from students. I have no doubt that universities and colleges will want to ensure that students are not prevented from taking up a place because they are unable to pay the full fee in a single lump sum; for example, by taking account of individual students' circumstances in allowing the fee to be paid in more than one instalment.

Student Grants

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he proposes to alter the existing arrangements for the assessment and administration concerned with student grants currently operated by local education authorities. [30430]

Dr. Howells: The reform of student support arrangements will require some changes to the existing arrangements for assessment and administration carried out by local education authorities in respect of new entrants to higher education.

For the academic year 1998–99, new entrants will be liable to contribute to tuition fees. Local education authorities will assess the support from public funds for fees and how much maintenance grant is payable, taking account of the students' own income and that of their parents or spouse. The Mandatory Award Regulations to be laid in due course will set out the relevant conditions. Local education authorities will pay the fee support direct to the higher education institution and will pay any maintenance grant direct to the student in the same way as now. Where the applicant is an EU national seeking assistance with fees only, the Department will assist his authority in making the assessment in 1998–99 and from 1999–2000 will be directly responsible for providing assistance in accordance with regulations to be laid in due course.

For the academic year 1999–2000, new students and those who started in 1998–99 will receive support for living costs solely through loans which will be partly income-assessed. These arrangements will be administered by a scheme involving local education authorities, the Student Loans company and a central unit within the Department. Local education authorities will have an important role in determining the eligibility of 'home' applicants for fees, loans and grants and for carrying out the means test. I am planning to review the current means testing arrangements to allow the system to be simplified wherever possible.

A detailed review will look at the best way of administering higher education student support in the long term. This review is due to be completed in 2000 once the new system of HE student support has bedded down.

New Deal (Environmental Placements)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 26 January 1998, Official Report, column 89, on environmental placements under the New Deal, if he will publish the guidance relating to those New Deal tenders including an element to cover the cost of materials. [27280]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated February 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about the guidance relating to New Deal tenders under the Voluntary and Environment Task Force Option.

Guidance relating to New Deal tenders, which includes guidance on the cost of materials, has been distributed widely to organisation who have expressed interest in tendering for the Environment Task Force and Voluntary Sector options and a copy has been placed in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Jacqui Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals the Government has to (a) review the administration of legal aid in Northern Ireland, with particular reference to the difference between the administration arrangements for legal aid in Great Britain and in Northern Ireland and (b) extend to Northern Ireland reforms of legal aid which are proposed for England and Wales. [30797]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor and I have instructed my officials in the Northern Ireland Court Service to:

(a) undertake a review into arrangements for the administration and provision of legal aid in Northern Ireland, bringing forward recommendations for change where necessary; and

(b) consider in the Northern Ireland context the proposed reforms to legal aid in England and Wales.

My Officials will be available to hear views from interested parties on these important matters.

A Green Paper will be published for full consultation purposes in due course. In the meantime, I would encourage all those with an interest in these matters to meet with my officials and contribute their views at an early stage.

Periodicals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department on newspapers and magazines (a) in 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will list the newspapers and magazines purchased or subscribed to on a regular basis. [26671]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Department purchases a range of publications. The estimated expenditure on newspapers and magazines by the Department, including the Court Service, is as follows:

(a) 1995–96: £57,500

(b) 1996–97: £59,500

(c) 1997–98 to date: £58,800

(d) 1997–98 full year: £60,200.

Statutory Declaration Fee

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the £5 fee for making a statutory declaration was last amended; and if he will make a statement. [30308]

Mr. Hoon: The fee for making a statutory declaration in the Magistrates' Court was increased to eight pounds on 1 April 1992, by the Magistrates' Courts Fees (Amendment) Order, SI 842/1992. I am considering whether to conduct a major review of all civil fees in the Magistrates' Courts.

Gibraltar (Records)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those Government records of the 1960s relating to Gibraltar that have not been released after 30 years; and if he will indicate the reasons for not releasing them. [30399]

Mr. Hoon: Public records of the 1960s relating to Gibraltar are likely to appear, among the records of a number of Departments, including those of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and its predecessor Departments, of the Ministry of Defence and its predecessors, of the Cabinet Office and of the Prime Minister's Office. There is no pre-existent list of records of this period relating to Gibraltar, and currently no automated means of generating one.

As well, the documentation of withheld records that is maintained by the Public Record Office, and in particular the documentation of withheld extracts from records, is by document reference alone, and not by subject description, so that it is not in a form which would enable a listing of unavailable records of the 1960s relating to Gibraltar to be produced, without disproportionate cost. The catalogues available to the public in the Public Record Office note whole items which are closed or retained, but not the fact of a withheld extract, but because there is no pre-existent list of Gibraltar records, the catalogues could not be used to list closed records on this subject, except at similarly high cost.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30020]

Mr. Hoon: At present, the Department provides subsidised child care places at 13 nurseries and 15 play schemes. The subsidy varies, depending on individual business cases and value for money justification. The child care organisations used by the Department are listed. Child care vouchers are not generally made available to staff, although they have been made available on a temporary basis in exceptional circumstances.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the engagements he undertook in the United Kingdom in the course of his duties during January indicating in each case which were accessed by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and car, (d) aeroplane and train and (e) other means. [28937]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 10 February 1998]: The official engagements I undertook in January 1998, other than routine meetings within Whitehall, together with the mode of transport used to access each, are as follows:

Wednesday 7 January

Visit: Relate National, Rugby (Own car)

Thursday 8 January

Speaking engagement: Judicial Studies Board Seminar, Cheltenham (Car)

Wednesday 14 January

Visit: African Caribbean Family Mediation Service, Brixton (Car)

Thursday 15 January

Visit: Leigh Day & Co. Solicitors, London (Car)

Monday 19 January

Visit: National Childcare Strategy Conference, London (On foot)

Thursday 22 January

Speaking engagement: Conference on the structure and governance of magistrates' courts, Birmingham (Car)

Visit: 7 Fountain Court chambers, Birmingham (Car)

Visit: McGrath & Co. solicitors, Birmingham (On foot)

Monday 26 January

Reception: Official opening of the Legal Resource Training Centre, London (Car)

Speaking engagement: Uxbridge Magistrates' Courts, Uxbridge (Car)

Wednesday 28 January

Visit: Registry Trust Ltd. London (Car)

Speaking Engagement: Central and South Middlesex Law Society, Ealing (Car)

Thursday 29 January

Visit: Official Opening of Walsall CAB (Car).

Violent Parents

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to amend the law relating to the rights of access to their children of violent and abusive parents; and if he will make a statement. [29700]

Mr. Hoon: When the courts determine an application for contact, under section 8 of the Children Act 1989, they must treat the child's welfare as their paramount consideration. Among the specific factors they have to consider is "any harm which" the child "has suffered or is at risk of suffering".

There are no plans to amend the legislation.

Official Accommodation

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what options were considered in selecting the furniture for the official accommodation. [30232]

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will provide a breakdown of the costs of the refurbishment of the Lord Chancellor's rooms in the Palace of Westminster. [30460]

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what is his policy in respect of the use of the Official Secrets Act 1911 to cover contracts for refurbishment work; [30296]

(2) how many contractors undertaking work on the Lord Chancellor's accommodation have been required to sign a contract which refers to the Official Secrets Act and for what purpose; and when this policy was begun; [30297]

(3) what were the specifications for (a) the bed, (b) the dining table, (c) the curtains and (d) the carpets ordered for the Lord Chancellor's accommodation in the Palace of Westminster. [30301]

Mr. Hoon: All questions affecting the building and internal decoration of the House of Lords are matters for the authorities of the House of Lords, in particular the House of Lords' Offices Committee and its sub-committees on Administration and Works and on Finance and Staff. I refer the right hon. and hon. Members to the answer given in the Other Place by The Noble Lord, Lord Boston of Faversham on 17 February 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, column 23.

SCOTLAND

Police

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost to public funds of each special constable; what is the average length of service of a special constable; what percentage of special constables are subsequently employed by the police; and if he will make a statement. [29241]

Mr. McLeish: This information is not held centrally.

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 22, what assessment he has made of the factors underlying the disparity in the proportion of the Scottish Bar who are QCs as against those in (a) the Northern Ireland Bar and (b) the Bar in England and Wales. [29428]

Mr. McLeish: No assessment has been made.

Prisoners

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners in Scottish prisons are currently studying for (a) a higher education qualification, (b) a further education qualification and (c) higher grade or standard grade examination qualifications. [29027]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 12 February 1998]: The information requested is:

a. A higher education qualification: 35

b. A further education qualification: 1,470

c. A higher or standard grade qualification: 89.

There is some double counting as a small number of prisoners are studying for a higher or standard grade qualification as well as a further education qualification.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ask the Chairman of COMARE to re-open his inquiry into the causes of leukaemia near Dounreay following the disclosure of a second subterranean shaft containing nuclear waste at Dounreay. [29282]

Mr. Galbraith: COMARE is continuing to keep the incidence of leukaemia near Dounreay under review as part of its work programme, including the need for further advice to the Government as additional information becomes available.

Epilepsy

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many registered epileptics there are in Scotland in each health board area. [29944]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on the number of registered epileptics in Scotland is not available centrally.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources his Department makes available for the treatment of epilepsy, broken down by health board area; and if he will express the figures as a percentage of each health board's expenditure. [29948]

Mr. Galbraith: Resources are not made available to the NHS in Scotland for specific treatments. It is for individual Health Boards to determine their priorities, in the light of local circumstances, from the resources made available.

Legal Aid

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of cases granted legal advice and assistance in 1996–97 proceeded to court. [30148]

Mr. McLeish: The information is not available.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the categories of case in which civil legal aid was (a) refused and (b) refused after offers in 1996–97. [30150]

Mr. McLeish: An analysis of full applications where no legal aid was granted at the first instance is published by court on page 22 of the Board's Annual Report for 1996–97. However this information cannot be broken down into case type.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many cases in 1996–97 in (a) the Sheriff Court and (b) the Court of Session, were all parties in the action funded by the Scottish Legal Aid Board; and if he will break down these cases by type. [30152]

Mr. McLeish: This information is not available.

Prison Officers

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the hours of time off in lieu owed to prison officers for each month of 1997, indicating what percentage of those hours are owed for more than (a) one month, (b) three months and (c) six months; and if he will make a statement. [29940]

Mr. McLeish: Information on the hours of time off in lieu (TOIL) owed only to prison officers is not available since the data held by the Scottish Prison Service cover both prison officer and supervisor groups. The table sets out the TOIL owed jointly to these staff groups during 1997, but information on the periods of time for which TOIL hours are owed to members of staff is not held centrally.

Hours of Time Off In Lieu (TOIL) owed to prison officers and supervisors in 1997

	Hours
January	87,031
February	89,308
March	99,068
April	98,406
May	102,194
June	101,066
July	102,753
August	108,088
September	108,135

Hours of Time Off In Lieu (TOIL) owed to prison officers and supervisors in 1997

	Hours
October	109,143
November	115,802
December	115,188

Breast Cancer

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have suffered radiotherapy injuries after breast cancer in Scotland, by health board area. [29939]

Mr. Galbraith: There are no statistics available on the number of people who have suffered radiotherapy injuries after treatment for breast cancer in Scotland.

Legal Aid Board

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the activities which relate to the term professional fees as it appears in Notes to the Accounts, No. 11 of the Scottish Legal Aid Board Annual Report, 1996–97. [30151]

Mr. McLeish: The activities are as noted:

Legal Fees: £30,127

judicial review

instructing counsel, and obtaining opinions from counsel fees for hearings and motions

Non-legal fees: £148,134

consultancy fees

translation fees

EEC-related fees: £700

VDU eyetests

Fees relating to quality issues: £19,844

consultancy fees

membership and subscription fees launching "vision and values" initiative

Grand Total: £198,805

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the Scottish Legal Aid Board's expenditure in the year 1996–97 was attributable to judicial reviews of its decisions; and how many such judicial reviews took place. [30149]

Mr. McLeish: 0.31 per cent. of the Scottish Legal Aid Board's administrative expenditure in year 1996–97 was attributable to judicial review of its decision. Six petitions for judicial review were served on the Board although no judicial reviews by the court actually took place.

Prison Population

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what projections he has made of the prison population of Scotland in each year to 2003; and if he will indicate the basis on which the projections are made. [29942]

Mr. McLeish: The latest projections of the prison population which are being used by the Scottish Prison Service for planning purposes are (April to March years):

1997–1998: 6,200

1998–1999: 6,350

1999–2000: 6,500

2000–2001: 6,600.

The methodology for projecting future prison population is based on an analysis of historical trends (calculated by linear regression) of receptions into custody from courts. The trends are projected forward for future years. The specific variables considered in the analysis are age of offender, main offence type, sentence length and time served in custody. In addition, any policy or legislative changes which may impact on future prisoner numbers are factored in as necessary. The figures are slightly lower than those contained in the Scottish Prison Service's Corporate Plan, published in July 1997.

Orthoptics

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from (a) Glasgow Caledonian University and (b) others regarding the continuation of the orthoptic degree course at Glasgow Caledonian University. [29971]

Mr. Galbraith: The Scottish Office has received a number of letters from staff at Glasgow Caledonian University and from hospital consultants and orthoptic students regarding the continuation of the orthoptic degree course at Glasgow Caledonian University.

The Scottish Office is currently engaged in an exercise to determine the need for a Scottish University to provide a degree in orthoptics.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish his spending plans for mental health services in Scotland in the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [29928]

Mr. Galbraith: Mental Health is a national priority for the NHS in Scotland. I expect Health Boards to develop their spending plans for mental health services to reflect that priority and to take into account the principles set out in the framework for Mental Health Services in Scotland, published in September 1997, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the budget available to mental health services in Scotland in the (a) current and (b) previous financial year. [29866]

Mr. Galbraith: £421 million is available for mental health services in Scotland for 1997–98, with a further £15.3 million provided for the State Hospital service.

The position for 1996–97 was that £405 million was spent on mental health services and an additional £18.4 million on the State Hospital service (including the last tranche of substantial capital expenditure).

These resources do not include the additional costs of primary care services provided for this client group, which are not separately identifiable.

Drug Courts

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce US-style drug courts; and if he will make a statement. [30048]

Mr. McLeish: No. Courts can already take account of drug misuse by offenders by, for example, attaching a condition to a Probation Order requiring the offender to address his drug habit. It is also intended that Scottish courts will be able to impose drug treatment and testing orders, provision for which is contained in the Crime and Disorder Bill presently before Parliament. Under these orders serious offenders with drug dependency problems will be placed on specialist treatment programmes aimed at reducing or eliminating their dependency.

Health (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve health in the City of Glasgow; and if he will make a statement. [29791]

Mr. Galbraith: In August 1997 I asked all Health Boards to begin preparing Health Improvement Programmes (HIPs) in collaboration with Trusts and General Practitioners. Greater Glasgow Health Board is close to finalising its HIP. This will set out specific measures to deliver care over the next 5 years effectively and efficiently in a way which puts the interests of patients first. Additionally, the HIP will set out a programme to tackle health inequalities in Glasgow and the causes of poor health in the people of Glasgow.

The Green Paper "Working Together for a Healthier Scotland" on tackling inequalities in health was published on 5 February with a consultation period that runs until 30 April. Strategies for action will be formulated after the outcome of the consultation is known.

The Glasgow Regeneration Alliance has been given direct financial support of £500,000 for 1998–99 to help to provide a staff support team to develop and implement a long-term strategy for the regeneration of the city. This strategy will be a comprehensive city-wide plan for the renewal of Glasgow and will involve all the partners in the Alliance.

School Closures (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about school closures in the City of Glasgow; and if he will make a statement. [29794]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend has received a number of letters, principally from School Boards and parents. The provision of schools in Glasgow is a matter for the Council.

M74 (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the completion of the M74 in the City of Glasgow; and if he will make a statement. [29795]

Mr. McLeish: Since taking office, we have received 13 written representations on this subject, including correspondence from my hon. Friend. In addition, I am aware that, subsequent to the publication of The Strathclyde Regional Council (M74 West Fullarton, Kingston Bridge to Fullarton Road) Compulsory Purchase Order 1995, 37 Statutory and 4 non-statutory objections were received within the statutory period.

Although it is not a trunk road scheme, the size and importance of the M74 northern extension is such that it is appropriate to consider the scheme within the current strategic trunk roads review and the joint promoters of the scheme, the City of Glasgow and South Lanarkshire Councils, have agreed to this. Studies of aspects of the scheme, including its design and economic development function, are nearing completion and will inform the trunk roads review. If the scheme were to be taken forward as a trunk road, rather than by the present promoters, a decision on whether or not to go ahead would be informed by the findings of the roads review and would depend on a variety of factors, including the resources available and competing priorities.

Health Service

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the number of NHS trusts in existence (a) on 1 May 1997 and (b) at present. [29855]

Mr. Galbraith: On 1 May 1997 there were 47 NHS Trusts in Scotland. This remains the current position. The recently published White Paper "Designed to Care" sets out our proposals for a reduction in the number of Trusts operating within the NHS in Scotland.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to announce proposals for restructuring health boards and trusts in Scotland. [29951]

Mr. Galbraith: The recently published White Paper "Designed to Care" sets out the Government's proposals for restructuring the NHS in Scotland. Detailed proposals for the configuration of NHS Trusts will be the subject of public consultation starting soon in the light of the principles set out in the White Paper.

Stracathro Hospital

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future status of Stracathro Hospital with particular reference to future service and staff levels. [29952]

Mr. Galbraith: There are no current plans to reduce services at Stracathro Hospital. I understand however that Tayside Health Board will be reviewing acute service provision throughout the Health Board area. The outcome of the review may affect the services provided at Stracathro.

Departmental Child Care

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision his Department makes for child care facilities for staff; what subsidy is provided for (a) nursery places and (b) holiday play schemes; if he will list the organisations used by his Department for child care; and if child care vouchers are made available to staff. [30019]

Mr. Dewar: The Scottish Office have two work-place nurseries in Edinburgh. The service is provided by Marilyn Morris Nurseries under contract to The Scottish Office. Nursery places are not subsidised although accommodation is provided free by the Office.

Subsidised places at holiday play schemes are offered to staff in Edinburgh and Glasgow (at a total cost of £968 in 1997–98). These operate during the Easter and summer school holiday periods. The play schemes are run by Customs and Excise in Edinburgh and by Kidcare Ltd. in Glasgow.

The Scottish Office does not participate in a child care voucher scheme.

Dental Services

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in each Scottish health board area were removed from NHS dentists' registers as a result of missing a registration period in each year since 1992. [29369]

Mr. Galbraith: The information requested is listed in the table for financial years 1994–95 to 1996–97:

Notes:
1. Child data are estimated for all financial years.
2. The information which forms the reply shows the number of patients whose registration has lapsed under the old registration system and is not directly relevant to what will happen when the new shorter registration period of 15 months begins to affect registration levels.

Data for the financial years 1992–93 and 1993–94 are not available within the timescales requested.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Households Below Average Income

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will obtain a copy of the Households Below Average Income data of 1961–91, from the Data Archive at Essex. [30304]

Mr. Field: A copy of the Households Below Average Income 1961–91 data is currently held by this Department.

Benefit Integrity Programme

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to allow individuals whose benefits are suspended under the Benefit Integrity Programme to continue to receive payments until an appeal is satisfactorily determined. [30445]

Mr. Denham: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced last week, it is important that decisions on entitlement should be fair and be seen to be fair. From 9 February, no decision to reduce or remove someone's benefit under the Benefit Integrity Project will be taken solely on the basis of the information provided by the claimant—there will always be additional evidence to support the decision.

Payments of Disability Living Allowance are made where an adjudication officer has determined that entitlement exists and has awarded benefit at the rate and for the period appropriate to the claimant's circumstances. If an adjudication officer subsequently decides, whether as a result of the Benefit Integrity Project or not, that the person is no longer entitled to the amount of benefit in payment, there is no legal basis for leaving benefit payments unchanged.

Universal Benefits

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will define a universal benefit; and if her definition covers a benefit which is taxed or means-tested. [30446]

Mr. Keith Bradley: A "universal benefit" is generally understood to be one payable to all who satisfy specified entitlement conditions, regardless of their level of income or National Insurance Contribution record. Whether such a benefit is taxable or not is irrelevant.

Benefits Agency Medical Service

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the outsourcing of the Benefits Agency Medical Service. [31017]

Mr. Keith Bradley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security announced on 31 July how we would proceed with a number of projects for the use of the private sector which were in the pipeline and which we had inherited from the previous administration.

As we have previously said:

"this would be a government of ideas and ideals but not of outdated ideology, what counts is what works; it would reject the dogmatic view that services must be privatised to be of high quality, but equally, we see no reason why a service should be delivered directly if more efficient means are available."

We reviewed the projects against our objectives for modernising the Social Security system;

our commitment to work within the announced spending totals for the first two years of Government;

our aim of getting best value for public money and of reducing the burden on taxpayers; the scope to apply private sector expertise, discipline and economies of scale in procuring public services and the ability to secure increased investment from the private sector;

the need for continuing flexibility for Government to make future changes to services;

the opportunities for improving the quality of service for customers; and the implications for staff.

In support of our clear commitment to a quality Social Security service, we have established a minimum quality of service threshold against which we have assessed all bids from the private sector. If a supplier failed to reach this threshold, we would not expect to award them a contract no matter how low their prices.

We also required greater evaluation and feedback on performance against the new quality standards. We have made clear our commitment to take account of the needs of staff in considering the involvement of the private sector. We have therefore placed greater emphasis on management of people when evaluating the contracts; we have carefully evaluated suppliers' management of past staff transfers.

I can today announce that all three contracts for BAMS will be awarded to the Sema Group for five years with an option to extend the contracts for two years.

Their proposals have been carefully considered in the light of our criteria.

The contracts have been awarded on the basis that Sema will:

bring enhanced management expertise to BAMS, with investment in new technology, will deliver service improvements to customers, ensuring speedier appointments and reducing waiting time, will maintain and improve quality of service, will provide good value for money for the taxpayer.

Sema will provide medical advice to support the delivery of incapacity and disability benefits. Payments made to Sema for the service they will provide will not be related in any way to the outcome of individual medical examinations.

The contract award is not part of the welfare reform programme. The responsibility for the overall service and for the determination of entitlement to benefits remains with the Department. This announcement makes no change to the rules for entitlement to benefits and the rights to customers will not be changed in any way. Rigorous procedures will be put in place to ensure that we continue to receive independent, objective medical advice.

The value of the contracts over five years will be £305 million.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Child Support Agency clients have applied to the Independent Case Examiner since she began work in April 1997; how many of these cases were accepted as under her jurisdiction; how many cases have been determined; and how many complaints have been upheld. [30123]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Agency is committed to reducing the number of complaints about its handling of cases and improvements in customer service are a high priority.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 18 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Independent Case Examiner for the Child Support Agency.

The Office of the Independent Case Examiner commenced work in April 1997.

Between 1 April 1997 and 31 January 1998, 853 customers of the Child Support Agency made applications to the Independent Case Examiner. Of these, 686 have been accepted with-in the Independent Case Examiners jurisdiction (from a live and assessed caseload of 724,540 at 31 January 1998).

In the same period the Independent Case Examiner has completed her investigation in 132 cases. Of these, the complaint has been fully upheld in 42 cases, partially upheld in 60 cases and not upheld in 7 cases. A further 23 complaints have been settled by mediation (with the complainant's agreement) and have not therefore been the subjects of full investigations by the Independent Case Examiner.

The Agency's Business Units adopt a case study approach with cases referred to the Independent Case Examiner whereby the Business Unit Manager and staff involved with the case identify lessons learnt, introduce improvements and good working practices and regularly liaise with the office of the Independent Case Examiner.

I am very conscious that there are still far too many justified complaints about the standards of basic customer contact and the service we provide, and we recognise that doing things right first time is the key to preventing complaints. It is an Agency priority to improve the way in which complaints are handled; we have revised our training for all staff who deal with complaints and have introduced a new Complaints Guide, which sets out our policy and procedures for swift, effective complaints handling. We are aware that as we further tackle our backlog of cases from the Agency's first two years, there is potential for the volume of complaints to rise in the short term.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of CSA assessments are due to be paid via the CSA; and how many of these accounts relate to parents with care on income support and family credit. [30163]

Mr. Keith Bradley: One of our key aims for the Child Support Agency is to ensure that more absent parents pay the maintenance they owe. The regular payment of maintenance is central to our strategy as recognition of fathers' continuing responsibilities to their children; to help lone mothers move off Income Support into work; and to get more money to children in low income working families.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 18 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments.

Details on payment methods are available through a 5% scan of the Child Support Computer System undertaken by the DSS Analytical Services Division. At 30 November 1997, of the 616,300 full maintenance assessments recorded as the Agency's live and assessed caseload, the appropriate method of payment for the absent parent in 504,600 cases (82%) was payment via the Agency's collection service. These cases include absent parents who are in receipt of Income Support.

Of the 504,600 cases where the appropriate method of payment was via the Agency collection service 433,340 (86%) were in respect of parents with care in receipt of Income Support, Family Credit or Disability Working Allowance.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the outcome of the research commissioned by her Department on customer satisfaction with the CSA; and when the customer satisfaction target will be re-introduced. [30166]

Mr. Keith Bradley: One of our key aims for the Child Support Agency is to ensure that more absent parents pay the maintenance they owe. The regular payment of maintenance is central to our strategy as recognition of fathers' continuing responsibilities to their children; to help lone mothers move off income support into work; and to get more money to children in low income working families.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 18 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about research on customer satisfaction with the Child Support Agency.

On Departmental advice and in line with other DSS Agencies, the Child Support Agency re-focused its customer research away from large-scale, national surveys of overall satisfaction to more in-depth customer research.

In-depth research identifies specific, priority improvements required by the customer, enables the Agency to target its efforts and resources to greater effect and therefore provides greater value for money. As the Agency's objective is to provide the service customers need, it will continue with in-depth customer research. It has no plans to re-introduce the national, general survey that is needed to support an overall customer satisfaction target.

The full report of the independent in-depth customer research commissioned by the Agency in December 1996, will be published in early spring as part of the DSS Research Series.

The research shows that customers have five priority improvements:

quicker completion of assessments absent parents targeted equally to ensure more regular and reliable payments better, more customer-friendly information on the child support process and assessment correspondence and complaints dealt with quicker easier and more convenient telephone access with a more 'one-stop' service.

The Agency is already working towards these by dealing with more child support applications, collecting more money and by putting more resources into the telephone service and reviewing key Agency literature. Further improvements are included in the Agency's plans for the next four years to achieve a step change in the customer service we provide. These include the setting up of local stakeholder groups in each of the Agency's 6 Business Units (a process which we have started) and continuing to work closely with our established National Stakeholder Group which has representatives from key customer groups.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many Child Support Agency cases each quarter (i) since April 1993 an alleged absent parent has disputed paternity of a qualifying child, (ii) the absent parent subsequently admitted to paternity without resorting to court action or DNA testing, (iii) since May 1995 paternity has been established or disproved by a discounted DNA test, (iv) since September 1995 paternity has been established or disproved by a CSA-funded DNA test and (v) paternity remains unresolved. [30164]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 18 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security concerning Child Support Agency paternity cases.

Details of the cases where an alleged absent parent has disputed the paternity of a qualifying child are shown in table 1 below.

Separate information on the number of cases where the absent parent admits paternity prior to any court action or DNA testing has only been collected in the current financial year, and this is shown in table 2 below.

The result of DNA paternity testing is virtually conclusive as the chance that two people have the same pattern is extremely low. A detailed breakdown of DNA tests in 1995/96 is not available, but a total of 1,377 cases were referred for discounted DNA testing between July 1995 and March 1996. Figures for 1996/97 and 1997/98 are shown in table 3 below. In 1996/97, paternity was established in 89% of cases referred for DNA testing. In the current year, to the end of January, the figure is 87%. This represents the overall percentage in establishing paternity; a breakdown into each type is not available. Once paternity has been established the Agency will pursue any arrears of maintenance that have accrued.

At the end of January 1998, the Agency had 9,141 paternity cases referred for DNA testing awaiting processing, and a further 626 where action had been suspended. Thus, there were 9,767 cases where the question of paternity remained unresolved.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what have been the total arrears attributable to child support maintenance assessments, excluding category A interim maintenance assessments, at each quarter since November 1995. [30121]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 18 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about uncollected maintenance assessed by the Child Support Agency.

The Agency's Financial Management System was enhanced from April 1997 to provide more detailed information on category A interim maintenance assessments and other assessments—prior to April 1997 this information is not available. The cumulative amount of arrears outstanding, excluding category A interim maintenance assessments, as at each quarter end to date during 1997/8 and the position at 31 January 1998 are shown in the table attached.

Of the £652,870,713 which is attributable to maintenance assessments excluding Category A interim maintenance assessments, approximately £309 million is the subject of agreements for repayment by instalments, which are closely monitored by the Agency. this leaves approximately £344 million of full maintenance assessment debt to be pursued.

I hope this is helpful.

June 1997	560,507,426
September 1997	596,516,697
December 1997	635,522,889
January 1998	652,870,713

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for each year since the CSA began operation, how much of the total child support maintenance paid by absent parents has been (a) retained by the Secretary of State in lieu of benefits and (b) if paid to the person with care, has reduced her state benefit. [30168]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Regular payments of maintenance can transform the lives of lone mothers and their children, providing a stable income that can help them off Income Support and into work.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 18 February 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security concerning the effect of child support maintenance on benefits.

Where maintenance is paid through the Agency collection service and the full Income Support payment continues, money is retained by the Secretary of State to offset the benefit payment. The figures since Agency inception are shown at table 1.

Where maintenance is paid direct by the absent parent to the parent with care, income support payments are reduced where appropriate, and count towards the benefit savings recorded by the Agency. These savings are known as Net IS Reducers, and include those savings identified from arrangements made before the Agency was launched, as well as from maintenance arranged by the Agency. Details are given in table 2, together with the amounts of maintenance arranged for direct payment by the Agency. (A direct pay figure for the first year of operation is not available.)

It is also likely that in some direct pay cases there will be reductions in Family Credit/Disability Working Allowance; these benefit savings are calculated from a computer scan which does not differentiate between direct pay and collection service cases. It is not therefore possible to attribute a figure for reduced FamC/DWA to direct pay. The overall FamC/DWA benefit savings are given in table 3.

I hope this is helpful.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 306

SESSION 1997–98

9th February—19th February 1998

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
